W. W. Marsh, of Wintou Place, Cincinnati, predicts heavy rains, windstorms, high and cold, bleak winds, deuse fogs, heavy frosts and high stages of water in the river for the month of October. November will be a repetition of October, although the storms will be more severe and devastating in effect. Mr. Marsh also prognosticates an early wiuter, with plenty of snow. A perusal of his September forecast shows that he was generally correct. Between the 4th and 8th and 10th and 12th of October hurricanes and heavy gales will sweep over the Atlantic Ocean, and the brunt of the mood of Father Neptune will be borne by the North and Middle Atlantic Coasts and the rock-bound shores of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Another hurricane will rage along the South Atlantic and Gulf Coast between the 25th and 29th.

John Acra was tried Tuesday of last week, before Judge Roberts and a jury on a warrant sworn out by G. T. Gaines, charging an assault. A good part of the day was consumed in the trial, which resulted in a hung jury. The case will be tried again to-day.—Verdict, not guilty.

Sheriff Beall, Deputy Sheriff Allphin and three or four other men scoured a portion of the Bellevue neighborhood, last Saturday evening in search of Wood McGuire, a Grant county fugitive from justice. At every place the searchiug party stopped it was informed that McGuire had left there about an hour before. McGuire has been in the Bellevue neighborhood for a couple of weeks or more, working and going about as though he had not escaped from jail were he was confined on the very serious charge of attempting to detalu a woman. The raid, Saturday, to capture McGuire was the result of the arrival of Dick Cates and Squire Sechrest, of Grant county, who had come down prepared to play detective.

About noon, Monday, a telephone message was received here from Indianapolis, stating that J. L. Tanner could live but a short time, but the message stated no particulars. When the morning papers reached here the following Indianapolis item was found therein: "J. L. Tanner, as the outgrowth of family dissentions, locked himself in an upper room and then cut his throat from ear to ear. After doing this he traveled from one room to another, lying in different beds, until the upper floor presented a ghastly appearance. Tanner was moved to the city hospital in a dying condition." J. L. Tanner was a son of the late Llewellu Tanner, and a brother of O. P., Jeptha and L. A. Tanner, of this place, and "Dut" Tanner, of Milan, Indiana. Jeptha and L. A Tanner left for Indianapolis this morning.

BURLINGTON, - - KENTUCKY

THE grave of Capt. John Paul Jones has not been located by the government, through its inquiries of the embassy in the French capital. He died on July 18, 1792, in Paris, and was buried with highest honors by the French government, but the place of his burial can not now be determined.

THE lighting of the Red seems at first to be a too practical infringement upon an ancient fairyland. But Sir Thomas Sutherland and other members of parliament interested in shipping are naturally anxious about the progress of the lighthouses with which the porte promised to bejewel the southern waters of the Red sea.

AN interesting relic of Dr. Livingstone will shortly arrive in London, to be placed in the rooms of the Royal Geographical society with the collection of relics of other great travelers and explorers preserved therein. This is the section of the tree under which the famous missionary's heart was buried, and containing the celebrated inscription carved by his followers.

WHAT the Vanderbilt wealth is—the grand total—no man outside of the family can definitely say. At the present time the total family wealth is thought to be about $500,000,000, of which the late Cornelius Vanderbilt possessed $115,000,000. His income was about $600,000 per year. At the present valuation of industrial stocks the Vanderbilt fortune in another year, it is believed, will closely approach $750,000,000.

ARMY DOCTOR BARTH, of Koesl'n, Germany, has discovered that singing possesses health-giving properties. It intensifies, he says, the respiratory movements, thus rendering the lungs capable of dealing with more air. This increases and strengthens the action of all the organs of the body, appetite and thirst increase, and the more frequent movement of the diaphragm and the wall of the abdomen materially aid digestion.

ONE of the curiosities of New Zealand is a vegetable caterpillar. What happens is that a wicked plant darts its seeds into an unfortunate caterpillar and the seeds grow to plants sometimes a foot long. In the meantime the caterpillar dies a lingering death. This recalls the awful bamboo torture of China—a bamboo shoot is grafted on the human body and grows, nourished by the juices of the body. It is the most exquisite torture known.

THE power of the Mannlicher rifle was recently demonstrated in an accident near Prague. Two gendarmes entered a room in an inn and closed the door, putting their rifles in the corner. One rifle fell and discharged itself, the bullet going through the door into the next room, where a party was dancing. It passed through the body of a musician, killing him, and then through the bodies of five other men, all of whom were dangerously wounded.

THE Vanderbilt line commences with the old commodore, a Dutch-American, whose business sagacity, prudence and foresight enabled him to lay the foundation of what is probably the largest family fortune in the United States to-day. After the death of Commodore Vanderbilt the head of the family was William H., father of Cornelius, and the latter succeeded to the leadership after the former's death. William K. Vanderbilt is the new head of the family.

DR. W. J. LEYDS, secretary of state for the Transvaal, is described as a man of peculiarly strong personal power, gifted with a persuasive manner and fully alive to the fact that the Boer and Englishman can never agree. The doctor is now in Holland, where he has aroused public sentiment and secured action in the form of protests to Queen Victoria against the carrying out of Mr. Chamberlain's programme in the Transvaal. He is of Dutch descent, but is not a Boer.

DR. DE BECKER, of London, has found salicylic acid a valuable agent in pneumonia, believing that it acts on the inflammatory process in the lung, and shortens the attack or abates it. It is an antiseptic and dissolves the fibrinous coaguium. When expectoration is induced he stops or diminishes the drug. He gives a child one-tenth grain hourly, a very small child even smaller doses. The aged are treated in the same manner. Extreme weakness and cardiac troubles are contradictions for its use.

THERE are to-day about 300 women ministers in the United States. In America the ministry is being more used by women as a profession than the law. The great value of women ministers in America is for scattered parts that can not possibly afford to support a man. They can maintain a woman minister. The chief opposition to women pastors comes from ministers of the poorer and least qualified class. Of course, the older and more conservative ministers, bishops and the like do not look with much pleasure on a woman in the pulpit.

DULUTH, Minn., is capecially proud of its great boulevard drive. Duluth is built on a hill which rises to a height of 600 feet, within a mile of the shore of the lake. On the brow of this hill, between 500 and 600 feet above the level of Lake Superior, a beautiful driveway has been built, and, as one passes over it, the lake, the harbor, the river, the cities and the entire country for miles around are presented to view. The drive is about seven miles in length. At each end is a beautiful natural park, left as far as possible with the original beauty which nature gave to it.

BOMBARDMENT.

For Three Hours American War Ships Threw Shells Into Olangapo.

Americans Had One Man Wounded During the Engagement—Olangapo, Which Was Riddled With Shells, Took Fire at Several Places.

MANILA, Sept. 25.—The United States cruiser Charleston, the monitor Monterey and the gunboats Concord and Zafiro, with marines and blue jackets from the cruiser Baltimore, left Cavite September 18 and proceeded to Subig bay to destroy an insurgent cannon there.

Owing to the bad weather the operation was postponed until Saturday when the war ships for three hours bombarded the town of Olangapo and the entrenchments where the gun was situated.

Men from the Charleston, Concord and Zafiro were then landed under a heavy insurgent fire, proceeding to the cannon which was utterly destroyed by gun cotton, and then returning to the war ships.

The Americans had one man wounded during the engagement. While waiting in Subig bay for better weather the Americans descried Filipino re-inforcements moving toward Olangapo.

At 6:40 a. m., Saturday, the Monterey began the advance upon the town, which was about three miles east of the monitors' anchorage. The Charleston, Concord and Zafiro followed.

At 7:25 the Monterey opened fire with her secondrsy and main batteries, the Charleston and Concord joining immediately. At 7:38 the insurgent cannon answered, the first shot passing close to the Monterey's smokestack. The gun was fired twice only.

The American bombarding then became general. At 9:30 the Monterey advanced to a range of 600 yards, using her main battery. Two hundred and fifty men were landed about 800 yards east of the cannon at 11 o'clock under a severe shore Mauser fire. The men from the Charleston were the first to reach the beach, but the Concord's men were the first at the gun, which they reached at 11:10. The cannon was found to be a 16-centimeter Krupp gun, presumably obtained from the Spaniards.

Meanwhile the war ships continued to shell the shelving beach on the east and west side to silence the insurgent fire upon the sailors from the trenches skirting the beach.

Gunner Olsen exploded 50 rounds of gun cotton, in three discharges, in the cannon, which had suffered from the fire of the war ships.

The Americans then returned to the boats, the firing inland being kept up to protect the embarkation. The Concord's men were the last to reach the shore, and the war ships were reached at 11:50.

Cadet Brinzer, with the Concord's launch armed with a Gatling, did excellent work on the left of the landing party. Capt. Myers, of the marines, captured a muzzle-loading field piece. Lieut. McDonald was in command of the landing party, and the movement was splendidly executed and controlled.

The numbers of the Filipinos there could not be ascertained and no dead were seen.

The Monterey fired for four hours—twenty-one shots from her ten-inch guns and seventeen from her twelve-inch guns.

The town which was riddled with shells, took fire at several points.

BUY A CUBAN ESTATE.

American Capitalists Purchase the Tinguaro Sugar Farm of 20,000 Acres in the Province of Matanzas.

HAVANA, Sept. 25.—Congressman R. B. Hawley, representing American capitalists, has purchased the Tinguaro sugar estate, one of the largest in Cuba, in the province of Matanzas. The estate includes 20,000 acres which, with other large properties along the south coast that Mr. Hawley is arranging for, will, it is expected, produce 100,000,000 pounds of sugar. A large part of the land purchased is virgin soil, upon which $1,500,000 will be expended, including the cost of improvements.

Disturbances at Ferrol, Spain.

FERROL, Spain, Sept. 25.—Serious disturbances took place here Saturday evening. A mob of 600 stoned the Catholic club and town hall, smashing the windows in both buildings. The municipal guards charged the rioters but were repulsed, 11 guards being injured, as well as many civilians. Finally a squad of mounted gendarmes dispersed the rioters. The authorities have proclaimed the city under martial law.

Swifts Buying Cattle Ranches.

GUTHRIE, O. T. Sept. 25.—The Rogers ranch in Beaver county, Oklahoma, and the Childress cattle ranch in the Pan-handle of Texas, containing 300,000 acres and on which 300,000 cattle are now grazing, has been purchased by R. L. Ellison, of Fort Worth, Tex., for the Swift packing house interests in Chicago. The titles to three other great ranches are being examined into with a view to purchase by the Swifts. Only a few days ago the Swifts purchased the O'Keefe ranch in Gaines county, Texas, containing 18,000 acres.

THE PHILIPPINE ARMY.

Four Departments Are to Be Made, Three of Them to Be Commanded by Major Generals.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—A plan is under consideration at the war department to create an army division of the Philippines and divide the division into departments on a basis similar to that in Cuba. The idea is to create four departments in the Philippines, at least three of them to be commanded by major generals. The Philippines heretofore have been known as the department of the Pacific. It is expected that one department of the proposed new division will consist of Gen. MacArthur's command north of Manila, another will be Gen. Lawton's command south of Manila, and a third will be a new command to operate from Lingayen or Dagupen. A fourth department probably will consist of troops in the islands south of Manila, which include the commands now at Iloilo, Cebu and other points.

The scheme has not yet taken such definite form as to determine the commands of the division and departments. There is no doubt, however, that Lawton and MacArthur will remain where they now are, and probably the command in the islands south will be under a brigadier general. Another officer will have to be selected for the department in the far northern part of the island at the terminus of the Dagupen railroad.

The plan is to give each department commander all the troops that can be successfully operated and also inaure sufficient garrisons for all points taken. Protection to the peaceable tribes is one of the chief objects sought, as representations made to the war department indicate that many of the inhabitants do not want to fight and if unmolested and relieved from fear of attack by the Tagals will assist in supporting the authority of the United States and make it impossible for the followers of Aguinaldo to subsist.

PRESIDENT DIAZ.

President McKinley Expected to Meet Him and Invite Him to Come to Washington as the Nation's Guest.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—In connection with President Diaz's visit to Chicago, it is expected that President McKinley will meet the Mexican president at Chicago and invite him to come to Washington as his guest and the guest of the nation.

Diaz's route northward is expected to be through San Antonio and St. Louis. At the latter point he may make a stop, as the Latin-American club of that city have telegraphed to the Mexican embassy here an urgent request that the president honor St. Louis with a visit.

In recognition of the presence of a foreign ruler within the country, it is probable that a representative of President McKinley will meet the Mexican president at the United States border and accompany him throughout his stay in this country.

An army officer of high rank is likely to be selected for this service. No less than 14 invitations from that many cities have been extended to President Diaz to be their guest during his stay in the United States. But the understanding among officials is that he will not be able to accept many of these.

WILL MARRY A BRAHMIN.

Millionaire Indigo Merchant, of India, to Wed Miss Virginia Tyler Hudson, of Kentucky.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—When Andand A. Advani, a millionaire indigo merchant of India, who has been in Chicago for a week, left for St. Paul Saturday he carried with him the promise of Miss Virginia Tyler Hudson, well-known, especially in Louisville, as a newspaper writer, for a marriage in either Germany or London next June. This is the first instance known of a Brahmin seeking an American wife in this country.

Mr. Advani has been touring America and Canada for pleasure and came to Chicago a week ago. He is the oldest son of Ajeetsing Advani, a millionaire banker of Bombay and a liberal member of the council of that city.

Miss Hudson is a daughter of Rev. D. T. Hudson, of Kentucky. She is a direct descendant of President Tyler. London will be their future home.

Adm. Dewey and Gen. Lee.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 23.—Citizens here are planning to have Dewey and Fitzhugh Lee at the launching of a torpedo boat. There will be a parade and a three days' carnival. Dewey and Lee are to ride in the same carriage. Lee is to be here any how, and the committee will call on Dewey as soon as he arrives to secure his presence.

Willie, aged five, bounded into the house one day, exclaiming, as he hung his hat on the hall rack: "This is my home! This is my home!" A lady visitor said: "The house next door is just like this, Willie; suppose you went over there and hung your hat up in the hall, that would be your home as much as this, wouldn't it?" "No, ma'am," answered the little fellow. "Why not?" asked the lady. "'Cause my mother doesn't live there," was the triumphant reply.

An energetic temperament and active habits conduce to longevity.

THE TRANSVAAL.

Predicted the Free State Raad Will Take Decisive Measures.

Boers Can Not Commence Hostilities Before the End of October Owing to Absence of Rain—Orange Free State Thanked for Aid.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Transvaal situation presents no new features. Dispatches from Johannesburg Monday morning report a complete dislocation of the Rand mining industry. The exodus continues and all the mines are closing.

The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, a pro-Boer organ, says: "Both President Steyn and Mr. Fisher, (of the Orange Free State executive), inform me that the Volksraad is absolutely unanimous that the two republics should stand or fall together. President Steyn said: "Suppose we remain neutral and the Transvaal were conquered. It is not likely that we would be long permitted to stand outside British control. Let a rich gold field be discovered, and what would become of us?"

The special correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Pietermaritzburg, Natal, says: "It is believed that the protracted sitting of the Orange Free State raad is due to the elaboration of decisive measures. No rain has fallen in either republic and it is doubtful whether the Boers can commence hostilities before the end of October."

PRETORIA, Sept. 23.—The Volkstein conveys to President Steyn and Mr. Fisher, of the Orange Free State, the thanks of the whole republic for their support.

According to the same authority the Transvaal government has decided to return to the owner the fine young lion which Cecil Rhodes recently presented to the Transvaal delegates to the Agricultural Union in Cape Town about ten days ago as it declines to have anything whatever to do with that gentleman.

WIND AND RAIN STORM.

The Steam Barge Cleveland, Laden With Lumber, Sunk in the Harbor Near Mouth of Chicago River.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—During a severe wind and rain storm Sunday evening the steam barge Cleveland, lumber laden, sunk in the harbor near the mouth of the Chicago river. Capt. Henry Davis and a crew of 11 men were rescued by tugs, with considerable difficulty.

The Cleveland left Frankfort, Mich., Saturday, bound for Chicago with 200,000 feet of lumber. The boat sprung a leak off Waukegan, and owing to her water-logged condition was driven on a reef while attempting to reach the inner harbor here. After the crew was rescued, tugs dragged the half-sunken vessel into the inner harbor. The Cleveland was built 30 years ago.

FAITHLESS FILIPINOS.

They Have Not Kept Their Promise in Regard to the Surrender of American Prisoners.

MANILA, Sept. 24.—No information has been received from the naval expedition at Subig bay.

The Filipinos have not made good their offer to surrender the American prisoners, and they have not sent an officer to meet Maj. Gen. Otis as promised.

Nothing further has been heard from the rebel officers who conferred with Gen. McArthur recently and returned to their own lines.

Chief Signal Officer Thompson has gone on a two weeks' tour of inspection of the cable service of all the southern islands.

AN EARTHQUAKE.

Two Hundred Persons Perished in the District of Aidin, in Asia Minor—Much Property Destroyed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 25.—The district of Aidin, in Asia Minor, was visited by an earthquake on September 20 and, according to the latest advices, over 200 persons perished.

Itching Burning Scaly Blotchy Humors Instantly Relieved and Speedily Cured by Cuticura

The itching and burning I suffered in my feet and limbs for three years were terrible. At night they were worse and would keep me awake a greater part of the night. I consulted doctor after doctor, as I was travelling on the road most of my time, also one of our city doctors. None of the doctors knew what the trouble was. I got a lot of the different samples of the medicines I had been using. I found them of so many different kinds that I concluded I would have to go to a Cincinnati hospital before I would get relief. I had frequently been urged to try CUTICURA REMEDIES, but I had no faith in them. My wife finally prevailed upon me to try them. Presto! What a change! I am now cured, and it is a permanent cure. I feel like kicking some doctor or myself for suffering three years when I could have used CUTICURA remedies. H. JENKINS, Middleboro, Ky.

NOW A PRINCESS.

Miss Julia Dent Grant Marries the Prince Cantacuzene of Russia.

Miss Grant's Brother, Ulysses S. Grant, Gave Bride Away—Ceremony Consumed an Hour and it Was Nearly Midnight When the Guests Left.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 25.—In accordance with the rites of the Russian orthodox church, Miss Julia Dent Grant, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frederick Grant, and granddaughter of Gen. U. S. Grant, and Prince Cantacuzene, Count Speranzky, of Russia, were married Sunday night. Simple and impressive ceremonies were conducted by Father Hotovitsky, of the Russian church, New York, in the parlor at Beaulieu, the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer.

The American statutes were performed to in All Saints Episcopal church Monday noon.

A special altar had been raised in the parlor by Father Hotovitsky and his assistant. After the room had been formally consecrated at half past 8 o'clock the bride appeared at the head of the grand staircase leaning on the arm of her brother, Ulysses S. Grant third. At the altar, before which stood the Russian priest, waited Prince Cataeuzene clad in the full uniform of the Chevalier garb. The bride's dress was severely cut and was a simple gown of the richest white satin with sweeping train and veil of tulle. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis and lilies of the valley, and wore the gift of the bridegroom, a corsage ornament of diamonds and enamel and a rope of pearls.

The ushers who preceded Miss Grant and her brother to the altar were: Potter Palmer, jr., cousin of the bride; Lockwood Honore, uncle of the bride; Capt. Satoris, cousin of the bride; Robert L. Gerry, of New York; H. Roger Winthrop, of Newport, and John Prentiss, of New York.

In accordance with the Russian custom Miss Grant had two garcon de nooe, her brother, Ulysses S. Grant third, and her uncle, Adrian Honore, those of Prince Cataeuzene being Honore Palmer and Potter Palmer, jr., while the parents d'honeure were Grand Duke Vladimir and Mrs. Potter Palmer.

Mr. Grant conducted his sister to the altar. Besides the immediate family there were present Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, grandmother of the bride; H. H. Monroe, Edwin C. Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. H. Monroe, jr., Mrs. Sartoris, wife of Capt. Sartoris; Maj. Gen. Wesley A. Merritt and Maj. Mott, of his staff; Adjt. Gen. Corbin, Col. and Mrs. Hein and Bishop Potter.

The picturesque ritual interspersed with frequent music by a local quartette was lengthy. The services closed with the singing of the Russian national hymn after which the couple received congratulations while the orchestra discoursed music.

The ceremony consumed an hour and it was nearly midnight before the guests departed.

The newspapers of New York city, according to an official of the company which supplies all but two of the papers printed in this city, use 400 tons of paper daily, at a cost of two cents a pound. The recent sharp advance means $2,000 a day more to the newspaper or $730,000 a year over the price which has heretofore obtained. The cost of the consumption is now $18,000 a day. The tendency is to raise the price still higher. The advance is due partly to the drouth of last summer which seriously impaired the water power of the paper mills.

Book paper has also gone up a quarter of a cent a pound, and letter paper from three quarters of a cent to one cent a pound.

WHITE OPENS FIGHT.

Iowa Democratic Campaign Is Inaugurated.

Characteristic Declarations on Free Trade, Trusts, Imperialism and Money by the Farmer Orator.

The democratic campaign in Iowa was opened at Davenport on the evening of the 14th by a large meeting of the state forces. The principal speaker was Fred E. White, of Keokuk county, candidate for the governorship, who said:

"During quite a lengthy and somewhat checkered political career I have never yielded to the temptation of injecting anything concerning myself into the canvass. But this time I have concluded to break the rule, for I have persuaded myself to make a public confession. I want to confess that as the term is ordinarily understood I am not a politician. Were I to be ever so persistent I should make a uniform failure in trying to play the role of the professional politician.

"To suppress convictions and advocate false doctrines is a fine art that I never learned. My mind has had no training in that direction. Since settling in life—hard work upon the farm—has not been a fit school in which to acquire the power which so effectually characterizes the politician—the power to think of all and of no capacity on my part to advocate what I do not believe has handicapped me at times in my political career. It is partly with which I have for 20 years acted. For instance, the democratic party has always taught the doctrine of tariff for revenue. With this dogma I have been able to harmonize my convictions. For 30 years I have given my allegiance to the edifying, soul-inspiring, God-promised and God-proclaimed doctrine of free trade, and I live long enough to see the constitution amended so we can enact these principles into law is the ardent hope of my soul.

"When 20 years ago fortune so handed me from the overcrowded monarchy of Prussia into the then almost uninhabited prairies of our beloved Iowa, I was happy. When, ever since the year of '61, I began laying the foundations of my future home among a free people, I was still happier. When, at the age of 21, I was given the opportunity to do battle for the flag under whose sheltering folds I had taken refuge, thus actually earning with a musket my right—to that opportunity I joyfully acceded. When, at the end of the war, I succeeded in marrying the woman of my choice I rejoiced still more. When at different times several babies there were born into the household, I was happy on all these memorable occasions.

Republicans and Free Trade.

"But, ladies and gentlemen, will you believe me that I am not half of the joy of mine throughout all these years, all this increasing and ever intensifying happiness, was tempered and at times flavored with the zest of the indescribable, rapturous sensations I experienced when, upon reading this year's Iowa republican platform, I there saw my pet doctrine of free trade boldly announced and sanctioned.

"As I read those lines which declared that industry and commerce should be governed by the natural laws of the world,' I at once saw the republicans of Iowa had been guilty of plagiarism; had stolen the soldiest part of the free trade speech I had delivered in the first session of the Fifty-second congress, in which I did my utmost to emphasize the doctrine that industry and commerce 'should be governed by the natural laws of the world.'

"These politicians no more intend to enact this free trade principle into law than they intend to voluntarily surrender the political power they now possess. Here we have a characteristic sample of the power of the degree of self-deception and hypocrisy which he is capable. To measure correctly the significance of this free trade declaration of the republican platform we must compare it with the actual laws and tariffs these politicians have helped to place upon industry and commerce. These handcuffs represent in many instances the very reverse of free trade—the setting aside of that 'natural law of the world.' To allow the natural law of the world to 'govern trade and commerce' and at the same time to enforce the provisions of the Dingley law is to describe a condition of things in itself impossible.

Repeal the Dingley Law.

"That two and two are five; that the same man is both dead and alive all over at the same moment; that waterspouts, overflows and drenching rains can coexist in the same locality with a parching drought, are ridiculous and impossible conditions are just as consistent and can be made to appear just as true as the proposition to have the natural laws of the world govern industry and commerce while the Dingley law is getting in its stifling work. To enjoy the benefits of the operation of the natural law the unnatural Dingley law must first be repealed. But why fool the people once more? For the overwhelming reason that, having overreached it had destroyed the construction of the schedules of the Dingley bill—in other words, having erected the breastworks behind the shelter of which the spoliation of the country was made possible and is now being systematically attempted—the republican politicians are hearing the ominous sounds of the gathering storm. Having overreached, they are now trying to avert the inevitable, the reaping of the whirlwind.

"Wealth and multiplication of trusts, which if not speedily arrested must end in radically revolutionizing our state of society by eliminating all competitive industries and individualistic conditions therefore enslaving, degrading serfdom, is a truth becoming every day so self-evident that it is forcing itself even into unwilling minds.

Causes of Trust Evil.

"The trust evil, as any other evil, is curable only when the active causes that produce it are eradicated. You can as easily conquer intemperance by continuing the drink habit, as easily subdue the flame by feeding it oil as to crush out the trusts by leaving untouched the active causes that make possible their formation. Three potential causes exist under the joint operation of which the trust evil so lustily flourishes. One is a natural cause, has always existed and will continue and is difficult to deal with. The other two are purely artificial causes and are far easier of solution. The natural cause is man's everlasting unreasoning avariciousness. The two artificial causes are, first, the protective tariff and, second, railroad discrimination.

Natural Cause of Trusts.

"Let us now recur to the question of how to deal with the natural cause of the trust evil, man's greed. Let me first tell you how the republican party has dealt with it. It has studiously encouraged man's greedy disposition by multiplying the opportunities for its gratification, thus aggravating into a worse state what was in a bad state before. These opportunities I speak of have been created by law. The enactment of the Dingley law was in so many words an invitation to all who felt inclined to join in systematically plundering the people. The 57 per cent. of protection at a time when the beneficiaries are selling their wares in every market in the world is virtually a Government license, a legal permit, to extort up to a ruinous point from the American public. Here we see how the republican party alone is responsible for the wholesale creation of opportunities to gratify this crime-breeding and humanity disgracing propensity of avarice.

"How are we to deal with this stubborn vice? Evidently, instead of encouraging it we should restrain it. Instead of multiplying opportunities for this gratification such opportunities should be diminished, taken away so far as lies in human power. The scope within which this evil passion plays should be constantly more and more circumscribed, but never enlarged. Instead of investing this man-degrading passion with the powerful sanction of the law, it should be put under the ban of the law. The 57 per cent. of encouragement to this vice should be withdrawn so that all men would stand more nearly on an equal, so industry and commerce could be governed by the natural laws of the world.'

"When two or more already-strong corporations combine and by virtue of this combination acquire an increase of power, and then so use this power as to inflict a permanent wrong and enduring injustice upon society, then, under the law of common sense, under the provisions of the common law, under the law of High Heaven itself, the active promoters of this combination stand convicted and inspirators against the public good; a crime only one degree less than armed treason against the state. For the safety of society, in the sacred name of the commonwealth, these conspirators should be deprived of all further opportunities to continue their criminal career by receiving life sentence in some penal institution. Thus, while we cannot tear out of man's nature his greedy disposition, society has an undoubted right to defend itself against this evil passion by withdrawing the opportunities for its wholesale gratification.

"All at once, with scarcely time to think, this issue of imperialism, which from the very nature of the case, in view of the momentous consequences which must immediately and necessarily begin to follow, threatens so transcendently important that we are safe in saying it temporarily sweeps aside all other questions. If we cannot now settle it, we are sure to find a solution of the money question in the near future. If we cannot at once suppress the trusts, we are certain to reach the point when the people will be ashamed to submit to the patriotic duty of unhorsing their oppressors. If we cannot now have justice done us by railway managers, our patience and fortitude will qualify us to receive the not distant day of our deliverance. All other questions can wait, but the issue of imperialism must be settled at once. The very nature of the question is such it cannot be postponed.

Danger in Indorsement.

"Should our people sanction the McKinley purpose of the merciless conquest of an innocent people, the consequences, fatal, cannot be rectified, for a policy will then be launched so radically different from all that has characterized our antecedent national life; a policy that will so irrevocably commit us to new and far-reaching international obligations, that escape from these new obligations will be out of the question. It requires no prophet's gift than the penetrating discernment of common sense to enable anyone to know that if we are to assume and wear the sceptre of imperialism, the subjugation of 10,000,000 or 12,000,000 of Filipinos will not be the end, but only the beginning of our new career.

"President McKinley goes about the country talking to undeveloped school children, as well as to returning volunteers, about the unquestioned glories of the flag, reviving in a somewhat different form the exploded doctrine that "the king can do no wrong." In about so many words we are told that under the circumstances under which the flag is raised, when once floated it must be kept there at any sacrifice.

A Childish Doctrine.

"I care not from whom this sickening gush of the infallibility of the flag may come, whether from the temporary occupant of the presidential chair or from some insolent layman. This doctrine that the flag is always invested with a peculiar sanctity and that it must be defended with the last life which it frames from Independence hall, from the top of Bunker Hill monument or from the newly acquired harems of voluptuous Sulu chiefs, this doctrine that the flag is as holy an emblem in the one place as in the other is at once downright childish and intensely vicious, incapable of, being invoked in none other than a desperate, malicious perversion of the flag in New York harbor floating from the statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World," where its glittering stars are associated with the voices of the nations that defend the flag where it guarantees liberty to every slave and freedom to every victim of oppression is an act of the' sublimest patriotism; to defend the same flag in equatorial latitudes where it sanctifies polygamy and tolerates slavery is a task that can be conscientiously performed only by those who do not know right from wrong.

"When the emblem of Spanish tyranny was replaced in long-suffering Cuba with the stars and stripes there came from the people one long shout of approval. Democrats and republicans were alike anxious to strengthen the arm of the government in dealing the death blow to the lingering cruelty of inhuman Spain. By unanimous vote President McKinley was given the key to the national treasury and empowered to expend of the people's money whatever might be necessary to drive Spain from Cuba. Congress, without a hostile vote, saluted the Cuban people with the benediction: "You are, and of right ought to be, free and independent."

Calls It Dastardly.

"Who among us all would have prophesied that the same army and navy and the same appropriation that liberated our allies in Cuba would at once be employed against our allies in the Philippines, who were fighting for their freedom against the same tyrant with far more commendable valor than ever Cuba did? In the long list of bloody deeds that disgrace humankind none, it seems to me, is so entirely black and dastardly as the awful drama we are now enacting—the carrying of war by fire and sword into the devoted homes of innocent people who never did us the slightest wrong and who battled for our freedom for centuries before the American colonies raised the banner of revolt against George III. To slaughter such a people and apply the torch to their homes is to outdo in refine the tyrant.' Tell me not that I should be conservative in the use of my language, diplomatic in my utterances and tolerant in my criticisms. What else can I conclude from day to day and learn fact after fact my indignation intensifies and I find it impossible to dilute my language with modifying sentences.

"Since Mr. McKinley's election in 1896 some notable events have contributed to create a situation of which the demagogues love to take advantage. That time have improved since 1896 is true; that the McKinley administration is the cause of this improvement is false. Two consecutive years failures abroad created an unparalleled demand for food supplies, and a series of heavy harvests enabled us to fully supply this demand, and thus did we rake in the shekels. This fortunate condition being an entirely natural one would have happened even if the whole republican party, including Mr. McKinley, had died of remorse of conscience, as they should have done when they stole the presidency. The unexpected and constantly increasing output of the world's gold mines, amounting now to several times more than it did a few years ago, is another factor in the improved conditions. These two sources of money supply have demonstrated with the precision of arithmetic that prosperion is true, an increase of the money supply was a necessary precedent to prosperity. It is because of this financial expansion that we have believed and believe now in bimetallism."

——Senator Hanna is quoted as saying that congress will do whatever the president wishes, and support whatever policy he may adopt. It is generous in Mr. Hanna not to forget and blurt out the fact that he is running the administration and that he is the man congress must please.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

BRYAN ON TRUSTS.

Remedy Recommended for the Abatement of Monopoly.

The Dollar and the Mah—Prices and Wages—Effect of High Tariff Legislation Against the Evil.

The closing session of the trust conference at Chicago Saturday, September 9, was rendered extremely interesting by the speech of William J. Bryan on the subject of trusts, in the course of which he said:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I am glad that I live in a country where people can differ from each other, differ honestly, express their convictions boldly, and yet respect each other and acknowledge each one's right. I am not vain enough, however, to think that any good will which has been expressed by the people toward me is due to any personal merit. If I have had political friends, it is because people believe with me in certain ideas—or, rather, that I believe with them in certain ideas. It is the idea that makes the man. (Applause.) The man is only important as he helps the idea.

"I come to discuss in your presence a great question, a question of growing importance to the American people. The trust principle is not a new principle, but the trust principle is manifesting itself in so many ways, and the trusts have grown so rapidly, that people now feel alarmed about trusts who did not feel alarmed three years ago. The trust question has grown in importance because within two years more trusts have been organized, when we come to consider the capitalization and the magnitude of the interests involved, than were created during the previous history of the country, and the people now come face to face with the question: Is the trust a blessing or a curse? If a curse, what remedy is to be applied to the curse?

"I want to start with the declaration that monopoly in private hands is indefensible from any standpoint, and unthinkable. (Applause.) I make no exceptions to the rule. I do not divide monopolies in private hands into good monopolies and bad monopolies. All monopolies in private hands are indefensible. There can be no good monopoly in private hands until the Almighty sends us angels to preside over us. (Applause.) Having a despot who is better than another despot, but there is no good despotism. One trust may be less harmful than another trust, one trust magnanimous and more generous than another, but there is no good monopoly in private hands, and I do not believe it is safe for society to permit any man or group of men to monopolize any article or commodity or any branch of business. (Applause.)

"What is the defense made of the monopoly? The defense of the monopoly is always placed on the ground that if you will allow people to control the market and fix the price they will be good to the people who purchase of them. The entire defense of the trusts rests upon a money argument. If the trust will sell to a man an article for a dollar less than the article will cost under other conditions then, in the opinion of some, that proves a trust to be a good thing. In the first place, I deny that under a monopoly the price will be reduced. In the second place, if it should be a monopoly, the price is reduced, the objections to a monopoly from other standpoints far outweigh the financial advantage that the trust would bring.

Protests Against Dollar Standard.

"But I protest in the beginning against settling every question upon the dollar argument. (Applause and cheers.) I protest against the attempt to drag every question down to the low level of dollars and cents. (Applause.)

"In 1859 Abraham Lincoln wrote a letter to some friends at Boston, and in the course of the letter he said: 'The republican party believes in the man and the dollar, but in case of conflict it believes in the man before the dollar.' (Applause.)

"Nothing is more important than that we shall, in the beginning, rightly understand the relation between money and man. (Applause.) Man is the creature of God and money is the creature of man. (Applause.) Money is made to be the servant of man (applause), and I protest against all theories that enthrone money and debase mankind. (Prolonged applause.)

"What is the purpose of the trusts or the monopolies? For when I use the word trust I use it in the sense that the trust means monopoly, and what is the purpose of monopoly? If you want to find out you can find out from the speeches made by those who are connected with the trusts.

"I have here a speech made by Charles R. Flint at Boston on the 25th day of last May, and the morning papers of the 26th, in describing the meeting, said that he defended the trust before an exceedingly sympathetic audience, and then added, 'for his audience was composed almost exclusively of Boston bankers.' (Applause.)

Effect on Raw Material.

"The first advantage of a monopoly is to lower the price of the raw material furnished by the people to that combination. (Applause.) Those plants which are best developed and most advantageously situated are run continuously, and in preference to those less favored. The next thing is, after you have bought up all the factories, to close a part of them, and turn out of employment the men who are engaged in them. (Applause.) And, if you will go down over the country you will see where people have subscribed money to establish enterprises, and where those enterprises, having come under the control of the trusts, have closed up and stand now as silent monuments to the wisdom of the trust system. (Applause.) In case of local strikes and fires, the work goes on elsewhere, thus preventing serious loss. Do not the laboring men understand what that means? In case of local strikes or fires, the work goes on elsewhere, thus preventing serious loss. What else? What else is meant by the statement that the people employed in one factory are not satisfied with the terms fixed by the employer, and strike, they can close down that factory and let the employes starve, while they go on in other factories without loss to the manufacturers.

Brains at a Discount.

"I want to warn you that when the monopoly has absolute control brains will be at a discount and relatives will be necessary to fill these positions. (Applause.) When there is competition every employer has to get a good man to meet competition; but when there is no competition, then anybody can sit in the office and receive letters and answer them when everybody has to write to the same house for anything he wants. (Laughter and applause.) There is no question about it. A trust, a monopoly, can lessen the cost of distribution. But when it does so, society has no assurance that it will get any of the benefits from that reduction of costs in reduction of price. But you will take away the necessity for any skill, for those brains. You will take away the stimulus that has given to us the quickness, the alertness, of the commercial traveler, and there are men, these commercial evangelists who go from one part of the country to the other carrying the merits of their respective goods, there will be no need for them, because, when anybody wants them all he has to do is to write to the one man who has the thing for sale and say: 'What will you let me have it for to-day?' (Applause.)

"What is the first thing to be expected of a trust? That it will cut down expenses. What is the second? That it will raise prices. We have not had in this country yet a taste of a complete trust, a complete monopoly, and we cannot tell what will be the results of a complete monopoly by looking at the results we have followed from an attempt to secure a monopoly, because, is the attempt to secure a monopoly, the monopoly has been lowering prices in order to rid itself of competitors; but when it has rid itself of competitors, what is going to be the result?

"The primary cause of monopoly is the love of money and the desire to secure the fruits of monopoly. But I believe that failing prices are caused by a rising dollar and contributed to this desire and intensified it, because people with their plants, seeing the fall in prices, and measuring the loss on investments, have looked about for some means by which they could protect themselves from this loss, and they have joined together in combination to hold up prices in order to protect their investments from a loss which would not have occurred but for the rise in the value of dollars and the fall in the level of prices. (Applause.)

"Another thing that, to my judgment, has aided monopoly is a high tariff. Nobody can dispute that a high tariff, an import duty, enables a trust to charge for its product the price of a similar foreign product, plus the tariff.

Trenches on the Tariff.

"Now, some have suggested that to put everything on the free list that trusts make would destroy the trusts. I do not agree with this statement, as it is made so broadly. It would destroy the high tariff as one of the means of extortion; that it has aided the trust to collect more than the trust otherwise could collect. But I do not believe that you could destroy all trusts by putting all trust-made articles on the free list. Why? Because, if an article can be produced in this country as cheaply as it can be produced abroad, then the trust could exist, without the benefit of any tariff at all, although it could not extort so much as it could with a tariff, and I believe that relief may come from modifications of the tariff we cannot destroy monopoly until we lay the ax at the root of the tree, and make monopoly impossible by law.

Concurrent Remedies Needed.

"Now, I believe that we ought to have remedies in both state and nation, and that they should be concurrent remedies. In the first place,

The drouth in Southeastern Kentucky is serious. There has been no rain in some of these counties for six or seven weeks. Water is getting very scarce, even for drinking purposes, and stock must be driven miles to water, as all the small streams are dried up.

Henderson fishermen are complaining about the prevalence of alligator gar in the river. They say they must make visits to their lines during the night or they find no fish in the morning. The gar, they claim, are out of the Mississippi, and were never so bad as now.

A remarkable woman lives in Knott county in the person of Nancy Carter, a colored cook. Nancy tips the beam at 500 pounds. She is 50 years of age, and, for one with so much bulk, gets around well and slings pots and kettles with the ability of one much tenderer in years.

Sturgis claims a novelty indeed. Miss Pettie Pierson, cashier of the Bank of Sturgis, enjoys the distinction of being the only lady bank cashier in Kenucky. She not only fill this important position with much credit to herself, but in a manner highly appreciated by the bank's many customers.

Mr. "Knott" Sandusky, of Woodford county, reports a locust tree in full bloom in his yard, the second time it has bloomed this year. There have been frequent instances of fruit trees putting out buds twice during the season, but the "old inhabitants" say they never knew of a locust tree doing such a trick before.

Gov. Bradley does not agree with Attorney General Taylor that Agricultural Commissioner Lucas Moore has the authority to expend $3,000 of the State agricultural fund in preparing an exhibit for the Great Southern Exposition. As a result of the disagreement Kentucky will not be represented at the Exposition unless by private subscription, and this is not at all probable.

In rummaging among some old papers belonging to the estate of J. Sutphin, Mr. Walter Shropshire came across an old "shin-plaster" of one dollar face value, bearing date 1838, and issued by Carcy Ward, then a merchant at Marion now Oxford. These "promises to pay" were issued on account of the scarcity of "change" and were redeemed with bank notes when presented in a certain amount.–Georgetown Times.

Jaubert has been engaged to prepare the burgoo and barbecue for the big Democratic speaking at Louisville, October 10th. About 12,000 pounds of meat will be barbecued and 15,000 loaves of bread have been ordered. There will be several thousand gallons of burgoo. The committee will make arrangements to feed 20 000 people. Stands will be placed so that several speakers will be enabled to talk at the same time. All of the Democratic nominees for State officers will be present.

Some years ago the Louisville Lottery attempted and succeeded in controlling legislation in the State of Louisiana; but the people rose in their might and wrested the State from its control. Senator Goebel has done as much, if not more, than any other man in Kentucky, to suppress lotteries in this state; he has fought them in season and out of season, and has thereby become a benefactor to the State. It's mainly through his efforts lotteries have been suppressed in Kentucky. What hundred men of his traducers, take the very pick and choice of them, have done a hundredth part as much for the benefit of the State as Senator William Goebel?.

General Taylor, the Republican nominee, has opened the campaign and made his statement of the condition of the treasury. His statement was only correct as far as he stated it, but he failed to give the people the true condition of that treasury. He furnished the receipts and the expenditures and the cash on hand, but he did not give the true treasury statement for June 30, 1899, or for July 31, 1899, or for August 31, 1899. He did not state that there was a deficit in the general revenue fund on June 30, 1899 of $625,806.73. He did not tell you that on July 31, 1899, that deficit had increased to $785,261,49. He did not tell you that on August 31, 1899, it was $88,879,31. Mark you the changes were caused by holding claims up, and carrying them over to the next month. The average monthly expenses are about two hundred thousand dollars, whereas in August only $100,385 were paid.

A dispatch from Whitesburg says: "About a month ago a number of road hands working upon the public highway observed small bits of a shining substance in the road. A small, round pebble was picked up, and, by means of a sledge hammer, was broken in two. Near the middle of the pebble was a mass of what appeared to be solid gold. The owner of the land, Painter Johnson, was in the crowd. The finding was near a small coal bank, or, at least, where an opening had been made for coal. Some of the metal was taken to Philadelphia and pronounced the best of gold. On Mill Creek, Rockhouse, Thornton and Millstone the same discoverles have been made. These creeks are all tributaries of the Kentucky river, and are all in Letcher county. Ben Bates, a farmer, who owns about 200 acres of unimproved mountain land, said to-day: I would not take $15,000 for my farm. I can shoe my horses with either gold or silver any time I want to, and still have plenty left. Fifty men in the same neighborhood are just as sanguine."

A Woman Only Knows

what suffering from falling of the womb, whites, painful or irregular menses, or any disease of the distinctly feminine organs is. A man may sympathise or pity but he can not know the agonies she goes through—the terrible suffering, so patiently borne, which robs her of beauty, hope and happiness. Yet this suffering really is needless.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

will banish it. This medicine cures all "female diseases" quickly and permanently. It does away with humiliating physical examinations. The treatment may be taken at home. There is not continual expense and trouble. The sufferer is cured and stays cured.

Wine of Cardui is becoming the leading remedy for all troubles of this class. It costs but $1 from any druggist.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1899. NO. 50.

WHEN Gen. Taylor's attention is called to the "separate coach" law during a speech, he goes right up into the air.

THE big demonstration upon the return of Admiral Dewey to New York, last Thursday, is another illustration of this country's proneness to hero worship.

IF the Republican ticket wins in this State next month, there is not a Democrat in Boone county who will want to say that he directly or indirectly assisted in bringing about that result.

IT appears to be a very difficult matter to make a Democratic nomination any where that suits the Louisville Dispatch. It does not like the Democratic nominee for Governor of Ohio, and when Bryan is nominated for the presidency in 1900, it will continue its present tactics unless taught a lesson this fall by the results of the elections in Kentucky and Ohio.

H. H. HARDY, the manager of the Brown campaign in this Congressional District, claims that a poll of the district shows that Taylor will carry it by 7,540 plurality. Mr. Hardy gives the following figures as the result of the poll of this county; For Taylor. 1,035; Brown, 897; Goebel, 1,115. Goebel's plurality over Tayor, 80. Democrats declaring for Taylor, 288.

IT is Kentucky that fires the first gun for 1900, and Democrats all over the nation have their eyes upon her, hoping that she will shoot in the proper direction. If by means of Democratic assistance the Republicans carry Kentucky again next month, the Democratic party may as well count Kentucky's electoral vote as safely against it in the Presidential contest next year.

IT was only a few years ago that W. C. P. Breckinridge and W. C. Owens were opposing candidates for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Ashland district, and each took especial delight in telling the public of the others moral depravity, and at that time it was generally conceded that neither had exagerated in his statement of the other's moral short comings, and they are now two of the star performers in a movement on in Kentucky, and which is labeled, "for political purification."

IN 1898 the Louisville Dispatch said, among many other things complimentary to the Goebel law, that "through it only can frauds be prevented in elections in Kentucky." It now tells you that it was passed for the especial purpose of making fraud the easier in Kentucky elections. If what the Dispatch now says about that law is true, what it said at first was false, and visa versa. Having deceived you once it is liable to do so again at any time its editor has any personal spite to which he desires to give vent.

THE Brown Democrats have abandoned the contention that their State ticket is the regular Democratic ticket, and when they filed with the Secretary of State their petition for it to be placed on the ballot, they did not claim the rooster as their emblem, but instead they gave as their device the pictures of John Young Brown and P. P. Johnson, with the words, "Honest Election," above their heads, and "Brown-Johson Democratic Ticket" below. This settles the question, and the Goebel ticket will get the Democratic device, the rooster.

IN speaking of the Louisville convention, Hon. C. J. Bronston says: "As a witness to and a participant in the proceedings of that convention, I recall no fact that would justify me, even were I so inclined, to repudiate the action of that convention and withhold my support as a Democrat from the nominees thereof. It is my purpose, therefore, to vote for the entire ticket nominated by the convention at Louisville. My personal relations with Mr. Goebel, the head of the ticket, as well as that with most of his associates, are of such a character that, independent of my party obligation, I should hesitate long before imposing the slightest obstacle to the gratification of his and their ambition."

UNITED STATES MARSHAL JAMES was at Richmond, Madison county, one day last week, selecting his deputies for election purposes. Democrats have always been, are now, and always will be unalterably opposed to the federal government taking part in local State affairs, and the placing of United States Marshals at a single polling place in Kentucky on the seventh day of next month will be an utter disregard of a fundamental doctrine of Democracy.

MAJ. OWENS made a speech at Bowling Green, one day last week in which he abused the head of the Democratic ticket in his inimitable manner to his own satisfaction and to the disgust of his audience. Having made what he considered a powerful speech in advocacy of the Brown movement, he told his audience that he intends to vote the Republican ticket. From this statement it is evident the Major recognizes that there is no earthly chance for the success of the Brown ticket, and he intends to put his vote under the log cabin, where it will count its full worth against the Democrats, and that is what all the disaffected Democrats are indirectly asked to do by declarations such as that made by Major Owens.

We have tried to buy the Filipinos at $2 a head.

The Republicans have put the dollars above the man.

No tomb, be it ever so strong, can imprison a righteous cause.

Our cause is not tied to a man. We have lifted principles above men.

You cannot insure Christianity by hypodermic injection of cold lead.

Monarchy is a force, a republic is consent. Do you believe in force as a hired man?

The money trust is the biggest. Why let it alone to go out to fight the toothpick trust?

All trusts are corporations and creations of laws. What law creates it can regulate or crush.

There are now in all countries that have been subjected more tax collectors than colonists.

Who will pay tax for this? The Filipinos? Then we must tax them more than Spain ever did in the height of her tyranny.

Back of the imperialistic policy is the desire to make money. Instead of "duty" or "destiny," the word should be dollars and cents.

When you call up the question of government ownership of railroads, I say get ownership if you can, but if you cannot, get government control.

If we shoot the gospel into the Filipinos it won't be long till we will be shooting our own particular brand of Christianity here into every one differing from us.

I say, first, let the government issue all the money, drive the banks out of the issuing business. Then we can settle whether it shall be redeemable in coin or not.

God made man. We looked upon God's work and made a fictitious person, a corporation, 10,000 times greater than the individual. Man-made man should have no rights more sacred than God-made man.

I intend to advocate the income tax until the constitution is amended to authorize it so that no judges, no nine or no one, can build a bulwark around the rich and throw the burden of the government on the struggling poor.—Elizabethtown News.

The investigation made at Erlanger, Ky., into the origin of the incendiary fire which destroyed two residences Tuesday night has resulted in the discovery of a clew. Several weeks ago the Catholic church at Erlanger was burned to the ground. The origin of this fire is also shrouded in mystery.

About the time the fire was discovered in the house of Lena Davis, the fortune-teller, Mrs. Legleiter, a neighbor next door, saw a man run out of the yard and disappear in the darkness. It is claimed that this man is known, and that a comparison of his writing with the letters of warning sent to Mrs. Davis to leave the place proves his guilt.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

We have a very strong market to report for the week. Everything sold at advanced prices. Even low grades, which were already away up, sold at a fraction higher. Indeed, it seems that there is no limit to the demand for these goods, and it is hard to understand where the supply will come from if the inquiry for them continue. Mediums were also improved, selling at advances of from 1 to 2 cents over the figures of two or three weeks ago, and the competition on them was quite active.

Fine tobacco was on the breaks in larger quantities and there was no weakening in the bidding. Manufacturers wanted them eagerly and the competition of the speculator caused the $20 mark to be reached and passed many a time.

Besides the offerings on the breaks there were a number of private sales, all fine tobaccos, and many were the comments on the streets and in the papers as to the meaning and effect these purchases by manufacturers' agents might have; whether it would lessen competition on the breaks and thus lower prices or whether the manufacturer needs the goods faster than the breaks are supplying them. The fact is that these sales are made every year, at about this time, and they are probably not more numerous than usual.

The new crop is now about housed and gives promise of being excellent in quality and fair in quantity.

Receipts are falling off, and if the good market is sustained, and sales continue liberal, we will go into the new year with light stocks.

That old cypress which stands in the square of the church in Santa Maria del Tule, near the city of Oajaca, in Southwestern Mexico, is said to be the oldest tree in the world. Some botanists, including Decandolle, say it is 6,000 years old, while others put it down to 2,000 years. Cortez, it was told, in his conquest of Mexico, in 1519, camped with his whole force in the shadow of this tree, and according to native history spent a night full of care, on which account the tree received the name, "Arbol de la noche triste." Five feet from the ground the trunk has a circumference of 102 feet, giving it a diameter of about 32 feet. The height is 120 feet. The branches begin at about 26 feet above the ground, spreading into a crown, the circumference of which is about 520 feet.

The following is the route laid out for Bryan's itinery through this State, speaking in the interest of Goebel:

He will come into the State at Cairo, Ill., Oct. 16, and taking a special train, accompanied by Goebel, Blackburn, National Committeeman Woodson, C. C. McChord and others, will speak that day at Wickliffe, Bardwell, Fulton, Clinton, Mayfield, Paducah, Benton, Murray, Eddyville, Princton, Madisonville, Greenville, Central City, Beaver Dam and Leitchfield.

The night of the 16th will be spent in Louisville, and the next morning, Oct. 17, he will take the Knoxville branch, going through New Haven, Lebanon Junction, Lebanon, Danville, Nicholasville, Harrodsburg, into Lexington. Oct. 18 he will speak at Versailles, Lawrenceburg and Shelbyville, and from the latter point he goes into Louisville, where the principal speech will be made at noon.

On the afternoon of the 18th he leaves for Covington, where his last speech will be made, and on the way to that point stops will be made at La Grange, Sanders, Glencoe, Worthville, Walton and other points.

Virtually all of the tobacco grown in this section of Kentucky is made into plug and fine cut chewing tobacco. The American Tobacco Company and the Continental Tobacco Company, both of which are under one management, having the same president and directors, have secured control of all the factories which manufacture plug and fine cut chewing tobacco, so that two companies which do not compete with each other on the market, are the only buyers of White Burley tobacco, and are the only sellers of the chewing tobacco made from it. Another illustration of a Trust with a mouth at each end.

The fellow who chews tobacco is not entitled to much consideration, but how is the one who grows it affected?

When he goes to sell there is no competition. He must accept what the trust will give. Those who know say it cannot be profitably grown unless it sells for as much as ten cents. The president of the American Tobacco Company recently said that the growers must get ready to take five cents and be satisfied, that the trust thought that would make the growers profit enough.

An exchange says that not long since a minister at Minerva, Mason county, who was bubbling over with enthusiasm, said at the beginning of a service: "Give us all clean hearts; give us all sweet hearts," to which every old maid present shouted a vociferous "Amen."

State News.

Lon McCarty, of Stamping Ground, brought suit against Town Marshal Duke for false imprisonment the day Duke was killed. McCarty was arrested by Duke on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and locked up. He was fined for the offense in the Stamping Ground police court.—Georgetown Times.

It is said that the crop of tobacco this year in Woodford, Jessamine and a part of Fayette counties is the finest in texture of any tobacco in the State. Although the tobacco will not weigh as heavy as in former years, it will make up in quality what it lacks in quantity. To use the expression of all who have seen it, the crop is "as fine as split silk."

Revenue Officer Randall and eight deputies have returned from an extensive raid through Perry, Knott, Letcher and Pike counties, Ky., Logan county, W. Va., and Wirt county, Va., during which they destroyed eight large distilleries and 2,000 gallons of beer and 200 gallons of whisky. The party narrowly escaped an ambush in Letcher county by leaving the road and taking to the woods.

A dispatch from Madison, Wisconsin, forshadows the movement of the trust in the tobacco producing regions, in the following: "The American Tobacco Company will hereafter buy leaf tobacco direct from Wisconsin farmers. The trust will erect a mammoth depot in Madison for sorting its purchases. This move, it is expected, will drive many small dealers out of the field. Recently the trust bought a million dollar bunch of Wisconsin leaf tobacco from jobbers, which transaction impressed it with the advantage of having agents buy direct from the farmers, thereby making a big saving."

At the time the account of the terrible double tragedy at Stamping Ground was presented in the Times last week, it was not known who fired the shot that killed Marshal Duke. Later two eye witnesses were found, Messrs. R. J. Thomasson and E. T. Olliver, who live near Switzer, Franklin county. They were driving home in a buggy and were passing through Stamping Ground and saw the killing of Duke but not of Southworth. They saw young Luther Southworth fire the fatal shot, which was done with Duke's own pistol after he had killed Tom Southworth and while the Marshal was down on his knees and holding his hands above his head. Luther Southworth was held to bail in the sum of $15,000.—Georgetown Times.

Governor Bradley is going to profit by the experience of former Governors and endeavor to avoid the rush of the pardon seekers at the close of his term. He issued the following rule, last week, to govern such matters during the remainder of his term: "For the benefit of the public generally, notice is given that personal appeals for pardons will not be heard. In this way much time is consumed to no purpose. All applications must be made in writing as contemplated by the constitution. Circumstances indicate that, as usual, the few weeks remaining of the Governor's term are to be selected as the time in which those who have been refused pardons heretofore, or those who have been confined for years, and who could have appealed and have failed to do so sooner, are preparing applications, with the hope, doubtless, that owing to pressure of business strict attention may not be given to their cases, and they may be enabled on that account to obtain pardons. Such applications will be promptly and summarily overruled unless they develop some fact or circumstance of recent origin which will justify investigation."

Baseball courting as practiced in our neighboring village of Dover:

"Play nearer your base, darling," murmured she coyly, and accepting her gentle coaching he drew her to him with an enticing out curve. "And who shall umpire our nuptials, love?" said he, having taken one kiss and making bold to steal a second. "I care not, sweetheart," she said gently, "so the game ends in a tie," and they fastened their faces together in one long, luscious two bagger. And telegraphed her father as follows: "Score one to two in our favor. Due to good team work. Send gate receipts at once, for we need support."

The moon changed to-day at 2 p. m., but no indications of rain followed. Every interest is now feeling the effects of the drouth.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier.]

J. J. McGlasson, of Mason, delivered one of the finest calves in Williamstown last Monday that we have seen for quite a while. The calf was only six months old and weighed 600 pounds, bringing the owner $26.

Quails are reported to be abundant in Grant county this year. A few have been killed to furnish nourishment for the many sick around Williamstown and in the country. The season does not open until the 15th day of November, and every true sportsman will keep his gun in its case until that time.

A large tobacco barn, belonging to Dick Jones, who lives on the Hog Ridge turnpike, just over the line in Pendleton county, was destroyed by fire last Saturday morning about 11 o'clock. A large quantity of hay, nearly all of Mr. Jones' farm implements, including wagons, plows, etc. were also burned. Loss about $1,600. Insurance $300.

A. Carter has sued the county for $600, the balance he claims to be due him on the new Grant county infirmary. The county court claims that Carter is not entitled to anything further than what they have paid him on account of damages sustained by reason of his failing to get the building ready at the time agreed. He gave bond and signed a contract to have the buildings completed by the first day of January, 1899, and did not have them ready for occupancy until late in April, and on that account the county was put to great expense, inconvenience, and damaged to the extent of $600. Such will be the defense to the action. W. W. Dickerson, attorney for plaintiff.

Joshua K. Page has sued the county for the sum of $500 damages on account of the present court not keeping in the poor house last year as large a number of paupers as had been kept there heretofore, claiming that the County Judge took the paupers out and set them up for themselves, in many ways rendering them aid, thereby reducing the number that would otherwise have been inmates of the poor house. He claims the profit on the number he ought to have had that he did not have was the amount sued for. The county denies in toto the allegations of the petition and claims that it owes Mr. Page nothing. Harrison & Beasley are the attorneys for the plaintiff.

Persons who pose under the fair name of Democrats should at least be consistent. Last winter when the discussion of the trusts was absorbing the people's attention, a general boycott was instituted against the products of the American Tobacco Trust, and the consumers refused to use the tobaccos branded by this combine. Today some of the most active participants in that boycott are pledging their support to the ticket headed by John Young Brown, seemingly ignorant or oblivious of the fact that the Kentucky representative of this tobacco trust, Mr. Doerhoffer is the leading spirit in the Brownocratic movement. Pray, fellow citizens, if you were unwilling to chew Mr. Doerhoffer's tobacco last winter, why shouldn't you be unwilling to swallow his doctrine now, without the chewing?

FROM CARROLL COUNTY.

[News]

Two tobacco barns in the edge of Trimble county were burned last week.

Levi Block and S. G. Williams bought 29 head of horses here Saturday at prices ranging from $25 to $70 and 7 mules at the same range of prices.

Geo. P. Harris left at the News office Monday a portion of the stock and root of tobacco. One of the prongs or fibres, about 12 inches long grew to the surface, and on the end, above the surface, was fungus growth like that of a tobacco bloom, or rather bunch of blossoms. Mr. Harris says that ahundred or more of his plants had similar growth from the roots and that the blossoms are filled with seeds, a number of which he has saved.

Politics is hot in Kentucky and Ohio is beginning to warm up on the same line.

IN his speech at Versailles in the interest of the Brown ticket, Judge James H. Settle declared: "John Young Brown has no political ambition to gratify—he don't want to be Governor."

That's a strange sort of declaration for a speaker to make in regard to the head of a ticket in the interest of which he pretends to be speaking.

THE largest watermelon ever raised in Georgia has been sent to Stanley Little, of Peekskill, N. Y. It weighed 149¾ pounds, and was raised in Atlanta.

WOMEN interested in the employment for the working girls of New York have on their lists of unhealthful employment that of pearl button making.

IT is asserted that liquid air has 30 times the explosive force of dynamite. During experiments at Vienna, in the firing of cannon, the liquid air was exploded by an electric spark, and the results were extremely satisfactory. No heat was developed in the guns, and the range of the projectiles was much increased.

MANITOU, Col., boasts of the fact that 75 per cent of its population are exiles from their homes, who have found in Manitou health and strength. Its high altitude, its ozone, its persistent sunshine and its mineral waters are its proudest possessions. Among its adopted children are people from almost every state and territory.

THE time required for a journey around the world by a man walking day and night without resting, would be 428 days; an express train, 40 days; sound, at a medium temperature, 32¾ hours; a cannon ball, 21¾ hours; light, a little over one-tenth of a second, and electricity, passing over a copper wire, a little over one-teuth of a second.

COL. JOHN SOBIESKI, who is living unpretentiously in Neosho, Mo., is the sixth lineal descendant of King Sobieski, of Poland, the hero, who became Christianity's champion when the Mohammedans were at the gates of Vienna. The colonel worked his passage to New York at the age of 12, served in the civil war and got his present rank in the Mexican army. His father led the revolt of 1846.

OVER 70,000,000 tons of poultry and nearly 36,000,000 dozen of eggs, produced in Missouri, were handled by transportation companies last year, the aggregate cash returns for which were $8,298,332. The gross value of the shipments exceeded the value of the combined shipmeuts of wheat, corn, oats and hay, and the combiued value of the shipments of lumber, logs, cross ties, piling, cooperage and cordwood.

IT is now only a matter of time when all the principal countries of Europe will be conuected by telephone. Arrangements were completed a short time ago for the building of two separate lines between Berlin and Paris, and now it is understood that steps have been taken for uniting the telephone systems of France and Italy, and for constructing telephone lines between Genoa, Nice, Turin and Lyons.

PHILADELPHIA can boast of the longest asphalted street in the world. Broad street has that unique distinction. First, as already stated, it is the longest asphalted street in the world; secoudly, it is the only street which is of even width for eleven miles, and this width is the greatest ever attained by any street for a course of eleven miles. It is also the straightest street, for from League Island to the county line it does not vary an inch, except once.

CROCODILES, like ostriches, swallow pebbles and small stones, which serve the purpose of grinding their food. The natives assert that it is possible to tell the age of a crocodile by the number of stones in its stomach, for they swallow one each year. In point of fact, 15 stones have been found in the stomach of a crocodile 13 feet long, whereas the number for younger ones varies between four and eight. So says Mr. Volkow, who has been studying this matter for several years.

AT Boscowen, N. H., recently nine bronze tablets marking historic sites within the town limits were dedicated. These were the birthplaces of Gen. John A. Dix, William Pitt Fesseuden, ex-Gov. Moody Currier and Charles Sargent Coffin; the first law office of Daniel Webster; the residence occupied by him and afterward by his brother Ezekiel; the sites of the old fort built for protection against the Indians; of the first church in town and of the first pastor's residence.

IN Great Britain some ten labor bureaus are established that in 1898 procured employment free of charge for nearly 15,000 persons. In Paris the same good work is being done, the last of 1896 showing that work without cost was found for 26,270 persons. In the United States agencies of this kind, some fully equipped and others a skeleton shape, have been of excellent and inestimable service to the unemployed. There are five agencies in Ohio, one in California, three were recently opened in Chicago and the good work is likely to go on in many other states.

TWO GRAND PARADES.

The Largest and Most Magnificent Pageants Ever Seen on Land and Water.

ADM. GEO. DEWEY HIGHLY HONORED.

The Hero of Manila Presented With the Flag of Adm. Farragut, of the Hartford.

He Also Receives a Loving Cup, Valued at $5,000 From the Citizens of New York—Adm. Schley Shares Honors With Dewey.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—New York was decked brilliantly Thursday in honor of the gallant sailor who is waiting at her gate. Had an ocean of color swept through the city its ebbing tide could not have stained the streets more brilliantly. Hundreds of miles of red, white and blue bunting covered the noble facades of Broadway and Fifth avenue and a million flags flutter over the town. Not even the churches have escaped the universal decoration. The doors and gothic windows of Old Trinity on lower Broadway are gracefully draped with the national color and in ancient Trinity graveyard the tomb of that gallant sailor, who, dying, issued the commaud uot to give up the ship, lies shrouded in the silkeu folds of the flag for which he died.

A million visitors are here to participate in the glorious celebration.

Sailors and mariues ashore from the big fighting machines helped to swell the crowd trooping in all directions. Uniformed members of the staff of arriving goveruors were everywhere.

The arrangements for the two-days' celebration are completed. The great arch at Madison Square, modeled after the Triumphal Arch of Titus and upon which the most famous sculptors of America have lavished their genius, is practically finished and stands a superb tribute to the uation's hero. It is more beautiful than the arch in Rome.

At 10:30 all the sailors on the Olympia who fought in the battle of Manila bay were called to the quarterdeck and lined up in review before the admiral.

Capt. Lamberton addressed the men briefly, informing them that congress had voted to each a medal, commemorative of their valor and victory in their fight with the Spaniards, and that Adm. Dewey had ordered that the medals be distributed so that the men could wear them during the celebration.

The ceremony was an interesting one, and the proud Jackies, when dismissed, turned away with beaming faces, hugging their prizes to their breasts.

Another interesting event occurred when Commander George W. Baird, who sailed with Faragut and Dewey in the West Gulf squadron, in 1861, unrolled a package which he had carefully guarded all the way to the Olympia, and displaying a faded blue admiral's ensign, upon which were stitched four white stars, he said to Adm. Dewey: "I wish to present to you the first admiral's flag ever broken out in the navy of this country. That grand old admiral whose name and memory all so revere first hoisted this ensign upon the good ship Hartford, before New Orleans and afterwards on the Franklin; and since it came down from that masthead it has never been whipped by the wind or worn by the elements. You, the worthy successor of that great admiral whose tactics you so successfully followed a short while ago, I deem the proper person for Farragut's mantle to fall upon."

Adm. Dewey was deeply affected, and tears were in his eyes as he gazed at the souveuir. It was several moments before he could find his voice. Finally he said:

"I'll fly it. I'll fly it at the masthead —I'll fly it in the parade—I'll fly it always—and—and—when I strike my admiral's flag this will be the flag I shall strike."

Owing to the the stream of official visitors, the roar of salutes continued almost without iuterruption all day. Maj. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, at the head of the Washington committee, called to submit the programme for the reception at the national capital, and Maj. Gen. Merritt and his staff, stiff with gold braid, came over from Goveruor's Island to officially welcome Adm. Dewey in the name of the army. They were received with all the honors befitting their rank, but the climax was not reached until Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, came down the bay in the afternoon on the yacht Wild Duck. He was accompanied by Gen. Francis V. Greene, some officers of the New York naval militia and several of Dewey's captains at Manila, including Capt. Dyer, of the Baltimore; Capt. Wood, of the Petrel; Capt. Wilder, of the Boston, and Capt. Walker, of the Concord. When they got aboard, Adm. Dewey took them over the ship, and the sight of the fighting captains set the tars mad with delight.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Adm. Dewey's reception began Friday under most favorable auspices. The weather was bright, clear and crisp. The first of the two days' celebrations was devoted to a demonstration on water.

At one o'clock sharp the squadron got under way. It was an inspiring moment when the columu started up the harbor and the great naval parade began to be a reality. First came the police boat Patrol, which was the apex of a wedge spreading out to the fireboats New Yorker and Van Wyck which followed abreast. The steamer Sandy Hook, having on board the mayor and the representatives of the city of New York, with the standards of the city flying from the fore and aft masts, steamed alongside of the Olympia, the flag ship of Adm. Dewey on the port side.

After the Olympia came the armored cruiser New York, the flagship of Rr. Adm. Sampson, with her big turrets and guns appearing like a moving fortress, and she followed in the wake of the admiral's ship. The Chicago brought up the rear of the column.

Following the New York were the two first-class battleships Indiana and Massachusetts. Then followed the gunboat Marietta, small by comparison with the Lancaster, with the auxiliary cruiser Scorpion behind.

When the parade reached a point opposite Hoboken, a welcome to the admiral was fired from a cannon on the green in Hudson park. From some points on shore Adm. Dewey could be seen standing on the bridge of the Olympia, and wherever this was the case the cheering and waving of handkerchiefs by the crowd was wildly enthusiastic. The crowd waiting at Grant's tomb was the largest ever gathered there.

The admiral's cruiser at 2:35 o'clock was opposite Seventy-ninth street. Then there was a tremendous demonstration. Cannon roared, the people yelled and flags and handkerchiefs were waved from the streets and hundreds of roofs and windows.

THE DEWEY CELEBRATION AT NEW YORK.

Gold loving cup presented to the admiral by the people of the city of New York. The cup is three-sided, made of 18-carat gold, and cost $5,000.

The scene was inspiring all along. Mount Tom, which use to be the site of an old fort, had 7,000 or 5,000 persons on it. It was one of the best points of view of the Riverside park.

The Olympia rounded the stakeboat St. Mary's, off One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, at half-past two o'clock amid deafening sounds of cannon and cheers from the largest crowd ever gathered in this city.

The parade was one hour and fifteen minutes passing Fulton street. The vessels moved at about eight knots an hour.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—By actual count the number of men in the Dewey laud parade Saturday afternoon was 30,902.

The parade started at 10 minutes past 11 o'clock, and the last company reached the Washington arch at 5 minutes to 6. It required 3 hours and 55 minutes to pass a given point.

The land pagent overtopped even the colossal welcome when Dewey steamed up the harbor and anchored off Riverside, opposite Grant's tomb.

The naval parade of Friday was a magnificent and superb spectacle, but the wonder of modern times was the great land parade.

The number of persons who saw Dewey well reached into the millions. The admiral's progress from the tomb of Grant to the reviewing stand was literally one of glorious triumph. He rode at the head of the procession with Mayor Van Wyck, immediately following Maj. Gen. Roe and his staff. The cheers with which he was greeted made him ride bareheaded most of the way. He was visibly affected. Now and then his lips twitched convulsively, and occasionally he wiped his eyes. At the reviewing stand, when he and the mayor alighted from their carriage and stepped into their stand, which was banked up by 10,000 costly roses, there was a tremendous ovatiou, volume after volume of cheers most terrific, and the wildest of scenes.

The three admirals—Howison, Sampson and Philip—as they rode by with their brilliantly accoutered staffs, were easily recognized and got flattering applause, as did many of the popular officers of the North Atlantic squadron. The governors of the several states, who rode in carriages, though many of them were popular and would have received big demonstrations at any other time, passed almost unnoticed. The crowds would have none of them to-day.

It was Rr. Adm. Schley who divided the honors with the central figure of the day. He received a demonstration second only to that of Dewey. People along the line of march fairly rose at him shouting their already lacerated throats to the breaking point. "Hurrah for the hero of Santiago!" "There is the man that smashed Cervera's fleet!" "Hip, hip, hurrah for Schley!" and kindred cries came from all parts of the line.

In upper Fifth avenue some enthusiastic lady threw him a handful of roses. They landed fairly in the carriage. The admiral leaned forward, picked them up and lifted them to his lips. Instantly all the ladies in the balcony seemed possessed with the desire to have their flowers similarly honored, and he was fairly bombarded.

Many of the flowers fell into the street, only to be caught up by eager spectators and carried to the carriages. Before he got to Madison Adm. Schley was up to his arms in flowers.

The first ceremony today was the presentation at the city hall of a gold loving cup to the admiral by Mayor Van Wyck on behalf of the city of New York.

Mayor Van Wyck's address was couched in most elegant language, reviewing Dewey's life from childhood to Manila bay. When the mayor had concluded Adm. Dewey replied as follows:

"It would be quite impossible to express in words how deeply I am moved by this—all these honors, one after the other—that beautiful cup, the freedom of the city, this great, magnificent reception. I can not say what I want, but speaking for myself and the gallant squadron I had the honor to command at Manilla, I thauk you from the bottom of my heart."

Adm. Dewey evinced a desire to shake hands with all the naval officers and introduce them to the mayor.

He almost hugged Rr. Adm. Schley and he patted Capt. Coghlan on the back. As Dewey greeted Schley, the crowd sent up cheer after cheer for "Dewey and Schley." As soon as the greetings were over, the mayor began his speech presenting the city's loving cup.

After the formal ceremonies Adm. Dewey went about shaking hands with his friends. "Come here, all you captains," he said, addressing the naval captains present. When the captains had all assembled, he waved his hand toward them and said: "These are the men who did it! These are the men who should be thanked. Without them I could do nothing.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The functions and the receptions that have figured so promiuently in the daily life of Adm. Dewey since his arrival off Sandy Hook last Tuesday morning have proven almost too much for his strength. The admiral has been under such a perpetual physical and nervous strain that he is now almost exhausted. Saturday's ceremonies were the most taxing on his strength of any that he has yet to undergo, and he appeared Sunday looking pale and worn, despite the fact that he retired early Saturday evening and enjoyed a good night's rest.

The admiral Sunday was too fatigued to do more than remain in his room the greater part of the time and rest quietly. At 10 o'clock Adm. Dewey had an engagement to meet the Chicago Dewey committee and before he came down sent a message to Mayor Carter Harrison requesting that he be not expected to shake hands with the members of the committee. The admiral explained this request by saying that he had had so much hand-shaking on Saturday that his hand pained him severely.

Adm. Dewey rose early Sunday morning, however, sending for a cup of tea at 6 o'clock. Shortly after, he ordered a light breakfast, which was sent to his apartments, and which he ate alone. When the admiral had finished his breakfast, he sent for his private physician, Dr. Percy, who was closeted with him for a few minutes. Adm. Dewey later called on the members of his family and his relatives and chatted with them for fully one hour.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Adm. Dewey left the Waldorf Astoria Monday at 12:15 o'clock on his journey to Washington. The trip from Jersey City to Washington was made on the most elaborate special train ever run by the Pennsylvania railroad. Adm. Dewey's personal party consisted of himself, his son George R. Dewey, his brother Charles Dewey and wife; Capt. Lamberton and wife; Flag Lieut. Brumby and Lieut. Caldwell.

SIGNAL TO GREET DEWEY.

This naval signal, forming the words "Welcome Admiral," will fly from the flagstaff of the Army and Navy building in Washington on October 2 and 3, when Dewey arrives at the capital.

A special private car was provided for the admiral. In addition the following naval officers as special guests also accompanied the party: Rr. Adms. Sampson, Schley, Philip and Case; Capts. C. D. Sigsbee and Robley D. Evans; Commander E. P. Wood and Ensign E. L. Bennett. Gen. Miles was also in the party.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Elaborate preparations have been made to give Adm. Dewey a glorious and mighty welcome when he returns to Washington Monday evening, the nation's hero. His arrival in the city will be signalized by an admiral's salute of 17 guns, and a paudemoniun of noise from all the cannon, bells and steam whistles in or about the city. From this time until late in the night his presence will let loose the kindle enthusiasm of the thousands who have been eagerly awaiting his coming.

A civic parade of 12,000 men is only a small part of the first night's proceedings, for an immense throng of the people will file before him for an hour, their number being limited only by the broad width of Pennsylvania avenue. He and the president will occupy a reviewing stand built just south of the treasury building and facing Pennsylvania avenue.

THE FIREWORKS DISPLAY.

From Eight Different Points They Were Set Off—Dewey Witnessed the One at Gen. Grant's Tomb.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The fireworks in this city in honor of Adm. Dewey Friday night was grand.

From eight different points in Greater New York fireworks were exhibited, the grandest display being at the battery. Adm. Dewey witnessed the display at Grant's tomb.

At night viewed from the roofs of any of the high buildings down town New York Friday night appeared an enchanted city.

The great buildings were bright with dazzling light and gorgeous color. On the rivers were fairy barges, in the sky flashing shafts of blue. The water seemed a ribbon of lambent flame.

Never before in the history of New York has this city ever witnessed a greater pyrotechnic and electrical display than that with which the return of Adm. Dewey was celebrated in the harbor and waters surrounding the island of Manhattan Friday night. No more picturesque spectacle has ever been presented to so large a concourse gathered on both shores of the North river, as that of the great hulks of the battle ships of Dewey's fleet silhouetted against the great background of the sky and shining from stem to stem with myriads of incandescent lights, while all around innumerable brilliantly decorated yachts and other river craft honored the nation's hero.

HICKSVILLE, O., Oct. 2.—Sunday afternoon Frank Zuber was driving home from Antwerp, O. Near the bridge across the Maumee river his horse became frightened and tipped the buggy over down a 20-foot embankment. Zuber's neck was broken.

GOLF AS A TEMPER TEST.

A Luckless Player Demonstrates How Easy It Is to Control One's Self.

A golf story which should certainly be added to the already excellent number to which the game has given birth possesses an advantage which cannot be claimed for all of them, that of being absolutely authentic. An enthusiast, who was somewhat of a tyro at golf, though of great distinction at other forms of athletics, had a series of misfortunes with which most people can sympathize. He was playing against a man whose opinion he held, and he consistently topped his ball, sliced it, pulled it, lifted it into a tree, played a fine cleek stroke into a bunker, and made extraordinary straight long-distance putts in which the ball hopped genially across the hole into the long grass which skirted the green.

At first the player's demeanor was ominously sweet; he seemed positively to enjoy his strokes; then he grew mad; then he grew apparently careless, though his caddie noticed the carelessness was only assumed, as he was pressing horribly. The worst of golf is that you can never deceive either your caddie or your ball. At last, at the seventh hole, he grew wonderfully calm, and marched off to the next teeing ground, remarking to his trembling caddie that he would not trouble to hole out. After an easy preliminary swing or two he topped his ball, which trickled away about 20 yards to the right. Then the man took all his clubs and broke them one by one across his knee, remarking quietly to his opponent that "it is better to break your infernal clubs than to lose your infernal temper."—London Telegraph.

COMMERCIAL WIT.

A Parcel of Puns That Were Worked Off All Right But They Didn't Take.

Four traveling men sat on the sidewalk in front of the Windsor the other night telling stories. The man who smoked stogies had just finished a somnambulist tale.

"Reminds me of what the pickpocket said to his fellow-prisoner," commented the man with the nasal blossom.

"What was that?"

"I am here, gentlemen," he said, "as the result of a moment of abstraction."

The pun fell with a dull, sickening thud. But the man who smoked stogies came to the front again.

"Like the incendiary, eh? There is some similarity. He was there because of his habit of making light of things."

The blossomy man refused to be silent.

"But did you hear about the forger?"

"No. Why?"

"He was there on account of a simple desire to make a name for himself."

The man with the stogie meditated.

"That reminds me of the burglar," he casually remarked. There was a three-minute stage wait and the man who liked apple jack gave way to curiosity.

"Why?"

"As he said, through nothing but faking advantage of an opening which offered in a large mercantile establishment."

The blossomy man had departed, leaving a wide, far-reaching void.—St. Paul Globe.

Another on Ireland.

Sir Thomas Lipton is himself authority for a story that relates to his experience on the Shamrock when lying in Southampton water. Observing a quartette of bargemen rowing their clumsy craft in perilous proximity to the yacht's delicate sides, he called out, pleasantly: "Hi, my men! Keep away a bit, will you?" One of the bargemen ceased rowing and eyed the cup challenger critically. "Wot do ye call that 'ere thing you're on?" he demanded. "This," replied Sir Thomas, courteously, "is the yacht Shamrock." "Hull," sniffed the bargee, turning to his neighbor on the next thwart, "it calls 'er the Shamrock. . . . Another bloomin' himitation to Ireland."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

THE SHIPWRECK.

Fifteen Lives Were Lost by the Sinking of the Steamship Scotsman.

Robbers Turned on the Helpless Passengers and With Loaded Guns and Revolvers Compelled Them to Part With the Few Valuables Saved.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—Two hundred and fifty scantily clad, baggage bereft men, women and children were on board of an Inter-Colonial special which steamed into Bonaventure depot Friday night. They comprised the greater number of those who sailed from Liverpool on September 14 on board the steamer Scotsman, bound for Montreal, which was wrecked on the shores of the Straits of Belle Isle at half-past 2 of the morning of the 21st. It was not only a tale of shipwreck that they had to tell, but one of death, suffering and pillage. For 13 at least of the Scotsman's passengers perished; all suffered cruelly from cold and privation and almost the worst horror of all the men who were supposed to succor and assist those committed to their care in the hour of need, turned on the helpless passengers and with loaded guns and revolvers, compelled them to part with the few valuables saved.

Capt. Skrimshire and his officers were exceptions. For the honor of the British merchant marine the crime may not be ascribed to the men engaged in it, but to a gang of wharf rats and hangers-on, picked up on the docks at Liverpool to replace the usual crew of the Scotsman, which joined the seamens' strike on the other side.

All who perished were women. This is accounted for by the fact that they were occupants of the first boat which left the steamer after she struck and which was swamped before it could get clear of the ship.

The Scotsman sailed from Liverpool on September 14. The passage to the Straits of Belle Isle was a fair one, though the green crew in the stoke hole lessened the speed of the ship so that when she reached Belle Isle she was about a day behind her average. Entering the straits of Belle Isle on Thursday night a dense fog blanketed down on the vessel and made navigation a matter of great caution at all times in the straits a precarious undertaking. The speed of the ship was reduced and she felt her way in. At 2 o'clock there was a shock underneath the keel, followed by another and another. The passengers were asleep in their berths and all were awakened by the shocks.

On deck the thick bank of fog shut out the sight of shore. Passengers ran hither and thither, but Capt. Skrimshire and his officials calmed their fears. A superficial examination of the ship told the captain she would be a total wreck and that she must be abandoned.

A port lifeboat was lowered, and in this many of the women and children were placed. Hardly was it clear of the ship when it capsized, throwing its occupants into the water. Those who perished were in this boat. Some were saved, for the ship had listed to port and several women were washed back on to the deck.

One woman clung to a rope for two hours before being rescued. Meanwhile disgraceful scenes were being enacted on board. Hardly had the vessel struck before the men from the stoke hole rushed into the cabins, and slitting open valises and bags with their knives took all the valuables they could lay their hands on. Several of them fired shot guns and tried to force men to leave their cabins. It is said that some of the steerage passengers joined the firemen in looting the baggage of the first-class passengers.

In more than one instance rings were torn from fingers of fainting and dying women.

The Filipinos Deliver Up Fourteen American Prisoners—Five of the Urdaneta Crew Murdered.

MANILA, Oct. 1.—The 14 American prisoners, who have been held by the insurgents, reached Angeles Saturday. Gen. Alejandrino accompanying them. Gen. Otis and Gen. Schwan left for Angeles Saturday morning to receive the prisoners and possibly to confer with Alejandrino and other insurgent leaders.

It is reported from Iloilo that the Tagals have arrested Viravan, a general, charging him with being a traitor. Tribal discord, it is added, is growing. Many of the rebel soldiers have revolted, many European prisoners escaping in the meanwhile.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The war department has received the following:

MANILA, Sept. 30.—Adjutant General, Washington: Communication dated 12th inst., from Gen. Garcia, commanding all insurgent troops in eastern Mindanao, expresses desire to turn country over to United States and surrender insurgent arms. OTIS.

MANILA, Oct. 1.—An escaped Spanish prisoner, who has entered the American lines, says that Gen. Mascardo, with 800 insurgents, began a retreat out of Porac yesterday as soon as the place was attacked. He moved to Calumpit, a mountain stronghold to the westward where 1,500 other insurgents were massed and where also the rebels have powder works.

Four prisoners from the captured American gunboat Urdaneta were in Porac and were taken to Calumpit by the retreating enemy. The five other men of the crew were killed.

HE DESIRES PEACE.

Message Brought to Gen. Otis From Aguinaldo—Wants to Send a Civilian Governmental Commission.

MANILA, Oct. 2.—Aguinaldo's third attempt to shift his difficulties into the field of diplomacy is a repetition of the other one or two with an impossible endeavor to obtain some sort of recognition of his so-called government. The Filipino envoys had an hour's conference with Gen. Otis Sunday morning. They brought from Aguinaldo a message that he desired peace and wished to send a civilian governmental commission to discuss the question. Gen. Otis replied that it was impossible for him to recognize Aguinaldo's government in any way.

They presented a letter from Aguinaldo as "President of the republic," which was largely a repetition of his recent appeals for recognition. Gen. Otis informed them that while he was willing to correspond with Aguinaldo as general of the insurgent forces, he must positively decline to recognize him as president of the civil government. Another conference will be held Monday.

The Filipinos will remain two or three days. Their movements are quite unrestricted, but they are under the constant chaperonage of Capt. Johnson, of the 16th infantry. Sunday they visited the hospitals and distributed money among the wounded Filipinos after which they made calls and received visitors at their hotel.

BOERS MASSING.

Five Thousand of Them Near Dundee, Natal, and About to Attack.

From All Points in the Transvaal, Natal and Cape Colony Comes Reports of Continued Military Activity—Joubert at Laings Nek.

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 2.—The Cape Argus publishes the following dispatch from Charlestown: "Commandant Gen. Joubert will command the Boer forces at Laings Nek. This is regarded as the Transvaal's reply to the movements of the British troops. There is considerable uneasiness here."

DUNDEE, Natal, Oct. 2.—Five thousand Boers are now concentrated in close proximity to the frontier, and it is reported that they are about to attack Dundee. The most complete precautions have been taken.

Charlestown is deserted. All the women and children have left and not more than 10 men are now there. A locomotive is ready to bring away the railway staff.

NEWCASTLE, Natal, October 2.—Four thousand Boers are at Sandspruit and Volksrust, just beyond the Natal border. The Natal police are being called in from outlying stations, and the local troops and carbineers are mobilizing for the defense of Newcastle.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—From all points in the Transvaal, Natal and Cape Colony come reports of continued military activity on the frontiers; and, while the movement of individual commands at yet do not show concerted plans, it is evident that the narrow, wedge-like strip of Natal, whose apex is crowned with the ominous name of Majuba Hill, will be the center of the coming storm.

Late Saturday the Boers established a camp at Scheepers Nek, near Vryheid, and they will mobilize a great force on the Buffalo river Monday, which the authorities at Dundee expect will move across the border to that point, probably at once. It is believed that a conflict at this point will certainly occur early in the week.

At the same time the Boers are collecting a force of 2,000 men, under the notorious Commandant Cronje, in the Mulmani gold fields, near Mafeking, where Col. Baden Powell is stationed.

Dispatches from Tuli, Rhodesia, announced that another force of burghers is massed at Pietersburg, 50 miles south, and that outlying parties are posted at all the drifts along the Limpopo river.

In the meantime Col. Plummer's column is moving 50 miles nearer the Transvaal frontier, and has established telephone connections to within six miles of Rhodesia drift, on the Limpopo.

Enthusiastic scenes at all the railway stations have marked the advance of the Natal volunteers.

Dispatches from Mafeking announce that Commandant Cronje, commander of the Transvaal border police, crossed the border and visited Chief Baralolra, apparently with the object of inciting him to fight. The British civil commissioner ordered the chief to stay and protect the women and children, telling him that he would not be able to fight.

JOHANNESBURG, Oct. 2.—The commandering orders are completed and the burghers are ready for the field. A large body passed through the town Saturday afternoon.

Business has virtually ceased. The merchants have finished barracading premises, and the proprietors of the drinking saloons expect to receive a notification to close their establishments.

A party of 200 Germans has been notified to leave and the Irish corps, commanded by Blake, an Irish American, will go early in the week.

Three trains filled with armed burghers for the Natal border were Sunday evening reported as unable to leave Braalfontein, owing to a block on the line, which has disorganized the whole train service.

Two thousand passengers left Saturday by the morning and afternoon trains and nearly a thousand more by outgoing trains Saturday night.

The government undertakes to provide for the families of the burghers who go to the front.

Cold Snap in Wisconsin.

PLAINFIELD, Wis., Oct. 2.—Thermometers early Sunday morning registered 20 degrees above zero, which breaks all previous records for September weather. The ground was frozen one inch deep. Potatoes are badly frozen and the loss will be extensive.

"BEHOLD THE SHIPS."

Dr. Talmage Preaches on the Glory of the Navy.

An Appropriate Sermon for Admiral Dewey's Home Coming — Useful Lessons from the Lives of Naval Heroes.

(Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.)

At a time when the whole nation is stirred with patriotic emotion at the return of Admiral George Dewey and his gallant men on the cruiser Olympia and the magnificent reception accorded to them, Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, in this sermon, preaching to a vast audience, appropriately recalls for devout and patriotic purposes some of the great naval deeds of olden and more recent times. Text, James iii, 4: "Behold also the ships."

If this exclamation was appropriate about 1872 years ago, when it was written concerning the crude fishing smacks that sailed Lake Galilee, how much more appropriate in an age which has launched from the drydocks for purposes of peace the Oceanic, of the White Star line; the Lucania, of the Cunard line; the St. Louis, of the American line; the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, of the North German Lloyd line; the Augusta Victoria, of the Hamburg-American line, and in an age which for purposes of war has launched the Oregon, the Brooklyn, the Texas, the Olympia, the Iowa, the Massachusetts, the Indiana, the New York, the Marietta of the Iowa, the Massachusetts, the Indiana, the New York, the Marietta of the last war, and the scarred veterans of war shipping, like the Constitution, or the Alliance, or the Constellation, that have swung into the naval yards to spend their last days, their decks now all silent of the feet that trod them, their rigging all silent of the hands that clung to them, their portholes silent of the brazen throats that once thundered out of them.

If in the first century, when war vessels were dependent on the oars that paddled at the side of them for propulsion, my text was suggestive, with how much more emphasis and meaning and overwhelming reminiscence we can cry out as we see the Kearsarge lay across the bows of the Alabama and sink it, teaching foreign nations they had better keep their hands off our American fight, or as we see the ram Albemarle of the confederates running out and in the Roanoke and up and down the coast, throwing everything into confusion as no other craft ever did, pursued by the Miami, the Ceres, the Southfield, the Sassacus, the Mattabesett, the Whitehead, the Commodore Hull, the Louisiana, the Minnesota and other armed vessels, all trying in vain to catch her, until Capt. Cushing, 21 years of age, and his men blew her up, himself and only one other escaping, and as I see the flagship Hartford, and the Richmond, and the Monongahela, with other gunboats, sweep past the batteries of Port Hudson, and the Mississippi flows forever free to all northern and southern craft, and under the fire of Dewey and his men the Spanish ships at Manila burn or sink, and the fleet rushing out of Santiago harbor are demolished by our guns, and the brave Cervera surrenders, I cry out with a patriotic emotion that I cannot suppress if I would, and would not if I could: "Behold also the ships!"

Full justice has been done to the men who at different times fought on the land, but not enough has been said of those who on ship's deck dared and suffered all things. Lord God of the rivers and the sea, help me in this sermon! So, ye admirals, commanders, captains, pilots, gunners, boatswains, sailmakers, surgeons, stokers, messmates and seamen of all names, to use your own parlance, we might as well get under way and stand out to sea. Let all landlubbers go ashore. Full speed now! Four bells!

Never since the sea fight of Lepanto, where 300 royal galleys, manned by 50,000 warriors, at sunrise September 6, 1571, met 250 royal galleys, manned by 120,000 men, and in the four hours of battle 8,000 fell on one side and 25,000 on the other; yea, never since the day when at Actium, 31 years before Christ, Augustus with 260 ships scattered the 220 ships of Mark Antony and gained universal dominion as the prize; yea, since the day when at Salamis the 1,200 galleys of the Persians, manned by 500,000 men, were crushed by Greeks with less than a third of that force; yea, never since the time of Noah, the first ship captain, has the world seen such a miraculous creation as that of the American navy in 1861.

There were about 200 available seamen in all the naval stations and receiving ships, and here and there an old vessel. Yet orders were given to blockade 3,500 miles of seacoast, greater than the whole coast of Europe; and, besides that, the Ohio, Tenuessee, Cumberland, Mississippi and other great rivers, covering an extent of 2,000 more miles, were to be patrolled. No wonder the whole civilized world burst into guffaws of laughter at the seeming impossibility. But the work was done, done almost immediately, done thoroughly and done with a speed and consummate skill that eclipsed all the history of naval architecture.

In the cemetories for federal and confederate dead are the bodies of most of those who fell on the land. But where those are who went down in the war vessels will not be known until the sea gives up its dead. The jackTars knew that while loving arms might carry the men who fell on the land and bury them with solemn liturgy and the honors of war, for the bodies of those who dropped from the ratlines into the sea or went down with all on board under the stroke of a gunboat there remained the shark and the whale and the endless tossing of the sea which cannot rest. Once a year, in the decoration of the graves, those who fell in the land were remembered. But how about the graves of those who went down at sea? Nothing but the archangel's trumpet shall reach their lowly bed. A few of them were gathered into naval cemeteries of the land, and we every year garland the sod that covers them. But who will put flowers on the fallen crew of the exploded Westfield and Shawsheen and the sunken Southfield and the Winfield Scott? Bullets threatening in front, bombs threatening from above, torpedoes threatening from beneath, and the ocean, with its reputation of 6,000 years for shipwreck, lying all around, am I not right in saying it required a special courage for the navy in 1863 as it required special courage in 1898?

It looks picturesque and beautiful to see a war vessel going out through the Narrows, sailors in new rig singing:

A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep,

the colors gracefully dipping to passing ships, the decks immaculately clean and the guns at quarantine firing a parting salute. But the poetry is all gone out of that ship as it comes out of that engagement, its decks red with human blood, wheelhouse gone, the cabins a pile of shattered mirrors and destroyed furniture, steering wheel broken, smokestack crushed, a hundred pound whitworth rifle shot having left its mark from port to starboard, the shrouds rent away, ladders splintered and decks plowed up and smoke blackened and scalded corpses lying among those who are gasping their last gasp far away from home and kindred.

Oh, men of the American navy returned from Manila and Santiago and Havana, as well as those who are survivors of the naval conflicts of 1863 and 1864, men of the western gulf squadron, of the eastern gulf squadron, of the South Atlantic squadron, of the North Atlantic squadron, of the Mississippi squadron, of the Pacific squadron, of the West India squadron and the Potomac flotilla, hear our thanks! Take the benediction of our churches. Accept the hospitalities of the nation. If we had our way, we would get you not only a pension, but a home and a princely wardrobe and an equipage and a banquet while you live and after your departure a catafalque and a mausoleum of sculptured marble, with a model of the ship in which you won the day. It is considered a gallant thing when in a naval fight the flagship with its blue ensign goes ahead up a river or into a bay, its admiral standing in its shrouds watching and giving orders. But I have to tell you, O veterans of the American navy, if you are as loyal to Christ as you were to the government, there is a flagship sailing ahead of you of which Christ is the admiral, and He watches from the shrouds, and the heavens are the blue ensign, and He leads you toward the harbor, and all the broadsides of earth and hell cannot damage you, and ye whose garments were once red with your own blood shall have a robe washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. Then strike eight bells! High noon in Heaven!

While we are heartily greeting and banqueting the sailor patriots just now returned we must not forget the veterans of the navy now in marine hospitals or spending their old days in their own or their children's homesteads. O ye veterans, I charge you bear up under the aches and weaknesses that you still carry from the wartimes. You are not as stalwart as you would have been but for that nervous strain and for that terrific exposure. Let every ache and pain, instead of depressing, remind you of your fidelity. You have in nerve and muscle and bone and dimmed eyesight and difficult hearing and shortness of breath many intimations that you are gradually going down. It is the service of many years ago that is telling on you. Be of good cheer. We owe you just as much as though your lifeblood had gurgled through the scuppers of the ship in the Red river expedition or as though you had gone down with the Melville off Hatteras. Only keep your flag flying, as did the illustrious Weehawken. Good cheer, my boy! The memory of man is poor, and all that talk about the country never forgetting those who fought for it is an untruth. It does forget. Witness how the veterans sometimes had to turn the hand organs on the street to get their families a living. Witness how ruthlessly some of them were turned out of office that some bloat of a politician might take their place. Witness the fact that there is not a man or woman now under 45 years of age who has any full appreciation of the four years' martyrdom of 1861 to 1865, inclusive. But, while men may forget, God never forgets. He remembers the swinging hammock. He remembers the forecastle. He remembers the frozen ropes of that January tempest. He remembers the amputation without sufficient ether. He remembers the horrors of that deafening night when forts from both sides belched on you their fury and the heavens glowed with ascending and descending missiles of death and your ship quaked under the recoil of the 100 pounder, while all the gunners, according to command, stood on tiptoe, with mouth wide open, lest the concussion shatter hearing or brain. He remembers it all better than you remember it, and in some shape reward will be given. God is the best of all paymasters, and for those who do their whole duty to him and the world the pension awarded is an everlasting heaven.

Sometimes off the coast of England the royal family have inspected the British navy, maneuvered before them for that purpose. In the Baltic sea the czar and czarina have reviewed the Russian navy. To bring before the American people the debt they owe to the navy I go out with you on the Atlantic ocean, where there is plenty of room, and in imagination review the war shipping of our four great conflicts—1776, 1812, 1865 and 1898. Swing into line all ye frigates, ironclads, fire rafts, gunboats and men of war! There they come, all sail set and all furnaces in full blast, sheaves of crystal tossing from their cutting prows.

And now all the squadrons of all departments, from smallest tugboat to mightiest man of war, are in procession, decks and rigging filled with men who on the sea fought for the old flag ever since we were a nation. Grandest fleet the world ever saw! Sail on before all ages! Run up all the colors! Ring all the bells! Yea, open all the portholes! Unlimber the guns and load and fire one great broadside that shall wake the continents in honor of peace and the eternity of the American union! But I lift my hand, and the scene has vanished. Many of the ships have dropped under the crystal pavement of the deep, sea monsters swimming in and out the forsaken cabin, and other old craft have swung into the navy yards, and many of the brave spirits who trod their decks are gone up to the Eternal fortress, from whose casements and embrasures may we not hope they look down to-day with joy upon a nation in reunited brotherhood?

All those of you who were in the naval service during the war of 1865 are now in the afternoon or evening of life. With some of you it is two o'clock, three o'clock, four o'clock, six o'clock, and it will soon be sundown. If you were of age when the war broke out, you are now at least 60. Many of you have passed into the seventies. While in our Cuban war there were more Christian commanders on sea and land than in any previous conflict, I would revive in your minds the fact that at least two great admirals of the civil war were Christians, Foote and Farragut. Had the Christian religion been a cowardly thing they would have had nothing to do with it. In its faith they lived and died. In Brooklyn navy yard Admiral Foote held prayer meetings and conducted a revival on the receiving ship North Carolina and on Sabbaths, far out at sea, following the chaplain with religious exhortation. In early life, aboard the sloop of war Natchez, impressed by the words of a Christian sailor, he gave his spare time for two weeks to the Bible and at the end of that declared openly: "Henceforth, under all circumstances, I will act for God." His last words while dying at the Astor house, New York, were: "I thank God for all His goodness to me. He has been very good to me." When he entered Heaven, he did not have to run a blockade, for it was amid the cheers of a great welcome. The other Christian admiral will be honored on earth until the day when the fires from above shall lick up the waters from beneath and there shall be no more sea.

Oh, while old ocean's breast
Bears a white sail
And God's soft stars to rent
Guide through the gale,
Men will Him ne'er forget,
Old heart of oak—
Farragut, Farragut—
Thunderbolt stroke!

We hail with thanks the new generation of naval heroes, those of the year 1898. We are too near their marvelous deeds to fully appreciate them. A century from now poetry and sculpture and painting and history will do them better justice than we can do them now. A defeat at Manila would have been an infinite disaster. Foreign nations not over-fond of our American institutions would have joined the other side, and the war so many months past would have been raging still, and perhaps a hundred thousand graves would have opened to take down our slain soldiers and sailors. It took this country three years to get over the disaster at Bull Run at the opening of the civil war. How many years it would have required to recover from a defeat at Manila in the opening of the Spanish war I cannot say. God averted the calamity by giving triumph to our navy under Admiral Dewey, whose coming up through the Narrows of New York harbor day before yesterday was greeted by the nation whose welcoming cheers will not cease to resound until to-morrow, and next day in the capital of the nation the jeweled sword voted by congress shall be presented amid booming cannonade and embannered hosts.

Especially let the country boys of America join in these greetings to the returned heroes of Manila. It is their work. The chief character in all the scene is the once country lad, George Dewey. Let the Vermonters come down and find him older, but the same modest, unassuming, almost bashful person that they went to school with and with whom they sported on the playground. The honors of all the world cannot spoil him. A few weeks ago at a banquet in England some of the titled noblemen were affronted because our American minister plenipotentiary associated the name of Dewey with that of Lord Nelson. As well might we be affronted because the name of Nelson is associated with that of our most renowned admiral. The one man in all the coming ages will stand as high as the other. So this day, sympathizing with all the festivities and celebrations of the past week and with all the festivities and celebrations to come this week, let us anew thank God and those heroes of the American navy who have done such great things for our beloved land. Come aboard the old ship Zion, ye sailors and soldiers, whether still in the active service or honorably discharged and at home having resumed citizenship. And ye men of the past, your last battle on the seas fought, take from me, in God's name, salutation and good cheer. For the few remaining fights with sin and death and hell make ready. Strip your vessel for the fray. Hang the sheet chains over the side. Send down the topgallant masts. Barricade the wheel. Rig in the flying jib boom. Steer straight for the shining shore, and hear the shout of the great Commander of earth and Heaven as He cries from the shrouds: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God." Hosanna! Hosanna!

The continued dry weather has reduced pastures to dry lots and make springs as barren of water as trusts are said to be of conscience. Many farmers are feeding their stock regularly, with a fair prospect of continuing to do so until next spring.

Mr. John Gibson found a spreading adder just inside the front door where it had crawled and was basking in the sunshine. Burkett Bros. were setting up fodder and found a large adder that had a head on him like a prize fighter, but the frost had taken some fight out of the gentleman. It is said the scarcity of blacksnakes has permitted the rapid increase of adders. Let blacksnakes live

J. W. Conner has his house about completed except the painting. Every mechanic employed on the job was given to understand that he was to do good work and should receive good wages. Mr. Conner is a reasonable and just man and knew that good wages and good work are twin brothers, inseparable, and tied together by the strongest bonds of nature. Hence the the understanding good work, good wages.

To walk in the woods will disclose the fact that a man may as well look for the book of Hezakiah in the scriptures as to look for wild grapes and may spend hours seaching for pawpaws that some boy found two days before. The woods are petty to look at now and barlug the fact that leaves are falling and make a fellow think of winter with its lovely snows, 30° below zero weather he can enjoy a Sunday morning walk in them.

Friday evening Richard and Willie Smith were finishing up sowing wheat and Richard was harrowing in some short rows that required quick turning. The horses turned quicker than he expected and turned the harrow upside-down, catching the lines and pulling the horses suddenly around, throwing one of them upon the sharp teeth that penetrated and killed it directly. Willie was plowing and threw the lines on the plow handles and went to assist Richard, when his horse became frightened and ran away, creating a regular panic for a few minutes.

Some 50 people gathered Saturday at a spring near Mrs. Carpenter's and enjoyed a feast of fish, coffee and corn bread, supplemented by delicacies such as pie, cake, etc. The day was perfection itself and every one present enjoyed themselves to the limit. Napoleon Bristow, Ezra Blankeubecker and Orlando Norman fried fish to the tune of 125 pounds, while Mrs. Richard Head and other ladies served the coffee. Mr. Milton Weldou, who had been active in making the fry a success, was sick on the eventful day and could not go, but he was not forgotten by thoughtful friends and had his appetite for fish gratified at home. Your correspondent was invited to be present, but was forced by an over supply of hard labor, to stay away, and this was about the severest punishment that could be inflicted upon us for we do love fish better than a Mexican greaser loves "hot tamolites and cigarettes." The fact that we had a large number of good friends there who loved fish and had appetites capable of doing the subject justice, was the only consolation we had except to whistle and sing.

Miss Hattie Tanner, who has been seriously sick for over two weeks has improved wonderfully since my last report, and Dr. Crouch, of Union, certainly deserves great credit for the untiring efforts he has made to restore her to health again. Auti Goebellites had a meeting in the Walton Academy Wednesday night. It was composed of six ladies, six of seven boiters, 20 Republicans, forty Democrats, 25 boys and one of the colored persuasion. It was the dryest meeting ever held in Walton. No enthusiasm whatever. Rev Adams introduced Mr. L. P. Tanner, who for about an hour, went over his speech, dwelling in a great measure upon the Louisville convention. The audience appeared to be relieved when he finished. As the next speaker the Hon. T. F. Hallam mounted the platform and was greeted with cheers which were not repeated afterward. Mr. Hallam indulged in his usual characteristic abuse of Goebel, and his methods. It was the general remark of Goebel's friends that the orator abuse would make the one upon whom it was heaped many friends, and when the meeting closed there was loud shouting for Goebel.

The Democrats and Republicans have an equal divide in the election officers in this county.

The first hogshead of the 1899 crop of tobacco sold on the Louisville market brought $10 50.

B. B. Aliphin has bought of W. E. Vest his house and lot here in Burlington. Consideration—$1,400.

A crowd of 50 heard Judge Greene speak at Florence Saturday night in the interest of the Brown ticket.

Ice nearly ½ of an inch thick has been the result of one or two of the cold nights during the last week.

Bud Goodridge is furnishing the logs and Henry Parsons is doing the sawing for Lassing's tobacco warehouse.

Those who have been shucking some of their corn say the quality is not as good as they expected. It is chaffy.

Dr. Furnish reports a pretty good crowd at Rabbit Hash, Saturday afternoon, to hear him and Judge Stephens speak.

At last accounts Logan Tanner, who attempted suicide at Indianapolis, was living. He severed his windpipe completely.

Mr. A. J. Utz will have a sale of a lot of personal property at his residence in the Hathaway neighborhood, on the 11th inst.

The sale of the personal property of the late John Dorsey, will take place at his residence on Dry Creek on the 10th inst.

Wesley Underhill had a load of watermelons on the street Monday, probably the last that will be seen in town this season. They were nice lookers.

Some of the wheat that has been sown for several days is sprouting and the owners fear that the dry weather will continue until the sprouts perish.

Another old land-mark will soon pass from view in Burlington; the building that served Archibald Thompson for a cabinet shop so many years is being raized.

Rev. J. F. Carney will deliver a public address on Pythianism at the K. of P. Hall at Rabbit Hash on the third Sunday in this month, at 2:30 p. m. Everybody is invited to attend.

The game of ball Saturday afternoon was witnessed by quite a good sized crowd, but the game was uninteresting throughout, closing at the end of the eighth inning 17 to 12 in favor of Burlington.

Rev. Carney gave a very nice talk Sunday afternoon at the Universalist church on behalf of the Knights of Pythias. The morning services at the church were followed by a sumptuous basket dinner.

Coming up Middle creek from Henry Parsons' mill to W. H. Pope's, a person sees an abundance of the purest, clearest running water, there being no indication of a drought within a hundred miles of that stream.

For three or four weeks previous to last Monday, several persons who wanted to be Secretary or Treasurer of the local Insurance Company, had been conducting a quiet, but active canvass among the policy holders.

Edgar Hensley left at this office Monday, a very fine sample of "caffer" corn, grown by him this season. This corn heads very much like sugar cane, and is said to make very excellent food for hogs and fowls. Its yield is very large.

Mr. H. P. Marshall, 83, of Waterloo, visited Mr. Noah Clore, 82, of Florence Sunday. These two old citizens were boys together, and no two persons ever spent a more pleasant day than these two old gentlemen did last Sunday. They have many friends who hope they may meet ofter again in this life.

Thomas Mitchell, who worked for Tony Bentler a couple of years ago was seriously hurt in Covington, one day last week. He was hauling lumber for a firm in that city when the front axle to the wagon broke down. The load was jacked up and he was beneath it, when it slipped off of the jack screw, catching Mitchell and mashing him most terribly.

In another column is a letter from Mr. S. H. Goodin, on a subject that interests the entire northern part of the county, and no doubt the citizens out there will consider the matter and see that such improvements are made in their public roads as to give them the benefit of the greatly increased facilities for travel to and from the city, soon to be in operation along the opposite side of the river.

A friend told the RECORDER Monday that it was being told in his neighborhood that it refused to publish the announcement of the Brown speaking here yesterday. This is as black a falsehood as ever came from a man's mouth. The RECORDER, which has never refused to publish the dates for a political or religious meeting when requested, was not asked to publish an announcement of the Brown meeting held here yestesday.

PERSONAL MENTION.

M. T. Garnett is attending the trots at Lexington.

S. G. Botts, of Petersburg, attended church here, Sunday.

W. R. Rouse is hauling some immense oak logs through town.

Miss Mamie Hawes is visiting her aunt, Mrs. S. P. Tilley, at Columbus, O.

William Carpenter, of Gallatin county, is a guest of his cousin, Hubert Gaines.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hall were visiting relatives in Rising Sun, Saturday night and Sunday.

Kirby Conrad, of Covington, was in town this morning. He is traveling for a Cincinnati business house.

Dr. and Mrs. L. C. Cowen, of Rabbit Hash, were guests of the Doctor's relatives here last Sunday and Monday.

J. J. Lillard, Harry Stephens and Wilber Rice, attended the Indiana State fair, at Indianapolis, last week.

Miss Anna Cowen returned home Saturday night, after a pleasant visit of ten days with relatives in Cincinnati.

Misses Gertie, Ollie and Edna Cleveland, of Cincinnati, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kreyleich, last Thursday.

Messrs. Dutton Crigler and Ed Clegg, of Gunpowder, were in town this morning closing up a real estate deal.

Messrs. A. B. Rouse and G. W. Sandford, attended Prof. Bagby's opening reception in Covington, last Friday evening.

Weather Waller, of Kansas, is visiting his relatives in the Verona neighborhood. It his first visit to Kentucky in forty years.

Rev. T. L. Utz called this morning and in the course of his conversation he stated he was going to move to his farm and that in the future his post-office address will be Union, Boone county, Ky.

Mr. Edward Gaines and Mrs. Stephen Gaines, of the Petersburg neighborhood, reached home last Friday after a very pleasant visit of two months to friends in Illinois. On their trip home their train was overtaken by an accident about 67 miles beyond Indianapolis. The englue of a freight train collided with a sleeper, the next coach behind the one in which they rode, wrecking it, after which it took fire. Only seven persons occupied the sleeper, two or three of whom were hurt quite badly. Mr. Gaines was well pleased with the country and delighted with the young ladies he met, so much so that he was gallant enough to allow some of them to beat him playing croquet.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

As perhaps you are aware the Street Car line is nearing completion through Delhi, and they expect to have the cars running in the near future. This will solve the problem of quick and cheap transit for the residents west of the city. Now, why cannot your people avail yourselves of this advantage by opening a road down to the Taylorsport ferry? this is possible. The expenditure required in proportion to the advantages secured, would be so small that it only wants the matter to be properly brought before the people to receive their hearty support.

If this meets with your approval cannot you give the subject a write up, and see if the public will not join in a movement to bring your section into touch with our side of the river?

As the owner of the ferry at Taylorsport, I can promise to take care of the people when they reach my landiug.

Very truly, S. H. GOODIN.

J. D. Kehoe spoke here Monday to a crowd of about 200 in the interest of the Democratic ticket. Mr. Kehoe is an interesting speaker and the audience gave him good attention throughout his speech, the deliverances of which consumed about an hour and thirty minutes. He devoted his time to the discussion of the State issues as set out in the Democratic platform, and his remarks were frequently applauded. Mr. Kehoe's explanation of the workings of the Louisville convention was very different from what many in his audience had been hearing all aloug, and his appeal to the Democrats to stand to the ticket as this is the beginning of the 1900 fight, put the voters to thinking.

There were about 150 people in town yesterday afternoon, to hear John Young Brown, candidate for Governor speak. The crowd was pretty equally divided between the three candidates for Governor. The failure of the speaker to appear was a great disappointment to those who had been at work to get up a crowd to hear him. At this time no cause has been assigned for Mr. Brown's nonappearance.

Report on Orphans' Home.

"The work of the Home is different from almost all other homes for orphans. The plan is to receive into the Home only those orphans that are given up legally, and then to cultivate them, while inmates, on morals, manners and religion, and to give them the rudiments of education. Under the supervision of the Board of Managers, homes are provided for the children in christian families, not to be treated as servants, but as sons and daughters. The record of the Home, since the beginning, is as follows: There have been cared for 1,049 children, 740 from the country and 309 from the city. There remain now in the Home 70 children, 22 of whom are in nurseries. The statistics are at present:

Adopted	16
Apprenticed	8
Remaining July 1	70

Our Home has numerous applicants for children, but only in good homes are they permmitted to go. Your committee has no recommendations to make, except that the churches be urged to continue their liberal contributions, and increase in the future their gifts of provision. We pray that the Home may long be a place of good to orphan children, and that God may be glorified in the future."

Dr. Furnish received a letter Tuesday night, stating that "Silver Joe" Dawson would speak at Petersburg next Saturday night, in the interest of the Democratic ticket.

The Democrats of Erlanger and vicinity will meet at Johnson's Hall in Erlanger, to morrow (Thursday) night, for the purpose of organizing a Goebel club. Good speakers will be present.

Jailer Adams reports the health of his prisoner, Harry Huuter, as precarious. He seems to have lung trouble and is spitting blood freely.

The members of the Democratic club organized here a few years ago are requested to meet at the Court-house next Saturday evening to reorganize the club. All who wish to join the club are luvited to attend.

J. G. FURNISH.

Chas. McKim has had his pension increased to $14 per month. He received a few day's ago a check for $168 back pay.

A Goebel club with 130 members was organized at Petersburg, last Saturday night.

HANNA ONCE MORE.

The Republican Boss Returns to Look After the Presidential Job.

It is natural that Mark Hanna should be swift to reply to the statements of John R. McLean relative to the recent heavy shrinkage of stock values in Wall street, as, indeed, he is to answer any and all assertions of evil results chargeable to trust monopoly of American trade and manufacture.

It is Mark Hanna's first duty to defend the trusts and to see that they maintain the dominion made possible by their control of the republican party. It was for this purpose that he went into public life, taking the leadership of the republican party in order to look after the interests of the trusts. Hanna had no honest ambition [illegible] distinction in American politics. He is the inevitable product of a political party surrendered to commercialism. The part he plays on the national stage is solely that of the syndicates' man of business.

When Mark Hanna took up Mr. McKinley and elected him to the presidency of the United States he was not intent upon rendering the best service to his party and people. He was serving the trusts, knowing that Mr. McKinley would be subservient to the trusts. When he assumed the management of the republican national organization it was not done for the public good or primarily through party devotion. It was because this leadership placed the party reins in the hands of the trusts. And when Mark Hanna bought his way into the United States senate he did so, not that he was ambitious for senatorial honors or zealous in his constituents' behalf, but that he knew he could be useful to the trusts on the floor of the senate.

Mark Hanna is not a pleasant figure to contemplate in American public life. He stands for all the evil developments in that life brought about by the lowering of political standards constituting so deplorable a phase of recent years. He is the antithesis of the American statesman of this country's better and purer days. The principle controlling his public service is that of selfish devotion to the almighty dollar. His real constituency is composed of multimillionaires and monopolists desirous of increasing the number of their millions and strengthening the grasp of their monopolies. The common people represent to Mark Hanna only the material out of which to squeeze these things desired by the syndicates.

This man, however, is serving a good purpose in American politics. He is sickening the people of statesmanship for the benefit of the rich at the expense of the poor. He is causing American gorges to rise at the developments possible to prostituted politics. He is proving the danger and degradation inevitable to a party which subordinates principle to pelf. When Mark Hanna retires from public life he will have builded better than he knew. He will have made it impossible for many years to witness a repetition of Hannaism as the controlling factor in a party to which the people had intrusted the management of national affairs for the best interests of the nation.—St. Louis Republic.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——Ohio republicans are glad to see Hanna back—provided he has brought the greenback.—Albany Argus.

——Mr. Hanna's assertion that the trusts are natural and beneficial is true. It is always natural for greed to assert itself, and greed is benefited by monopolizing combinations.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

——Whenever a democrat insists that something practical be done in the way of regulating the trusts there is always a republican close by to exclaim that the democrats are trying to make partisan politics out of the agitation.—Kansas City Times.

——Mr. Hanna will not be able to persuade the people that he and his party are the sincere enemies of trusts. The republican party begot the "trust," and since the offspring has attained its growth it has in turn been the mainstay of the republican party. A falling out between them would be a strange affair.—Chattanooga News.

PAGAN REPUBLICANISM.

The Elements All Combine to Boost the Imperialist Administration.

Getting their inspiration from the Forakers and Roosevelts, the little organs of the republican party in all parts of the country are joining in giving all the glory to the republican party and its administration in this style: "With a wheat crop of over 500,000,000 bushels, a corn crop of over 2,000,000,000 bushels and other crops in proportion, the tide of prosperity which has set in in this country may be expected to go on rising."

That is the style. The farmer may plant and the rain may water, but McKinley alone giveth the increase—McKinley as the personification and embodiment of the republican party. But we need not wonder that the little organs unite in this absurd ascription of all power and glory to party when the wise men and heroes go about the country giving all the praise for every good thing and for many things that are not good to the party god.

A few days ago Senator Foraker not only attributed all our prosperity to republican measures, but declared that even if the chief of those measures was the mother of trusts it was an unspeakable blessing, and that its abandonment even in part would bring upon the country idleness, soupkouses, ruin and all sorts of woes and calamities.

And a little later Judge Nash, one of the intellectual luminaries of the party in Ohio, said to an audience that was waiting to hear Hero Roosevelt: "Much of the great gain of our country is attributable to the restoration of a tariff law so fashioned as to be beneficial to American interests alone. But much more of it is due to the determination of the American people to maintain inviolate and forever a sound and honest financial policy in this land."

Because of this republican tariff and of a republican financial policy which has not yet emerged into the perceptible Judge Nash declared: "The unemployed are no longer idle. Those who worked only half time and for half pay are now reaping a full harvest."

When the little organs are told by such great lights that "the unemployed are no longer idle" because McKinley has set them to work somehow without giving them employment it is no wonder that they forget Providence and set up an elliptical joshouse at Canton with McKinley at one focus and a flag at the other and continually burn scraps of paper before these objects of their pagan idolatry.—Chicago Chronicle.

"Has It Been a Dood Little Willie While Uncle Mark Was Gone?"

JINGO GABBLE.

Spread Eagle Fervor of Maudlin Heretics Who Defend Imperialism.

Sensible people, whatever may be their private opinions as to the question at issue, are becoming both weary and indignant over the vulgar and brutal denunciation heaped by orators and organs upon everyone who expresses a doubt as to the wisdom of the administration's Philippine policy. The spectacle is disgraceful and it will react upon the cause in the behalf of which it has been presented. This is a free country yet, we hope, and honest citizens still retain the right to their opinions and their conscientious utterances.

The sooner the administration calls off its newspaper and other champions engaged in this abominable business the better for its standing with the country at large. There is no possible excuse for trumping up spreadeagle fervor or maudlin hysterics. The question is one of expediency as to which every citizen may express his views without impropriety. All this talk such as Senator Hanna has been indulging in to the effect that Europe will "laugh at us" if we abandon our present policy—is feeble nonsense. Europe is not likely to laugh at the United States and nobody would care even if she did. We are not running this country to please Europe, and have no interest or approbation to consult except our own. No amount of such gabble as we refer to can accomplish any result save that of discrediting the gabblers and disgusting decent men.—Washington Post.

THE COMING CENSUS.

General Schedule to Be Issued by Census Office for Enumeration of Live Stock.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Very soon a general schedule for the enumeration of live stock will be put forth, in a tentative form, by Statistician Powers, of the census office, for discussion and, if necessary, correction. It will be something like the following:

ANIMALS ON HAND JUNE 1, 1900.

	Age.	Number.	Value.
Calves	Under 1
Steers	1 to 2
Steers	Over 2
Bulls	1 and over

Mules	1 to 2
Mules	Over 2
Asses & burros	All ages
Lambs	Under 1
Sheep (ewes)	Over 1
Sheep (bucks and wethers)	Over 1
Swine	All ages
Goats	All ages
Llamas	All ages

PURE-BLOOD ANIMALS BY FAMILY-NAME AND THE NUMBER OF EACH PER FARM.

Kind.	Number.	Kind.	Number.
Horses		Sheep

Goats		Cattle

Total receipts from sales of live stock in 1899.....$——
Market value of all animals slaughtered on the farm in 1899..$——

	Number of fleeces shorn Fall 1899 and Spring 1900.	Total Weight	Total Value.
Wool	No
Mohair	No

In the above the term "horses" is intended to include ponies.

The count will be made of June 1, 1900, in order to permit harmonious comparisons with the count of live stock in 1890, which is recorded as of June 1.

All that is indicated in the above table and all that the law requires may be secured if every related interest, beginning now, will work to that end. Director Merriam has suggested that the best way to do this is for all concerned to open and keep such books or accounts as will enable them, on the arrival of the census enumerator, to answer his questions (practically as above indicated) promptly, fully and accurately.

ALMONDS AND COCOANUTS.

California's Large Production of the Former and Florida's of the Latter.

There are, roughly speaking, 21,000,000 pounds of almonds consumed in the United States each year, some eaten with raisins, some used in the manufacture of candy, some ground for cream and flavoring extracts, and some, of an inferior quality, used for perfumery and soap. The state of California produces about 14,000,000 pounds of almonds in a year, or two-thirds of the amount required for domestic consumption, and the other almonds are imported from European countries, from which, until a few years ago, all the almonds were sent. The figures of almond importations for the fiscal year 1898 show importations of about 7,000,000 pounds. Of this amount 4,500,000 came from Spain, 1,500,000 from Italy, chiefly Sicily, and the balance from Greece and Portugal.

Cocoanuts to the value of about $600,000 a year are imported into the United States from foreign countries or from countries which were under foreign jurisdiction at the time of the last annual treasury report. Before the beginning of the Cuban war for independence the importation of cocoanuts from Cuba into the United States was to the value of about $200,000 a year. With the beginning of the war it declined, and under the present tariff the duty on cocoanuts further reduced the importation from Cuba, though a large increase in the shipments of cocoanuts is expected this year under American jurisdiction in Cuba and Porto Rico. The competition of American with foreign cocoanuts, the latter from the West Indies and South American states, has been more active in the case of almonds for the reason that the chief source of supply of American cocoanuts is Florida, which is in closer proximity to the New York market. The annual product of Florida cocoanuts amounts to about 7,000,000 pounds, of the value of about $300,000 a year, and the conditions as to almonds and cocoanuts are in this particular reversed. California produces just twice as many almonds as are imported into the United States, whereas Florida produces just one-half as many cocoanuts as are imported.—Boston Transcript.

The Distinction.

"I noticed," remarked a friend of the orator, "that in your speech on corruption in politics you used the phrase 'pulling and hauling' several times. Isn't that a repetition? Don't the two words mean the same thing?"

"Not necessarily," replied the orator. "They have similar meanings, but they are not synonymous. Generally speaking, the stronger your pull the bigger your haul. Get the idea?"—Chicago Tribune.

The meek and mild pigeon is certainly not like the accepted notion of the bird of war, yet in reality that is its title.

Since Yale was established, nearly 200 years ago, the president has always conducted the devotional exercises, but President Hadley will not do so.

The Italian statistician Luigi Bodio reports in the Giornale degli Economisti that the Italian railways carried in 1897 nearly 12,500,000 foreign passengers, of whom 6,219,813 traveled first-class, 5,068,444 second and only 380,000 third.

INCREASE OF DEAF MUTES.

Defective Additions Said to Be Due to Intermarriage—Statement of Authorities.

The census of 1890 showed 41,283 deaf mutes in the United States. But it is admitted that the list is defective, so many parents and relations wishing to conceal defects that the censustakers could not get accurate data. In 1870 the number was 16,205. Statistics show that the number of deaf mutes is increasing at a much faster ratio than the total population, and that more and more deaf mutes are marrying deaf mutes, and thus propagating a defective variety of the race.

Dr. W. W. Turner, the late principal of the American asylum, in Hartford, the largest institution in the country where deaf mutes are received, shows that the number of congenital deaf mutes is multiplying with increased rapidity. He cites one case where a woman lived to see 16 deaf and dumb grandchildren.

He declares that every consideration of philanthrophy, as well as the best interests of congenitally deaf persons themselves, should induce their teachers and friends to urge on them the impropriety of intermarriage. Years ago there was one deaf mute to every 1,500 of the population.

Prof. Alexander Graham Bell, the celebrated inventor, married a deaf mute and has written "A Memoir Upon the Formation of a Deaf Variety of the Human Race." After extensive research he made this declaration:

"The indications are that the congenital deaf mutes of this country are increasing at a greater rate than the population at large.

"And the deaf mute children of deaf mutes are increasing at a greater rate than the congenital deaf mute population.

"If the laws of heredity that are known to hold in the case of animals also apply to man, the intermarriage of congenital deaf mutes through a number of successive generations should result in the formation of a deaf mute variety of the human race."

Reports of the American asylum, at Hartford, show that 33 per cent. of the pupils admitted had deaf mute relatives. Cases showing as many as 15 deaf mute relatives to one individual were found. There were more than 12,000 deaf mutes in the United States who belonged to families containing more than one deaf mute.

More threatening still is the statement of Dr. Henry L. Peet, the deaf and dumb specialist. He declares as a result of his researches that the normal hearing brothers and sisters of a deaf mute are about as liable to have deaf children as the deaf mute himself. —N. O. Picayune.

MONEY IN HISTORIC SPOTS.

Birthplaces of Famous Men Are Worth Considerable in a Speculative Way.

Last year no fewer than 26,000 people passed the turnstiles which guard the entrance to the little room in which Burns first saw the light. In 1896, the centenary year of Burns' death, the number reached 38,000, and as two pence is demanded from each visitor a very simple calculation will show what a large sum of money is annually obtained by this means.

The cottage is a very humble one-storied little erection, with a thatched roof, and the poet's father, when he first went to live there, would have opened his eyes pretty widely had anyone been able to tell him what a sum was one day to be received for it. The place was bought from him (after the poet's death) by a corporation of shoemakers, who afterward sold it to the present trustees for $20,000.

Another famous birthplace which attracts a large number of people is that of Thomas Carlyle at Ecclefechan, which is 20 or 30 miles north of Carlisle. There is no fixed scale of charges for visiting this cottage, but as 1,205 people climbed the stairs last year and each probably left something with the caretaker it will be easily seen that here, too, is a nice little property.

There are other places, more or less well known, scattered about in different parts of England and Wales, which the tourist often visits. Shakespeare is still a veritable little gold mine to Stratford-on-Avon. People from all parts of the world make pilgrimages to the little Warwickshire town in order to see the famous poet's birthplace. The charge for admission to the house is six pence, but as an interesting museum is usually visited at the same time, for which an extra six pence is demanded, few persons leave the building without leaving one shilling behind them.

Then there is Ann Hathaway's cottage to be also seen. This is a mile away from Stratford, at the pretty little village of Shottery, and it is where the poet's wife was wooed and won. The writer, during a recent visit to it, was informed that on an average 100 people a day all the year round came to see the cottage, and as each visitor pays six pence, $3,500 or $4,000 a year must be made out of it.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Great Catarrh Cure.

JOE WHEELER'S CHARGE AT SAN JUAN HILL.

Major General Joseph Wheeler, commanding the cavalry forces in front of Santiago and the author of "The Santiago Campaign," in speaking of the great catarrh remedy, Pe-ru-na, says: "I join with Senators Sullivan, Roach and McEnery in their good opinion of Pe-ru-na. It is recommended to me by those who have used it as an excellent tonic and particularly effective as a cure for catarrh."

United States Senator McEnery.

Hon. S. D. McEnery, United States Senator from Louisiana, says the following in regard to Pe-ru-na:

"Pe-ru-na is an excellent tonic. I have used it sufficiently to say that I believe it to be all that you claim for it. —S. D. McEnery, New Orleans, Louisiana."

United States Senator Sullivan.

"I desire to say I have been taking Pe-ru-na for some time for catarrh, and have found it an excellent medicine, giving me more relief than anything I have ever taken.—W. V. Sullivan, Oxford, Miss."

United States Senator Roach.

"Persuaded by a friend I have used Pe-ru-na as a tonic, and am glad to testify that it has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite. I have been advised by friends that it is remarkably efficacious as a cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh. —W. N. Roach, Larimore, North Dakota."

DOES ITS WORK WELL.

Flood Gate That Answers Very Nicely for Fencing Across Creeks and Their Branches.

In this part of the country we have a great many creeks and small branches. All the fences have to be hog tight, and the water gaps have to be closed. I have found the flood gate shown in the accompanying illustration answers very nicely for fencing across these creeks. To the posts on either side, which may be growing trees, attach No. 9 wire, as shown in the engraving, and stretch it tight. Secure two crosspieces, as, and then select boards of the proper length to fit the curvature of the bed. Nail these on and then attach the uprights, provided for that purpose. Suspend from the cross-wire, as shown in the illustration. This makes a very desirable flood gate, and one that will not be carried away in time of freshet. The crosspieces should be 2x4 scantling, and the boards used for uprights may be ordinary fencing planks sawed to the proper length. They should be made of pine from the fact that this is much lighter than hard wood.—Orange Judd Farmer.

I have been a reader of your valuable paper for two years, and am very fond of it. I have been benefited by many good hints from the Epitomes of Experience, and the many little sketches and drawings which have been made by farmers. Here is an illustration of a road grader, which is my own invention. A and B are two pieces of plank 4x10 and four feet long. D is a brace three feet in length. C C are two old plow shares with the points off, bolted to the timber. A makes a good hand side. E is a piece of an old wagon tire. Nail a board over the top, and you will have an excellent grader.—Fred J. Claussen, in Agricultural Epitomist.

FALL PLANTED TREES.

They Have a Number of Important Advantages Over Those Planted in the Spring.

The fall-planted fruit or shade tree has a great advantage over the spring-planted tree. Our summers are hot, pretty much all over the country, and they are pretty long, too. The heat, with the long dry spells that we frequently have, makes the growth of the spring-planted tree very slow and uncertain. But if the planting is done in the fall, the hole dug large and deep, the top soil and suitable fertilizer placed at the bottom, over and among which the roots are carefully spread, and more rich soil added, with the clay subsoil which has been removed in making the hole, poked well about the young tree at the surface, the tree will be pretty well fortified for any kind of weather. The depth and width of the hole will enable it to retain much moisture about the roots, which becoming well set, and begin growth during the late fall, which is resumed at the very beginning of mild weather in the spring. There is no shock to the tree when the true growing season comes and it is ready to resume its growth. Having tried both fall and spring planting of trees, I shall hereafter, when I have occasion to plant trees, do it in the fall of the year.—Agricultural Epitomist.

Packing Apples for Export.

Apples for export should be honestly and tightly packed with sound fruit; sample barrels are entirely emptied in the presence of the buyers. They should be packed in clean packages, well coopered, and the head of the barrel should be neatly stenciled with the name of the variety, grade and some shipping mark; the English law also requires the letters "U. S. A." to be on every barrel shipped to that country. Export apples should be shipped as soon as practicable after packing, and if held in storage for a considerable length of time should be entirely repacked. The best varieties for export are the hard and best colored fruit.—C. R. Lawrence.

SHORT-LIVED ORCHARDS.

Why Fruit Trees Weaken and Die Sooner in the Western States Than in the East.

One thing that always strikes an eastern man on visiting the west or a western man visiting the east, is the great difference in the size of the trees and the age of the orchards. There are orchards in the eastern states with trees over a century in age that are still bearing. A tree at 25 or 30 is looked upon as just in its prime. In the west ten and 15 years of bearing is about the average life of a tree.

In size they do not grow so that anything but a short foot ladder is required in picking time. Most of the fruit can be reached from the ground or from a wagon. The trees early crack, become decayed in the trunk and the limbs split off. A tree 50 years old is a curiosity.

There is a cause for this which is evident to any thoughtful observer. It is the dry, hot winds and sun that play havoc with our orchards. In the great prairie country an orchard is wholly unprotected from the heavy winds which sweep unrestrained over the level country. The prevailing wind during the hot months is southerly. The limbs with the shading leaves are blown so that the hot sun shines directly on the body of the tree, drying it until the bark checks and peels loose from the wood. Water collects in this crack at the next and at every ensuing rain, and the death of the tree has begun. Decayed and weakened it cannot stand the strain of its heavy top and some windstorm leaves it a wreck, useful only as firewood.

We cannot hope to remove the cause. Our only remedy is in perfection. A windbreak of some hardy trees that can withstand both drought and wind along the south side of an orchard is of inestimable value to the owner. The man who contemplates putting out an orchard should also consider a windbreak.

There is one mistake that is made almost universally in the west. This is setting trees out too thinly. As most orchards are arranged, each tree is isolated from its fellows and must stand alone. Were they put in closer, so close in fact that the limbs will touch or even interlock, it will take a cyclone to injure them. As the wind cannot get a chance at them, each tree is protected from the hot rays of the sun by its foliage; or even if lifted and blown to one side the tree trunk will be shaded by its neighbor.

Even with the best of protection it is doubtful if trees will reach an advanced age in the west in comparison with the east. But there is no doubt that from ten to 20 years can be added to a tree's usefulness by proper protection.—Nebraska Farmer.

NEW BUTTER MARKET.

American Product Brings Five Cents a Pound More in Berlin Than the Home Article.

A cablegram from Berlin announces that the other day in Germany's capital city American butter sold over all competitors at an advance of 20 pfennig, or five cents of our money.

When we consider that Germany has been the most persistent foe to American agricultural exports, going so far even as to attack our apples and shut them out of her markets, we may see in this incident a hopeful change. But we may be sure of one thing—that butter was sold on its merits and the consumers paid five cents more per pound for it than other butters could be had, not because it came from the United States, but because it was gilt-edge in quality, pleasing in flavor and bore the stamp of honesty and purity.

This is only one incident, but it indicates great possibilities, not along the line of oleomargarine and process butter, but in the future of the first-class, pure article, such as American dairymen know how to produce, can produce in almost unlimited quantities and at less cost than any other people in the world. What occurred at Berlin will be possible in many other cities of Europe if we but keep our standard high, and insist that nothing but the genuine article be permitted to leave our shores.—Farmers' Voice.

The thin edge in front slips in under the roots without bruising them, and as they are comparatively light in weight large numbers can be taken up at each shovelful.—N. Y. Tribune.

Sunning the Dairy Pails.

The good old practice of sunning the dairy pails should not be forgotten, even though in cases we have laid aside the shallow pans. The sun is a microbe killer of the first magnitude. He not only kills the microbes, but so thoroughly dries out the pails and other utensils of tin that the process of rusting is stopped. Wooden pails and utensils are also improved by being submitted to the solar rays. This of course should be done in the open air, where the atmosphere is not poisoned or impregnated by foul odors, and where the wind can have a full sweep.—Farmers' Review.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If there is one thing on which the housewife prides herself, it is that of having her laundering done nicely, so that the wearing apparel may be the admiration of all. The washing is a small matter, any one almost can do that, but to have the linens present that flexible and glossy appearance after being ironed requires a fine quality of starch.

AN EVENING CALL.

Brown Found Perkins Beating His Wife and Told Mrs. Brown All About It.

"I called on Perkins last evening," remarked Mr. Brown.

"Did you have a pleasant time?" inquired Mrs. Brown.

"Very. Perkins was beating his wife when I came in."

"What?"

"I say Perkins was beating his wife, but of course he stopped when I came in."

"Well, I should hope so."

"I begged him to go right on, but he said some other time would do just as well."

"You begged him to go on?"

"Why, yes. I didn't want to stop the fun, you know."

"Oh, you brute!"

"Eh?"

"Do you mean to say you could have looked calmly on while he beat his wife?"

"Certainly. Why not?"

"I thought you had at least a spark of manhood left. I suppose you will be beating me next."

"Yes, I think I could if you would play cribbage with me."

"Play cribbage?"

"Yes. That is what Perkins and his wife were doing."

"You horrid thing!"—San Francisco Examiner.

A Texas Judge.

In one of the remote counties of the Panhandle of Texas two lawyers were trying a case before a justice of the peace. It was 60 miles as the crow flies to the nearest law book, and the attorneys differed, of course, as to the law upon the main issue in the case. They were trying the case without the intervention of a jury, and his honor, who conducted a gambling house in connection with his hotel, saloon and livery stable, was in doubt as to what his decision ought to be. Finally Miller, the plaintiff's counsel, offered to bet Hoover, the defendant's attorney, $10 that he was right. Hoover did not happen to have that much of the circulating medium concealed about his person, and was naturally at a loss how to parry this forcible argument. The court waited a few moments on Hoover, and finally said: "Well, Mr. Hoover, the court has waited long enough. Miller's proposition seems to be a fair one, and, since you don't put up, I will decide this case in favor of the plaintiff."—Law Notes.

"I'm a foine building," said one of them, "you'd never think they'd put up that solid a strookchur just to kape dead boogs an other crachures in." "Indade, no," replied the other, "but are thim big letters cut into the stone above the windies the names av?" "I dono," said the first speaker. He fell to spelling out the words, and presently a ray of intelligence succeeded the puzzled expression on his face. "Sure, I hav it," he said. "Thim is the names av the contractors." Nearly always these operations become necessary through neglect.

If the menses are very painful, or too frequent and excessive, get the right advice at once and stop taking chances. It will cost you nothing for advice if you write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for it, and if you let the trouble run along it will surely cost you a great deal of pain and may mean an operation.

WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

MISS SARAH J. GRAHAM, Sheridanville, Pa., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had suffered for several years with female troubles and doctored until I was discouraged. I felt wretched and tired of living. I had disease of kidneys, bladder trouble, dropsy and bloating, had womb trouble and a large tumor had formed; in fact all my organs were out of fix.

"Seeing a woman's letter praising your remedies, I wrote to her and she begged of me to try it, telling me all that it had done for her. I bought six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now cannot express my gratitude to you. The tumor began to come away in pieces and I got better all the time. I believe now that I am entirely cured.

"My doctors could not believe it at first, as they all had told me that my case was a hopeless one, and no human power could do me any good. They were astounded. If I can say anything that can help other women, I shall be glad to."

It is not safe to wait until the last moment. Head off trouble by prompt attention to it. Don't be satisfied without Mrs Pinkham's advice.

STATE NEWS.

The turkey crop of Madison county is said to be 30 per cent larger than last year.

The Sheriff of Butler county was the first to settle with the Auditor and receive his quietus.

At Russellville, Netta Whitson was acquitted of an old murder charge, the offense being the killing of an uncle seventeen years ago.

Last Saturday Constable W. E. King went to the home of Tandy and Frank Lewis, near Poplar Grove, with a warrant for their arrest upon a misdemeanor charge, but they stood him off with a shotgun and refused to be taken. The race horse Clay Pointer, which with Thomas H. Berry was ruled off at Chicago this summer, turns out to be the property of ex-Senator Henry L. Martin, of Woodford county. Saturday Martin had the horse attached at Tom Steven's farm. Martin claims that Berry was to give him half the winnings, and his portion of the same amounts to $500.—Lexington Herald.

A large force of hands are at work this week putting in a long-distance telephone. A pole 100 feet high will be placed on each side of the river over which the wire will be stretched of a sufficient height as not to interfere with steamboat navigation. This will be a great convenience to our citizens to be able to converse with people in the leading cities in the country.—Augusta Chronicle.

According to figures furnished by the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, the number of beef cattle in United States has decreased since 1896 from 37,000,000 head to 26,000,000 head. This reduction of 9,000,000 animals has been accompanied by an increase of 14,000,000 in the country's inhabitants, so that now there are only 365 steers to each 1,000 of population, while in 1890 there were 589 steers to each 1,000 of population.

FISCAL COURT.

The fiscal court was in session Monday with Judge Roberts presiding and all the justices of the peace present. The most important question before the court was that of an appropriation for the building of a bridge across Woolper creek near its mouth on the Bellevue and Petersburg public road. This question has been before the court several times before. It occupied nearly the entire time of the court, Monday, and was considered in all its different phases, and late in the afternoon the following order was entered:

"On motion of M. B. Green it is ordered that this court appropriate out of the road and bridge fund a sum not to exceed $2,500, to build a bridge across Woolper creek at the point where the road leading from Bellevue to Petersburg crosses said creek, but said bridge shall not be built until the citizens in the vicinity raise by private subscriptions and pay over to the building committee hereafter to be appointed by this court a sum of money not less than $500 to be used toward the construction of said bridge; and it is further ordered that in the construction of said bridge the fund so raised and paid over to the building committee shall be first expended, and if the cost of construction is less than $3,000 then the appropriation hereby made is to be lessened to the amount that the cost of said bridge is less than $3,000.

"It is further ordered that construction of said bridge shall be entirely under the supervision and management of this court and such committee as it appoints."

The following Justices voted for the above motion, to-wit: M. B. Green, J. C. Byland, Angy McCounell, J. H. Walton, and the following against it: Clinton Gaines, J. S. Noell.

The remains of Early O. Rouse were taken from the vault, last Thursday, and laid to rest by the side of his daughter who preceded him four years ago. He was in his 66th year. He united with the Burlington Baptist church, 25 years ago under J. A. Kirtley's preaching; afterwards removing his membership to Union where it remained until God called him to his reward. He was greatly devoted to his church and was ever ready to aid in any good cause, and was never known to refuse the needy when seeking assistance. He was a devoted husband, kind and indulgent father and a good neighbor, and will be greatly missed by all. ***

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1899. NO. 51

GEN. TAYLOR said one day last week, "I have assurance that every Brown man is praying for my success." At LaGrange, the other day he talked again and said, "I will receive 50 per cent. of the Brown strength." The next time Mr. Taylor talks on this subject he ought to give his source of information. However, he has said enough to show how he expects the Brown voters to be manipulated to his advantage, and further than that, that he relies largely on the disaffected Democrats making his success possible.

GOV. BRADLEY has consented to make three speeches for the Republican ticket. He will take the stump immediately after Mr. Bryan makes his tour of the State, and expects to so strengthen and solidify the Republican party in Kentucky that a Democratic victory in the State will forever hereafter be an utter impossibility. Gov. Bradley's coming to the assistance of his party at this time insures him a seat in the United States Senate in the event the Republicans carry Kentucky this fall.

ONE of the curious social laws of Peru forbids women to attend funerals, and they do not appear at weddings unless they are very intimate friends. When a funeral procession passes through the streets the coffin is carried upon the shoulders of the pall-bearers, who are followed by an empty hearse drawn by two four or six horses, according to the means of the mourners and their desire for display. All the male members of the family and friends of the deceased follow on foot, with a line of empty carriages behind them.

IN another column is published a call for a meeting of those who are interested in building an electric road from Covington to Hamilton by way of Union. Nothing could be done that would be of more benefit to the country for miles on each side of the road. It is hoped the project will receive proper encouragement on the part of Boone county people.

THE Dispatch is running the Brown ticket under two devices, the first is the rooster, them comes the pictures of Brown and Johnson, followed by the ticket. It must be remembered that the Brown managers abandoned all claims to the rooster, so why not down with the rooster, Mr. Dispatch?

WHEN a Democrat goes into the voting booth and unfolds his ballot he will find the rooster, the emblem of Democracy, occupying the first place on that ballot, and it will be hard for him to pass it by in search of another and an unknown emblem under which to plaee his X.

IN his article in the Post, Monday evening, P. P. Johnson had some ugly things to say about the Louisville convention, but he ignored that part of the proceedings in which he assumed to be "the whole thing." P. P.'s modesty is simply wonderful.

THE Democrats in Ohio have the Republicans frightened, and if McLean should win and the Democrats in Kentucky keep the State in line a long stride towards a national victory in 1900 will have been taken.

THE French statistician, Dr. Livrier, says that half of all human beings die before 17, that only one person in 10,000 lives to be 100 years old, and that only one person out of every 1,000 lives to be 60.

THE Democratic ticket has never been placed on a ballot in Kentucky in response to a petition. It has always been entitled to a place on the ballot.

Geo. B. Winslow, of Carrollton Referee in Bankruptcy, was in town yesterday taking steps in the bankrupt cases of Long, Beemon and Kroger.

IF Gen. Taylor is elected Governor of Kentucky this fall, the Republicans will have the State's electoral vote nailed down for 1900.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.
[Courier.]

The receipts of the Grant County Building Association last Monday night were $1,082 55. Matured stock to the amount of $4,250 was ordered taken up paid off and canceled.

A valuable cow belonging to D.J. Charbonneau fell in D. L. Cunningham's cistern last Saturday night. After four or five hours' hard work she was landed on terra firma not much worse for the wear.

Some lively shooting took place in Williamstown last Sunday night. Bob Billiter, a young man who lives near town, took a crack at Thurston Somers, narrowly missing him. Both boys were taken in charge and the war was soon over.

The fall term of the Grant Circuit Court convened on last Monday. Judge John Green, whose health has been very poor for some months, was sick and unable to be present. He sent word that he might not be able to attend during this term of the court. The court was convened at ten o'clock and the clerk called an election of the attorneys present to elect a Special Judge. On the first ballot Judge C. C. Cram was elected.

M. J. Castleman and Dr. Ferrell, of Glencoe, Gallatin county, engaged in an altercation over a game of croquet, last Monday afternoon, and Castleman struck Ferrell with a mallet, killing him. M. J. Castleman is a brother of our townsman, D. E. Castleman. At last accounts Castleman's whereabouts was unknown.

Hints for Love Making.

First catch your lover. Hold him when you have him. Don't let go of him to catch every new one that comes along. Try to get pretty well acquainted with him before you take him for life. Unless you intend to support him find out whether he earns enough to support you. Don't make up your mind that he is an angel. Don't palm yourself off on him as one either. Don't let him spend his salary on you; reserve that right until after marriage. If you have conscientious scruples against marrying a man with a mother say so in time, that he may get rid of her to oblige you, or get rid of you to oblige her, as she thinks best.

If you object to secret societies and tobacco it is better to come right out with your objections now than reserve them for curtain lectures hereafter. If your adorer happens to fancy a certain shade of hair don't color or bleech to oblige him. Remember your hair belongs to you and he doesn't. Be sure it is a man you are in love with and not the clothes he wears. Fortune and fashion are both so fickle it is foolish to take a stylish suit for better or for worse. Don't try to hurry up a proposal by carrying on a flirtation with some other fellow. Different men are made of different material, and the one you want may go off in a fit of jealousy and forget to come back.

Don't marry a man to oblige any third person in existence. It is your right to suit yourself in this matter. But remember at the same time love is blind, and a little friendly advice from one whose advice is worth having may insure a lifetime of happiness or prevent one of misery. In love affairs always keep your eyes wide open, so when the right man comes along you may see him. When you do see him you will recognize him, and the recognition will be mutual. If you have no fault to find with him personally, financially, socially, religiously, or any way, he is probably perfect enough to suit you. You can afford to believe him, love him, marry him.

The speeches that Gov. Bradley is not making for the Taylor ticket are eloquent and convincing.—Hopkinsville New Era.

The Republicans have secured the services of the Federal U. S. Marshals to assist them in carrying Kentucky.—Western Argus.

The result of the campaign so far shows unmistakably that the contest for Governor is between Mr. Goebel and Mr. Taylor. One or the other of these men will be the Chief Magistrate of the Commonwealth. The people must take their choice between these two, and it is a waste of time and votes to consider the candidacy of any other man. Ex-Gov. Brown himself has not the slightest hope of being elected, and his candidacy is confessedly in the interest of the Republican ticket.—Bardstown Record.

What Our State Does for the Training of Her Unfortunate Children.

Many persons are not aware that the State of Kentucky does more for the training of its defective children, in proportion to their number, than it does for the other children through the public schools. In fact, it maintains three noble schools: one at Frankfort, for the teaching of feebleminded children, known as the Kentucky Institution for the Feeble-Minded; one at Danville known as the Kentucky School for the Deaf; and one for blind children, known as the Kentucky Institution for the Education of the Blind.

These are all free, and the State, upon proper evidence, pays for the clothing and even for the railroad fare of those children whose parents are too poor to meet such expenses.

In the case of deaf children and also of the blind children, the school is in session from the middle of September to the middle of June, when the children all go home, in order that the family ties may not be destroyed.

The buildings for the care of these children are a credit to the State, and thoroughly equipped with all possible means for the comfort, happiness, and education of their pupils. They are under the charge of boards of trustees selected from the citizens of the neighborhood, and the best possible teachers are employed for training their pupils.

These three schools are maintained in the most generous manner by the State, and consequently rank among the foremost in the world for their efficiency.

It is strange to say, but true, that only a small part of the entire number of defective children, within the school ages of six and eighteen, get the benefit of what is freely offered by the State. This is particularly so with the blind children of the State. About one hundred and twenty-five yearly receive instruction at the Institution for the Blind in Louisville though it is estimated there are more than five times that number growing up in ignorance in Kentucky. The school receives all children whose eyesight is so defective as to prevent their getting an education in schools for the seeing.

There are also, in a separate building, equal and similar privileges provided for colored children.

We print this notice in order that any one who knows of a defective child of suitable condition to be taught, now growing up in ignorance, may get the benefit of what the State so freely offers.

No greater work of benevolence can be done, and a postal card addressed to any of the institutions mentioned will secure full information as to the simple forms to be observed to secure admission.

The following letter from Sam Hinde, jr., from Los Angeles, Cala., was written Sept. 30, not for publication, but we publish it nevertheless, as Mr. H. has many friends in this county who will like to hear from him:

My Dear Sir:—Did you notice the headlines? well, it is a fact, but at same time I really can not bring to bear on my mind how far I am from my birthplace; yet we have traveled over 3,300 miles. We left Walton, the heart of Kentucky, on the 21st, and more especially old Boone, and we are all proud of her. It took us six days to make the trip here. Some of the trip was pleasant and some not. We have things thrust upon us when we least expect it. For instance: we showed our authority—right at the State prison, Canon City, Col., by plowing our way through a freight train. Part of our train was completely demolished and several were killed. One poor man who had been East to bury his wife and was on his return trip home, had his last three children with him, and they were all killed. We, that is wife, three children and myself were shaken up considerably. Don't want any more wrecks, yet this was not the first for me. Now I have taken a long rout to tell what I want and please remember this is not for publication. People would say this is an "ad" for me. Dr. J. W. Smith, of Illinois, was tried at Owingsville, last week, charged with the murder of Henry Craig in 1877. The jury, after being out five hours, brought in a verdict of not guilty. Dr. Smith is a prominent physician of Illinois. He had had trouble with his wife, and she came here and informed the authorities of Smith's place of residence.

The Scott county grand jury failed to indict Luther Southworth for the alleged killing of Marshal C. R. Duke, of Stamping Ground, after the latter had killed his father, Tom Southworth. At his examining trial the boy was held over in the sum of $15,000. There was additional evidence brought before the grand jury in the boy's favor to what was brought out at the examination.

In Mason county Mrs. James Lashbrook, wife of a prominent farmer, was found dead in a cabin near the family residence. Her brains had been beaten out with a club, and the surroundings indicated that a terrible struggle had taken place. Officers arrested Richard Coleman, colored, aged nineteen, employed on the Lashbrook farm as cook. Coleman confessed to the crime, after evidences of his guilt had been found, and is now in jail at Maysville.

Ada Michael, of Graves county, is in jail at Mayfield on the charge of murdering her newborn babe. The body of the child was found in a box in the girl's room, with its skull crushed and finger prints on its throat. A negro woman had stated that the girl tried to persuade her to kill the child, but she refused. The mother of the girl is charged with being an accomplice and will be held jointly with the girl to answer for the crime.

Petitions for the restoration to citizenship of men who have served terms in the State penitentiary, so that they can exercise the right of suffrage at the November election, are pouring into the executive office these days. In most instances they are promptly marked "refused" by Gov. Bradley and pigeon-holed among the records of the office. The Governor is a bit shy of petitions filed at this time, and unless an unusually good case is made out clemancy is denied.

Two years ago a farm laborer of the name of Cederberg, who now lives at Topeka, bought a span of mules for $100, and the seller threw in a sickly colt that he had on his farm. The colt grew into a small, but fine, three-year-old, and this year it has been taking first money in the pacing races about the state. It is known as Little Squaw, and last week at Ottawa it took the mark of 2:14. Cederberg has been offered $3,000 for the mare, and he has made more than that in this season's racing.—Kansas City Journal.

CROP AND STOCK.

A consignment of [illegible] tle sold at $6,85 in Chicago [illegible] days ago. Referring to [illegible] price, the Breeders' Gazette says: "There is cause for congratulation among feeders in view of the fact that while this outside price has only been paid in one instance, a sufficient number of other sales have been made close up to such figures of late to demonstrate continuance of a market full of encouragement for those who are fitting good cattle yet to come forward."

Concerning this year's tobacco crop, the United States Department of Agriculture says that there is unquestionably a somewhat [illegible] acreage in tobacco than there was last year. While there has been some increase in [illegible] Connecticut, New York and Wisconsin, there is very considerable reduction in the Shaking [illegible] the largest producers. In Kentucky and Tennessee there is a reduction of about 15 per cent, in North Carolina and Ohio of about 10 per cent, and in Virginia of 5 per cent.

Just at this time the turkey crop is beginning to attract attention. As it is nearing maturity and will soon begin to move toward the markets. The high prices for turkeys last year was a great stimulus to the production, and the broods last spring were larger and more numerous than for many years before. Then the season has been exceptionally favorable, reducing the loss on account of diseases common to young turkeys through wet seasons, to the minimum. It is estimated that the crop in this section is at least 30 per cent. larger than the crop of last year, while the reports from the west and northwest indicate even a larger increase in those sections. The stock every where is reported unusually fine, but owing to the increased supply with the demand about the same prices are apt to rule somewhat lower this year than last.—Richmond Climax.

Governor Bradley declined to pardon James H. Garrard, one of the Clay county feudists, who has moved away from Clay, but is under indictment there for carrying concealed weapons. Garrard is a son of General Theodore Garrard, and was forced to leave Clay county a year ago because of the feud, and he located in Pineville. In his petition for pardon he says the charge was trumped up against him in order to have him brought back to the county, and claimed that if compelled to return for trial either he or someone else would undoubtedly be killed. In declining to pardon him the Governor says: "As to whether or not the defendant should be pardoned depends on the fact of whether he is guilty of the offense and what mitigating circumstances exist. Protection will be afforded by the Court if he desires to defend his case."

IT is strange that a paper that is now claiming that the Goebel election law was passed solely for the purpose of making easy election frauds in this State, should have been one of that law's most earnest advocates when it was pending in the legislature. The Dispatch played a strong hand in the passage of that law, and if it was intended to make fraud easy that paper knew it, and can not clear its skirts of its part of the responsibility of it becoming a law.

In Iceland horses are shod with sheep's horn; in the Soudan the horses are shod with socks made of camel's skin. A German not long ago invented a horseshoe of paper, prepared by saturating with oil, turpentine and other ingredients. Thin layers of such paper are glued to the hoof till the requisite thickness is attained, and the shoes thus made are durable and impervious to moisture.

The stores of ice at Windsor, Osborne and Balmoral castles are very large. At Windsor there is a storage room for about 500 tons. There the supply is obtained from the lake beneath the north terrace, from Frogmore and Virginia Water. Ice is not lavishly used in the royal kitchen, also for reducing the temperature of her majesty's apartments in hot weather. Then it is packed in pretty wooden buckets and stood in the fireplace.

Although the difference between a good and a bad sponge is very marked, but few people seem able to appreciate it. The first requisite of a good sponge is that it should be dark in color. The beautiful yellow sponges commonly seen in druggists' windows are a decoy and a snare. The natural color is a light to medium brown, and the yellow sponges have been bleached by vitriol bath, which destroys their elasticity and makes them wear out much sooner.

The survey on the route of the proposed ship canal from the great lakes to the Atlantic has recently been completed in its preliminary details. The project is to have a canal 30 feet deep and 340 feet wide from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario around Niagara falls and, leaving Lake Ontario at Oswego, follow the course of the Oswego river to Lake Oneida, then via the Mohawk river to the Hudson. The chief difficulty is in finding storage for water to feed so large a canal.

One of the masterpieces of musical clocks has just been completed for the Emperor of China, in whose palace, besides pointing out the correct time, it will play selections with a fully equipped automatic orchestra. It is pronounced the most complete musical automaton in the world, having eight divisions, each of which has a repertoire of eight melodies. All the pieces played by this musical clock were selected by the emperor himself, and consists of 40 foreign and 24 chinese recitals.

Laborers in excavating at No. 60 Thompson street, New York city the other day discovered a rich deposit of mercury. Edward Polschke, owner of the land, believes that metal of the purest character has been found. An investigation shows that the metal exists in a stratum a few feet below the surface. It is quite thick, is imbedded in sand, and is easily shaken out. One of the laborers took 14 pounds of the available metal out of a small space, while another filled a tomato can with globules of the deposit.

Electricity in capsules is the latest thing in New York. A company has been formed, with $15,000 capital, to supply power in ten or twelve-grain capsules, which can be bought by the box and carried around in the vest pocket. One of these capsules will furnish electricity enough to keep a light burning all night. The assertion is made by a representative of the company that the light can be furnished at less than one-fifth of a mill per lamp per hour for each sixteen-candle incandescent globe. The company intends to sell power at ten cents an hour for the full-horse power.

Some interesting statistics have been compiled as to the work transacted by the post office officials at the house of Simmons during the session. It appears that no fewer than 734,000 letters were received for members, this being considerably over 1,000 per head. The figures posted numbered 583,000. As many as $3,000 inland telegrams were dispatched and nearly 12,000 were received. Press telegrams totaled over 1,000. Postal orders to the number of 1,000 were issued, and upward of 1,000 more were both received and posted. Express service was availed of to the number of 1,500 letters and nearly 1,500 was received for stamps sold.

Sierra Blanca, in every respect the highest mountain in Colorado, is the eastern terminus of the serrated Sangre de Cristo range, which forms the western boundary of the San Luis park, a region which was once a gigantic lake. It is now 7,900 feet above the sea. Blanca itself rises 14,483 feet above sea level, more than 2,000 feet higher than renowned Pike's peak. It is 35 miles around at timber line, about 10 miles in circumference at the top. It is about 18 miles southeast of Del Norte, the county town of San Juan county.

THE OHIO CAMPAIGN.

Started by John R. McLean at Hamilton.

Imperialism and Trusts Vigorously Assailed—Money Question Vital But of Secondary Importance.

The democratic leaders of Ohio got together at Hamilton, Saturday, September 30, and set in motion the state forces for the coming campaign. John R. McLean, candidate for governor, was in the van and spoke upon the issues, state and national. He said:

"Since the war with Spain, what has been the history of the Philippines? Our war was against Spain, for the redress of grievances, and not against the Philippine islanders, for conquest. When Spain was vanquished we hauled down her flag, and ours then floated in friendship. On Manila bay and its shores it should have been thenceforward the symbol of liberation in the land we had come to help in arming to Spain alone. The natives were our friends. Their recognized leader had returned to the islands by invitation of the United States, and had been allowed to organize a military force, and established a camp at Cavite. He had summoned his people to the support of the United States military occupation in a proclamation, assuring them that the American flag meant liberty and independence for them. He organized a civil government, and only were these proceedings not objected to, but he was addressed by Gen. Anderson, our chief commanding officer, as the commander of the military forces of the Philippine islands, and asked to furnish a map of the adjacent country for the use of Gen. Merritt, soon to arrive. He cheerfully complied. The amicable relations continued until Gen. Merritt, fresh from the white house at Washington, took command, and made an order establishing a military line, which was to separate our forces and the Filipinos into two hostile camps, and forbidding the entrance within our lines of any of Aguinaldo's command. This order was the commencement of hostilities.

In Favor of Expansion.

"The treaty cession of the Philippines by Spain to the United States does not conclude the question of future sovereignty. It places the determination of the civil and political status of the inhabitants of those islands exclusively in congress. We are in favor of legitimate expansion, but opposed to an imperialistic policy. We object to the methods that have prevailed, the character of the settlement chosen to make the Philippines a part of our country. We believe that a rational friendly course could have made the Filipinos our friends, and even at this time fairness and justice would bring peace. Diplomacy, that arm of all civilized governments, has not been tried. The military secrecy of the administration has led the nation to believe that beyond all declarations was the fact that England was in need of an ally in the orient and had made us play as an instrument for her interests. If the people of United States want the Philippines and want a place in the councils and doings of the east, it can be had by honorable and open dealings. We condemn the methods and doubt the wisdom of the Hanna-McKinley policy.

"Another menace to the people of the United States is what is known as the trusts. They antagonize the law of supply and demand, substituting in their place limited outputs of products at prices enhanced to the limit. Under the plausible claim for 'a fair return on the investment' their work is done. So friendly has the republican administration been to its creators that the trusts formed within the last two years exceed in capitalization all that had been organized before. Individual effort is rapidly being crushed by them, and our young men just coming on the stage of action look in vain for fields of enterprise in which their fathers flourished and by which they developed our country. Shall this great people be bound hand and foot by the audacity, the aggressiveness of a few able men and let them become the permanent rulers where now they only bear temporary sway? We should not be Americans if we permitted it.

Trusts and "Bossism."

"We are told to-day that if we antagonize the trusts, if we fight their aggressiveness, their crushing tactics, we want to haul down the flag of the Philippines—that we want to destroy the fame of our great country. No one magnate of these great concerns saw fit, when the cry of distress went up from a people now our own, to lend their aid, their dollars or themselves for the cause; but individuals stood forth, and praise be that in many cases love of country, love of patriotism, stood above what wealth had given.

"I come now to what stares the honest, liberty-loving citizen in the face—that thing known as bossism. We see favors dispensed, we see men rejected, we see decorations conferred, decorations withheld, all on personal ground. In our own state we see a clique—a few men, headed by an aggressive, audacious, bold man—take possession. As I say, in our state, as well as nationally, they say who shall hold offices and who shall not. In a great city of our state we find the people bound hand and foot, trembling under a dictatorship, vulgar, brutal, bold, which has become as the weevil, as the blight. Our business men should rise and overthrow the power assumed by this arrogance. No body of men working under a public franchise in that city is free from the demands and commands of this boss. It is necessary to go through his hands in order to make any contract, to get any recognition, to do any work. Individual business has been assailed, corporate business has been assailed, demands made, and, I fear, in many cases acceded to, because it was thought best in the interest of the helpless owners of property.

"The dictator of the republican party in Ohio, as well as the nation, says the money question is wiped out, and no longer play or should take part in our politics. If that be true, then more than ever the honest citizen, the business men of the township citizen should rise in his might at this time, when only state and local conditions exist, shake off the handcuffs of the blackmailer, stand forth for honest commercial transactions and for the welfare of our state and cities.

Money Question a Vital One.

"The money question is also a vital one. It has ever been a contest between the government and would-be self-appointed agents. Money, we all understand, is but a something expressive of value. The public must have something in a tangilo circulating shape to express their transactions. That something is known as money, expressing value. In every state on one side is a great mass of people; on the other a body of men struggling for supremacy, who are ever ready to take up the troubles of the country and from their standpoint administer a remedy. To-day in this country, as a hundred years ago, this same class has striven to take the making of a currency from the people, from the country, from its representatives in congress.

"The democratic party holds that the government, and the government alone, may issue currency, may coin its money. The democratic party has ever held that it needs no brokers, no commission agents, between it, and the people; that it was a government prerogative, a right belonging to the government alone. On the other side intriguing men are found who want to strip the government of that power. It has ever been their aim to make a currency that should be as scarce as possible with which to carry on the business of the country. They wanted that they should regulate the amount of money, and then as the price at which the people could have that money. [illegible] silver pushed out [illegible] We find a determination [illegible] exerted to make [illegible] and interest-bearing notes a [illegible] asset-bearing ones.

"We claim that the government and the government alone, has the power to coin and issue expressions of value. This is a rightful and just wround and one for which our party has always stood and will continue to stand. Government coining of money and the issuance of circulating notes are alike solely a government function. The government should declare what shall be money and what shall be its volume. Issuance of circulating notes is no more within the province of private banking corporations than is the coinage of gold and silver or the issuance of government bonds. Banks of deposit and discount are as necessary to business as the circulation of the blood is to the body, but they should not be allowed to issue any form of paper currency.

Should Elect Rich Men.

"All legislation should have for its object the betterment of conditions. While capital should be protected, labor should also find a champion in the democratic party. Legislation is too often had that protects only the one, ignoring the other. Men of capital, men of leisure, honest men, should shape the legislation of our state and national governments that the poor, that the weak, that those unable to defend themselves should find protection. Honest legislation should mean no ward off greed, to ward off evils that beset those unable to make their own fight. The object of legislation should always be, for those weaker. As we try to defend the doves from the hawk, the lambs from the wolves, so should the strong men, those whom God has blessed with the ability to acquire fortunes and retain them, make every effort to protect those less fortunate. The great party that has stood our country should always be the first care of the legislator. Those who have must concede: the poor, having nothing, cannot. The strong must care for the weak, the rich for the poor, the prosperous for those in adversity. And again, I say that all legislation should have for its aim the bettering of the condition of the man whose time is not his own, and who must, in a certain sense, do the bidding of others. Above all, the man intrusted with power, the man chosen to execute our laws, should be selected with a view of his fitness, of his knowledge of affairs, and, beyond all that, whose purpose is an honest one—one who could execute the laws as he found them, with favor for none, fairness to all.

"The democratic party is a peace-loving party, a law-loving party, and will always stand forth as the champion, the conservator of the people. A partisan and unfair press seek to distort the objects, the motives of our party. I think our position can be embodied in a few words: We stand for the right, we stand for liberty, we stand for the laws. Love of country before all."

THE FLAG FLAUNTERS.

Republican Imperialism Runs Riot When Politics Is in the Breach.

Republican politicians who are "crooking the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift may follow fawning" are loud in their protests that the American flag once run up must never be hauled down.

This appeal to the bins of patriotism is made to excuse the war in the Philippines.

But not all republicans are so bound to the imperial throne of Emperor McKinley as to approve an unjust war simply because the president is moved by an unworthy ambition.

Former Senator Henderson, of Missouri, is an able republican, but he has ideas of his own concerning "hauling down the flag."

"I don't believe," says the former senator, "that you can drive a people to fall in love with anything or that you can shoot American patriotism into anybody. When the American flag ceases to be the emblem of liberty let it be hauled down. I know of but one flag, and that is the one which proudly floats 'o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.' It will never float gracefully over a land of slaves."

But, worse than that, the flag in Sulu guarantees not only slavery, but polygamy as well.

In further discussing this question, Henderson says: "I would now negotiate with the Filipinos to take Manila as a naval station, and then help them to establish a republic of their own, the United States agreeing to aid them in the good work and to protect them from any threatened interference with their free institutions, they to return to us the $20,000,000 which Spain received from us on a defective title."

This proposition coming from a republican is given here for what it is worth. It simply illustrates that Mark Hanna is much mistaken when he asserts that there is no political issue in the Philippine question.

Not only is there a political issue in this question, but there is also a cause for differences of opinion among leading republicans.

Nobody wants to dishonor the flag, but no one dishonors it more than he who would make it a protector of slavery and savagery.—Chicago Democrat.

CABINET OF A TYRANNY.

The Traitorous Men Who Are Now Aboard, Bound For Imperialism. Loose All Sail Ho!

Washington, Oct. 7.—A cable message from Gen. Otis to the war department Thursday brings word of the loss of several hundred horses and mules on the transport Siam. The message follows:

Manila, Oct. 3.—Steamer Siam which left San Francisco August 19, with 45 horses and 330 mules, encountered a typhoon first instant north of Luson, in which all but 19 mules were lost. Animals killed by pitching of vessel and lack of air from necessary closing of hatches. No casualties among passengers. Otis.

It is stated at the quartermaster's department that the mules which were lost on the siam were [illegible] pack mules which were considered the most valuable sent to the Philippines.

The Siam left Honolulu 31 days ago and encountered the typhoons early this week. One lasted 40 hours. Most of the forage which was on deck was swept overboard, all the boats were smashed and the steamer rolled tremendously in the trough of the sea, although the officers made every effort to bring her about.

The mules were hurled from side to side and frightfully mangled and disemboweled. Their legs and necks were broken, and the wretched animals fell in such a confused mass that the attendants were unable to relieve them. Then the storm abated, the injured animals were killed and their carcasses thrown overboard.

WHOLESALE THIEVERY.

Alleged That Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Metal Has Been Stolen From the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

New York, Oct. 7.—Brooklyn Central office detectives Friday arrested as a party to the alleged unlawful removal recently of some thousands of dollars' worth of metal belonging to the construction department of the Brooklyn navy yard, Edward L. Wheeler, of the borough of Brooklyn, who has established a ship chandlery business along the Brooklyn water front.

The warrant on which he was arrested was issued by United States Commissioner Benedict and when the prisoner was finally arraigned before him bail was fixed at $3,500. Wheeler's arrest caused surprise because of the prominence of his family in Brooklyn and his own popularity in the business and political affairs of the borough.

Later deputy marshals arrested John B. Cawthorne and E. F. Poynter, ship fitters, and they were locked up in jail. Naval Constructor Francis Bowles Friday night refused to discuss the matter further than to say he was overwhelmed with astonishment; that he believed the thefts would reach a considerable amount and that a number of additional warrants had been issued.

COWBOY RIDERS.

A Large Concourse of People Witnessed the Contest at St. Louis for the Championship of the World.

St. Louis, Oct. 7.—A vast concourse of people witnessed the cowboy riding contest Friday for the championship of the world, given under the auspices of the St. Louis Fair association. Their feats electrified the spectators. One thousand dollars was put up in purses, of which $700 went to the winner. Each man rode two horses. Bruce Norton, of Texas, captured the big prize; Jack Joyce, of Buffalo Bill's Wild West show, took second money, and Frank Schram, of California, third.

More Trouble Likely in Santo Domingo.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Reports received here indicate that Santo Domingo is not yet entirely at peace. Unless Gen. Jiminez succeeds in raising money to meet outstanding debts and makes reforms in the currency, it is not certain that he will be elected, and should he not be, further fighting between the factions is probable.

Where a Good Pistol Is Admired.

Dan William Wortham, long state treasurer of Texas, was in a New York jewelry store one day when he noticed a showcase filled with splendid jeweled revolvers, with silver and gold grips and chased barrels, having precious stones set into the butts.

"Lemme see one of those guns," he said to the clerk.

"Which one, sir?"

The gold one with the big ruby in the handle."

The clerk took it from the case. It was marked $300, and it looked even worth more. The Texan took it tenderly in both hands and held it admiringly up to the light. Then drawing himself up to his full height, which was six feet and a half, he rested the revolver upon his left elbow, crooked for the purpose, and looked over the sights down the long store. Those persons who saw involuntarily dodged.

"Say," said Mr. Wortham, with quiet but intense enthusiasm, as he returned the weapon, "if I was to wear that gun down in my state the people would be falling down on their knees begging to be killed with it!"—Chicago Evening News.

The Philippine War.

This contest is proving much more stubborn than we had anticipated. It needs a vigorous contest to straighten matters out. We would tackle the Philippines and overcome them as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters does dyspepsia, indigestion, malaria, fever and ague, liver and kidney diseases. The battle is short and decisive, and for fifty years the Bitters have always won. If you are ill and don't know what's wrong, try it.

"Well, no," replied the summer girl.

TWICE ALARMED

British Camp Aroused and the Men Stood to Their Guns at Mafeking.

Two Armored Trains Have Arrived at the Town and the Place has Been Mined With Lyddite, a Very Powerful Explosive

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The most important news from South Africa comes from Mafeking, where twice on Saturday the British camp was aroused, the men stood to their arms, guns were limbered and patrols were dispatched in the direction of the Boers. No fighting has occurred as yet, but the enemy has moved practically to the border, eight miles from Mafeking, intrenched at the east six thousand, comprising five commandoes.

The garrisoning and fortifying of the town are practically completed. The streets are barricaded and a perfect system of mines has been laid. Two armored trains have arrived at Mafeking, consisting of three bullet-proof cars, the first of which carries a searchlight, while the sides of the cars are loopholed. Each train is complete in itself and carries its own provisions. Experiments with lyddite in the mines prove that it is an extremely powerful explosive.

Col. Robert Stephenson Smith Powell, commanding the 5th dragoon guards, has issued a notice that the Boers who are massed on the Natal and Buchuanland frontiers have orders not to fire until the British fire first, and the town is well prepared for eventualities, but, as the Boers may shell the place, every endeavor should be made to safeguard the women and children.

An armored train was inspected at Kimberley. A signal station has been erected with a conning tower at the top 130 feet above the tracks. Communication by telephone is had with a central office and signals are given to the troopers by flags. By this manoeuvres were successfully continued Saturday. The troopers number 3,000, including the bicycle corps.

A train was also successfully operated Sunday at Mafeking. It patrolled to the north and practiced firing at targets.

A dispatch from Kimberley to the Cape army says that 3,000 Boers are encamped midway between Boshof and Kimberley. They are well armed and great religious fervor is shown in the camp.

The Boers, however, are chafing under the delay. They patrol the border nightly and have been ordered not to permit a British uniform to approach the frontier under any consideration whatever.

A special order was gazetted on Saturday announcing what British residents would be allowed to remain in the Transvaal and under what conditions.

Whatever may be the result of Great Britain's controversy with the South African republic, every department of the government Sunday was as busy as though actual hostilities had begun. The electric flash that announced the mobilization of the army reserves and the summoning of parliament set every wheel of the government machinery in motion.

At Woolwich Sunday it was asserted that 95 per cent. of the reserves would be fully equipped within the next six days.

MAP SHOWING THE PROXIMITY OF THE BOERS TO THE BRITISH BORDER.

On this map will be seen the points at which the British forces are gathered on the Transvaal border and also the points at which the Boers are massing preparatory to war. The chief interest centers around Dundee. This position, it is believed, will be the first on which the strength of the Boer arms will be tried. A camp has been established by the soldiers of the Transvaal at Scheeper's Nek, near Vryheid, which is a little north and east of the British stronghold at Newcastle. Along the border near Dundee are 5,000 Boers and others are marching thither. At Mafeking, in Bechuanaland, on the western border, Col. Baden-Powell, commander of all the local forces in South Africa, is stationed and is threatened with 2,000 Boers under Commandant Cronje. Another Boer force is massed at Pietersburg, to the north.

THIRD RACE DECLARED OFF.

Neither Yacht Could Finish in the Time Limit—The Columbia Had Overcome the Shamrock's Lead.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—At sunrise Saturday morning a strong northerly breeze was stirring up the whitecaps on the upper bay.

The Shamrock was inside the Horseshoe as usual and by 8:30 her tender, the tug James A. Lawrence, was making preparations to tow her outside. The Columbia was being towed down from Bay Ridge. The breeze was so fine and true off the Hook that the Shamrock dispensed with the aid of the tug and started out for the lightship under sail. Just as she got under way the Columbia came down the channel and rounded the southwest spit in tow of her tug.

The starting gun was fired at 11:20.

At 11:31 the yachts had sailed about a mile of the course and the Columbia was in the lead. During the next 15 minutes the Columbia seemed to draw away from the Shamrock.

At 12:08 the Columbia led by about an eighth of a mile. A few moments after the Shamrock blanketed the Columbia and was passing the American on the starboard side.

At 12:13 the Shamrock passed the Columbia to starboard and took the lead.

Off Highland at 12:45 a range on the yachts showed the Shamrock to be 3 minutes and 40 seconds ahead of the Columbia.

At 1:15 p. m. the Shamrock appeared to have increased her lead. The boats seem to be a quarter of a mile apart.

As they were preparing to round the stake boat at 1:35 the Shamrock led by only 25 yards.

At 1:38 both boats were seemingly starting for home, with the Shamrock in the lead, which seemed to be increasing at 2:10.

At 3:05 the Shamrock was still ahead, but at 3:35 it appeared the Columbia had passed the Shamrock and had a slight lead.

At 4:17 both boats are standing on starboard tack and not over 50 yards apart. The Columbia manages to hold her windward position, and neither is, at this minute, getting any advantage over the other.

At 4:32 it was evident neither boat could come within the time limit and the race was declared off for the third time.

TOWNS TAKEN.

In Another Fight Near Noveleta the American Forces Sustained Considerable Losses, the Men Being Shot From Trenches.

NOVELETA, Island of Luzon, Oct. 9.—Gen. Schwan's column, consisting of the 13th infantry, a battalion of the 14th, two troops of cavalry, Capt. Reilly's battery of the 5th artillery and Lowe's scouts advanced from Bacoor Sunday morning and occupied Cavite Viejo and Noveleta.

The American loss was three officers and nine privates wounded, one of the officers being mortally hurt. The loss of the enemy is unknown, but the bodies of three Filipinos were seen.

There were two sharp fights near Noveleta. Lowe's scouts first encountered the enemy near Cavite Viejo and soon put them to flight, continuing their advance.

Capt. Saffold's battalions of the 13th regiment, with two companies of the 14th and a number of Tagalo scouts, Capt. McGraw commanding the troops from the 4th cavalry and Capt. Teilly's battery, came upon the enemy in a strongly entrenched position on the road between Cavite Viejo and Noveleta. A fight, lasting half an hour, followed, resulting in the enemy being driven back. The American forces sustained considerable losses in this engagement, the men being shot from trenches and shacks along the road.

The column then pressed on to Noveleta which they found deserted and remained there Sunday night. The marines and naval forces co-operated with the troops. The gunboats Wheeling, Petrel and Callao lay off the shore near Novelata and threw shells into that town and Santa Cruz for an hour preparing the way for the marines to land. Two battalions consisting of 450 marines, under Col. Elliott, advanced along the peninsula from Cavite to Noveleta. The only way was by a narrow road through swamps.

A mile beyond the marines' outpost the column was suddenly received with a volley from trenches across the road. A flank movement was executed and the insurgents were driven from the trenches, the marines wading through rice fields in turning the flank of the enemy, who retreated to strong sand forts across the creek dividing the peninsula, destroying the bridge across the stream.

The marines waded through more rice fields, forded the river in water to their shoulders and carried the forts, meeting with feebie resistance, the first encounter having disheartened the enemy. Squads were sent to Noveleta and burned the town and the huts all along the road from which the enemy commenced the fire. There a junction was formed with the scouts who had been sweeping the swamps and thickets. Thence the marines returned to Cavite thoroughly exhausted.

Lieut. Wynne, with a three-pounder, did good execution during the advance. Gen. Lawton was not in personal command of Sunday's movement.

Capt. Cowles' battalion of the 4th infantry while reconnoitering Sunday found a body of several hundred insurgents near San Nicolas. After brisk fighting for three quarters of an hour the enemy was driven off. In this engagement the American casualties were four men slightly wounded. Six of the enemy were killed, but the number of wounded is not known.

The bad condition of the roads made the progress of the artillery slow.

The advance upon San Francisco de Malabon is continuing. Gen. Schwan's advance guard entered Rosario Monday morning, meeting with slight resistance.

BEAUTIFUL MARBLE SHAFT.

Soldiers' Monument at Peoria, Ill., Unveiled With Impressive Ceremonies—The President Took Part.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 7.—A good part of the population of Peoria, the second city of Illinois, Friday took part in an elaborate demonstration to welcome to their city the president of the United States. The great event of the day was the unveiling of a beautiful monument erected by Peoria's citizens as a memorial to the soldiers of the rebellion, living and dead. The monument is a tall shaft of marble, ornamented at the base with bronze groups, commemorating scenes of the civil war. It is erected on an elevation in front of the court house, and by its side had been constructed a platform, upon which the president and members of his party took seats to review a long procession of militia, veterans of the war and returned volunteers of the Spanish war.

The concourse of people surrounding this platform and packing every street in its vicinity was by far the largest which has thus far greeted the president on his western tour. After his review of the parade the president took his seat facing the veiled monument, by the side of Hon. Martin Kingman, chairman of the exercises. After some selections of music and an invocation by Rev. Dr. John Weston, the monument was unveiled by Mrs. S. A. Kinsey, who has been chairman of the monument committee since its inception in 1883. A great cheer burst from the multitude as the folds of the canvas fell away from the shaft. Then President McKinley, leaning on the arm of Mr. Kingman and followed by the cabinet officers, made a tour of the open space surrounding the monument, inspecting its beauties carefully on all sides.

The sculptor of the figures at the base, Mr. Fritz Triebel, of Peoria, also walked by the side of the president during this inspection. The formal exercises of dedication were then proceeded with. The monument was presented to the city and county of Peoria by Mrs. Lucie B. Tyng and accepted on behalf of the county by John G. Kingbury, chairman of the board of supervisors, and on behalf of the city by Henry W. Lunch, mayor of Peoria. An address was given by Mr. Kingman followed by the president who dedicated the monument in a formal address.

At the conclusion of the exercises a brief opportunity was given the crowd to shake hands with the president, although the press of time did not allow more than an infinitesmal portion of the surging mob to be presented to him. The party was next driven to the "Corn Palace," a building wholly constructed of corn, where the Peoria corn festival was inaugurated by the president.

An informal reception and dinner at the residence of J. B. Greenhut was the closing event of the president's visit to Peoria. The party boarded the train at 8:45 and was rapidly carried to Galesburg to spend the night.

Over Four Hundred Signatures.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The petition to President McKinley urging him to offer the friendly services of the United States in mediation between Great Britain and the republics of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State has received the signatures of more than 400 representative men, including 80 odd presidents of colleges, 50 church dignitaries, governors of states, mayors of cities, and justices of the United States and state courts.

STEAMER LEONA.

Fire Broke Out in the Hold While the Ship Was Out at Sea.

The Vessel Made the Landing at New York and Passengers Were Landed—Efforts of Firemen Were Futile and the Ship Was Scuttled.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The Mallory line steamer Leona was burned and sunk at her wharf in East river Thursday night. The cargo, consisting of tobacco and 3,000 bales of cotton, and valued at $300,000, is a total loss and the boat is little better than a wreck.

It is believed that the Leona, which sailed from Galveston September 27, caught fire at sea several days ago, since which time she has proceeded at full speed, with battened hatches, for this port.

At 8:30 p. m. Thursday the Leona came racing up East river to her pier, where haste was made to debark the passengers and open the hatches. An hour later an army of men was vainly fighting a fire in the steamer's hold. Finally the ship was scuttled. As soon as the Leona was made fast to her pier about 4 o'clock the officers of the vessel, commanded by Capt. Wilder, ordered the members of the crew to try to put out the fire in the hold without calling the fire department.

This was soon found to be impossible and an alarm was sent in. By 5 o'clock ten streams were playing from fire engines and six streams from fire boats. The firemen had a hard time to get at the flames as the boat came into dock stern foremost leaving the burning portion out in the water. The fire was at first confined to the forward hatchway, directly forward of the foremast. The hatches being lifted a tremendous volume of smoke came out, making it impossible for the firemen to see. Soon tons of water were pouring into the doomed vessel and the ship began to list to starboard, settling a little as she did.

At 6 o'clock about 70 firemen, with the chief and deputies, were on the boat working to keep the fire from spreading toward the stern. It was found to be beyond the efforts of the firemen, and an order was given to open the fore and aft port holes in order to allow the water to enter and make her settle. The water already pouring into the boat was managing to run along the bilge keels until it had reached aft and the ship showed evidence of listing to starboard. Most of the firemen finally left the ship by sliding down a hose which was fastened to the wheel.

About half a dozen men who were on the starboard side of the boat were unable to get to the pier and kept right on working as if nothing was happening to endanger their lives. They kept on and on until the ship commenced to sink, slowly but surely, until with a final list she went down. The men were thrown into the water. Deputy Chief Duane and Fireman Thomas McFarland, of engine No. 12, had to battle for life and were rescued with difficulty. Duane lost his helmet and was dragged out more dead than alive.

Several of the fire boats engaged in the work of rescuing the firemen were nearly carried down by the sinking of the Leona.

DEATH OF SENATOR HARLAN.

The Immediate Cause of His Demise Was Congestion of the Lungs, Complicated With Liver Trouble.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 6.—The death of ex-United States Senator James Harlan occurred at his home in Mount Pleasant, Ia., at 9:35 o'clock Thursday morning. The end was not unexpected, a collapse having taken place last Sunday. The immediate cause of death was congestion of the lungs, complicated with liver trouble. Over exertion in attending sessions of the Iowa Methodist conference last week aggravated his maladies and caused prostration.

His daughter, the wife of Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, of Chicago, was summoned from New York city and was present at the bedside. Others present were: James Whitford and Mr. and Mrs. Crawford and son. No arrangements have been made for the funeral, but it will probably be held in Iowa Wesleyan university chapel, in Mount Pleasant, on Sunday afternoon.

Stay of Execution Granted.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 6.—Gov. Tanner Thursday granted a stay of execution until Friday, November 10, to August A. Becker, sentenced to hang Friday, October 13, at Chicago, as the case is before the supreme court, and as so decision has been rendered. Becker cut his wife to pieces and boiled the remains in a vat. He married the girl on whose account he murdered his wife. She afterward secured a divorce.

Chief Kokomo Was There.

KOKOMO, Ind., Oct. 6.—The anniversary celebration here Thursday was largely attended. The band of 40 Miami Indians were escorted to the city hall, where the pipe of peace was smoked and an address of welcome delivered by Mayor Armstrong. The morning procession formed in eight divisions, headed by old Chief Kokomo, with an escort of 50 mounted Indian warriors, followed by an apparently endless line of floats, civic and military organizations, with arms and uniforms, citizens in carriages and on horseback.

ADM. DEWEY'S NEW HOME.

He Accepts the Gift and Expresses Himself Pleased That It Is From the American People.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Adm. Dewey has elected to accept a house in Washington, already constructed, instead of having one built for his occupation. In accordance with the invitation of the committee which has had in charge the Dewey home work, he called at the office of Acting Secretary Allen in the navy department at 11 o'clock Friday to indicate his preferences in the matter of a residence.

The admiral was officially informed of the purpose of the people of the United States to present him with a home in Washington. He frankly expressed his gratification at the tender, which he immediately accepted. He said, had the proposed home been the gift of a few wealthy men he should feel indisposed to accept it. But he noted that the fund had over 43,000 subscribers, indicating that the home was to be really the gift of the American people, and as such he would accept it with as much pleasure as he had the sword bestowed upon him by congress.

The admiral showed a decided preference for the section in which he had made his home during his former details of duty in Washington. He wished the house to be located in the northwest section, somewhere west of Sixteenth street, and not too far north, thus indicating the neighborhood of his former residence and the clubs where he spent a good deal of his leisure time. First of all he wanted the house at the earliest possible moment, so that he might "go in and hang up his hat at once," as he put it. Of course that precluded the idea of erecting a house to meet his special needs.

He expressed his ideas as to the character of the home he desires, and asked that the house be modest enough in appointments and cost to permit of the retention of a sufficient sum of money from the purchase fund, to defray the expense of furnishing it. The committee listened attentively to all these wishes and saw no reason why one and all could not be gratified. The admiral is going to New York to-morrow, and will [illegible] see the yacht race on his way to Shelburne Farms, Vt.

The fund at the disposal of the committee now amounts to about $50,000.

THE FRENCH CANADIANS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of the Dominion of Canada, Given a Reception by His Countrymen in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, premier of the dominion of Canada, stooped to kiss two little girls who were presenting him a bunch of red roses on the stage of Studebacher hall Sunday. He won his way at once to the hearts of more than 2,000 persons who were gathered there to bid himself and party welcome in the name of the French Canadians of Chicago. The whole audience arose in a body and cheered approval of the graceful act of the chief guest. At the same time two other girls were received in the same manner when they presented Lady Laurier with flowers in the box at the side of the stage. Immediately after this, when Sir Wilfrid had an opportunity to speak, he showed his thorough appreciation of the warm welcome tendered him by the French Canadians. He thanked them for their reception of himself and the other officials from Canada. In a brief address he declared that it touched his heart to witness so true an appreciation of his political policy, which he declared to be "Equality to all." He said his gospel is "Conciliation." He also referred to the close relations existing between the United States and Canada. He said in past years many young men had gone from the dominion into the states because of the greater resources in the latter country, but now, owing to revived prosperity, he said, emigration from Canada is ceasing. He closed his address by again thanking the audience for their welcome.

William Wilson, of Erlanger, was doing some carpenter work here, last week. Willie Smith was wearing a broad smile Saturday evening, and me thinks it was largely due to the coming of that bouncing boy to gladden his home—text at his side, kill cats, drown ducks, climb trees, eat green apples (until his head aches) and have a good time just like all boys do. In plain English, this means the mother and boy are getting along nicely. Willie is happy and a host of friends are glad to hear it

Col. Allen Fitzgerald, of Fairmiry, Ill., was the guest of friends in Union, last week, and attended a meeting of the "Hole Club." The boys insisted on a speech from Mr. Fitz on farming in his county. He spoke for two hours, and among other things spoken of was the oats crop—from 80 to 108 bushels to the acre; hogs, he said, were never driven to market, but hauled; 4,000 bushels of corn were shelled and delivered to market in one day and it was done by neighbors gathering in with tight wagon boxes holding 75 to 100 bushels and hauling it to town. One particular part of Mr. Fitz's speech attracted our attention and that was about Illinois being "God's country." We had always believed that Kentucky with its lovely women, &c., was given up to be that country. About the time this declaration was made, Supt. Voshell and Major Tom Willis came in and defied any man to prove if Kentucky was not "God's country" whose country was it? Some fellow in rear of store remarked in loud voice, "Goebel's begora." Major Tom Willis arose six feet or more to a point of order and took a chew of tobacco as he called Mr. Fitz's attention to the fact that Kentucky having more beautiful women, brave, loyal men, good eating and drinking to the square mile than any State in the U. S. Supt. Voshell uplifted his 200 lbs. of Ky. avoirdupoise and said, he could prove that "Egypt" the land of locusts and hot winds was in Illinois and yet that was no sign it was "God's country." Mr. Fitzgerald continued his speech by saying cattle at 7c, hogs at 5c, lambs $4 and corn $2 per bushel made a man satisfied to pay $1.40 a ton for coal, and he said good night, go to bed, &c.

Hons. N. S. Walton and "Silver" Joe Dawson, spoke to a moderate sized crowd at Gordon's Hall, last Saturday night. "Silver" Joe's remarks were on National topics mostly. Our speakers should show why all Democrats should support Goebel for governor now, and not Bryan in 1900. All Democrats know that Bryan is the logical candidate for the Presidency and are looking forward to his nomination, but what the Democrats of Kentucky want to do now is elect Goebel governor.

OUR MINOR TROUBLES

Sermon by Dr. Talmage on Small Annoyances.

He Says It Is These Which Test Christian Fortitude and Patience—The Lesson of Trivial Irritations.

Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.

This sermon by Dr. Talmage deals with a subject which appeals to all classes and conditions of men. His text is Deuteronomy 7:20, "The Lord thy God will send the hornet."

It seems as if the insectile world were determined to extirpate the human race. It bombards the grainfields and the orchards and the vineyards. The Colorado beetle, the Nebraska grasshopper, the New Jersey locust, the universal potato beetle, seem to carry on the work which was begun ages ago when the insects buzzed out of Noah's ark as the door was opened.

In my text the hornet flies out on its mission. It is a species of wasp, swift in its motion and violent in its sting. Its touch is torture to man or beast. We have all seen the cattle run bellowing under the out of its lunect. In boyhood we used to stand cautiously looking at the globular nest hung from the tree branch, and while we were looking at the wonderful covering we were struck with something that sent us shrieking away. The hornet goes in swarms. It has captains over hundreds, and 20 of them alighting on one man will produce certain death.

The Persians attempted to conquer a Christian city, but the elephants and the beasts on which the Persians rode were assaulted by the hornet, so that the whole army was broken up, and the besieged city was rescued. This burning and noxious insect stung out the Hittites and the Canaanites from their country. What gleaming sword and chariot of war could not accomplish was done by the puncture of an insect. "The Lord sent the hornet."

My friends, when we are assaulted by great behemoths of trouble we become chivalric and we assault them. We get on the high mettled steed of our courage, and we make a cavalry charge at them, and if God be with us we come out stronger and better than when we went in. But alas for these insectile annoyances of life, these foes too small to shoot, these things without any avoirdupois weight, the gnats and the midges and the flies and the wasps and the hornets! In other words, it is the small stinging annoyances of our life which drive us out and use us up. In the best conditioned life for some grand and glorious purpose God has sent the hornet.

I remark, in the first place, that these small stinging annoyances may come in the shape of a nervous organization. People who are prostrated under typhoid fevers or with broken bones get plenty of sympathy, but who pities anybody that is nervous? The doctors say and the family say and everybody says: "Oh, she's only a little nervous; that's all!" The sound of a heavy foot, the harsh clearing of a throat, a discord in music, a want of harmony between the shawl and the glove on the same person, a curt answer, a passing slight, the wind from the east, any one of ten thousand annoyances, opens the door for the hornet. The fact is that the vast majority of the people in this country are overworked, and their nerves are the first to give out. A great multitude are under the strain of Leyden who, when he was told by his physician that if he did not stop working while he was in such poor physical health he would die, responded: "Doctor, whether I live or die, the wheel must keep going round." These sensitive persons of whom I speak have a bleeding sensitiveness. The flies love to light on anything raw, and these people are like the Canaanites spoken of in the text or in the contex—they have a very thin covering and are vulnerable at all points. "And the Lord sent the hornet."

Again, the small insect annoyances may come to us in the shape of friends and acquaintances who are always saying disagreeable things. There are some people you cannot be with for half an hour but you feel cheered and comforted. Then there are other people you cannot be with for five minutes before you feel miserable. They do not mean to disturb you, but they sting you to the bone. They gather up all the yarn which the gossips spin and retail it. They gather up all the adverse criticisms about your person, about your business, about your home, about your church, and they make your ear the funnel into which they pour it. They laugh heartily when they tell you, as though it were a good joke, and you laugh, too—outside.

These people are brought to our attention in the Bible, in the book of Ruth. Naomi went forth beautiful and with the finest worldly prospects into another land, but after awhile she came back widowed and sick and poor. What did her friends do when she came to the city? They all went out, and instead of giving her common sense consolation, what did they do? Read the book of Ruth and find out. They threw up their hands and said: "Is this Naomi?" as much as to say: "How awful bad you do look!" When I entered the ministry, I looked very pale for years, and every year, for four or five years, many times a year I was asked if I had not consumption, and, passing through the room, I would sometimes hear people sigh and say: "A-ah, not long for this world!" I resolved in those times that I never in any conversation would say anything depressing, and by the help of God I have kept the resolution. These people of whom I speak reap and bind in the great harvest field of discouragement. Some day you greet them with a hilarious "Good morning," and they come buzzing at you with some depressing information. "The Lord sent the hornet."

These small insect disturbances may also come in the shape of business irritations. There are men here who went through the 24th of September, 1869, and the panics of 1873 and of 1893 without losing their balance who are every day unhorsed by little annoyances—a clerk's ill manners, or a blot of ink on a bill of lading, or the extravagance of a partner who overdraws his account, or the whispering of store confidences in the street, or the making of some little bad debt which was against your judgment; but you wanted to please somebody else.

It is not the panics that kill the merchants. Panics come only once in ten or 20 years. It is the constant din of these everyday annoyances which is sending so many of our best merchants into nervous dyspepsia and paralysis and the grave. When our national commerce fell flat on its face, these men stood up and felt almost defiant, but their life is going away now under the swarm of these pestiferous annoyances. "The Lord sent the hornet."

I have noticed in the history of some of my congregation that their annoyances are multiplying and that they have a hundred where they used to have ten. The naturalist tells us that a wasp sometimes has a family of 20,000 wasps, and it does seem as if every annoyance of your life brooded a million. By the help of God, to-day I want to show you the other side. The hornet is of no use? Oh, yes! The naturalist tells us they are very important in the world's economy. They kill spiders, and they clear the atmosphere. And I really believe God sends the annoyances of our life upon us to kill the spiders of the soul and to clear the atmosphere of our skies.

These annoyances are sent on us, I think, to wake us from our lethargy. There is nothing that makes a man so lively as a nest of "yellow jackets," and I think that these annoyances are intended to persuade us of the fact that this is not a world for us to stop in. If we had a bed of everything that was attractive and soft and easy, what would we want of Heaven? We think that the hollow tree sends the hornet, or we may think that the devil sends the hornet. I want to correct your opinion. "The Lord sent the hornet."

"Oh," you say, "if I only had the circumstances of some well to do man I would lie patient, too." You might as well say: "If it were not for this water, I would swim," or, "I could shoot this gun if it were not for the cartridge." When you stand chin deep in annoyances is the time for you to swim out toward the great headlands of Christian attainment, so as to "know Christ and the power of His resurrection and to have fellowship with his sufferings."

Nothing but the furnace will ever burn out of us the clinker and the slag. I have formed this theory in regard to small annoyances and vexations. It takes just so much trouble to fit us for usefulness and for Heaven. The only question is whether we shall take it in the bulk or pulverized and granulated. Here is one man who takes it in the bulk. His back is broken or his eyesight put out, or some other awful calamity befalls him, while the vast majority of people take the thing piecemeal. Which way would you rather have it? Of course, in piecemeal. Better have five aching teeth than one broken jaw; better ten fly blisters than an amputation; better 20 squalls than one cyclone. There may be a difference of opinion as to allopathy and homeopathy, but in this matter of trouble I like homeopathic doses, small pellets of annoyance rather than some knockdown dose of calamity. Instead of the thunderbolt give us the hornet. If you have a bank, you would a great deal rather that 50 men would come in with checks less than $100 than to have two depositors come in the same day, each wanting his $10,000. In this latter case you cough and look down to the floor and you look up to the ceiling before you look into the safe. Now, my friends, would you not rather have these small drafts of annoyance on your bank of faith than some all staggering demand upon your endurance? But remember that little as well as great annoyances equally require you to trust in Christ for succor and for deliverance from impatience and irritability. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee."

In the village of Hamelin, tradition says, there was an invasion of rats, and these small creatures almost devoured the town and threatened the lives of the population; and the story is that a piper came out one day and played a very sweet tune, and all the vermin followed him, followed him to the banks of the Weser, and then he blew a blast, and they dropped in and disappeared forever. Of course, this is a fable, but I wish I could on the sweet flute of the Gospel draw forth all the nibbling and burrowing annoyances of your life and play them down into the depths forever.

How many touches did Mr. Church give to his picture of "Cotopaxi" or his "Heart of the Andes?" I suppose about 50,000 touches. I hear the canvas saying: "Why do you keep me trembling with that pencil so long? Why don't you put it on in one dash?" "No," says Mr. Church; "I know how to make a painting. It will take 50,000 of these touches." And I want you, my friends, to understand that it is these ten thousand annoyances which, under God, are making up the picture of your life, to be hung at last in the galleries of Heaven, fit for angels to look at. God knows how to make a picture.

I go into a sculptor's studio and see him shaping a statue. He has a chisel in one hand and a mallet in the other, and he gives a very gentle stroke—click, click, click! I say: "Why don't you strike harder?" "Oh," he replies, "that would shatter the statue. I can't do it that way. I must do it this way." So he works on, and after awhile the features come out, and everybody that enters the studio is charmed and fascinated. Well, God has your soul under process of development, and it is the little annoyances and vexations of life that are chiseling out your immortal nature. It is click, click, click! I wonder why some great Providence does not come and with one stroke prepare you for Heaven. Ah, no! God says that is not the way, and so He keeps on by strokes of little vexations until at last you shall be a glad spectacle for angels and for men.

You know that a large fortune may be spent in small change, and a vast amount of moral character may go away in small depletions. It is the little troubles of life that are having more effect upon you than great ones. A swarm of locusts will kill a grain field sooner than the incursion of three or four cattle. You say: "Since I lost my child, since I lost my property, I have been a different man." But you do not recognize the architecture of little annoyances that are hewing, digging, cutting, shaping, splitting and interjoining your moral qualities. Rats may sink a ship. One lucifer match may send destruction through a block of storehouses. Catherine de Medici got her death from smelling a poisonous rose. Columbus, by stopping and asking for a piece of bread and a drink of water at a Franciscan convent, was led to the discovery of a new world. And there is an intimate connection between trifles and immensities, between nothings and everythings.

Now, be careful to let none of these annoyances get through your soul unarraigned. Compel them to administer to your spiritual wealth. The scratch of a sixpenny nail sometimes produces lockjaw, and the clip of a most infinitesimal annoyance may damage you forever. Do not let any annoyance or perplexity come across your soul without its making you better.

Our national government when it wanted money did not think it belittling to put a tax on pins and a tax on buckles and a tax on shoes. The individual taxes did not amount to much, but in the aggregate to millions and millions of dollars. And I would have you, O Christian man, put a high tariff on every annoyance and vexation that comes through your soul. This might not amount to much in single cases, but in the aggregate it would be a great revenue of spiritual strength and satisfaction. A bee can suck honey even out of a nettle, and if you have the grace of God in your heart you can get sweetness out of that which would otherwise irritate and annoy.

A returned missionary told me that a company of adventurers rowing up the Ganges were stung to death by flies that infest that region at certain seasons. The earth has been strewn with the carcasses of men slain by insect annoyances. The only way to get prepared for the great troubles of life is to conquer these small troubles. What would you say of a soldier who refused to load his gun or to go into the conflict because it was only a skirmish, saying: "I am not going to expend my ammunition on a skirmish. Wait until there comes a general engagement, and then you will see how courageous I am and what battling I will do?" The general would say to such a man: "If you are not faithful in a skirmish, you would be nothing in a general engagement." And I have to tell you, O Christian men, if you cannot apply the principles of Christ's religion on a small scale you will never be able to apply them on a larger scale. If I had my way with you, I would have you possess all possible worldly prosperity. I would have you each one a garden, a river flowing through it, geraniums and shrubs on the sides and the grass and flowers as beautiful as though the rainbow had fallen. I would have you a house, a splendid mansion, and the beds should be covered with upholstery dipped in the setting sun. I would have every hall in your house set with statues and statuettes, and then I would have the four quarters of the globe pour in all their luxuries on your table, and you should have forks of silver and knives of gold, inlaid with diamonds and amethysts. Then you should each one of you have the finest horses and your pick of the quipages of the world. Then I would have you live 150 years, and you should not have a pain or an ache until the last breath.

"Not each one of us?" you say. Yes, each one of you. "Not to your enemies?" Yes. The only difference I would make with them would be that I would put a little extra gilt on their wrists and a little extra embroidery on their slippers. But, you say: "Why does not God give us all these things?" Ah! I bethink myself. He is wiser. It would make fools and sluggards of us if we had our way. No man puts his best picture in the portico or vestibule of his house. God meant this world to be only the vestibule of Heaven, that great gallery of the universe toward which we are aspiring. We must not have it too good in this world, or we would want no Heaven.

Polycarp was condemned to be burned to death. The stake was planted. He was fastened to it. The fagots were placed around him, the fires kindled, but history tells us that the flames bent outward like the canvas of a ship in a stout breeze, so that the flames, instead of destroying Polycarp, were only a wall between him and his enemies. They had actually to destroy him with the poniard. The flames would not touch him. Well, my hearer, I want you to understand that by God's grace the flames of trial, instead of consuming your soul, are only going to be a wall of defense and a canopy of blessing. God is going to fulfill to you the blessings and the promises, as He did to Polycarp. "When thou walkest through the fire, though shalt not be burned." Now you do not understand, but you shall know hereafter. In Heaven you will bless God even for the hornet.

Fiction and friction are common at the literary clubs.—Chicago Dispatch.

A DISGRACEFUL WAR.

The Philippine Policy of the President Is Based Upon Politics.

The pain and amazement of the McKinleyites at the fact that anybody should be base enough to desire to make party capital out of their gigantic blundering in the Philippines, is getting to be such that they can no longer contain themselves. They are beginning to explode with indignation and horror. While trying to win votes for you fellows out of the mistakes we fellows have made! Merciful heavens, was ever such political turpitude heard of before? Col. Hay was aghast at the thought, in his letter to the Ohio republicans. It is true that his horror and disgust were a trifle too plainly theatric; his starts and gasps and stares were cleary stagey; you all along saw that he would be perfectly willing to go off and take a drink with the villains when the play was over; but he already has many imitators, and we shall hear much more of the unspeakable conduct of party opponents in holding a republican administration to account for the colossal failure of its Philippine policy.

Bear in mind, however, that the objection is not to making party capital out of the Philippines, as such. It is only to making democratic party capital. The truth is, McKinley and Hanna had intended all the political capital that could be made out of the Philippines strictly for themselves. For the democrats to interfere and claim any of it is a pure perversion of a sacred fund, and the courts should intervene. An injunction would, we think, be granted by any federal judge, restraining Bryan and other democratic orators from so much as mentioning the word Philippines. The president has an exclusive property right to all the party capital which the Philippines can be made to yield, and what are we coming to if outsiders can break in and take it away from him? We know what his adulators would have said if his plans had not gone so grievously wrong. If Aguinaldo had defeated at his feet; if the Filipinos had hastened to submit to his usurpation and illegal proclamation, what a powerful argument the republicans would have seen in it all for reelecting the great, strong, inflexible, far-seeing, infallible man, who spake and it was done, who commanded and it stood fast! To demand votes for success in foreign complications is legitimate; but to say that votes should be withheld on account of the humiliating failure—why, that is simply monstrous! Men who would do that would botanize upon a mother's grave and traffic in their country's shame. This is a republican, a McKinley, war, if it succeeds, but if it goes on from one disgrace to another it is a national war, for which all are responsible, and to support which all citizens are bound to stand together.—N. Y. Post.

——"Another evidence of prosperity," says a journalistic neighbor, "is found in a big demand for diamonds." There has not been a time when the plutocrats and trust beneficiaries have not been able to buy diamonds. ——The republican party managers are striving hard to decide upon the most available vice presidential candidate for next year. Their evident anxiety that Mr. McKinley shall have an exceptionally strong running mate is significant. It means that they are aware of the waning popularity of the president. The great desideratum is some arrangement by means of which Mr. McKinley can be placed at the head of the ticket again and still be kept as much as possible in the background during the campaign.—Minneapolis Times.

——Mr. Hanna made a "break" as soon as he opened his mouth to the interviewers in New York. "My observations of England," he said, "are that it is a country with a good political system. It is fully as good as ours." If Mr. Hanna's Ohio opponents are sharp, they will observe the implications of this remark. It means that, in his opinion, a monarchical form of government is just as good as a republic. Some of Mr. Hanna's critics think that a monarchy is what he is leading us to.—Springfield Republican.

——It is necessary first that we should remove from the independent peoples of the new world the fear that we are intending as soon as possible to "gobble them up" in the course of our "destiny." We ought not to have the hostility of American republics, but rather their loyal friendship. It is important to them as to us that the Monroe doctrine should be upheld, and if it be a fact that there is to the south of us a growing suspicion of us, or hostility toward us, the statesmanship and the press of the United States ought to go out of the way to remove such a sentiment at once.—Houston (Tex.) Post.

HANNA AND OHIO.

The Republican Boss is not Interested in the Philippine Question.

Mr. Mark Hanna is zealous for the reputation of Admiral Dewey. He dislikes to hear politicians squatted at his ear suggesting to him that "Glamis thou art and Cawdor and shall be king hereafter." That does not suit Hanna's programme. The king hereafter is to be of his own selection, and his mind is already made up as to the identity of that gentleman. It is very wrong to suggest to the admiral that he should go into politics. Politics would be the ruin of him. He occupies the highest position in the navy, and surely it is to his interest to be content with that. It appears also to be to the interest of Mr. Hanna that he be content with that.

Hanna does not choose to remember that Grant had the highest position in the army nor to suggest that he should have been content therewith. He was doubtless among those who encouraged the idea that Grant should be president, but since he is quite sure that Dewey will rise superior to all temptation and offer no impediment to the major why does Hanna so seriously apprehend the possibility that he may yield? It is a good old proverb: "Let the cobbler stick to his last," and if Dewey is wise he will act upon it. If he does not he must take his chances, even of offending the potent political figure of this country, his monitor, Mark Hanna.

Mr. Hanna in a recent interview said: "I do not know anything about the Philippines; the only fight I am watching is the one in Ohio." These statements will be readily accepted by his countrymen. Mr. Hanna does not know and never did know anything about the Philippines. He is not watching the fight out there, and apparently neither is anybody else, save to condemn it as utterly discreditable to the republic. As to the fight in Ohio, of course Mr. Hanna will watch that very carefully. It involves his political fortunes and his personal pocketbook.—Chicago Chronicle.

MORE LOSS THAN PROFIT.

Expense of Imperialism to the People of the United States.

When the administration gets ready to make a report to the people as to the profit and loss of the policy of imperialism, how will the account stand?

Certainly not in favor of a policy which burdens the nation with taxes and gives no adequate return.

In 1890 the national receipts were $403,080,932 and the expenditures $318,040,710, and the army and navy cost the government $66,589,044.

How does the account stand for the present fiscal year?

The receipts were $515,960,620 and the expenditures $605,072,179, of which [illegible] went for the army and navy.

While McKinley's administration has increased taxes and raised the revenue in every possible way, the deficit this year amounts to $89,111,559.

Taxes have been increased 27 per cent, by the republican administration and the expenditure has doubled since 1890. Not only this, but the interest-bearing debt of the government has grown from $600,000,000 to $1,182,149,050.

Now, what has McKinley to show for this enormous increase in debt and taxes?

The war with Spain ended more than a year ago. This nation is supposed to be at peace with all other nations, yet war expenses go on at an increased scale.

It will be difficult for McKinley to make his profit and loss account balance. The people of the United States are patriotic, but they are not imperialists and they will not long approve of a policy which costs much more than it comes to.—Chicago Democrat.

We Need a Statesman.

We are upon grave times. Great new issues have arisen, new questions of supreme importance have come into view, even since Mr. McKinley's nomination little more than three years ago. While crediting him with honesty of intention, there is a feeling among a vast number of people that a president is needed more thoroughly equipped in statesmanship, more vigorous in determination and action, less dependent upon the promptings of advisers in his personal circle, less subject to be swayed by popular clamor from conscientious conviction. We believe that with an abler leader the democratic party will carry the election next year, for the mass of the people are still and ever will be true to the principles upon which our country was founded and for more than a century maintained; and, although at times in numbers misled, or influenced for the maintenance of some appealing issue to sacrifice others, there is no doubt that they understand the present condition well. They know that the new era upon which the nation has entered calls for the services of a master mind and a stout heart.—Buffalo Courier.

——It was not until the McKinley tariff act became operative that Germany began to legislate against imports from America, and believing the United States would not materially modify its tariff schedule German merchants started in to make commercial conquests in South America, Mexico and Africa. The venture has been wonderfully successful, so much so, indeed, that the sentiment is growing all over Germany that trade interchange with the United States is not as essential as it was thought to be. Germany should be our best customer next to Great Britain, and we should be heavy buyers in German markets, and such trade conditions will undoubtedly obtain when we grant to Germany the same commercial rights in our markets that we are demanding in her markets.—Kansas City Times.

AN ODD MARRIAGE.

A Wedding Fee of Only Two Cents That Was Followed in Five Years by One of $50.

A pastor of one of the prominent churches in Brooklyn, whose son has a charge in this county, had a strange experience about five years ago, which was never spoken of until recently, when unlooked-for developments made it consistent to relate the incident.

The elderly clergyman was at home one evening, and about nine o'clock he heard a quiet knock at the door. He went to the porch and admitted a refined appearing young man and a girl. The latter suggested modesty, while her companion showed the result of debauchery, but he nevertheless gave evidence of intelligence. The young fellow defined the purpose of their visit, which was to be married. The couple were refused emphatically by the clergyman at first, but finally they submitted to all the interrogations of the minister, and there was no apparent reason why they should not be wed. After the ceremony the pastor was handed an envelope by the groom, after which they departed on their honeymoon.

The minister entered the study, and, taking the gift from his pocket, opened it. The contents consisted of two copper pennies. The son, who was in college at the time preparing for the ministry, happened to be home spending a vacation, and was a witness to all that occurred subsequent to the wedding. He enjoyed immensely the joke on his parent, and between shouts of laughter he informed his father of the trouble which was sure to follow such an absurd indiscretion. It was at once presumed to be an elopement and doubts were brought as to the accuracy of the girl's age. The father felt somewhat annoyed, but he was confident that he had held strictly to all the laws regarding the performance of the ceremony.

For five years nothing was heard of the couple, and but a few weeks ago the minister found that he had not got into any difficulty. About the same time in the evening he heard a knock at the door, and he recognized it at once. A strange feature of the occurrence was that the son was at home again visiting for a few days. The senior clergyman hurried to the door, and his ear was not deceived; the caller was the man he had married five years before. The young fellow, in an unassuming manner, remarked that he always felt that the minister deserved an explanation, and he announced the purpose of his second visit. He said that he was walking along the streets of Brooklyn when he met the girl he married, about a half hour before he visited the parsonage. He continued, stating that he figured that she would not be worth more than that two cents to him, and that the feeling regulated his fee to the minister. Concluding, he declared that she had proved to be of inestimable value to him, and he quietly arose and handed the clergyman another envelope, which contained a check for $50, payable at the Chemical bank.—Troy Press.

Cancer of Vegetables.

Dr. Bra and Dr. Chevalier, in their researches on cancer, have reached independently the same conclusions. Dr. Bra has isolated what appears to be the parasite of cancer, a mushroom. Examining fragments of diseased wood, particularly the wood of apple trees, he found characteristic cunidia of nectria ditissima. These he "cultivated" just like ordinary microbes. They begat spores, and then cells, in every respect like the cells of the human cancer mushroom. Dr. Bra, wishing to make a crucial test, got leave from the government to inoculate trees of the forest of Meudon, near Paris, with cultures of human cancer. He chose trees far removed from any diseased ones. Six months later spots of dry rot appeared on the trees innoculated—beeches, maples and sycamores. An elm died from the cancer so communicated. Other tests have given striking results. Dr. Bra does not conclude that animal and vegetable cancers are caused by one specific fungus, but he thinks a number of diseases of plants are extremely like diseases of animals.—London News.

HANDY GRIT MACHINE.

Where Large Flocks of Poultry Are Kept One Will Be Found a Wonderful Convenience.

It can be built any size and any lumber will do. The construction of the machine can be easily studied out from the illustration. My crusher is made up as follows: Two supporters, aa, each four feet six inches long, of 4x4 inch lumber resting on board supports, c, two feet long and six inches high. Nail on the four cross pieces, b, four feet long, since 1x4 inches. Make the two crushing arms, d, each five feet long and of 4x6 inch lumber. The lower five inches are leveled off so that the two arms work together something like a hinge. Just above the beveled part attach an iron plate, h, 4x6 inches and one-quarter inch thick, against which the stone is crushed. Make a hole, l, in the lower end of each crusher arm for an iron pin. The smaller cut at the right shows the details of the crusher arm. There must be space enough at m to let through the fine crushed stone.

The handle part is made as follows: The central block, gg, is of 4x4 inch lumber and two feet long. It is attached by a bolt through the middle of the handle, k, which is five feet long and strengthened by side pieces fastened to the main block by tight bolts at i, passing through small blocks 2x2x2 inches at g. The four connecting strips, e, are of 1x2 inch stuff bolted at one end loosely to g, but at the other end tightly to d. The machine is now complete except to nail boards, jj, on the sides to keep in the stones.—American Agriculturist.

FEEDING THE BEES.

If This Task Is Not Performed Properly Weakening of Colonies Is Sure to Result.

Feeders must be arranged so the bees can get the sirup properly. Ordinary receptacles will not answer, unless partitions or flouts of some kind are used to keep the bees from drowning, which they will do in open pans, etc. Wooden feeders are the best, and a thick piece of board guttered out in deep grooves one-half inch wide, with partitions left, which may be very thin, or a heavy block of wood, with holes bored not quite through and filled with the same, answer very nicely. A good frame of old, tough honeycomb may be filled with the sirup from some distance above it with something like a common sprinkler, except that the holes are larger. This drives the sirup to the bottom of the cells, and expels the air, and when filled it may be turned over without the sirup running out, and the other side treated likewise.

All feeding should be done in the night time with the above kind of feed; that is, the feed may be given the bees late in the evening, between sundown and dark. If given them during the day it will cause a great uproar among them and may result in robbing and fighting generally. Upper stories should be used to place the feeders, and should be closed so that bees cannot pass in or out of the same from above.—A. H. Duff, in National Rural.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Hens three years old are not profitable to keep, except they are of the small laying varieties.

The Java fowls are the same size, shape and about the general make-up of the Rocks, but they mature earlier, commence to lay earlier, and lay more eggs.

Changing quarters during the laying season will check egg-production. There is nothing gained by it if the fowls are always accommodated with clean quarters.

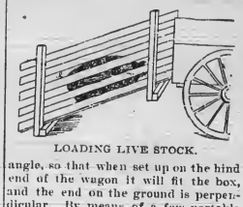
Do not forget that the hatchet is the best remedy for sick fowls but do not apply it in very mild cases. A little cold in fowls may terminate in roup, but a free use of coal oil applied to the nostrils, mouth and throat will usually keep it in check.

The mule birds are half the flock. Scarcely anyone now thinks of going through the poultry season without stocking up with thoroughbred roosters of the variety they prefer, or the different varieties, if they prefer an assortment. It is truly wonderful the change that can be made on any flock thus.—National Rural.

Making Use of Weeds.

A crop of weeds that are nearly matured, but which have not produced seeds, is one that will pay if it is plowed under. Even weeds can thus be put to good use if rightly handled, but the farmer who allows a single weed to produce seed multiplies his work in the future. There is no waste of time in killing weeds, as no work on the farm pays better if future labor is considered.

THE WEIGHT OF HOGS.



Packers Now Prefer the 150-Pound Animal to the Heavy Porkers of Other Years.

We are told and impressed by the authorities in the provision trade that there is no possible chance that heavy hogs will be in favor for a considerable time, if ever again, says Texas Stock Journal. This view we are informed is based upon the requirements of consumers and the retail and export trade. Formerly a packing hog was heavy at 250 to 450 pounds; now packing hogs are considered heavy at 250 pounds. Packers get all the lard they can possibly handle without buying a single lard hog. The best marketable weight now is about 150 pounds, and the best all-around porker does not exceed 225 pounds, although that weight is too heavy to-day to sell well. Farmers who make their hogs too heavy to suit the buyers must expect to get low prices, as the light weights bring the most money. The sides are manipulated into breakfast bacon, canvased and sold for eight to ten cents per pound, shoulders converted into "California hams" and retailed for ten cents per pound; the hams are small and sell readily for 12½ cents, and some with an extra finishing touch retail for as much as 15 cents per pound. Then, isn't it strange, taking into consideration the above facts, that our farmers and feeders will continue to feed after their pigs are thoroughly ripe for market, while with every breath the packer is saying to them: "If you feed another feed, I'll dock you." What is to their interest, the same is to our interest. Then it behooves us to reach out for quick, growthy, fatten-at-any-age pigs, and six months after the pig is farrowed turn him over to the packers, who in return will pay you more than if you had fed it seven months, so far as profit is concerned.

LOADING LIVE STOCK.

A Device That Is Easy to Handle and Is Rapidly Adjusted to Suit Any Wagon.

The accompanying illustration shows a device for loading hogs and sheep that are too heavy to lift. The figure represents one side only. The bottom is a two-inch plank one foot or 16 inches wide, or as wide as the wagon box, if you want it, with slats nailed crosswise on the bottom to keep the stock from slipping. The ends are both of the same angle, so that when set up on the hind end of the wagon it will fit the box, and the end on the ground is perpendicular. By means of a few portable panels we can load stock almost any place where there is a fence for one side. The device can be adjusted to suit the wagon, unlike one that is stationary. We have scales, and a breeding pen for pigs, and it comes handy to unload sows, and at the scales for loading fat hogs and sheep.—A. S. Forsman, in Ohio Farmer.

TOADS IN THE GARDEN.

They Are Not Merely Harmless, But of Great Use as Destroyers of Slugs and Insects.

To most people a toad is nothing but an unsightly reptile which is to be shunned as much as possible. The superstitious think it venomous, but studies made at the Hatch experiment station show that it is not.

The toad is a reptile, to be sure, but it is one that is not only harmless, but is of great use to the gardener, as every worm or insect that comes within reach is devoured greedily. Centipedes, caterpillars, blister beetles and bugs of every kind are equally welcomed by the toad. He uses them all alike. They wander within reach and his long, glutinous tongue flashes out so quickly that the eye cannot detect it and the victim is gone. The toad swallows once or twice, winks his round eyes placidly, seems to smile and is ready for as many more of the same kind as may come his way. Half a dozen toads in a garden will keep it free from most of the ordinary garden pests. They are easily tamed and spend the day in some shaded nook along the fence or under a cabbage leaf, coming sedately forth at night to find their food. Where the good qualities of the toad are understood he is always a welcome visitor, and his stay is made as pleasant as possible.

New Corn Makes Cholera.

The fact that new corn and hog cholera get ripe about the same time every year leads many pretty good hogmen to believe that feeding new corn, or rather green corn, makes what hog cholera we have. While we no doubt would have plenty of cholera if none of the corn was fed until thoroughly ripe, there is little doubt that the careless feeding of green corn has sent many a porker to an untimely end. A great many farmers allow their hogs to go through the summer with no feed and then when new corn comes there is at once an anxious effort manifest to make up for lost time and to get the hogs ready for market in the shortest possible time, which is by no means always the best for the hogs or the owner.—L. O. Waylance, in Prairie Farmer.

Fresh cut bone for an occasional light feed is very good indeed, but do not get too much excited about it as entering largely into food for fowls. Don't buy too heavily of bone meal or granulated bone; you can feed up just as good food at home.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FREE.

One of the Grandest Offers Ever Made. The first five persons procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book from their grocer will each obtain one large 10c package of "Red Cross" starch, one large 10c package of "HUBINGER'S BEST" starch, two Shakespeare pictures, printed in twelve beautiful colors, as natural as life, or one Twentieth Century Girl Calendar, the finest of its kind ever printed, all absolutely free. All others procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book will obtain from their grocer two large 10c packages of starch for 5c, and the beautiful premiums, which are being given away. This offer is only made for a short time to further introduce the famous "RED CROSS" starch, and the celebrated "HUBINGER'S BEST" cold-water starch. "RED CROSS" laundry starch is something entirely new, and is without doubt the greatest invention of the Twentieth Century. It has no equal, and surpasses all others. It has won for itself praise from all parts of the United States. It has superseded everything heretofore used, or known to science in the laundry art. It is made from wheat, rice and corn, and is chemically prepared upon scientific principles, by J. C. Hubinger, an expert in the laundry profession, who has had 25 years of practical experience in fancy laundering, and who is the first successful and original inventor of all fine grades of starch in the United States. If you would have the best, ask for "RED CROSS" and "HUBINGER'S BEST," which are the finest starches on the market to-day. The jobbing houses all handle it, the retail grocer has it on his shelves, you find it in all the homes, while the careful housewife has adorned the walls of the home with the beautiful Shakespeare pictures, which are being given away in introducing "RED CROSS" and "HUBINGER'S BEST" starch.

THE PUBLIC.

Something for Sharks in All Lines of Business to Prey Upon.

"You must remember," said the man who was arguing with great volubility and self-approval, "that we owe a duty to the public."

"Who is the public?" inquired Mr. Blykins, abruptly.

"Why—er—the masses, you know; the general populace."

"No," said Mr. Blykins, with emphasis, "you got the wrong idea. The public is something to be roped in; to be gouged; to be walled over. To the sugar trust the public is a proposition of confectionery consumers. To the beef trust the public is a vast menagerie of carnivorous bipeds. To the politician it is a collection of persons who have influence at elections; to the theatrical manager, a crowd of people in front of the box office eager to get rid of money; to the street car conductor, a lot of creatures who ought to be made to step lively."

"You think the public gets imposed upon all around?"

"Yes. It doesn't deserve any better, and retribution is always waiting. The man who imposes on the public in one respect lapses back into the general outfit in something else and is imposed on in his turn. It's a heartless business all the way through. One great and elaborate scheme of imposition. What people ought to do is to hold primaries in all parts of the civilized world and send delegates to The Hague to see if they can't discuss something like a disarmament scheme by which the people of this earth can be persuaded to quit imposing on one another."—Washington Star.

The Place for It.

"Well, gentlemen," remarked the president of the club, "questions are in order. It has been suggested that we have a banquet. What shall be done?"

Have you heard the motto of the government of Siam? And having heard it, have you repeated it? And having repeated it, have you caught its purely personal application? And having caught it, have you tried it on your friends? This is the motto: "Ah Wa Ta Nas Siam." It sounds unintelligible nonsense, but keep saying it over as long as you can and as fast as you can and you will discover at last that the eastern patois has a western sense that aptly classifies many a remorseful subject of Uncle Sam. For "Ah Wa Ta Nas Siam" is easily evolved into "Ah, what an ass I am."—Chicago Chronicle.

CARTER'S INK

Its good enough for Uncle Sam and its good enough for you

EVERY woman suffering from any female trouble can be helped by Mrs. Pinkham. This statement is based on sound reasoning and an unrivalled record. Multitudes of America's women to-day bless Mrs. Pinkham for competent and common-sense advice. Write to her if you are ill. Her address is Lynn, Mass. Absolutely no charge is made for advice. "I suffered seven years and would surely have died but for your help," writes Mrs. GEO. BAINBRIDGE, Morea, Pa., to Mrs. Pinkham. "It is with pleasure I now write to inform you that I am now a healthy woman, thanks to your kind advice and wonderful medicine. I can never praise it enough. I was a constant sufferer from womb trouble, and leucorrhœa, had a continual pain in abdomen. Sometimes I could not walk across the floor for three or four weeks at a time. Since using your medicine, I now have no more bearing-down pains, or tired feelings, and am well and hearty. I shall recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all my suffering friends as the greatest remedy for all female weakness."

SAFE COUNSEL FOR SICK WOMEN

MRS. SUSIE J. WEAVER, 1821 Callowhill St., Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I had inflammation of the womb and painful menstruation, and by your advice I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Have taken four bottles and used one package of Sanative Wash and feel like a new woman. I thank you so much for what your medicine has done for me."

MRS. M. BAUMANN, 771 W. 21st St., Chicago, Ill., writes: "After two months' trial of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I can not say enough in praise for it. I was a very sick woman with womb trouble when I began its use, but now I am well."

STATE NEWS.

The Ludlow small pox scare has subsided.

Spencer county has a railroad debt of $84,000.

Miss Lucy C. West, superintendent of public schools in Spencer county, has resigned.

Mrs. Vena Bond, of Owenton, has sued her husband, Sim Bond, for divorce, alleging cruel treatment.

Near Bowling Green a strange epidemic among children has killed eight within a few days. Doctors can not diagnose it.

At a family reunion Gilson Power and wife, Owinsville, 187 children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren were present.

Harlan Sexton, who killed Jas. Cummings and Mrs. Trumbo at a G. A. R. reunion in Bath county 2 years ago, was acquitted at Owingsville.

The attorneys in the case of E.K. Wilson, charged with the murder of Mary Cloyd at London, agreed on a change of venue to Rockcastle county.

Richard Coleman, the 20 year old colored man, who murdered Mrs. Jas. Lashbrook near Maysville, was taken to Covington to prevent a lynching.

After being out seventeen hours, the jury in the James Tapp murder case at Willlamstown, returned a verdict of not guilty, last Saturday afternoon.

Owen County Circuit Court is some what of a Chicago in divorce suits. Of fifteen equity cases lately filed in the circuit clerk's office, nine of them are divorce cases.—News.

Geo. Essex left Elizabethtown a month ago and went to Jeffersonville, Ind., and was married to the widow of Morgan Daughtery. Mrs. Daughtery was his second cousin, his aunt by marriage and his mother-in-law. The people of the neighborhood left white cap notices on his door and Essex skipped.

The Richmond Register tells of having a compositor in that office who is 64 years old, who began setting type in August, 1849, 50 years ago. The Kentuckian-Citizen has a compositor, just past his 70th year, who commenced type-setting in October, 1845, 54 years ago, and yet picks 'em up quite lively.

For six months the police of Cincinnati, Covington and Newport have been trying to run down an organized gang of horsethieves. Scores of thefts of horses and cattle have been reported. Thursday William Bitner and son, Alec, of Hayfield, 10 miles from Newport, were arrested, and confessed having been implicated in cattle stealing.

A very good indication that good prices may be expected to continue on burley tobacco as the larger manufacturers are now buying a large amount of this tobocco of the best grade, privately. As the lower grades all along brought good prices, no objections can possibly be made by shippers of prices prevailing for some months to come. The fact that several large independent factories are soon to get in operation and are now buying stock, has served to make the trust bid more liberally, and the fight for stock between the big companies and the trust promises to get warmer as the fight grows older. It is thought the trust is trying to shutout several of the new factories from getting tobacco, and this and a known shortage in Burley stocks should make tobacco of the Burley variety a very good commodity to have around at the present time, and we anticipate many will not be anxious sellers from now until the new crop begins to arrive freely, about December 20. —Louisville Weed.

GRANGE HALL, Oct., 7, 1898.

The Association was called to order by the Superintendent, and after a talk by him on the subject of the importance of the patrons attending the meetings of the Association, the program was taken up.

Miss Cecil Gailly, one of the pupils of the school, delivered an address of welcome in a very happy and creditable manner.

A "Model recitation," on the subject of Mental Arithmetic, by Mr. Neander Stephens, of the Union school, was a feature of the meeting. He emphasized the idea that the books should not be used in recitation. Some helpful ideas were also presented by Misses Lillie Rouse, Roberts and Bristow.

The Association then adjourned.

After a bountiful repast the program began with a vocal solo by Miss Nellie Rouse.

Language work in its various stages was discussed by Misses Bristow and Riley, supplemented by some excellent remarks by Miss Lillie Rouse.

School Discipline was introduced by Mr. Stephens, and discussed by Supt Voshell and Misses Roberts and Bristow.

In the absence of Miss Norman reading was ably handled by Supt. Voshell.

The last subject on the program, "Grading and School Books," was explained to the satisfaction of all present by the Superintendent.

The following program was made out for the next meeting:

How to Interest Patrons in School Work.....Miss Lizzie Parker
Trustee System—How to Improve .....B. W. Nolson
Nature Study in the Public Schools .....Miss Margaret Marble
Model Recitation—Mental Arithmetic .....D. M. Snyder
Ethics of the Profession..Viola Walker
How to Secure Regular Attendance .....Mrs Mary E. Walton
Opening Exercises.....Miss Katie Craig
How to Suppress Studying or Talking Aloud .....Herbert Grant
School Exhibits.....Anna Schwartz

The following resolutions were adopted;

That we, the teachers of the Sixth Magisterial District, feel that we have been greatly instructed by this meeting—especially by the talks on Mental Arithmetic.

That we especially thank Miss Cecil Gnily for her address of welcome, which we highly appreciate.

That while we heartily thank the teacher, and the few patrons of Grange Hall present, we are sorry more are not able to be with us.

That we extend our thanks to Misses Lillie Rouse and Lizzie Roberts, Vernia's able teachers, for their presence and many excellent ideas advanced.

That we thank our Superintendent, Mr. L. H. Voshell, for his interest in the Association and the cause of education.

After taklug the vote as to the place of holding the Institute next year, the Association adjourned to meet at Melville, October 28th.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXIV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1899. NO.

C. J. BRONSTON'S speech at Lexington, last Saturday night was a disappointment to the anti-Goebel people in that it furnished no new ammunition for them to use in the campaign. He is still trying to apologize for some remarks he made in the Louisville convention, and which came very near getting him into serious trouble, and in his explanation in his speech Saturday night, of why he made the statement to which exceptions were taken, in the convention, he gave evidence that corroborates the claims of the Goebel people that the L. & N. and John Whallen and his gang tried to break up that convention. As Bronston is opposed to Goebel what he says on this subject can not be questioned. Here it is, copied from his speech as published in the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune of last Sunday: "I knew full well that on the floor of the convention there were two contending forces that were actuated, as I believed, not by any desire to further the interest of the Democratic party, but to satisfy personal ends. One of them originated from the local city administration and the power which evidently controls it. The other came from John Whallen and the power behind him, the Louisville & Nashville railroad. These two powers alternately filled the convention hall with treacherous and, I believe, armed men, first threatening the Chairman of the Executive Committee, Mr. Johnson, and afterwards the temporary Chairman, Mr. Redwin. In the midst of this I could not refrain from exclaiming as I did that the Democratic party was in the hands of cut-throats and assassins." If Mr. Bronston had told how he demolished the tail-gate of the free silver band wagon in his frantic efforts to get in at the last moment, he would have assigned another good reason for not supporting Goebel, because he had committed the unpardonable sin of joining the procession long before Bronston knew with which side he was going to cast his lot.

A. M. EDWARDS, a leading Republican in the Walton precinct, was in Burlington, one day last week, and in the course of a conversation in regard to politics he said, "we expect to get a large share of the Brown vote, which will elect Taylor. Without that vote we can not elect Taylor—the majority against us in the State is too large for us to overcome all alone." It appears that others than candidate Taylor has some assurance that many of those now advocating Brown are to fall in with the Republicans on election day. It is plain that another Powing and Buckner scheme is not the worked on the Democrats and close tucky. [illegible]unson, should

In his speech at Cincinnati station, week, Ex-Chief [illegible] of pruning is done Pryor said of [illegible]decides to allow the "In moral ch[illegible]form, rather than at- duty, as a ch[illegible] it to some particular of the pe[illegible]y growers suppose that makens the tree and shortens goes to m[illegible]here is, however, no reason William [illegible]elief other than the general and I [illegible]ut that pruning is unnatural- ty to seldom prunes so heavily as does a pare in removing superfluous limbs in br[illegible] growth of young saplings in the [illegible]rest. Furthermore, nature prunes at [illegible] seasons and in the rudest ways. By this it should not be understood, however, that care is not necessary in the mechanical operation of pruning. On the other hand, it is of the greatest importance that large limbs be removed with care and the wounds painted to prevent the entrance of fungi, which will induce decay. In training young trees, all crotches should be avoided. If bad crotches should be found to exist in trees ten or more years old, they should be bored by means of an iron bolt. Much damage may be avoided if bolts are used in season.

Danger in Nitrate of Soda.

It should be remembered that nitrate of soda is not so beneficial for stock as it is for soil. Every little while some farmer, either through ignorance or carelessness, leaves nitrate of soda around, or sacks which have contained it, accessible to cattle or other stock. These, not recognizing the difference from common salt, lick or eat it, and as a result either die or get very sick. In case of poisoning from this chemical the "administration of infusions of coffee and alcohol and irritant clysters" is recommended by government veterinarians.

With the peach, the young trees should be started with low heads, the lower limbs not more than two feet above the ground.

A good plant needs no more room than a poor one.

KENTUCKY CROP REPORT.

Condition of Crops and Live Stock October 1st, 1899.

Replies were received from 138 correspondents, representing ninety-seven counties.

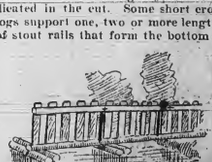
CORN—The average yield per acre is estimated 21.4 bushels. The estimate on Oct. 1, 1899, was 32.5, and for a corresponding date of 1897 it was 24 bushels.

The dry weather during September was of benefit in hastening the maturity of the crop, otherwise a considerable loss would have been sustained by the severe frost of 29th and 30th; as it is the loss is inconsequential, amounting to but 4 per cent. The heaviest loss occurred in the western section, where the rainfall was more liberal and the growing season accordingly prolonged. The quality in the main is not up to the standard, being "chaffy" and loose on cob.

While the crop is generally disappointing, both in yield and quality it is rather remarkable that a few counties, notably Daviess and Henderson, report the crop one of the best ever produced.

TOBACCO—In the Burley district the average yield per acre is estimated at 825 pounds. This is a heavy average and is mainly due to the unusually heavy yields reported from the counties of Boyle, Clark, Jessamine, Marion, Mercer and Woodford. Omitting these counties from the calculation and the average is 741 pounds, which is, in our judgment, nearer the correct amount, being within a few pounds of the average for 1898.

The acreage of the Burley district, after allowing for losses sustained by insects and unfavorable season, was estimated at 86 per cent. of the acreage of 1898. With approximately the same yield per acre we may conclude that the Burley crop of 1899 will amount to 86 per cent. of the crop of 1898.



Worms were very destructive during the latter part of the season. With the exception of damage from this source and that portion of crop cut before ripe, in order to save from firing, the quality is satisfactory. The damage from frost was very slight in this section, amounting to but three fourths of one per cent.

The yield per acre for the "Dark Tobacco" district is estimated at 730 pounds, which is 85 pounds per acre less than the estimate for 1898. The decrease is accounted for [illegible] imperfect stand and [illegible]dition than it [illegible]ture at the time, [illegible] three or even two the develop[illegible]ments. Churn when the acreage w[illegible]e or slightly acid. Never season will it is very sour or cheesy. of 18 dito netting thrown over the cream jars keeps out flies and dust and does not seriously interfere with the free circulation of air. Wind blowing upon milk is always certain to cause white specks in the butter. Our cows will be fresh in late autumn and early winter. We have had very little milk this summer. The cream, if kept until there is enough to churn, becomes stale. It is skimmed into a tin pail, heated to 80 or 85 degrees and then lowered through an opening, that is fitted with a hinged cover, into a covered well in the cellar. If the cream is churned in 12 hours the butter will come very quickly if stirred with an egg beater. Nice butter can be made from a small quantity of milk, if the cream is first heated and then cooled.—Sarah E. Wilcox, in Agricultural Epitomist.

FENCING OVER WATER.

How to Build a Floating Fence That Will Resist the Attacks of All Ordinary Currents.

Fencing over water is not difficult when carried out along the lines as indicated in the cut. Some short cross logs support one, two or more lengths of stout rails that form the bottom of the fence. Holes are bored in these, in which upright stakes are driven to support the upper rail. The lengths of fence are chained together. The outer log is anchored up-stream and down stream with sufficient length of chain to permit the rising and falling of the fence. This plan is splendid for side water rivers, and good wherever the rise is not likely to be so sudden as to wash it away.—Farm and Home.

It is only in exceptional cases that it will be advisable to cultivate in the orchard this late.

So far as it is possible, large limbs should never be removed from peach and cherry trees.

the continued dry weather made it impossible to put it in proper order for seeding.

Fallow plowing is now at a standstill, and the seeding of a considerable per cent, of the acreage is being delayed.

Commissioner of Agriculture.

Elder Sweeney, candidate for Auditor on the Republican State ticket, makes a political speech one night and preaches the next.

H. G. Overstreet, a prominent Republican politician, says that 300 Republicans of Daviess county will vote for Goebel in November.

Secretary of State Finley has given the Brown ticket the second place on the official ballot, relegating the Republicans to the third column.

Judge T. Z. Morrow, of Somerset, a stanch Republican and a brother-in-law to Gov. Bradley, stated in his speech last Monday week at Albany "that it could be said to the credit of Senator Goebel that he is honest, sober and a man of ability."

If the State was raked with a fine tooth comb from the Big Sandy to the Parohase and from the Ohio river to the Tennessee line it wouldn't bring to the surface a Republican who will vote for the Brown ticket.—Georgetown Times.

Republicans may answer this, if they will: Why do the railroads charge $18 for hauling a car load of coal for forty miles, $12 to haul 65 miles, and only $6 to haul it two hundred miles? Do we need the McChord bill, or something like it.—Calloway Times.

Broncho Franks, in a speech at Winchester, said the Republicans would march through blood to wipe the infamous Goebel law off the books. A very good indication that good prices may be expected to continue on burley tobacco as the larger manufacturers are now buying a large amount of this tobocco of the best grade, privately. As the lower grades all along brought good prices, no objections can possibly be made by shippers of prices prevailing for some months to come. The fact that several large independent factories are soon to get in operation and are now buying stock, has served to make the trust bid more liberally, and the fight for stock between the big companies and the trust promises to get warmer as the fight grows older. It is thought the trust is trying to shutout several of the new factories from getting tobacco, and this and a known shortage in Burley stocks should make tobacco of the Burley variety a very good commodity to have around at the present time, and we anticipate many will not be anxious sellers from now until the new crop begins to arrive freely, about December 20. —Louisville Weed.

This, in short, is what the book contains, and the table of contents at the back is a good-sized book itself:

Autographs of President Cleveland and his cabinet; President McKinley and his cabinet; United States supreme judges; United States circuit judges; Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth congresses; the army and navy; United States commanders-in-chief G. A. R.; the artists, sculptors, musicians, actors, authors and writers of note in the United States; journalists; scientists; civil engineers; railroad officials; notable ecclesiastics; governors of all the states; and a miscellaneous assortment of men and women, with a general addenda of everybody notable and previously omitted.

The two congresses, the cabinets and the judiciary are, with all due deference to their general importance, pretty dry reading. Most of them contented themselves with inscribing their names; a few of them tabulated neat little autobiographies, registering the successive steps in similar careers; one or two of them wrote down sentences sonorous even in black and white. BODIES IN THE THROAT.

What to Do When the Children Get Foreign Articles Into the Gullet.

Children, who act on the belief that the mouth was made before pockets, often make it a receptacle for objects of all shapes, sizes and conditions of cleanliness—plus, jackstones, marbles, coins, and other things innumerable. Usually such treasures are found when wanted, but sometimes they act as in other pockets with a hole in the bottom—they drop out, or rather they drop in, and then trouble ensues.

Older people may also suffer from swallowing things unintentionally while eating. A fishbone is a peculiarly troublesome thing to escape into the gullet, but more dangerous still is a large piece of meat, which may slip down the throat [illegible] the person is talking, and cause suffocation by pressing on the windpipe.

Of course this accident could only occur to one with table manners bad enough to allow him to take such a piece of meat into the mouth, and then to talk while eating it.

Most articles swallowed, either by children or adults, cause no trouble, but if they are arrested in the gullet, they may cause most alarming symptoms of pain and suffocation. Many cases are recorded in medical literature of grave suffering, and even death, from the lodgment in the gullet of a jackstone, a ragged piece of bone, a raw potato, a set of false teeth, and so forth.

The signs of an arrest of this sort are coughing, difficulty in catching the breath, pain, and difficulty, or impossibility, of swallowing.

When a small, sharp body, such as a pin or a fishbone, is causing trouble, it is better to try to bring it up first, rather than to force it down into the stomach. The latter course is usually the easier, but it exposes the patient to the danger of scratching or perforation of the stomach or intestine by the sharp body.

If food has just been taken, vomiting may be induced by tickling the back of the throat with the finger or a feather. If there is no food in the stomach, the sufferer may drink a pint of milk and directly after take some rennet or a little vinegar to curdle the milk; then, if vomiting is induced, the curds may catch the foreign body and bring it up.

Another plan is to swallow a loose ball of yarn the size of an English walnut, attached to a stout thread, and then pull it up.

If it is impossible by any of these means to bring up the foreign body, an attempt should be made to force it down by swallowing good-sized boluses of bread crumbs, mashed potatoes, mashed baked beans, or the like, and washing them down with copious drafts of water.

The back of the throat should be examined in a strong light, for the body may be arrested at the entrance to the gullet, and if seen, can often be dislodged by the fingers or some improvised instrument.—Youth's Companion.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

The demand for Bible women in India far exceeds the supply.

A Sunday school for native children has been organized in San Juan.

The first Sunday school in this country was established in New Jersey in 1786.

The Methodist Episcopal church in Japan has 60 organized churches, with 3,023 members.

Out of 124 law students called to the London bar in one day not long ago 19 have oriental names.

There are 40,981 Protestant converts in Japan, and 24,531 Greek Catholics and 53,427 Roman Catholics.

The first men's shelter under the auspices of the Salvation Army in Paris has proved a success in every way.

Thirty-two German school children died during the last school year from the effects of corporal punishment.

The eyes of 1,005 school children were examined in Rochester, N. Y., and 232 of the scholars were found to have defective vision.

Recently the Presbyterian board at one session commissioned 52 new missionaries to 17 foreign fields. This is said to be the largest number ever passed at one time.

At Dempsey, 62 miles from Montpelier, Idaho, is situated the first Catholic place of worship in the United States for the exclusive use of Mormon converts. There are at present but 14 converts besides children. Rev. W. J. A. Hendricks, a missionary living at Montpelier, is in charge of the congregation.

TRAGEDIES OF HUNTING.

When Out Gunning Don't Shoot Until You Know What You Are Shooting At.

The deer hunting season in the Adirondacks opened on August 1. Four days later followed a tragedy. Two brothers were camping on the Eighth Lake of the Fulton Chain. For the younger, a youth of 17 years, it was the first season of camp life, and, like all youngsters in the woods in their initial experience, he was aglow with ardor to get his first deer. About sundown this younger brother left the camp alone and shortly after was followed by the other. When the elder of the two came to the Durant road, he saw a movement of the brush, such as is caused by a deer. On the instant, he raised his rifle, took quick aim at the moving brush, fired, then rushed in to see what he had shot, and found his brother, who had been killed instantaneously by a bullet through the breast.

A human life cut short in the flower of youth. Another life clouded by the anguish of the hour and by life-long regret and self-reproach. A home desolated. And all as the fruit of one foolish moment with a deadly weapon in the woods.

If we did not read the stories of such accidents year after year, and from time to time meet the bereaved fathers and mothers, and wives and children of the victims, it would be impossible to conceive that grown men could be found to bring this woe upon themselves and upon their fellows. And yet season after season the record grows. Now it is a farmer who shoots a neighbor by mistake for a ground hog; now a Maine moose hunter who kills his guide for big game, and now the Adirondacks camper who does to death his brother for a deer. Before the season shall be over and the rifles put away we shall hear probably of a score of such tragedies.

And it is all so cruelly heartrending because so unnecessary. The observance of one simple rule would have ...ed the scores of lives sacrificed in the past—Don't shoot until you know ... are shooting at.—Forest and

TILE SUB-IRRIGATION.

A System Particularly Adapted for Gardens, Small Farms and Vineyards.

Surface irrigation requires much more water because of rapid evaporation and is far less valuable than sub-irrigation. Unless the water is carefully handled on the surface it will do more injury to the ground and to the plants than it will do good. If the water is applied beneath the surface it will rapidly reach the roots and there will be little or no loss on account of evaporation. The loose soil above acts as a mulch. The tile used for this purpose must be of the unglazed porous kind. The depth below the surface will depend on the plant to be watered. For most garden plants a few inches is sufficient. If a vineyard is to be sub-irrigated put the tile somewhat deeper, and if the water is to be applied to an orchard the tile should be deeper than for a vineyard.

The rows of tile should be near enough together so that the space between them will be thoroughly moistened. The tile must be laid so that the end of the line where the water enters will be slightly lower than the other. The water will run in until the tile is filled and then by capillary attraction will be distributed. The accompanying diagram shows how a vineyard may be watered. It is a plan of a plat in this vicinity, and the grapes produced here are the finest in this section of the state. The heavy lines (b) represent the rows of grapevines and the dotted lines (a) the rows of tiles. They are laid so that the water is introduced from the upper right-hand corner and distributed throughout the whole system. Water is forced to the plat from a well some distance away by means of a windmill. A few yards of tile in a garden often doubles the value of the plat.—Orange Judd Farmer.

RENOVATING ORCHARDS.

Thorough Pruning Is the First Operation Necessary to Give Renewed Life to Trees.

Repair is not necessarily associated with old age and decay. Apple trees ten or fifteen years old sometimes need repairing quite as much as do old and neglected ones. When the orchard to be treated has been neglected for many years, the first operation, if the land does not need draining, is to prune thoroughly. In this operation, which may be performed at any time from late fall until the middle of May, care should be used that the trees are given an open head. This does not imply that all small limbs should be removed, causing a lot of whipstocks, but that such of the larger limbs as are parallel and close together, or those which cross, should be cut out, says W. M. Munson, in Bulletin 49, Maine experiment station. Half of the difficulty of pruning is done away with if one decides to allow the tree its natural form, rather than attempt to shape it to some particular model. Many growers suppose that pruning weakens the tree and shortens its life. There is, however, no reason for this belief other than the general statement that pruning is unnatural. Man seldom prunes so heavily as does nature in removing superfluous limbs in the growth of young saplings in the forest. Furthermore, nature prunes at all seasons and in the rudest ways. By this it should not be understood, however, that care is not necessary in the mechanical operation of pruning. On the other hand, it is of the greatest importance that large limbs be removed with care and the wounds painted to prevent the entrance of fungi, which will induce decay. In training young trees, all crotches should be avoided. If bud crotches should be found to exist in trees ten or more years old, they should be bruced by means of an iron bolt. Much damage may be avoided if bolts are used in season.

Danger in Nitrate of Soda.

It should be remembered that nitrate of soda is not so beneficial for stock as it is for soil. Every little while some farmer, either through ignorance or carelessness, leaves nitrate of soda around, or sacks which have contained it, accessible to cattle or other stock. These, not recognizing the difference from common salt, lick or eat it, and as a result either die or get very sick. In case of poisoning from this chemical the "administration of infusions of coffee and alcohol and irritant clysters" is recommended by government veterinarians.

With the peach, the young trees should be started with low heads, the lower limbs not more than two feet above the ground.

A good plant needs no more room than a poor one.

OIL LAYS THE DUST.

Successful Experiment in California Which Might Be Given a Trial in the Eastern States.

The machine for distributing the oil on the roadway is quite a novelty. It consists of a portable tank six feet long, running on two wheels, which are attached to the rear of an oil tank wagon. The oil is discharged into the portsule tank by means of hose. It is then discharged through tubes six inches apart, underneath the tank, which are operated by a lever. Only a sufficient amount is let through to take up the dust. The oil is run in furrows made by a little hoe and is covered by other hoes following. This is to prevent the oil from seeking a level in any low place and becoming unevenly distributed on the road. After all the oil has been applied the same machine is used to incorporate the oil and earth. Two horses are attached to the apparatus, and by the means of numerous other friction teeth and by going over the road the balance of the day for the purpose of incorporating the earth and oil the road is made ready for use. The oil used is a heavy quality of asphaltum oil and is applied hot. The affinity (the earth for the oil) when both are hot is very great.

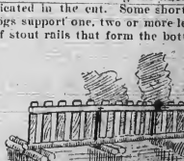
One of the principal streets of Long Beach was treated with the oil process, and reports concerning it are generally satisfactory, sections of the street with a good foundation showing perfect results and a dustless roadway.

The following from the South Pasadenan will show how the oil process is viewed by the people of that town:

"The city trustees and the people of South Pasadena are so well pleased with the results of alloying dust by oil that if the rainy season were not so near the plan of using water for this purpose would be abandoned entirely and the dust kept down by the use of oil. Our people are so well satisfied with the result of dressing a portion of the roadways with oil that they regard it as the solution of the question of street sprinkling. In the spring the use of water will probably be abandoned altogether and oil substituted. The dust by this process is entirely allayed, the cost much less, and, what is of equal importance, a great saving in the water supply is made."

After a thorough investigation and practical working of the oil process as applied by Mr. De Camp during the past six months there seems to be no question as to its utility and economy over the ancient custom of watering the roads to allay the dust. This being the case, we hope, for the good of the traveling public, that the oil dust-allaying process may be adopted not only in Los Angeles county but throughout the country. Parties desiring further information in regard to this matter can obtain the same by applying in person or by letter to L. B. De Camp, who has an office in the Frost building, Los Angeles.—Alhambra (Cal.) Advocate.

THE CHURNING PROBLEM.



Never Delay This Important Operation Until the Cream Is Very Sour or Cheesy.

How often shall churning be done? With the conditions found in the average farmhouse no specific rule can be given. Cream kept fresh always will sometimes be in better condition than it would be if kept only three or even two days at other times. Churn when the cream is ripe or slightly acid. Never delay until it is very sour or cheesy. Mosquito netting thrown over the cream jars keeps out flies and dust and does not seriously interfere with the free circulation of air. Wind blowing upon milk is always certain to cause white specks in the butter. Our cows will be fresh in late autumn and early winter. We have had very little milk this summer. The cream, if kept until there is enough to churn, becomes stale. It is skimmed into a tin pail, heated to 80 or 85 degrees and then lowered through an opening that is fitted with a hinged cover, into a covered well in the cellar. If the cream is churned in 12 hours the butter will come very quickly if stirred with an egg beater. Nice butter can be made from a small quantity of milk, if the cream is first heated and then cooled.—Sarah E. Wilcox, in Agricultural Epitomist.

FENCING OVER WATER.

How to Build a Floating Fence That Will Resist the Attacks of All Ordinary Currents.

Fencing over water is not difficult when carried out along the lines as indicated in the cut. Some short cross logs support one, two or more lengths of stout rails that form the bottom of the fence. Holes are bored in these, in which upright stakes are driven to support the upper rail. The lengths of fence are chained together. The outer log is anchored up-stream and down stream with sufficient length of chain to permit the rising and falling of the fence. This plan is splendid for tide water rivers, and good wherever the rise is not likely to be so sudden as to wash it away.—Farm and Home.

It is only in exceptional cases that it will be advisable to cultivate in the orchard this late.

So far as it is possible, large limbs should never be removed from apple and cherry trees.

WAS AN OPTIMIST.

Opener Tells Why He Was Not Sorry That Grand Jury Failed to Indict Him.

—This is a plain, unvarnished story of a lady who trimmed her own hat. She was endeavoring to [illegible] received the brilliant idea that by purchasing the trimmings and the frame she could construct a hat that would be quite as [illegible] as the ordinary or extraordinary millinery creation and at much less cost. So she made a dozen or more trips downtown and finally had gathered together a trunk full of bits of ribbon, steel buckles, gauze, flowers, birds, fiber chamois, bolts, rivets, barbed wire, varnish, bicycle cement, galvanized iron, lucrusta wallpaper and all the singular ingredients of a woman's hat, together with a fearful and wonderful frame that looked much like a large stump after a tug of war with a steam engine. There she haunted the display windows and changed her mind something like a thousand times regarding the manner in which she would trim that hat.

She sewed on and ripped off the birds so often that they looked much bedraggled and were, indeed, very sad-looking birds, but she finally succeeded in assembling the hat and then, as she was going on a visit to her mother and sisters, who lived in a small city, she wore the magnificent creation, calculating that they would go into convulsions over her hat. And they did, after they had kissed her several times and assured her of their undying love her mother, who is a wise woman, with a keen sense of the proprieties, bade the elder of the unmarried sisters ring for the carriage. "I am so glad to see my dear daughter," she said, "that I must buy her something. Now, you drive down to the millinery store and buy her the prettiest hat there before any of her friends see her."

And after the economical daughter had departed for the millinery store the remaining members of the family fell upon the floor and screamed with laughter, for they knew a good thing when they saw it, even if they did live in a jay town.—Chicago Chronicle.

SOLDIER KNEW HOW TO WOO.

Having Won the Young Woman's Consent, He Succeeded with the Veteran Father.

"I tell you," shouted the old gentleman, "I'll not give my consent. I'm not the man to buy a pig in a poke or decide a case after hearing but one side of it. I don't believe he was ever a soldier or ever saw a battle in his life. I don't care so much for that, but it's the false pretenses. I'm a veteran and I know a soldier when I see him. I'll give him marching orders the next time he calls."

"But, papa, see how straight he walks and what a trim figure he has. And he has told me about lots of battles."

"Told me! There haven't been lots of battles since he was a big enough girl. I tell you that he's a false alarm. I'll trap him yet. I'll bet a house and lot that he can't go through the manual of arms."

"But he can. He took a cane and showed me the whole thing. It was just grand."

"What in creation do you know about it? You couldn't tell the difference between a 'right shoulder, shift,' and a 'double quick.' Did he enlist from Detroit?"

"No, Chicago."

"O, of course, some big city where it would take time to look him up. He's a fraud."

"Do listen, papa. He knows all about you and many people, and says that you are the finest, bravest, most intelligent man in the world. He likes beans and coffee for cold days, and every night he was here he turned in lights out at ten just from force of habit."

"No! And he said that about us veterans, hey? Well, I'll have a talk with your mother."—Detroit Free Press.

Woman and the Automobile.

It has long been scientifically demonstrated that a woman cannot throw a stone straight. It now appears that she steers an automobile the way she throws a stone. There are awful possibilities in the near future. A wabbly automobile can be dodged by an athletic sprinter, but a wabbly automobile has a horror all its own.—N. Y. Press.

THOUGHTLESS WOMEN

"I GAVE little thought to my health," writes Miss BELLE, 230 N. Walnut St., Chatham, "until I found myself unable to attend to my household duties.

"I had had my days of not feeling well and my days of suffering, and a good deal of pain, but I thought all women had these things and did not complain.

"I had doctored for some time, but no medicine seemed to help me, and my physician thought it best for me to go to the hospital for local treatment. I had read and heard so much of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I made up my mind to try it. I was troubled with falling of the womb, had sharp pains in ovaries, leucorrhœa and painful menses. I was so weak and dizzy that I would often have severe fainting spells. I took in all several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and used the Sanative Wash, and am now in good health. I wish others to know of the wonderful good it has done me, and have many friends taking it now. Will always give your medicine the highest praise."

MRS. A. TOLLE, 1946 Hilton St., Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I was very thin and my friends thought I was in consumption. Had continual headaches, backache and falling of womb, and my eyes were affected. Every one noticed how poorly I looked and I was advised to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. One bottle relieved me, and after taking eight bottles am now a healthy woman; have gained in weight 95 pounds to 140 pounds, and everyone asks what makes me so stout."

Harry Hunter, confined in jail here under charge of horsestealing had made considerable progress towards freedom when detected by Jailer Adams, last Thursday afternoon. Under the southeast corner of the jail floor is a vault which was built for the use of prisoners at the time the building was erected, but owing to later arrangements made in the lower room of the jail several years ago the use of this vault has been abandoned so far as the lower room is concerned. Hunter discovered by some means, that there was a cavity under the corner of the jail floor, and with a bar of iron which he says he got out of one of the iron cots, he began investigation and succeeded in making a hole in the sheet iron floor large enough for him to pass from the jail into the vault, where it was only necessary to get a few stone out of the jail foundation, after which he could in a short time, have unmolled out. It was in a perfectly nude condition that Jailer Adams found his prisoner down in this vault, when he chanced to visit the jail Thursday afternoon, and the timely discovery intercepted Hunter in his work, which in a few hours, would have lead to his escape. When discovered Hunter said to the jailer, "You have caught me," and when he crawled through the hole back into the jail he said he was down in the vault the day before. Having represented himself as in very poor health, the jailer had allowed Hunter the privilege of the entire room, but henceforth he will keep him in the cells.

Monday evening, a most deplorable affair occurred at Glencoe which has caused a feeling of sadness in the county. Myrix J. Castleman, a prominent young farmer of that locality, struck and killed Dr. George W. Ferrell, a young physician of Elliston Station. The young men met at Brock's saloon and had a drink together and afterward went over to Wm. Breeden's hotel and engaged in a game of croquet, and got into a dispute. They went into Breeden's to get a drink, after drinking Castleman said, "come let us finish the game," to which Dr. Ferrell replied, "No, you said I did not run the basket." Castleman then said "No, you did not," and Dr. Ferrell immediately replied "you're a g—d—liar. At this point Wm. Breeden said "hold on here if you want to fight go outside," and put Dr. Ferrell out the side door and Castleman went out the front door. Dr. Ferrell was leaning against a tree where they had been playing croquet and Castleman went up to him and suggested that they finish the game when the quarrel was renewed and Dr. Ferrell called Castleman a liar again when Castleman struck Dr. Ferrell in the face with a croquet mallet which he had in his hand from the beginning of the quarrel, and as Dr. Ferrell fell forward on his face Castleman struck him again with the mallet behind the ear. Z. T. Bingham and Chats Webber were the only persons present and they ran up and prevented any further assault. Dr. Ferrell was picked up and laid on a bench and Dr. A. M. Shupert called but the unfortunate man was beyond all human aid, and died within five minutes from the time he was struck. Castleman left for his home and has since been evading arrest until the time set for his preliminary examination when he will surrender himself.—Warsaw Independent.

Another patent medicine man struck the town, Friday evening, and pretended he wanted to do some business with the RECORDER, but it was soon ascertained that he, like all others in his business, thought a local paper should carry his matter at a figure that would not much more than pay for the material actually consumed in doing the work; but he had a list of leading papers with which he stated he had contracts at these starvation rates.

ADM. DEWEY'S salary amounts to $37.50 per day. President McKinley's is equal to $131 a day; cabinet officers, the vice president and speaker of the house get $92.22 a day; senators and congressmen $13.90, and the chief justice of the supreme court $92 a day.

WHAT is called smokeless powder really throws off a shadowy vapor. This vapor is perceptible only when viewed through a disk of violet glass inserted in an ordinary field glass. Col. Sweet, of the Army Medical museum, Washington, made this discovery.

IN Paris and other large towns in France female bootblacks are increasing in number. They wear a peculiar garb, not unlike that of Sisters of Mercy, which renders their appearance neat and attractive. Not a few among them attend to their work with gloved hands.

FIVE hundred Lithuanian girls have petitioned to be allowed to form the sole guard of honor of the German emperor during the hunting season this year. These girls are all skilled horsewomen and are of a race that became famous under the Jagellons. Their offer was provisionally accepted.

MEN exposed to the rigors of the Alaskan winter never wear mustaches. They wear full beards to protect the throat and face, but keep the upper lips clean shaven. The moisture from the breath congeals so quickly that a mustache becomes embedded in a solid cake of ice and the face is frozen in a short time.

GOV. JOHNSTON, of Alabama, has just granted a unique pardon to John Boston, a negro of Russell county. Boston was serving a term for stealing chickens, and the governor granted him a pardon upon condition that for 12 months he should not buy, steal or eat another chicken or any portion thereof.

THE outlook for deer hunting was never so good as it is this year. There are over 100,000 deer running wild in the Maine woods this fall, or more than in all the other New England and the Middle States combined. Since the flies have gone and the animals have sought the hills great herds of 60 to 100 deer have come out to the clearings, stripping the gardens and fields of every growing thing.

MAYOR PRICE, of Macon, Ga., who has held his place for 14 years, is a great believer in the newspaper as an educator. For years he has out of his own pocket paid the subscriptions for a considerable number of papers which he ordered left at the homes of persons who were unable to pay for such a necessity of up-to-date life. Mr. Price is fully convinced that his action has been productive of much good.

THIS is an age in which we can not afford to lose any opportunity; such was evidently the opinion of the inventor of a new nozzle for a fire-hose. He designed it with side openings in addition to the ordinary large one at the end and made a shutter so that they could be closed at will. Thus the fireman can direct a smaller stream of water on an outburst at the side, while devoting to the chief point the greater stream from the hose.

GREAT BRITAIN has another war in Africa; this time in the northeast part of the Dark Continent. Troops have been hurried from Bombay to Berbera, which is the chief town of the Somali coast protectorate. The disturbance is caused by a Mahdi, or false prophet, who is inciting the natives to rebellion. The British took possession of the Somali coast in 1884, and now lay claim to a district 400 miles along the shore and extending 200 miles inland.

AN office thief is at present "working" the physicians. He calls at the office, sees the doctor and gives him an address where a patient is said to be suffering. After the victim has gone off on his errand of mercy the man returns and says he will wait for the doctor's return. The servant, having seen him before, regards him as a regular patient and admits him, and he selects what articles he regards as the most valuable and the most portable and decamps.

ONE of the curious social laws of Peru forbids women to attend funerals, and they do not appear at weddings unless they are very intimate friends. When a funeral procession passes through the streets the coffin is carried upon the shoulders of the pall bearers, who are followed by an empty hearse drawn by two, four or six horses, according to the means of the mourners and their desire for display. All the male members of the family and friends of the deceased follow on foot, with a line of empty carriages behind them.

A NOVEL idea which comes from Paris is the decoration of dresses with water-color designs. Hand-painted mousselines are popular for evening wear, and when a light, graceful pattern is artistically executed the result is admirable. A dress of white mousseline finished in this dainty manner with a vine of rich scarlet trumpet flowers, which gracefully followed the outlines of the long over-skirt, shows effectively upon the low-cut bodice. Bunches of artificial flowers fastened upon the left shoulder and trailing upon the arm served to complete a most unique and attractive toilet.

BOERS ARE MASSING.

They Cut the Railway at Belmont and Are Constructing Fortified Earthworks.

THEY ALSO LAY SIEGE TO KIMBERLEY.

The Town Is Isolated, Both Railway and Telegraphic Communication Having Been Cut Off.

Firing Heard in the Direction of Kimberley —A Force Under Commandant Viljoen, From Spitzkep, Occupied Newcastle Saturday Afternoon.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The Daily Mail's Cape Town correspondent, telegraphing Sunday evening, says: "Kimberley is besieged and the Boers are massing in force. No details, however, are obtainable. The Boers have cut the railway at Belmont, have seized the Spyfontein railway station and constructed fortified earthworks. There are strong defending forces at Modder bridge and the Orange river bridge.

"The object of these energetic operations is believed to be the capture of Cecil Rhodes. Kimberley is now isolated, both railway and telegraphic communication being cut."

The Daily Mail's Glencoe camp correspondent under date of Sunday says: "A force under Commandant Viljoen, from Spitzkep, occupied Newcastle Saturday afternoon, and it is reported planted their flag over the town hall.

"It is rumored that the Boers have captured a police patrol of six men at De Jagers Drift on the Buffalo river.

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 16.—The Modder river station master reports that firing has been heard in the direction of Kimberley, and the station master at Belmont telegraphs that a force of Boers is advancing southward.

Flowerdew, the engine driver of Capt. Nesbitt's train, which was derailed and bombarded by the Boers, stated that if the train had returned when warning was received that the Boers held the line, it could easily have made its way back to Maribogo, but Capt. Nesbitt insisted upon an endeavor being made to reach Mafeking.

"When the pilot engine was derailed," said Flowerdew, "we spent a half hour trying to replace it on the track. Then the Boers commenced firing, and several men were wounded. The firing was kept up all night but without effect. The Boers were careful to concentrate their fire upon the engines so as to save the armored carriage and ammunition trucks. At dawn they commenced to bombard the cars. I escaped by crawling a mile and a half on my belly in the sand. When both engines were destroyed Capt. Nesbitt exhibited flags of truce but the Boers continued their firing for another quarter of an hour.

"There is no doupt that all the others on the train are prisoners, and that the carriage and the ammunition intact fell into the hands of the Boers."

There is an unconfirmed rumor that the imperial forces intercepted a body of Transvaal Boers who were attempting to join the Boer forces at Modder river, and that a heavy engagement occurred at Spyfontein station, south of Kimberley.

DURBAN, Oct. 16.—Following is the strength and disposition of the troops in Natal:

At Ladysmith, seven batteries, 32 guns, 4,000 infantry.

At Estercourt, 200 volunteers and at Oolenzo 427 volunteers. These with the force at Pietermaritzburg make a total of 15,000 men in Natal.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—A special dispatch filed at Dundee, Natal, Sunday afternoon, reports that Commandant Viljoen's force had left Newcastle for Darnhauser, where the Transvaal flag has been hoisted over the town hall.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Morning Leader telegraphing Sunday night says: "It is reported that fighting began at Kimberley Monday morning. The railway has been cut at Belmont."

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 16.—The news of fighting at Modder river is not confirmed. The station master at Modder river telegraphs that Boers from the north and south have taken Gangershat, which they are fortifying.

DURBAN, Oct. 16.—Two extraordinary gazettes have been issued. The first proclaims martial law in the Newcastle, Dundee, Klip river, Unsiga and Upper Tugila divisions. The reason given is a belief that Natal subjects have joined the invading Boers and assisted the enemy.

The other gazette reminds British subjects of their obligations to the queen, and warns them to abstain from intercourse and trade with the Transvaal and the Orange Free State.

VISAYANS AND TAGALOS.

There Is Great Tension Between the Two Tribes—The Tagalos Are Reported to Be Concentrating Troops.

MANILA, Oct. 16.—Mail advices from Iloilo state there is great tension between the Visayans and Tagalos, growing out of the Tagalos holding Araneta, a leader of the Visayans, a prisoner since the threatened Visayan revolt against Tagalo domination a month ago. The Visayans are incensed to the point of rebellion. While the Tagalos nominally control only the military organization of the so-called Filipino republics, they have crowded out the Visayans from the civil branch, whereat there is great discontent.

The Tagalos are reported to be concentrating the troops in Panay at Santa Barbara where Delgado, chief of the revolutionary government, commands, with a view to putting themselves in a position to suppress the Visayans. Four thousand Tagalos who have been held in reserve at Capiz, in the northern part of the province of Panay last week embarked in cascoes, the fleet's purpose being to land at Conception, whence the troops would march to Santa Barabara. Adverse winds prevented the landing, however. Gen. Palion's forces from Buena Vista are also reported to be going to Santa Barbara.

The insurgents will have 12,000 men and 3,000 or 4,000 rifles there. Gen. Magbanna, according to letters, plans to attack the suburbs of Iloilo with this force, carry the city and slaughter the Americans.

A body of Tagalos estimated to number between 500 and 1,000 recently crossed from Santa Babara to Escalante, on the island of Negros, for the purpose of aiding Intepapaisio's bandits in keeping under the inhabitants, who are friendly to the Americans.

ADM. DEWEY IN BOSTON.

A Crowd of Fully 25,000 People Met the Hero of Manila at the Depot—Escorted by War Veterans.

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—Fully 25,000 people were crowded in and around the station, and in the rush to get a look at the hero he was well nigh carried off his feet. He was with Mayor Quincy and a delegation representing the Home Market club, the chamber of commerce and other municipal bodies. The admiral rode at the head of a column of 10,000 war veterans through the city's principal streets to the Hotel Touraine, which will be his home during his three days' stay.

The admiral's escort Friday night were the naval veterans, and following them were posts of the Massachusetts department of the Grand Army and Spanish war veterans. All the streets were profusely decorated and crowds lined the sidewalks. Red fire was burned lavishly.

The admiral after dinner witnessed a fine display of fireworks on Boston common from his apartments in the hotel and retired soon afterward. Saturday he had an arduous day, as he attended many functions. In the forenoon he heard the school children sing on the common, was presented with a watch at the city hall and reviewed the parade, which included the entire state militia mobilized for its fall maneuvers. In the evening there was be a banquet at the Algonquin club.

A NEW SAMOAN KING.

The Natives Proclaim a New Sovereign, Notwithstanding the Recent Agreement of the Powers.

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—The Cologne Gazette's Apia correspondent says the natives have proclaimed Tamasese king, despite the recent agreement of the United States, Germany and England to abolish that office. He adds that the natives do not conceal their disrespect for the representatives of the treaty powers. At a wedding feast arranged by Tamasese the American consul, Osborne, made a speech, thus giving the affair official recognition. Thereupon Tamasese's followers proclaimed Tamasese king, and announced the destruction of the opposing natives if they resisted his authority.

When the letter was mailed, September 8, hundreds of Tamasese's and Tanus' followers were gathering at Apia to swear allegiance before the eyes of the foreign consuls.

Commander Mason, Retired, Dead.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Word has been received here of the death Sunday, at Saugerties Depot, N. Y., of Lieut. Commander T. B. M. Mason, U. S. N., retired. Commander Mason was a native of New York, and was 51 years of age. He was instrumental in developing the office of naval intelligence, which proved of great value to the government during the Spanish-American war.

British Contract for Mules.

BONHAM, Tex., Oct. 16.—Mr. Ed Stager, of this city, who was one of the most extensive dealers in mules and horses during the Spanish-American war, has just filled a contract with the British government for 1,500 mules for service in South Africa in the war with the Boers.

OUR NAVY.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The [illegible] report to the secretary of the navy Chief Constructor Hi[illegible] cial stress upon the [illegible] continuing the work of [illegible] plants at the various [illegible] inviting particular attention to the [illegible] Boston and League Island. A [illegible] is also recommended at Algiers, La., without it the new dock will be [illegible] less when completed.

Under the head of dry docks the report points out that the present building programme does not meet the two most important navy yards, viz. New York and Norfolk, at which a new dock of the largest size is urgently needed in view of the rapid increase of battleships in commission. Marine railways also are said to be necessary for the economical handling of torpedo boats, and two such are recommended at New York and one each at Portsmouth, League Island, Norfolk, Port Royal and Mare Island.

Under the head of new construction the report sets out the fact that contracts for the more important ships authorized by the last congress could not be let because of the limitation placed upon the cost of the armor. Nevertheless complete specifications for these vessels have been prepared and are included in the report. Work on the design for gunboat 16, to replace the Michigan, has been suspended, pending definition of the characteristics that will be permitted under the treaty with Great Britain.

Fourteen vessels, with the exception of the Chesapeake and Princeton, torpedo boats or tugs, were added to the navy during the last fiscal year; four Spanish vessels sunk during the war were raised and added, and 17 small gunboats were purchased or captured on the Asiatic station and placed on the list. On the other hand 41 vessels were dropped from the naval list, including the American line chartered ships, a number of auxiliary vessels sold, the revenue cutters and lighthouse vessels turned back into their old service, and a couple of monitors. On July 1 there were building for the navy 48 new vessels, in addition to those enumerated.

In view of the delay encountered in securing armor for the new ships at satisfactory prices the chief constructor feels that the time is opportune to renew his recommendation that the department contract with the ship builder for the ship complete with armor, instead of making separate contracts for the latter.

Some of the lessons of the war referred to in the report is the importance of sheathing ships, as well as restricting the use of combustible material upon them, and of fire proofing such material as must be used. The severe tests applied by the war to our ships under trying conditions of climate resulted satisfactorily and little modification of new designs has been found necessary. The extended use of electricity as an auxiliary is recommended and the bureau is making great progress in this direction. The present strength of the corps of naval constructors is said to be entirely insufficient and a considerable increase is suggested, including an assistant chief of the bureau.

The report closes with detailed statements from the constructors in charge of the various navy yards of the work performed and the plant necessary.

A THREATENED LYNCHING.

Negro Phosphate Miners Resisted Arrest Killed One Officer and Wounded Another Twice in the Thigh.

COLUMBIA, Tenn., Oct. 16.—Horace Campbell, a Negro phosphate miner, is in jail here and a strong guard stood guard Sunday night to prevent a threatened lynching. Campbell and another Negro resisted arrest at the Tennessee Phosphate Co.'s mines early Sunday morning, opening fire on the officers, James Gilmer, B. Ladd and W. Wilshire. Gilmer was killed and Ladd wounded twice in the thigh and the Negroes fled. Later Campbell was arrested and identified.

THE HUNT'S LESSONS.

Dr. Talmage Preaches Upon the Subject of the Chase.

The Gospel as a Refreshment Graphically Set Forth—Refuge in God's Word for Those Pursued by Trials.

(Copyright, Louis Klopsch, 1899.)

The Gospel as a great refreshment is here set forth by Dr. Talmage under a figure which will be found particularly graphic by those who have gone out as hunters to find game in the mountains. Text, Psalm 42:1, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks."

David, who must some time have seen a deer hunt, points us here to a hunted stag making for the water. The fascinating animal, called in my text the hart, is the same animal that in sacred and profane literature is called the stag, the roebuck, the hind, the gazelle, the reindeer. In central Syria in Bible times there were whole pasture fields of them, as Solomon suggests when he says: "I charge you by the hinds of the field." Their antlers jutted from the long grass as they lay down. No hunter who has been long in "John Brown's tract" will wonder that in the Bible they were classed among clean animals, for the dews, the showers, the lakes, washed them as clean as the sky. When Isaac, the patriarch, longed for venison, Esau shot and brought home a roebuck. Isaiah compares the sprightliness of the restored cripple of millennial times to the long and quick jump of the stag, saying: "The lame shall leap as the hart." Solomon expressed his disgust at a hunter who, having shot a deer, is too lazy to cook it, saying: "The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting."

But one day David, while far from the home from which he had been driven, and sitting near the mouth of a lonely cave where he had lodged and on the banks of a pond or river, hears a pack of hounds in swift pursuit. Because of the previous silence of the forest the clangor startles him, and he says to himself: "I wonder what those dogs are after?" Then there is a crackling in the brushwood and the loud breathing of some rushing wonder of the woods, and the antlers of a deer rend the leaves of the thicket, and by an instinct which all hunters recognize it plunges into a pond or lake or river to cool its thirst, and at the same time, by its capacity for swifter and longer swimming, to get away from the foaming harriers.

David says to himself: "Aha! That is myself! Saul after me, Absalom after me, enemies without number after me. I am chased, their bloody muzzles at my heels, barking at my good name, barking after my body, barking after my soul. Oh, the hounds, the hounds! But look there!" says David. "That hunted deer has splashed into the water. It puts its hot lips and nostrils into the cool wave that washes the lathered flanks, and it swims away from the fiery canines, and it is free at last. Oh, that I might find in the deep, wide lake of God's mercy and consolation escape from my pursuers! Oh, for the waters of life and rescue! As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God!"

Some of you have just come from the Adirondacks, and the breath of the balsam and spruce and pine is still on you. The Adirondacks are now populous with hunters, and the deer are being slain by the score. Once while there talking with a hunter I thought I would like to see whether my text was accurate in its allusion, and as I heard the dogs baying a little way off and supposed they were on the tracks of a deer, I said to the hunter in rough corduroy: "Do the deer always make for the water when they are pursued?" He said: "Oh, yes, mister. You see, they are a hot and thirsty animal, and they know where the water is, and when they hear danger in the distance they lift their antlers and snuff the breeze and start for Raequet or Loon or Saranac, and we get into our cedar shell boat or stand by the runway with rifle loaded ready to blaze away."

My friends, that is one reason why I like the Bible so much. Its allusions are so true to nature. Its partridges are real partridges, its ostriches real ostriches and its reindeer real reindeer. I do not wonder that this antlered glory of the text makes the hunter's eye sparkle and his cheek glow and his respiration quicken, to say nothing of its usefulness, although it is the most useful of all game, its flesh delicious, its skin turned into human wearing apparel, its sinews fashioned into bow strings, its antlers putting handles on cutlery and the shavings of its horns used as a restorative, its name taken from the hart and called hartshorn. By putting aside its usefulness this enchanting creature seems made out of gracefulness and elasticity. What an eye, with a liquid brightness as if gathered up from a hundred lakes at sunset! The horns a coronal branching into every possible curve, and, after it seems done, ascending into other projections of exquisiteness, a tree of polished bone, uplifted in pride or swung down for awful combat! It is velocity embodied, timidity impersonated, the enchantment of the woods, eye lustrous in life and pathetic in death, the splendid animal in complete rhythm of muscle and bone and color and attitude and locomotion, whether couched in the grass among the shadows of a living bolt shot through the forest or turning at bay to attack the hounds or rearing for its last fall under the buckshot of the trapper.

It is a splendid appearance, that the painter's pencil fails to sketch and only a hunter's dream on a pillow of hemlock at the foot of St. Regis is able to picture. When 20 miles from any settlement, it comes down at eventide to the lake's edge to drink among the lilypods, and with its sharp edged hoof, shatters the crystal of Long lake, it is very picturesque. But only when, after the hard pursuit, with heaving sides and lolling tongue and eyes swimming in death, the stag leaps from the cliff into Upper Saranac can you realize how much David had suffered from his troubles and how much he wanted God when he expressed himself in the words: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God."

Well, now, let all those who have come [illegible] ing after them the lean hounds of poverty or the black hounds of persecution or the spotted hounds of visitation, or the pale hounds of death or who are in any wise pursued run to the wide, deep, glorious lake of Divine solace and rescue. The most of the men and women whom I happen to know at different times, if not now, have had troubles after them, sharp muzzled troubles, swift troubles, all devouring troubles. Many of you have made the mistake of trying to fight them. Somebody meanly attacked you, and you attacked them. They depreciated you, and you depreciated them, or they overreached you in a bargain, and you tried, in Wall street parlance, to get a corner on them. Or you have had a bereavement, and, instead of being submissive, you are fighting that bereavement. Your charge on the doctors who have failed to effect a cure. Or you charge on the carelessness of the railroad company through which the railroad accident occurred. Or you are a chronic invalid, and you fret and worry and scold and wonder why you cannot be well like other people, and you angrily charge on the neuralgia or the laryngitis or the ague or the sick headache. The fact is you are a deer at bay. Instead of running to the waters of Divine consolation and slaking your thirst and cooling your body and soul in the good cheer of the Gospel and swimming away into the mighty deeps of God's love, you are fighting a whole kennel of harriers.

Some time ago I saw in the Adirondacks a dog lying across the road, and he seemed unable to get up, and I said to some hunters: "What is the matter with that dog?" They answered: "A deer hurt him," and I saw he had a swollen paw and a battered head, showing where the antlers struck him. And the probability is that some of you might give a mighty clip to your pursuers. You might damage their business, you might worry them into ill health, you might hurt them as much as they hurt you; but, after all, it is not worth while. You only have hurt a hound. Better be off for the Upper Saranac, into which the mountains of God's eternal strength look down and moor their shadows. As for your physical disorders, the worst strychnine you can take is fretfulness, and the best medicine is religion. I know people who were only a little disordered, yet have fretted themselves into complete valetudinarianism, while others put their trust in God and came up from the very shadow of death and have lived comfortably 25 years with only one lung. A man with one lung, but God with him, is better off than a godless man with two lungs. Some of you have been for a long time sailing around Cape Fear when you ought to have been sailing around Cape Good Hope. Do not turn back, but go ahead. The deer will accomplish more with its swift feet than with its horns.

There are whole chains of lakes in the Adirondacks, and from one height you can see 30 lakes, and there are said to be over 300 in the great wilderness. So near are they to each other that your mountain guide picks up and carries the boat from lake to lake, the small distance between them for that reason called a "carry." And the realm of God's word is one long chain of bright, refreshing lakes, each promise a lake, a very short carry between them, and, though for ages the pursued have been drinking out of them, they are full up to the top of the green banks, and the same David describes them, and they seem so near together that in three different places he speaks of them as a continuous river, saying: "There is a river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God;" "Thou shalt make them drink of the rivers of Thy pleasures;" "Thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water."

But many of you have turned your back on that supply and confront your trouble, and you are soured with your circumstances, and you are fighting society, and you are fighting a pursuing world, and troubles, instead of driving you into the cool lake of heavenly comfort, have made you stop and turn round and lower your head, and it is simply antler against tooth. I do not blame you. Probably under the same circumstances I would have done worse. But you are all wrong. You need to do as the reindeer does in February and March—it sheds its horns. The Rabbinical writers allude to this resignation of antlers by the stag when they say of a man who ventures his money in risky enterprises he has hung it on the stag's horns, and a proverb in the far east tells a man who has foolishly lost his fortune to go and find where the deer shed his horns. My brother, quit the antagonism of your circumstances, quit misanthropy, quit complaint, quit pitching into your pursuers. Be as wise as next spring will be the deer of the Adirondacks. Shed your horns.

But very many of you who are wronged of the world—and if in any assembly between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans it were asked that all who had been badly treated should raise both their hands, and full response should be made, there would be twice as many hands lifted as persons present—I say many of you would declare: "We have always done the best we could and tried to be useful, and why we become the victims of malignment or invidiosm or mishap is inscrutable." Why, do you know that the finer a deer and the more elegant its proportions [illegible] sarcasm draws on you its "finest bead," therefore the world goes gunning for you with its best winchester breech loader. Highest compliment is it to your talent or your virtue or your usefulness. You will be assailed in proportion to your great achievements. The best and the mightiest Being the world ever saw had set after Him all the hounds, terrestrial and diabolic, and they lapped His blood after the Calvarean massacre. The world paid nothing to its Redeemer but a bramble, four spikes and a cross. Many who have done their best to make the world better have had such a tough time of it that all their pleasure in anticipation of the next world and they would, if they could, express their own feelings in the words of the baroness of Nairn, at the close of her long life, when asked if she would like to live her life over again:

> Would you be young again?
> So would not I.
> One tear of memory given
> Onward I'll hie.
> Life's dark wave forded o'er,
> All but at rest on shore,

Yes, for some people in this world there seems no let up. They are pursued from youth to manhood and from manhood into old age. Very distinguished are Lord Stafford's hounds and the earl of Yarborough's hounds and the duke of Rutland's hounds, but all of them put together do not equal, in number or speed or power to hunt down, the great kennel of hounds of which Sin and Trouble are owner and master.

But what is a relief for all those pursued of trouble and annoyance and pain and bereavement? My text gives it to you in a word of three letters, but each letter is a chariot if you would triumph, or a throne if you want to be crowned, or a lake if you would slake your thirst—yea, a chain of three lakes—God, the one for whom David longed and the one for whom David found. You might as well meet a stag which, after its sixth mile of running at the topmost speed through thicket and gorge and with the breath of the dogs on its heels, has come in full sight of Schroon lake and try to cool its projecting and blistered tongue with a drop of dew from a blade of grass as to attempt to satisfy an immortal soul, when flying from trouble and sin, with anything less deep and high and broad and immense and infinite and eternal than God. His comfort—why, it embosoms all distress. His arm—it wrenches off all bondage. His hand—it wipes away all tears. His Christly atonement—it makes us all right with the past, and all right with the future, and all right with God, all right with man, and all right forever.

Oh, when some of you get there it will be like what the hunter tells of when he was pushing his canoe far up north in the winter and amid the ice floes, and a hundred miles, as he thought, from any other human being. He was startled one day as he heard a stepping on the ice, and he cocked his rifle, ready to meet anything that came near. He found a man, barefooted and insane from long exposure, approaching him. Taking him into his canoe and kindling fires to warm him, he restored him, found out where he had lived and took him to his home and found all the village in great excitement. A hundred men were searching for this lost man, and his family and friends rushed out to meet him, and, as had been agreed at his first appearance, bells were rung, and guns were discharged, and banquets spread and the rescuer loaded with presents. Well, when some of you step out of this wilderness, where you have been chilled and torn and sometimes lost amid the icebergs, into the warm greetings of all the villages of the glorified, and your friends rush out to give you welcoming kiss, the news that there is another soul forever saved will call the caterers of Heaven to spread the banquet and the bellmen to lay hold of the rope in the tower, and while chalices click at the feast and the bells clang from the turrets it will be seen no uplifting I pray God I may be there to take part in the celestial merriment. And now do you not think the prayer in Solomon's Song where he compared Christ to a reindeer in the night would make an exquisitely appropriate peroration to my sermon—"Until the day break and the shadows flee away be thou like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of Bether?"

DEFIES THE CONSTITUTION.

McKinley's Violation of American Principles in the Sulu Affair.

To the perfunctory adulation of President McKinley by the Massachusetts republican state convention one of the causes alleged in their platform for ecstatic admiration of that public functionary is "the tact, the patience, the skill and the statesmanlike spirit with which the president has approached the perplexing problems arising from the war." Without discussing the spirit in which Mr. McKinley has "approached" these problems, which is altogether a matter of opinion, we may be permitted to regard the manner in which he has solved them, which is simply a matter of fact.

The only one of the "problems arising from the war" which President McKinley has not only "approached" but actually solved is that of the establishment of the United States sovereignty over the Sulu archipelago, lying to the southward of the Philippines proper, which was included in the purchase for which we paid $20,000,000 to Spain. We have no possible use for these islands, of course; they must always be an expense and a nuisance, but Mr. McKinley insisted upon having them, and he has got them, and he has actually established sovereignty over them. It is the one completed act of this administration in the adjustment of the new relations of the United States arising out of the war. It is the crown of his "tact, patience, skill and statesmanship."

The establishment of the sovereignty of the United States over the Sulu archipelago has not been made by conquest but by diplomacy. The president has made a treaty, or agreement, or bargain, with the "sultan" of these islands. He has pledged the American people to pay to this magnate an annual tribute to keep him quiet, and in consideration of his acknowledgment of the "sovereignty" of the United States. This is cheap enough, in comparison with the cost of Mr. McKinley's policy in respect to Aguinaldo in Luzon. We might buy up and pension the local posses of all the islands in the China sea at far less expense than the country is put to for the maintenance of Otis' authority on a few square miles about Manila by the force of arms.

But the statesmanship of President McKinley does not stop with the payment of tribute to this yellow monarch; it includes the guarantee of certain peculiar institutions of that country for which the "sultan" has great affection. We may pass over the Mohamedan tenet of polygamy, with which Mr. McKinley has pledged the United States not to interfere; this is merely a matter of morals or sociology. But the question of slavery is another story.

The thirteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States declares as follows: "Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or in any place subject to their jurisdiction." This amendment was proclaimed as a part of the organic law of the republic, December 18, 1865. President McKinley cannot plead ignorance of the law. Every child in our public schools knows it by heart, and knows that wherever the jurisdiction of the United States extends no man or woman or child can be held in servitude.

Mr. McKinley has established, by the payment of tribute to the yellow potentate of the Sulu archipelago, the sovereignty of the United States over these islands. By the terms of the constitution under which the president holds his office and exercises his authority, the establishment of that sovereignty frees every human being held in bondage on those islands. Mr. McKinley has no right to say that slavery shall continue. Whatever he may say can count no more than the word of the least of his fellow citizens. The people of the United States have freed every slave in Sulu. It is decreed by the organic law of the land.

But what has been done by this "wise and patriotic administration," as the sycophantic republican state convention styles the Hanna-McKinley syndicate at Washington? A treaty has been made with the "sultan" of this slaveholding territory whereby "all sluves have the right of buying their freedom at a price to be fixed by disinterested parties or another may buy a slave's freedom for him." Such, at least, is the statement made regarding the treaty with the "sultan" of Sulu effected by Gen. Bates and heralded as a great diplomatic triumph by the organs of the administration. If President McKinley has not consented to this flagrant violation of the constitution of the United States he cannot too speedily absolve himself by giving publicity to the terms of the treaty by which he has established the sovereignty of the United States over Sulu. There is every reason to believe that the situation is as stated.

Slavery has existed in Sulu from time immemorial. The slaves are captives of war, poor debtors and the children of such unfortunates born while their parents are in a condition of servitude. Everyone of these slaves is free to-day under the constitution of the United States. By what usurpation of authority has President McKinley dared to allow the "sultan" of Sulu to retain these human beings in involuntary servitude?

The theory of those who sustain the policy of the administration in the Philippines is that the declaration of independence is outgrown; that it is no longer true that all men have equal political rights; that just government to-day does not rest upon the consent of the governed; that representation need not accompany taxation. But the declaration of independence and the constitution of the United States are two different documents. The declaration may be outgrown, as the republican supporters of Mr. McKinley tell us, but the constitution is the law of the land, to which the president must bow as well as the humblest citizen. And the constitution declares that there shall be no slavery or involuntary servitude within either the United States or "any place subject to their jurisdiction."

Mr. McKinley has, by his "wise, statesmanlike and patriotic" conduct, established the jurisdiction of the United States over the Sulu islands. In doing this he seems to have reestablished slavery within the jurisdiction of this republic. On the face of it, here surely is a case for the house of representatives to make a presentation to the senate of the United States.—Boston Post.

PASS THE PORK AROUND.

Wall Street Philanthropists Get a "Hand On" from the Government Pantry.

"We may be overdoing this thing," says Hon. William McKinley, referring to the booming prosperity that is being enjoyed by the trust promoters, the stock gamblers and the money sharks generally. "Let us be a half hitch on our enthusiasm lest we go to smash—thereby endangering my prospects for a second term." These are not his exact words, but the sentiment is preserved.

And it is evident that the understrappers who have been steering the ship of state while the regular crew have been eating expensive dinners and talking about the old flag have received instructions to make all easy and soft in case there should be a stiff breeze. The assistant secretary of the treasury, Mr. Vanderlip, is keeping an eye to windward, at any rate. Money is tight in Wall street. The gentlemen who shear lambs, the philanthropists who rig the market, the financiers who come to the rescue of the government when a bond issue is in sight, are paying considerably more than the legal rate for money, and in their stress and trial they naturally turn for aid to the treasury department, which is considered a sort of branch office of the New York establishment. Mr. Vanderlip, acting undoubtedly upon the orders of his absent chief, is quick to respond. He announces that the United States government will prepay the interest on all its bonds for the rest of the fiscal year—a period of eight months. The stock gamblers must have easy money at the expense of the taxpayers.

It is true that on a large part of the anticipated payments the government will exact a discount at the rate of one-fifth of one per cent. per month, but the difference between this discount and the current money rate in Wall street will go to the distressed financiers. Upon $5,000,000 of the $100,000,000 to be paid out no discount at all will be exacted. The government will give the use of the money gratis to relieve the worthy persons who amuse themselves by "skinning the Rubes," as they poetically express it. It is a thank offering of our noble executive to the patriots who gave so freely of their adipose tissue when Mr. Hanna was operating the frying pan in the fall of 1896. If they are treated liberally now they may be equally responsive when Mr. Hanna takes up his pilgrimage again next year.

And of course it is all right. Stock gambling is one of our most cherished and aristocratic industries. It must be protected and fostered like other favored industries. But while our noble executive and Mr. Vanderlip are in this generous frame of mind why shouldn't the federal pensioners, the federal officeholders and other prospective creditors of the government seize the opportunity to ask an advance payment? As a matter of fact, why shouldn't we all have a "whack" at the United States treasury, dividing up the funds on hand pro rata and thereby insuring general prosperity and a high old time throughout the length and breadth of the land so long as the money lasts?

Let us make this thing general. It is not fair that the Wall street philanthropists should monopolize the pork.—Chicago Chronicle.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——It is not so strange that William McKinley should have thrown civil service over for Mark Hanna. Hanna has done infinitely more for McKinley.—Chicago Democrat.

——It is a good democratic doctrine to stand up for the right and resist wrong. And no exception will be made in favor of chartered robbery.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

——Secretary Root is now spoken of as a running mate for McKinley in 1900. As a former trust attorney he would be a fit candidate if the republicans are going to put a plank in their platform denouncing trusts and apologizing for them at the same time.—Buffalo Times.

——There seems to be no shame in Mr. Hanna, the dictator. In his speeches he boasts that his party has enacted laws against trusts. He takes care, however, not to tell that he himself has used his influence and prevented the enforcement of these laws.—Canton (O.) News-Democrat.

——The Ohio state republican campaign committee is sending begging letters all over the United States, asking for contributions to save the president's own state from being lost this fall. This shows what confidence the republicans have in the popularity of the president's party.—Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

——The nature of President McKinley is to have no principles and to urge no measures that are antagonistic to anybody. And this is his policy, too. Such is the way in which he has trented the money question and such is the manner in which he has endeavored to deal with the Filipino insurgents. The basic principle of such policy is to be amiable and not offend anybody. Even in war don't shoot to kill.—Portland Oregonian.

YAQUI INDIAN WAR.

The Redskins Have a Force of 2,500 Near Saburipa—Mexican Troops Near Toria Number 6,000.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 14.—Information reaching here Friday night from Ortiz, state of Sonora, Mex., contains the following information with reference to the Yaqui Indian war:

Military scouting parties reaching the military mobilization point at Torin, this state, Friday, report that large forces of Yaqui Indians are being mobilized at the base of the mountains to the north of that place, near Saburipa. It is estimated that there are fully 2,500 Indians there at present and additional arrivals are coming in all the time.

At the present the Mexican forces, numbering some 6,000 troops in all, are mobilized in or near Torin, and it is understood the object of their concentration at that point is to move into the Yaqui country at an early date, probably about the middle of next week, and open up active and vigorous warfare on the Indians with a view of driving them out and ending the war at once.

This mobilization of Mexican troops has been conducted as quietly as possible, with a view of sweeping down on the Indians while they are scattered through the Yaqui country in small bands, taking them by surprise and sweeping them off the face of the earth, the orders having been given to take no prisoners.

The scouting parties in Friday's movements however, state that the Indians have evidently been informed of the mobilization of troops as they are mobilizing their forces also and are preparing to offer a formidable resistance to the advancement of the troops. At present about 2,500 men are at their disposal at Saburipa, which is considered the key to the Yaqui country, the Indians may be able to hold their own against the troops with even half way fortifications.

This reported mobilization of the Indians was received with some surprise by the Mexican forces and may possibly force them to change their plan of action, but from reliable sources it is learned that every effort will be made to push the fight next week in the hope of bringing it to a speedy termination.

FIVE MASKED MEN.

They Hold Up a Passenger Train Near Dekalb, Ill.—The Engineer Was Shot and Badly Wounded.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—The Northwestern limited train leaving Chicago at 10:30 p. m., Friday night, was held up not far from Dekalb, Ill., and robbed. The train is due at 12:20, and the hold up occurred at Tower W, three miles from Maple Park, Ill. It is not known whether the robbers secured any great amount of booty. A special train containing a number of armed men and detectives left the Northwestern station in Chicago Friday night bound for the scene of the robbery. It is said there were five masked men engaged in the operation.

The robbers blew up the the express car with dynamite, practically demolishing it and blocking the track. They then blew open the safe and rifled it, after which they escaped in the darkness.

Engineer Daniel White, of the train, was shot and it is reported very seriously wounded in the breast because he refused to run his engine away from the train. After shooting him one of the robbers ran the engine down the track two miles to a switch, where it was "killed." It is also reported that the station agent was badly pounded.

ROBBER SHOT DEAD.

The President of a Bank, While Covered by Three Revolvers, Uses a Rifle With Deadly Effect.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 14.—Just as the bank at Sevierville opened Friday morning Pearl Thurman, a farmer of Sevierville county, and Will and Carl Derrick, liverymen of Knoxville, made an unsuccessful attempt at robbery. President McMahon, who had just opened the vault, was covered by three pistols, but seized a rifle and shot Thurman dead. Several shots followed. Carl Derrick was wounded and captured. Will Derrick mounted his horse, but, after going a mile, the animal was wounded by the pursuers. Derrick dismounted, entered a barn, set it on fire and shot himself dead.

Mrs. R. T. Lincoln, Administratrix.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Ia., Oct. 14.—Mrs. Robert T. Lincoln, of Chicago, wife of the former minister to the court of St. James, has been appointed administratrix of the estate of her father, the late Senator James Harlan. The estate of the aged statesman was surprisingly small, amounting to less than $50,000. All of it will fall to Mrs. Lincoln, his only heir.

Wife Murder and Suicide.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 14.—Harry Adair, a mail carrier, Friday night placed a shotgun against his wife's chest and shot her to death, and then placing the gun against his forehead, blew the top of his own head off. Jealously is given as the cause for the crime.

The Fight Declared a Draw.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—The fight Friday night between Joe Kennedy, of California, and Frank Childs, of Chicago, was declared a draw at the end of the sixth round.

We blew into Rising Sun, last Tuesday at 6:30 a. m., and found a majority of the inhabitants slumbering. After taking breakfast at the Scranton Hotel we started out on an inspection of the city and had not gone far up Main St., till we ran afoul of a fellow astride a drygoods box. He was very communicative and soon asked us what we took him to be. "A hobo," we replied; but to our dismay we found out that he was one of the leading citizens of the town. We next invaded the sanctum of Editor Waldo of the Rising Sun Recorder. Mr. Waldo has been in the newspaper business since 1846 and has three sons in the same business. One is the editor of a paper at Ghent, Ky. Bro. Waldo is a stalwart Republican and a clever gentleman. The editor of the Local must be coining money as he dresses like a Ward McAllister. Joe Love, an ex-Kentuckian, was engaged in enlarging a liquid emporium, having had contract for the carpenter's work. Rising Sun is the prettiest place on the Ohio river for a town, and has more pretty girls than any place of its size in Indiana or Kentucky. After attending to what business we had we went back to the Scranton House to await the return of the Workum up the river. She never sounded her whistle for the port of Rising Sun till 11 o'clock that night. The office of the hotel was crowded with traveling men from all over the North and East. One gentleman from Sandusky, Ohio, traveling for a Boston shoe house, had been in every town of any importance in Kentucky, and he said that Goebel would be elected Governor by at least 25,000 majority; that Goebel's election this fall was a forerunner of Democratic success in 1900; he also said that Ohio was a Republican State and the Democrats should not expect to carry it this fall, as the administration could not afford to lose it, and would spend all the money in the U. S. Treasury before it would lose the State that produced the misfit President.

Hebron.

Water is very scarce.

Chas. Clore is painting the Utzinger store.

A very interesting series of meetings is in progress at the Lutheran church.

G. S. Haun spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents at Harrison, Ohio.

Mrs. Emma Clore is visiting her sister-in-law, Mrs. S. Renaker, of Cynthiana.

A large crowd from here attended the speaking at Bullittsville Saturday night.

J. W. Clore and family were guests of J. E. Smith and family, of Burlington, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mannin were guests of Mr and Mrs. Will Graves, of Francesville, Thursday.

The many friends of Mrs. Laura Shannon, of Cincinnati, will be sorry to hear of her death, at Christ's Hospital, last Mouday.

Utzinger.

The crack of the hunter's gun is heard in all directions.

Utzinger will shortly have a stock scales, due to several of her enterprising citizens.

Cropper & Gaines are treating their store to a coat of paint, which will add very much to its looks.

W. D. Cropper and F. P. Walton attended the Primrose and Dockstatter minstrels in Cincinnati, Saturday night.

Harry Walton has bought a new horse, buggy, saddle and bridle, and is thoroughly equipped for the coming winter festivities.

Mr. J. B. Winston fell from his buggy, recently, and it ran over him, laying him up for several days. He is able to be out again.

A number of our farmers are buying corn from across the river at 25 cents per bushel, delivered in the boat. It is a question if this is not better than raising it?

We are promised a present for a bouquet thrown at one of our neighbor boys through these columns recently. If it materializes we will go into the business pretty extensively.

Mrs. Fletcher Clore entertained Mrs. C. W. Riley, Mrs. A. W. Corn and daughter, Mrs. Matilda Goodridge, Mrs. C. S. Baisly, Mrs. T. G. Willis and Mrs. F. P. Walton, Tuesday of last week.

Jas. T. Gaines has greatly improved the appearance of his house by treating it to a coat of paint. Chas. Clore, the only painter of Hebron, did the work, assisted by the prince of nice boys, Edward Aylor.

Public Speaking!

Burlington—J. C. Clore, of Cincinnati, Mouday November 6.

Benj. Stephens, J. M. Lassing and J. G. Furnish at Richwood Schoolhouse, October 20th, at 7 o'clock p. m.

Benj. Stephens, J. G. Furnish and J. M. Lassing at Beaver Lick Schoolhouse, Saturday, Oct. 21, at night.

A Democratic club was organized here last Saturday night, with about 60 members on the roll, J. C. Revill was elected president, and A. B. Rouse and W. T. German, first and second vice-presidents, respectively. J. S. Clutterbuck was chosen secretary. The club will meet again next Thursday night, at which time it will be addressed by one or more good speakers.

J. F. Scott, 70, of Kenton county, died last Wednesday, after being an invalid for several years. He was the last survivor of the family of the late Rev. Chas Scott, well known to the aged members of the Baptist church of this county. The deceased was an ardent member of the Baptist church and took great interest in church work. Although his death was known to be only a matter of a short time, yet the summons came at an unexpected moment. The deceased leaves a wife, one daughter and four sons, and a large circle of friends to mourn his death. He was the father of Mr. Charles Scott, of the Pt. Pleasant neighborhood, this county. Rev. Logan Vickers conducted the funeral services at the residence Friday afternoon, after which the remains were deposited in their last earthly resting place in Highland cemetery.

The Electric Railroad.

[Special by 'Phone.]

The electric road meeting held at Union, Monday, was an enthusiastic affair, being attended by about 75 persons who are in earnest in this matter. A Mr. Conner, of Covington, was elected chairman, and made a speech in which he gave the details of the project, and among other things, said the cost of the road would be about $5,000 a mile, including rolling stock. Speeches were made by L. H. Voshell, J. W. Kennedy, B. L. Rice, H. F. Blase and J. L. Frazier. A paper was drawn up to secure the names of 27 persons to become the original incorporators. Another meeting will be held next Saturday at Big Bone to be followed by another at Union on Monday. Everybody is for the road.

Notes—Jas. A. Huey's speech was short and sweet: "Tan with you boys." —M. E. Hance made no speech, saying, "I am so full of politics I am afraid I might get the two subjects mixed."—Z. T. Baker said, "I'll stay with you until the last day in the evening."

J. A Huey, J. W Conner, J. L Frazier and Z T Baker were appointed a committee to work in the interest of the road, and to report to next meeting.

An American nation—a civilized nation, and a nation that claims equal rights to all, but h—l itself couldn't hold another so black a crime as the new constitution and the secret ballot business, which was perpetrated, as it seems by certain deflled tongued orators, whose intention could only have been to build a wall between the people and the political field, to trample upon the political rights and to rob them of their liberty and freedom—whose intention was, as it seems, to blind the people with the secret ballot box in order to rob them as they choose, slowly but surely.

Those who are setting traps through the political field to catch the people deserve to be caught in the traps of h—l until God sees fit to redeem them.

It is better to sit in an humble cot with a poor, honest man in poverty than to sit with a great man in a mansion grand, who gains his wealth by fraud and deceit and robs his fellow man from head to foot. He who gains his riches honestly gains his honor.

J. W. Easterday bought of Jules Dean the Ballard crop of tobacco of about 5,000 lbs. at 7 and 4c.

Josh Smith sold his 1899 crop of tobacco to J. W. Easterday at 5 cts. per hundred from the ground up.

There was a shower of grasshoppers on the street here on Wednesday night of last week. They fell as thick as hail and the next morning there were millions of them on the streets.

Doc May, charged with taking a horse from the stable of John Davis, on the Dean place, near here, was arrested Saturday at Eagle Station by Detective A. S. Shephard, who found the horse that day in Madison. May is in jail.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[Herald.]

Judge W. S. Pryor said to one of our townsmen last week that no man in Kentucky had a more spotless record morally or politically than William Goebel.

Elvira, the bright little two-year-old child of George Roland and wife was fatally burned last Friday afternoon, death resulting on Saturday afternoon. Her mother had a fire in the yard, where she was washing, and the little one was putting some cobs on the fire, when her clothing was ignited. There was no person right there at the time, but her screams brought both father and mother, whose hands were badly burned in their efforts to save the little one. She was tearfully burned, however, and death resulted as stated. The remains were laid tenderly to rest in the cemetery on Sunday afternoon.

Last Tuesday was a great day for the Democracy of Owen county. It had been advertised only one week that the Democratic nominee for Governor would be here that day, but the time was sufficient for the news to reach the remotest corners of the county, as was testified by the presence of representatives from every section. The crowd was conservatively estimated at 5,000, and this vast throng was brought together for the sole purpose of hearing Goebel, there being no other advertised attraction of any sort whatever. The day was an ideal one and could not have been improved upon had it been in the power of the people to make it.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1899. NO. 1.

WITH this issue the RECORDER begins its twenty-fifth year.

THE Philippine question will be thoroughly discussed next year.

THERE are very few Democrats in this county who will be induced to vote for Mr. Taylor.

MR. BRYAN has no doubt of Goebel's sincerity when he declared for him for the Presidency.

FROM the reading of Gov. Bradley's Louisville speech it is very evident that he thinks some "getting together" in the Republican party is very necessary to success in this State.

THE only election ever held in this county in which it is claimed there was any fraud committed was when Thobe made a nose finish with Carlisle for Congress, and that election was held under the old law.

IT is strange but true that before the Republicans were given a voice in the selection of the officers in this county a Boone county Republican was never heard to complain of the election law. This is strange.

THE tax value of railroads has fallen off $12,000,000 since the Republicans came into power in Kentucky. No wonder the railroads want that party to succeed at the polls in November. Farmers, has the tax value of your land been reduced any during the same period?

WHEN a Democrat goes into the booth on election day, he will find on his ballot but one emblem of Democracy, and that is the emblem that is recognized by Democrats throughout this country, and it will be hard for a Democrat to find a location for his X, except under the rooster.

BY withholding your vote from the Democratic ticket on the 7th of November you jeopardize the election of J. C. S. Blackburn to the United States Senate, and contribute to the effort to defeat W. J. Bryan for the Presidency. Bryan is the only Democrat that has a ghost of a show for a nomination and election.

GOV. BRADLEY says Gov. Brown's was the best Democratic administration that Kentucky ever had, and Brown has never, in any of his speeches, shown any disposition to criticise Bradley's administration. There is no trouble to see the trend of things in this campaign. It is plainly a case of two pluck one.

IT is contended by some that the decision of the State Board of Election Commissioners is final in the count of the vote cast for Governor. This contention is false, as is well known by many of those who are making it. In the case of a contest growing out of the election of a Governor, the Legislature decides it.

IN a speech at Cleveland, Ohio, a few days ago Senator Hanna said of trusts, "they have been found to be necessary." There are a great many persons who do not agree with the Senator on that proposition. But in Kentucky there are some, who, while they argue against trusts, are lending aid to the party that fosters them.

THE only formidable opposition to Goebel comes from a corporation, and it is trust and corporation rule that the Democrats have been bitterly opposing for several years, and yet many of those who have been protesting against trusts, &c., are joining hands with them to defeat a Democratic candidate for Governor. Consistency in politics as well as elsewhere is a jewel.

ARE not Republicans becoming very familiar, politically, with the Brown people when they venture to tap one of them on the shoulder and indicate to him a Democrat whom it might be possible for him to keep from voting "by seeing him?" No person can criticise the Republicans for taking advantage of all conditions, but it does look strange to see them so suddenly become the political advisors of those who but recently were there most intense political enemies. Politics makes strange bedfellows.

SOUTH AFRICA CONDENSED.

President Kruger's wealth is estimated at $5,000,000.

English Radical newspapers continue to denounce the war.

Bakers are being enlisted to go to South Africa to bake bread for the soldiers.

Johannesburg street-cars are not running, as the horses have been seized by the Boers.

Equal rights to negroes are denied by the constitution of the South African republic.

Lord Rothschild is raising a fund for the chartering of a Red Cross vessel during the war.

London newspapers say that President Kruger is not as virtuous and upright as he is painted.

English papers say that many of the Orange Free State Boers oppose the giving of aid to Kruger.

Every Canadian newspaper on The Chicago Tribune's exchange list is enthusiastic in favor of the war.

Returned travelers from South Africa tell London reporters that the Boer's can't shoot as well as they did.

The London Mail's circulation is now over 650,000, having increased because of its attitude toward the war.

"Mr. Schreiner, of course, dominates the government; who dominates Mr. Schreiner is another question," says the Cape Times.

"The fair and square issue is this: That no war, no diplomacy, is worth the trouble it costs, unless its result is that the Union Jack waves uninterruptedly from Agulhas to the Zambest," says the South African Review.

Paris newspapers complain, because, while there is an Irish and a German volunteer corps in the Boer forces, not a single Frenchman has up to the present demanded the favor of being allowed to perforate an Englishman on the coming battlefields.

A Major in the Berkshire Regiment, who has been attached to the Forty-first Depot at Cardiff, received orders to proceed immediately to South Africa, but before leaving the country determined to become united to a young lady of nineteen, the daughter of a London physician. The nuptial knot was tied at Cardiff Registry office.

"The Boer boys are sent out from home with a rifle at the age American boys are sent out with tops. The little Dutches must either bring back their dinner or go hungry. As a result the Boers are a nation of sharp-shooters. Men, women and children all are excellent shots, and England's troops are up against a tough proposition," says Thomas Plimmer, of Philadelphia, who has recently returned from the Transvaal.

In area the South African republic is anything but little, for it covers about 120,000 square miles and is larger than New York and New England combined, larger than the entire British isles and considerably more than half as large as either France or Germany. Its neighbor, the Orange Free State, is considerably smaller than the Transvaal, but the two republics combined comprise a territory about equal to that of Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan.

[New York World.]

The President's commission to the Philippines secured peace and harmony with the Mahometan Sultan of Sulu and permission to fly our flag on his coast on these terms:

1. Recognition of his Sultanship.

2. Retention of slavery and polygamy, the twin relics of barbarism, as "recognized institutions" in the Sulus.

3. An allowance by the United States of $250 a month to the Sultan and $510 a month to nine of his chiefs for the maintenance of their satrapy, their harems and their slave drivers.

This may be thought by "disloyal" and "carping" critics a high price for peace. But what did we offer Aguinaldo and his civilized Catholic followers as our best terms of peace.

1. Unconditional surrender and unqualified recognition of the "sovereignty of the United States."

2. Military government.

3. "Benevolent assimilation"—a fine name for the Ohioizing of the Filipinos.

Why this vast difference in the two prices offered for peace in the Philippines? And why should a barbaric satrapy, cursed with slavery and polygamy, get so much better terms than our former allies at Manila, who Admiral Dewey says are better capable of governing themselves than are the Cubans?

Pith of the Press.

Bill Shafter and Bill Sampson might shoot it out.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Oom Paul, like Otis, remains in the background, and lets his Generals do the fighting.—Philadelphia Ledger.

General Otis being too busy to go to the Filipinos, the Filipinos are evincing a determination to go to General Otis.—Detroit Free Press.

The war of England against the Boer nation is McKinley's imperial and expansion policy carried to its logical conclusion.—Hamilton (Ohio) Democrat.

Judge Day says we purchased the public improvements in the Philippines from Spain for that $20,000,000. The rebellion was evidently thrown in.—Chicago Record.

So Weyler has been appointed President of the Spanish Consultive Council of War. As a politician this butcher is a daisy, and always gets there.—N. Y. Evening Sun.

At least it must be said of the anti-expansionists in session in Chicago that they are not burdening Providence with the responsibility for their action.—Detroit Free Press.

That Hanna is not throwing up his hat enthusiastically in Ohio appears to be due to his having sent it around on a collecting tour among the Postmasters.—Philadelphia Times.

Mark Hanna thinks there is necessity for another Cabinet officer. Another millionaire Cabinet officer would be a great assistance to Marcus in educating the voter.—Milwaukee News.

Mr. Secretary Long early in the game discovered that it was not wise to use the public stump as a fulcrum in his work of boosting Sampson at the expense of Schley.—Omaha World Herald.

Joseph Chamberlain seems to think that the war was the one thing necessary to bring about a mutual understanding and warm admiration between Boer and Briton.—Chicago Record.

It is just as well for Mark Hanna to proceed with his defense of trusts. Nobody ever believed in his Ohio platform. The defeat of Attorney-General Monnett disposed of that.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Carl Schurz supported Mr. McKinley's candidacy, but the Republican party is having about as much fun with him now as the woman who took a refractory husband to raise.—Chicago Journal.

It is already announced that the Hanna slush fund in Ohio amounts to $1,000,000 and the fat frying has only begun. It evidently costs money to uphold the reputation of this administration.—Denver News.

Probably never before in the history of the United States has a President so openly conducted a stumping tour, to affect the result of a state election, as was done by President McKinley.—Albany Argus.

Up to date Judge Nash has proved himself to be a dismal failure as an effective campaign stumper. He has no magnetic influence as a speaker, and his argument is decidedly thin and flimsy.—London (Ohio) Democrat.

While McKinley is sending more cruisers to force our civilization upon a people that don't want it and that haven't even a gun-boat to resist us, let us hope he will at least leave a plank with a Yankee on it to guard our base of supplies—the United States.—N. Y. World.

POLITICAL.

Funny things are happening in politics in this good year of 1899. For instance, the "True Democracy" are doing all in their power to continue Republican rule in Kentucky.—Georgetown Times.

The man who claims to be so very much afraid we will not have fair elections can not afford to vote for Mr. Taylor. Remember it was he who declared just after his inauguration as Attorney General that "we have been thirty years getting in here, and now that we have the returning board the Democrats will never remember getting in power again."—Louisville News.

The vote for President in Kentucky in 1896 was: McKinley 218,171; Bryan 217,890; Palmer 5,019; Levering 4,781; grand total 445,861. For the governorship in 1896: Bradley 172,436; Hardin 163,524; Pettit 16,911; Demare 4,186; grand total 357,057. The above figures may prove of interest to those who enjoy figuring on possibilities. The registration this year will doubtless exceed 460,000.—Blue Grass Clipper.

Mr. Taylor, Republican nominee for Governor, still refuses to examine and compare the Indiana copy of Montgomery's history, price 65 cents, with the copy sold in Kentucky at $1, and tell where there is any differencs in them, text, paper or binding. Still he defends the book trust and belittles the Indiana law and the Chin bill. How much do you suppose the book trust is contributing to the Republican campaign fund?—New Era.

Bryan, Blackburn, Pryor, Ellis, Paynter, Hazelrigg, ex-Chief Justice Lewis, White, Hobson — every Democratic Congressman and every Democratic leader in the State and Nation are all urging the election of Goebel. Against him are the L. & N. railroad, Book Trust, Tobacco Trust, John Whallen, Dick Knott, Basil W. Duke, Jim Williams and Chas. J. Bronston. Which company do you prefer to keep, and which set of men are most likely to advocate the election of a man who is fitted to be Governor?—Shelby Sentinel.

This is a mighty good time for an estray politician to hustle in out of the cold. The fellow who don't stamp under the rooster is a-goin' to be mighty lonesome when primaries and conventions are held next year—in fact, he won't be in 'em at all. I know just how a fellow feels under "them ere circumstances." The golden Democrats, "of whom I was one of which," represented a principle, but the Brownics don't represent anything—but Taylor. All the same, we golden-trimmed fellows stood, unprotestingly, afar off when conventions were held. We knew the party law, and were aware that we had expatriated ourselves—that we would not be admitted within the sanctum sanctorum. Personally, I didn't even get a smell of the soups and trimmins set up by aspirants for county offices. You bet I was lonesome, hungry and thirsty, a-standin' out in the weather, while the drums were a beaten', the horns a-blowin', the boys a-hollerin' an' the durned old rooster a-crowin'. Great Geewhillikins! how glad I am to be back in the wigwam where there is a show for a fellow when "they're a-settin' 'em up." Say, Brownies, if you don't want to be where I have been—in the valley of humiliation and desolation—you would better make tracks for the "city of refuge"—and make 'em p. d. q. Stamp under the rooster for luck and let it go at that. —Geo. H. Mosgrove in Carrollton Democrat.

RAILROAD DOMINATION.

The activity of the Louisville and Nashville railroad in the fight against the Democratic ticket shows that that corporation is willing to do its allotted part in the fight that the great railroads of the country have been engaged in for years to control the government and the legislatures of the various states. The different states have been apportioned between the leading railroads. The Michigan Central takes a hand in politics in Michigan; Minnesota is allotted to the Great Northern; the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul takes care of Wisconsin: the Rock Island looks after Iowa; the Union Pacific cares for Nebraska; the Illinois Central has the expensive job of taking care of the Illinois legislature; the Missouri Pacific holds Missouri down; the Pennsylvania Railroad company keeps two eyes on Pennsylvania, and the state of Kentucky is committed to the tender mercies of the Louisville and Nashville. The good people of the state are making a courageous struggle to elect a set of state officers and a general assembly that will belong to the people and not the L. & N. or any other corporation. We believe the people will succeed.

A story is told that the speaker of the Pennsylvania legislature a few years ago when the lower house was about to adjourn, said: "Is there anything more that the Pennsylvania railroad wants?" There being no answer the speaker said: "The legislature stands adjourned." Shall that be said of Kentucky?

In 1888 the L. & N. by corrupt practices undertook to have the legislature repeal the law which provided for a railroad commission in this state. The commission made the assessment of the railroad property for taxation. The railroad interests deemed it important to get rid of the commission and had secured enough votes to pass the bill through the house. When the bill reached the senate, and before it was voted upon, Hon. C. M. Clay of Bourbon, then senator from this district, offered a resolution reciting that it was rumored that the L. & N. in order to secure the passage of that bill, had paid a lobby in Frankfort and was resorting to vicious and corrupt practices and asking that a committee be appointed to investigate the matter. William Goebel, the youngest member of the senate, was appointed on that committee and wrote its report. Lack of space only prevents us publishing the report. It closed with this language: "In conclusion your committee do report that the lobby has made a thoroughly organized and extraordinarily powerful effort to dominate the railroad legislature, and dictate the railroad legislation enacted by it; that undue and illegal means were used to procure the enactment of such legislation; that the statute against the lobbying has been flagrantly violated by members of the lobby. And, therefore, the committee do recommend the Franklin circuit court, at the next term of said court, charge the grand jury to inquire into said lobby in order that these violations of the law may be punished."

The bill to abolish the railroad commission was not pressed to a vote after that report was made, but ever since that day the L. & N. has been camping on the trail of William Goebel; and don't every man know that if, through its assistance Senator Goebel is defeated for governor, the L. & N. will own the body and soul of the man who is elected; and the next legislature will dare not adjourn until the question has been asked: "Is there anything more that the L. & N. wants?"

Ed Ellis, aged sixty-seven years, and Ellen Green, aged sixty-five years, a colored couple, who first joined hearts and hands in ante-bellum days, appeared before Justice Graves Wednesday and had the marriage vows read to them again. The old couple were married so many years ago that both have forgotten the date, but fearing that the marriage contract of those days was not binding desired to have the "new-fangled" ceremony, as they term it, performed. Justice Graves accommodated them, and they went on their way rejoicing, feeling that they had been bound more securely.

CROP AND STOCK.

Jonas Weil has purchased of Sidney G. Clay, of Bourbon, his fat cattle, 80 head, averaging 1,500 pounds to be delivered Nov. 1st, at 5 cents a pound.

Hudson Bros., the Louisville wholesale stock dealers, have concluded a contract with the British government by which the firm is to furnish 3,000 mules at $80.

Several car loads of corn from Kansas have been received at Richmond recently. It costs about $2 per barrel delivered, which is cheaper than native old corn at Richmond.

Wm. Bedford, of Bourbon county, delivered last week to Louis Joseph 72 cattle sold in August. They averaged about 1,600 pounds and brought $5 50 per hundred. They will be shipped to Europe for Christmas.

A man sends the following information, based on personal experience, to the farmers of South Carolina: "If you put among a flock of sheep from three to four male goats, the dogs will rarely attack them. Sheep always run to the goats for protection."

W. O. Brock sold his 1898 crop of tobacco, 86,763 pounds, off of about 75 acres, for $9,712,66 at home, or a little more than $11 17 per hundred. The land on which it was raised cost Mr. Brock $55 per acre, and his half the crop will thus pay for the land in one season without cost to him.—Winchester Democrat.

Over 70,000,000 tons of poultry and nearly 36,000,000 dozen of eggs produced in Missouri, were handled by transportation companies last year, the aggregate cash returns for which were $8,298,232. The gross value of the shipments exceeded the value of the combined shipment of wheat, corn, oats and hay, and the combined value of the shipment of lumber, logs, cross ties, piling, cooperage and cordwood.

In 1888, when C. M. Clay was senator from his district, he offered a resolution providing for a committee to investigate the L. N. lobby that was trying to abolish the railroad commission, which fixes the assessment of railroad property. Senator Goebel was appointed on that committee and wrote the report of that committee. It was a "hot number." In 1891 Mr. Clay was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. W. C. Owens of Scott county, in placing Mr. Clay's name before the state convention said: "The L. & N. is knocking at the door of this convention for admission and demanding the head of Cassius M. Clay on a charger." It got it and didn't bolt. In 1899 William Goebel was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. The L. & N. railroad knocked at the door of the convention, was admitted, demanded the head of William Goebel, didn't get it, and now it is bolting.—Ex.

THE L. and N. organs are now raising the cry that Goebel is going to steal the election. This is construed as a sure sign that they realize that Goebel is going to win at the polls, and they are expected to declare he stole his election.

THAT move to secure the presence of United States Marshals at the polls on the seventh of next month, began to create so much indignation that it has not been pressed for several days.

Several days ago Dr. Alvey, of Waverly, drove to Morganfield in a buggy. Upon his arrival here he discovered that one of his hens had ridden all the way with him in the back end of the buggy. The doctor had to go further down the road, so he "shooed" the hen out of the vehicle and left her here. Dr. Alvey was gone all that day and night and a part of the next. The hen, in the meantime, found her way to Jailer Snodgrass' chicken coop, where she spent the night. When Dr. Alvey returned to Morganfield the next day he put his horse in Payne & Neal's livery stable, and of course the buggy belonging to the medicine man was only one of a large number about the stable. But strange to say, that old hen seemed to know when the doctor returned and with a remarkable display of animal instinct picked out his buggy, got back into her place and waited for the doctor to start under.—Morganfield Sun.

IT is said to be the unwritten rule of Boer warfare to kill the enemy's officers. For this purpose the Boer commander generally selects six of his best marksmen and instructs them to shoot simultaneously at tbe particular officer in view, and tbey would rather kill a general than a sergeant any day. Their idea is to leave the foe leaderless.

IT is now possible to telegraph from San Francisco to the Klondike; a Canadian government line has been strung from Bennett to Dawson City. As the line connects with Skaguay at Bennett, electrical communication has also been established between the Alaska ports and the Klondike, whicb will be a decided convenience to territorial trade.

STATISTICS just completed by the income tax commissioners of Great Britain show that out of a total adult male population of 12,500,000 more than 10,000,000 earn less tban $800 a year. The income tax is collected at the rate of 16 cents on each $5 above $800, and the total tax, whicb last year amounted to nearly $100,000,000, was contributed by not more than 2,000,000 people.

It will take three years to build the stable, and it will be finer than that of any other reigning monarch.

THE French war office is rejoicing over a new civilizing influence wbicn may outdo even the English dumdum bullet. It is a rifle invented by a Capt. REST from celebrations means no rest from mail for Adm. Dewey. His letters are brought from the post office in a separate bag, marked "Dewey specials." They are so numerous that Secretary Caldwell has given up counting them. A stenographer now assists him and Flag Lieut. Baumby in their work. Requests for his autograph, which come by the thousand, are about as numerous as invitations. A surprisingly large proportion are from children, who have learned of his love of little ones and take him into their confidence with childish simplicity.

THE resemblances between Adm. Dewey and Gen. Grant are strikingly close. The merit record of the one in the naval academy is almost identical with that of the other in the military Academy. They were at about the same place above the bottom of the class, they were deficient in the same studies, and their conduct marks were much alike. The one reached the high- position in the army and the other the navy. In modesty and dignity of personal bearing they are singularly alike. They resemble each other also in their ability to award full credit to others in every achievement

British Troops Defeat the Boers in a Hard Fought Battle Near the City of Glencoe.

ENGLISH GENERAL BADLY WOUNDED.

After a Hard Fight Gen. French Routes the Boer Forces at Alandslaagte With Heavy Loss.

The Battle Raged for Three Hours—The Boer Commander, Gen. Kock, Was Killed—Transvaal Troops Reported Shelling Dundee.

GLENCOE CAMP, Oct. 23.—After eight hours of continuous heavy fighting Talana hill was carried by the Dnblin Fusileers and the King's Rifles under cover of a well served artillery fire by the 13th and 69th batteries. The Boers who threatened the British rear bave retired.

The fight was almost an exact counterpart of that at Majuba Hill, except that the positions of the Boer and British forces were reversed. Gen. Symons was severely, but not dangerously wounded. He was shot through the thigh, but no bones were broken. He is cheerful.

Although the enemy's position was carried soon after 1 o'clock, scattered firing went on almost all afternoon.

The final rush was made with a triumphant yell, and as the British troops charged to close quarters the enemy turned and fled, leaving all their impediments and guns behind them in their precipitate flight.

While this was going on one battery of artillery, the 18th hussars and the mounted infantry with a part of the Leicester regiment, got on the enemy's flank and as the Boers streamed wildly down the hills making for the main road they found their retreat had been cut off bnt they rallied for a while and there was severe firing with considerable loss to each side. Many of the enemy surrendered. A rough estimate places the British loss 250 killed or wounded and that of the Boers at 800.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The war office Sunday afternoon published the following:

"White, commander in Natal, to the secretary of state for war, filed at Ladysmith, October 22, 10:30 a. m. In the action at Elandslaagte yesterday the troops engaged were the following: Cavalry, 5th Lancers, a squadron of the 5th Dragoon Guards, the Imperial Light Horse and two squadrons of Natal carbineers; artillery, 21st field battery, 42d field battery and the Natal field battery; infantry, the Devonshire regiment, half a battalion of the Gordon Highlanders and the Manchester regiment. The whole force was under Gen. French, with Col. Ian Hamilton commanding the infantry.

"I was present in person from 3:30 p. m. to 6:30 p. m., but did not assume direction of the fight, which was left in the hands of Gen. French, Although desultory fighting took place earlier in the day, while reinforcements, sent out later on ascertaining the enemy's strength, were arriving from Ladysmith, the real action did not begin until 3:30 p. m. At that hour the Boers held a position of very exceptional strength, consisting of a rock hill about a mile and a half southeast of Elandslaagte Station.

"At 3:30 p. m. our guns took a position on a ridge 4,100 yards from the Boers, where guns at once opened fire. This fire was generally well directed, but somewhat high. This time, contrary to previous experiences, their shell burst well.

"The Boer guns, although often temporarily silenced, invariably opened fire again on the slightest opportunity, and were served with great courage. After severe fighting our infantry carried the position. At 6:30 p. m. this was accomplished, the enemy standing his ground to the last with courage and tenacity. The Fifth Lancers and a squadron of the Fifth Dragoon Guards charged three times through the retreating Boers in the dark, doing considerable execution.

"We captured the Boer camp, with tents, wagons, horses, and also two guns. The Boer losses were very considerable, including a number of wounded and unwounded prisoners. Among the former are Gen. Jan Kock and Piet Joubert, nephew of Commandant Gen. Joubert.

"One goods train with supplies for Glencoe camp and nine English prisoners were recovered. Our loss, I regret to say, was heavy. It is roughly computed at 150 killed and wounded.

A dispatch has just arrived announcing that the Boers are shelling Dundee, east of Glencoe, at long range, but their fire is ineffective.

A MYSTERY SOLVED.

A Negro Confesses to the Burning of Mrs. Gambrell and Four Children and is Burned at the Stake.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 20.—A special to the Scimitar from Canton, Miss., says:

The little town of St. Anne, 20 miles east of Canton in Leake county, was Friday night the scene of a terrible tragedy, the sequel to the burning of the Gambrell family the night before. Joe Leflore, a Negro, who was captured by a posse, confessed that he, in company with the otber Negroes, tied Mrs. Gambrell and her four children to the floor of the house, saturated the surroundings with kerosene and burned the unfortunate people alive. The negro, after the confession of his awful crime, was promptly roped to a stake and burned to a crisp, while the citizens looked on in grim silence. Another negro, Bob Anderson, was saved just in the nick of time, as some doubt existed as to his guilt.

The Gambrell tragedy occurred early Thursday morning, and it was first thought that the fire was the result of accident. A casual investigation revealed circumstances so suspicious that a more searching investigation was made, and it was soon established beyond doubt that the family had been murdered and the house fired with the torch of an incendiary. Posses were immediately formed to scour the country and follow every possible clew. Before the posses left St. Anne, it was discovered that Joe Laflore, a negro, who lived in the neighborhood, and who had heretofore borne a good reputation, had disappeared. Early last evening Laflore was captured several miles from the scene of the murder. At first, the negro vigorously denied any knowledge of the crime, but he finally broke down completely, and confessed that he and Bob and Anderson Smith, two other negroes, had done the dastardly work. He expected no mercy and told with a brutal frankness all the details of the crime. His captors were stupefied at the revelation.

In the yard where the Gambrell residence had stood Leflore was tied to a stake and burned alive. No one sent a merciful bullet into his body to kill bim.

Anderson Smith escaped from the mob while Leflore was being burned, and has not yet been captured. Bob Smith was tied to another stake and a fire started, though he was finally released as there was a possibility of his proving his innocence.

Anderson Smith will be recaptured, and, if it is proven that he and his brother Bob are guilty, it is thought that no power can save them from a similar fate to that meted out to Leflore.

Friday night John Oliver Gray, a negro, was captured after being chased for miles in the swamps. He finally confessed that he was one of the party that did such murderous work, and the posse made short work of him. He was banged and his body riddled with bullets.

ATTACKED A LAUNCH.

An American Officer Killed and Two Men Wounded—Gen. Otis' Reply to the Filipino Commissioners.

MANILA, Oct. 23.—An American officer was killed and two men were wounded by the Filipinos in an attack on a launch with Gen. Lawton's expedition in the Rio Chiquita near San Isidro. The rebels fired volleys from the shore.

Gen. Otis has replied to the three insurgent officers who entered Angeles last Friday with a request, made through Gen. McArthur, for permission for a Filipino commission, headed by a Filipino major general to visit Gen. Otis in order to discuss peace terms and to arrange for the delivery of more American prisoners; that the desired interview can not be granted, because the suggested propositions of the Filipinos are vague, indefinite and unmilitary, and because the Americans must continue to decline to receive any representative of the so called Filipino government.

ADM. DEWEY'S NEW HOME

The Subscription Was Sufficient to Purchase a House in the Most Desirable Part of the City.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The Dewey house committee, which has in charge the purchase of a home for the admiral from the moneys received by popular subscription, has selected house No. 1747 Rhode Island avenue, northwest, known as the Fitch house. The house is one door removed from the corner of Connecticut avenue, in what is regarded as the most desirable section of the city. It is understood that the amount of the popular subscription was sufficient to cover the cost of the house, its furniture and all incidental expenses.

NEED SURGEONS.

The Annual Report of Surg. Gen. Van Reypen, of the American Navy.

Of the 84 Casualties During the War With Spain Only 17 Have Received Pensions—The Excellent Sanitary Conditions in the Navy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The strongest recommendation in the annual report of Surg. Gen. Van Reypen, just made public, is that relating to the increase of the medical corps of the navy. He points out that while there has been a steady increase in the enlisted force of the navy for the past two years, and while the marine corps has been swelled by the addition of 3,000 men, there has been no suitable provision made for a corresponding increase in the medical corps, which is charged with the care of the health of these men.

Every surgeon who is not sick is said to be on duty and the department has been unable to supply surgeons for needed recruiting and other duties. Therefore, the surgeon general says that the corps be increased five surgeons and twenty assistant surgeons and five volunteer surgeons who served in the war and who are now in service, be transferred to the regular rolls and the age limitation be removed. There are eighteen of these men, and in some cases they are over thirty years of age.

It is also earnestly requested that the naval assistant surgeons be placed on an equality with those of the army in pay and rank. At present the army can get all of the medical service it needs, while the navy can get scarcely any surgeons to serve. There are now four vacancies in the rank of assistant surgeons, and there will be eight more during the year, and the hope is expressed that the corps will not be allowed to die out from lack of recruits which must follow unless the inducements are equal to those offered in the army, at least.

The surgeon general calls attention to the fact that of the 84 casualties during the war with Spain, only 17 have put in pension applications so far, a most noteworthy fact in view of the report that 18 of the casualties resulted for the year.

In concluding the report special attention is invited to the excellent sanitary conditions existing in the navy and especially in the Asiatic squadron during the past year. Early precautions were taken to prevent as far as possible the ill effects resulting from necessary climatic exposure and to give the best care and attention to the sick. The results have proven their efficacy and the sick reports from the vessels in the Philippines indicate a high standard of physical efficiency in the squadron.

FIRE IN SOUTH CHICAGO.

Fourteen Buildings Were Burned, Including the Grand Central Hotel—A Dozen Persons Injured.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—A business block in South Chicago was burned early Sunday, entailing a loss of $120,000 and painfully injuring 12 persons. Fourteen buildings were burned. An old landmark was destroyed in the burning of the Grand Central hotel. It was a frame building and was consumed rapidly. The guests had barely time to save themselves and fled for safety with but little apparel. The persons who were injured received burns or sprains and bruises.

The fire originated in the barn in the rear of Peter Hason's saloon and spread both east and west. The Grand Central hotel was one of the first buildings to go. Nearly all the property was insured.

Several firemen were injured, one probably fatally. Several guests of the hotel were burned.

Possibility of Fight Being Renewed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—President McKinley will send to the senate the nominations of Rr. Adm. Sampson and Rr. Admn. Schley, and other officers recommended last year for advancement as a reward for gallant conduct in action. Tais is likely to renew the old fight between the friends of Sampson and Schley, as Sampson is to be advanced six numbers and Schley four. Out west the president found great enthusiasm for the navy.

Rejoicing in Des Moines.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 23.—There was much rejoicing in this city Sunday over the safe arrival of the 51st Iowa regiment at San Francisco. The news was received about 2:30, and the curfew whistle, which can be heard for many miles, sounded the glad tidings and gave a salute of 51 toots. All the church bells in the city were rung and the newspapers got out an extra edition.

The Philippine Commissioners.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Col. Charles Denby and Prof Dean C. Worcester, special commissioners to the Philippines, en route from Vancouver to Washington, D. C., reached Chicago Sunday. Col. Denby and Mrs. Denby and their son, T. 3. Denby, who acts as his father's secretary, left at 3 p. m. for Washington. Mrs. Worcester came down from Ann Arbor and met her husband. They departed for Ann Arbor, where the professor will remain until Monday with his family, when he will depart for Washington.

Passing of the Horse.

So soon as nature sees an improvement, there is a change. The candle gave way to electricity. The spinning wheel to machinery, the horse to the automobile. The fact that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has been sold for over half a century, proves its value. There is nothing to equal it for stomach or liver trouble. It is Nature's own remedy, and the only one to cure dyspepsia or weak stomach.

IMPERIALISM A CRIME

McKinley's Philippine Policy Denounced by Carl Schurz.

Prerogatives of Congress Usurped by the President—Treatment of Filipinos a Blot Upon American Honor.

The great anti-imperialist conference in Chicago, Tuesday, October 17, was opened by leading Democrats and anti-imperialists from all over the union. In the evening, at Central Music hall, a large gathering listened to a lengthy address by Carl Schurz, of which the following is a liberal digest:

"More than eight months ago I had the honor of addressing the citizens of Chicago on the subject of American imperialism, meaning the policy of annexing to this republic distant countries and alien populations that will not fit into our democratic system of government. I then assumed at that time mainly the baneful effect the pursuit of an imperialistic policy would produce upon our political institutions. After long deliberation during which I carefully reviewed my own opinions as well as those of others in the light of the best information I could obtain, I shall now approach the same subject from another point of view. We all know that the popular mind is much disturbed by the Philippine war and that, however heartily we admire the valor of our soldiers, nobody professes to be proud of the war itself. There are few Americans who do not frankly admit their regret that this war should ever have happened. I think I risk nothing when I say that it is not merely the bungling conduct of military operations, but a serious train of consciences that disturbs the American heart about this war, and that this trouble of conscience will not be allayed by a more successful military campaign, just as 40 years ago the trouble of conscience about slavery could not be allayed by any compromise.

"Many people now, as the slavery compromisers did then, try to ease their minds by saying: 'Well, we are in it, and now we must do the best we can.' In spite of the obvious futility of that cry in some respects, I will accept it with the one proviso, that we make an honest effort to ascertain what really is the best we can do. To this end let us first clearly remember what has happened.

"In April, 1898, we went to war with Spain for the avowed purpose of liberating the people of Cuba, who had long been struggling for freedom and independence. Our object in that war was clearly and emphatically proclaimed by a solemn resolution of congress expressly disclaiming the intention of annexation on our part, and declaring that the Cuban people 'are, and of right ought to be, free and independent.' This solemn declaration was made to do justice to the spirit of the American people, who were indeed willing to wage a war of liberation, but would not have consented to a war of conquest. It was also to propitiate the opinion of mankind for our action. President McKinley also declared with equal emphasis that annexation by force could not be thought of, because, according to our code of morals, it would be 'criminal aggression.'

Purely a War of Liberation.

"Can it justly be pretended that these declarations referred only to the island of Cuba? What would the American people, what would the world have said, if congress had resolved that the Cuban people were rightfully entitled to freedom and independence, but that as to the people of other Spanish colonies we recognized no such right, and if President McKinley had declared that the forcible annexation of Cuba would be criminal, but that the forcible annexation of other Spanish colonies would be a righteous act? A general outburst of protest from our own people, and of derision and contempt from the whole world, would have been the answer. No, there can be no doubt that war was proclaimed to all mankind to be a war of liberation, and not of conquest, and even now our very imperialists are still boasting that the war was announced by the most unselfish and generous purposes, and that those insult us who do not believe it.

"In the course of that war Commodore Dewey, by a brilliant feat of arms, destroyed the Spanish fleet in the harbor of Manila. This did not change the heretofore character of the war—certainly not in Dewey's opinion. The Filipinos, constituting the strongest and foremost tribe of the population of the archipelago, had long been fighting for freedom and independence, just as the Cubans had. The great mass of the other islanders sympathized with them. They fought for the same cause as the Cubans, and they fought against the same enemy—the same enemy against whom we were waging our war of humanity and liberation. They had the same title to freedom and independence which we recognized for right in the Cubans—nay, more; for, as Admiral Dewey telegraphed to our government, 'they are far superior in their intelligence, and more capable of self-government than the natives of Cuba.' The admiral adds: 'I am familiar with both races, and further intercourse with them has confirmed me in this opinion.'

"Indeed, the mendacious stories spread by our imperialists, which represent those people as barbarians, semi-savages, and even 'savagery,' and their chiefs as no better than 'cut-throats,' have been refuted by such a mass of authoritative testimony, coming in part from men who call themselves imperialists, that their authors should hide their heads in shame; for surely, it is not the part of really brave man to calumniate their victims before sacrificing them.

Recognized as Allies.

"Now, whether there was or not any formal contract of alliance signed at Hongkong, no candid man who has studied the official documents will deny that in point of fact the Filipinos, having been desired and invited to join our forces, were landed at Manila, acting, and were practically recognized, as our allies, and that as such they did effective service, which we accepted and profited by. This is an indisputable fact, proved by the record. It is an equally indisputable fact that during that period the Filipino government constantly and publicly, so that nobody could plead ignorance of it or misunderstand it, informed the world that their object was the achievement of national independence, and that they believed the Americans had come in good faith to help them accomplish that end, as in the case of Cuba. It was weeks after various proclamations and other public utterances of Aguinaldo to that effect that the correspondence between him and Gen. Anderson, which I have just quoted, took place, and that the useful services of the Filipinos as our allies were accepted. It is, further, an indisputable fact that during this period our government did not inform the Filipinos that their fond expectations as to our recognition of their independence were mistaken. Our secretary of state did, indeed, on June 24 write to Mr. Pratt, our consul general at Singapore, that our government knew the Philippine insurgents not indeed as patriots struggling for liberty and law, as like the Cubans, 'are, and of right ought to be, independent,' but merely as 'discontented and rebellious subjects of Spain,' who, if we occupied their country in consequence of the war, would have to yield us due 'obedience.' And other officers of our government were instructed not to make any promises to the Filipinos as to the future. But the Filipinos themselves were not so informed. They were left to believe that, while fighting in cooperation with the American forces, they were fighting for their own independence. They could not imagine that the government of the great American republic, while boasting of having gone to war with Spain under the banner of liberation and humanity in behalf of Cuba, was capable of secretly plotting to turn that war into one for the conquest and subjugation of the Philippines.

Natives Ordered to Fall Back.

"But just that was to happen. As soon as Manila was taken and we had no further use for our Filipino allies they were ordered to fall back and back from the city and suburbs. Our military commanders treated the Filipinos' country as if it were our own. When Aguinaldo sent one of his aide-de-camp to Gen. Merritt with a request for an interview Gen. Merritt was 'too busy.' When our peace negotiations with Spain began representatives of the Filipinos asked for audience to solicit consideration of the rights and wishes of their people the doors were slammed in their faces, in Washington as well as in Paris. And behind those doors the scheme was hatched to deprive the Philippine islanders of the independence from foreign rule and to make them the subjects of another foreign ruler, and that foreign ruler their late ally, this great republic, which had grandly proclaimed to the world that its war against Spain was not a war of conquest, but a war of liberation and humanity.

"Behind those doors, which were tightly closed to the people of the Philippines, a treaty was made with Spain by the direction of President McKinley, which provided for the cession of the Philippine islands by Spain to the United States for the consideration of $20,000,000. It has been said that this sum was not purchase money, but a compensation for improvements made by Spain, or a 'solatium' to sweeten the pill of cession, or what not. But stripped of all cloudy verbiage, it was really purchase money, the sale being made by Spain under duress. Thus Spain sold and the United States bought what was called the sovereignty of Spain over the Philippine islands and their people.

"Now, look at the circumstances under which that 'cession' was made. Spain had lost the possession of the Philippines, except a few isolated and helpless little garrisons, most of which were effectively blockaded by the Filipinos. The Philippines were occupied, beyond Cavite and Manila, any authority of whatever name by military occupation nor by recognition on the part of the people was attributed to Spain, had, in point of fact, ceased to exercise any sovereignty, the Spanish power having been driven out or destroyed by the Filipino insurrection, while the Filipinos had not conquered, beyond Cavite and Manila, any authority of whatever name by military occupation nor by recognition on the part of the people. Aguinaldo's government had, in point of fact, ceased to exercise any sovereignty, the Spanish power having been driven out or destroyed by the Filipino insurrection, while the Filipinos had not conquered, beyond Cavite and Manila, any authority of whatever name by military occupation nor by recognition on the part of the people. The bulk of the country was occupied and possessed by the people who, against the Spanish power had, in point of fact, ceased to exercise any sovereignty, the Spanish power having been driven out or destroyed by the Filipino insurrection, while the Filipinos had not conquered, beyond Cavite and Manila, any authority of whatever name by military occupation nor by recognition on the part of the people. Aguinaldo's government had, in point of fact, ceased to exercise any sovereignty, the Spanish power having been driven out or destroyed by the Filipino insurrection, while the Filipinos had not conquered, beyond Cavite and Manila, any authority of whatever name by military occupation nor by recognition on the part of the people. The bulk of the country was occupied and possessed by the people who, against the Spanish power had, in point of fact, ceased to exercise any sovereignty, the Spanish power having been driven out or destroyed by the Filipino insurrection, while the Filipinos had not conquered, beyond Cavite and Manila, any authority of whatever name by military occupation nor by recognition on the part of the people. Aguinaldo's government had, in point of fact, ceased to exercise any sovereignty, the Spanish power having been driven out or destroyed by the Filipino insurrection, while the Filipinos had not conquered, beyond Cavite and Manila, any authority of whatever name by military occupation nor by recognition on the part of the people. The bulk of the country was occupied and possessed by the people who had been in the field against the Spanish power, and Aguinaldo was the acknowledged head of that people. Aguinaldo on the land side, and his government claimed organized control over 15 provinces. That government was established at Malolos, not far from Manila, and a very respectable government it was. According to Mr. Barrett, our late minister in Siam, himself an ardent imperialist, who had seen it, it had a well organized executive, divided into several departments, ably conducted, and a popular assembly, a congress, which would favorably compare with the parliaments of Japan and Hungary, better government than the insurrectionary government of Cuba ever was.

McKinley as Dictator.

"This is a grim story. Two years ago the predication of such a possibility would have been regarded as a hideous nightmare—as the offspring of a diseased imagination. But to-day it is a true tale—a plain recital of facts taken from the official records. These things have actually been done in these last two years by and under the administration of William McKinley. This is our Philippine war as it stands. It is pretended that we had a right to the possession of the Philippines and that self-respect demanded us to enforce that right. What was that right? The right of conquest? Had we really acquired that country by armed conquest, which, as President McKinley has told us, is contrary to the American code of morals, 'criminal?' But if we had thrown aside our code of morals we had then not conquered more than the bay and city of Manila. The rest of the country was controlled, if by anybody, by the Filipinos. Or was it the right of possession by treaty? I have already shown that the president ordered the enforcement of our sovereignty over the archipelago long before the treaty had by ratification gained legal effect, and also that, in making that treaty, we had bought something called sovereignty which Spain had ceased to possess and could therefore not sell and deliver.

"It is also pretended that, whatever our rights, the Filipinos were the original aggressors in the pending fight and that our troops found themselves compelled to defend their flag against them. What are the facts? One evening early in February last some Filipino soldiers entered the American lines without, however, attacking anybody. An American sentinel fired, killing one of the Filipinos. Then a desultory firing began at the outposts. It spread until it assumed the proportions of an extensive engagement, in which a large number of Filipinos were killed. It is a well-established fact that this engagement could not have arisen from any premeditation on the part of the Filipinos, as many of their officers, including Aguinaldo's private secretary, were at the time in the theaters and cafes of Manila. It is further well known that the next day Aguinaldo sent an officer, Gen. Torres, under a flag of truce to Gen. Otis to declare that the fighting had been precipitated by Aguinaldo, but had begun accidentally; that Aguinaldo wished to have it stopped, and proposed, to that end, the establishment of a neutral zone between the two armies such as might be agreeable to Gen. Otis; whereupon Gen. Otis curtly answered that the fighting, having once begun, must go on, and that was all. Who was it that really wanted the fight?

"But far more important than all this is the fact that President McKinley's 'benevolent assimilation' order, which even before the ratification of the treaty demanded that the Philippine islanders should unconditionally surrender at discretion and sovereignty, in default whereof our military forces would compel them, was really the president's declaration of war against the Philippine islands. Upon that order, however you may quibble about it. When an armed man enters my house under some questionable pretext and tells me that I must yield to him unconditionally control of the premises or he will knock me down—who is the aggressor no matter who strikes the first blow? No case of aggression can be clearer, shuffle and prevaricate as you will.

Shot Down "Without Parley."

"Let us recapitulate. We go to war with Spain in behalf of an oppressed colony of hers. We solemnly proclaim this to be a war—not of conquest—God forbid!—but of liberation and humanity. We invade the Spanish colony of the Philippines, destroy the Spanish fleet and invite the cooperation of the Filipino insurgents against Spain. We accept their effective aid as allies, all the while permitting them to believe that in case of victory they will be free and independent. By active fighting they get control of the large part of the interior country, from which Spain forcefully expelled. When we have captured Manila and have no further use for our Filipino allies our president directs Otis, behind their backs, a treaty be made with Spain, transferring their country to us, and even before that treaty is ratified he tells them that, in place of the Spaniards, they must accept us as their masters, and that if they do not, they will be compelled by force of arms. They refuse and we shoot them down, and, as President McKinley said on one occasion, we shall continue to shoot them down 'without useless parley.'

"I have recited these things in studiously sober and dry matter-of-fact language, without oratorical ornament or appeal. I ask you now what epithet can you find justly to characterize such a course? Happily, you need not search for one, for President McKinley himself has furnished the best, when, in a virtuous moment, he said that annexation by force should not be thought of, for, according to the American code of morals, it would be 'criminal aggression.' Yes, 'criminal' is the word. Have you ever heard of any aggression more clearly criminal than this? And in this case there is an element of peculiarly repulsive meanness and treachery. I pity the American who can behold this spectacle without profound shame, contrition and resentment. Is it a wonder, I repeat, that the American people, in whose name this has been done, should be troubled in their conscience?

"To justify, or rather to excuse, such things nothing but a plea of the extremest necessity will avail. Did such a necessity exist? In a sort of helpless way the defenders of this policy ask: 'What else could the president have done under the circumstances?' This question is simply childish. If he thought he could not order Commodore Dewey away from Manila after the execution of the order to destroy the Spanish fleet he could have told the people of the Philippine islands that this was, on our part, a war, not of conquest, but of liberation and humanity; that we sympathized with their desire for freedom and independence and that we would treat them as we had specifically promised to treat the Cuban people in bringing about the establishment of an independent government. And this task would have been much easier than in the case of Cuba, since, according to Admiral Dewey's emphatic testimony, the Filipinos were much better fitted for such a government. Our ingenious postmaster general has told us that the president could not have done this because he had no warrant for it, since he did not know whether the American people would wish to keep the Philippine islands. But what warrant, then, had the president for putting, by his 'benevolent assimilation order,' before the Filipinos the alternative of submission to our sovereignty or war?

Challenges Proof of Savagery.

"I am far from meaning to picture the Philippine islanders as paragons of virtue and gentle conduct. But I challenge the imperialists to show me any instances of bloody disturbance or other savagery among themselves sufficient to create any necessity of our armed interference to 'restore order' or 'save them from anarchy.' I ask and demand an answer. Is it not true that, even if there has been such a disorderly tendency, it would have required a long time for it to kill one-tenth as many human beings as we have killed and to cause one-tenth as much devastation as we have caused by our assaults upon them? Is it not true that a necessity of being obliged to 'restore order,' we have carried riot and death and desolation into peaceful communities whose order was such that they did not maintain order and safety within themselves, but that they refused to accept us as their rulers? And here is the rub.

"In the vocabulary of our imperialists 'order' means, above all, submission to their will. Any other kind of order, be it ever so orderly, is disorder, must be suppressed with a bloody hand. This 'order' is the kind that has been demanded by the despot since the world had a history. Its language is already becoming dangerously familiar to us—a familiarity which cannot cease too soon.

"From all these points of view, therefore, the Philippine war was as unnecessary as it is unjust. A wanton, wicked and abominable war—so it is called by untold thousands of American citizens, and so it is at heart felt by a large and rapidly organized immense majority of the American people. Aye, as such it is cursed by many of our every soldiers whom our government ordered to the Philippine islands. And who will deny that this war would certainly have been avoided had the president remained true to the national pledge that the war against Spain should be a war of liberation and humanity, and not of conquest? And what have we now? After eight months of bloodshed, devastation, squandered treasure and shame, an indefinite prospect of more and more slaughter, devastation, squandered treasure and shame.

Is Wanton Killing Humane?

"What is the ultimate purpose of this policy? To be perfectly fair, I will assume that the true spirit of American imperialism is not represented by the extremists who want to subjugate the Philippine islanders at any cost and then exploit the islands to the best advantage of the conqueror, but by the more humane people who say that we must establish our sovereignty over them to make them happy, to prepare them for self-government, and even recognize their right to self-government dependence as soon as they show themselves fit for it. Let me ask these well-meaning citizens a simple question. Will you think that the Filipino people may ultimately consent to the independence of those islanders, as a matter of right and good policy, why do you insist upon killing them in order to 'save' them? Because they refuse to recognize our sovereignty. Why do they so refuse? Because they think themselves entitled to independence and are willing to fight and die for it. But if you insist upon continuing to shoot them down for this reason does not that mean that you will continue to shoot them because the identical thing which you yourself think that you may ultimately find it just and proper to grant them? Would not every drop of blood spilled in such a guilty sport cry to Heaven? To kill men in a just war and in obedience to imperative necessity is one thing. To kill men for demanding what you yourself may ultimately have to approve is another. How can such killing adopted as a policy be countenanced by a man of conscience and humane feelings? And yet you will, without useless parley, is the policy proposed to us.

"We are told that we must trust President McKinley and his advisers to bring us out 'all right.' I should be glad to be able to do so, but I cannot forget that they have got us in all wrong. And here we have to consider a point of immense importance, which I desire to urge upon the attention of the American people. It is one of the fundamental principles of our system of democratic government that only the congress has the power to declare war. What does this signify? That a declaration of war, the initiation of an armed conflict between nations, is such a solemn act, such the most solemn and responsible act a nation can perform, involving as it does the lives and fortunes of an uncounted number of human beings—that not be at the discretion of the executive branch of the government, but shall depend upon the authority of the legislative representatives of the people—in other words, that, as much as the machinery of government may make such a thing possible, the deliberate will of the people constitutionally expressed shall determine the awful question of peace or war.

Brought on by the President.

"Those are, therefore, by no means wrong who call this the 'president's war.' And a war so brought about and so conducted the American people are asked to approve and encourage simply because 'we are in it'—that is, because the president of his own motion has got us into it. Have you considered what this means? Every man of public experience knows how powerful and seductive precedent is as an argument in the interpretation of laws and of constitutional practices. When a thing, no matter how questionable, has once been done by the responsible executive approved, or wrongly acquiesced in, by the people, that act will surely be used as a justification of its being done again. In nothing is the authority of precedent more dangerous than in defending usurpations of governmental power.

"I am not here as a partisan, but as an American citizen anxious for the future of the republic, and I cannot too earnestly admonish the American people, if they value the fundamental principles of their government and their own security and that of their children, for a moment to throw aside all partisan bias and soberly to consider what kind of a precedent they would set if they consented to, and by consenting approved, the president's management of the Philippine business merely 'because we are in it.' We cannot expect all our future presidents to be models of public virtue and wisdom as George Washington was. Imagine now in the presidential office a man well meaning, but maybe, short-sighted and pliant and under the influence of so-called 'friends' who are greedy and reckless speculators, and who would not scruple to push him into warlike complications in order to get great opportunities for profit, or a man of that inordinate ambition which intoxicates the mind and besieges the conscience; or a man of extreme partisan spirit, who thinks that the mere victory of his party to be necessary for the salvation of the universe, and may think that a foreign broil would serve the chances of his party; or a man of unscrupulous combativeness of temperament which might run away with his sense of responsibility—and that we shall have such men in the presidential chair is by no means unlikely with our loose way of selecting candidates for the presidency. Imagine, then, a future president, belonging to either of these classes to have before him the precedent of Mr. McKinley's management of the Philippine business, sanctioned by the approval or only the acquiescence of the people, and to feel himself permitted—nay, even encouraged—to say to himself that, as this precedent shows, he may plunge the country into warlike conflicts of his own motion, without asking leave of congress, with only some legal technicalities to cover his usurpation, or, even without any cloak, and that he may, by a machinery of deception called a war censorship, keep the people in the dark about what is going on, and that into however bad a mess he may thus have got the country he may count upon the people, as soon as a drop of blood has been shed, to uphold the usurpation and to cry down everybody who opposes it as a 'traitor,' and all this because 'we are in it!' Can you conceive a more baneful precedent, a more prolific source of danger to the peace and security of the country? Can any sane man deny that it will be all the more prolific of evil if in this way we drift into a foreign policy full of temptation for dangerous adventures?

Remedy for the Situation.

"I say, therefore, that if we have the future of the republic at heart we must not only not uphold the administration in its Philippine business, because 'we are in it,' because we are in it, having been got into it in such a way, the American people should stamp the administration's proceedings with a verdict of disapprobation clear and emphatic, and 'get out of it' in such a fashion that this will be a solemn warning to future presidents instead of a seductive precedent. What, then, is to accomplish this end, is to be done? Of course we, as we are here, can only advise. But by calling forth expressions of the popular will by various means of public demonstration, and, if need be, at the polls, we can make that advice so strong that those in power will hardly disregard it. We have often been taunted with having no positive policy to propose. But such a policy has more than once been proposed, and I can only repeat it.

"In the first place, let it be well understood that those are egregiously mistaken who think that if by a strong military effort the Philippine war be stopped, everything will be right and we can shout it. No, the American trouble of conscience will not be appeased, and the question will be as big and virulent as ever unless that effort be followed by and followed by an assurance to the islanders of their freedom and independence, which assurance, if given now, would surely end the bloody and out more fighting. We propose, therefore, that it be given now. Let there be at once an armistice between our forces and the Filipinos. Let the Filipinos understand that the same time be told that the American people will be glad to see them establish an independent government, and to aid them in that task as far as may be necessary; that, if the different tribes composing the population of the Philippines are disposed, as at least most of them, if not all, are likely to be, to attach themselves in some way to the government already existing under the presidency of Aguinaldo, we shall cheerfully accept that solution of the question, and even, if required, lend our good offices to bring it about; and that meanwhile we shall deem it our duty to protect them against interference from other foreign powers. In other words, that with regard to them we mean honestly to live up to the righteous principles with the profession of which we commended to the world our Spanish war.

"And then let us have in the Philippines, to carry out this programme, not a small politician or a meddlesome martinet, but a statesman of large views and sympathy, who will not merely deal in sanctimonious cant and oily promises with a string to them, but who will prove by his acts that he and we are in earnest, and who will keep in mind that their government is not merely to suit us, but to suit them; that it should not be measured by standards which we ourselves have reached only after ages to reach, but be a government of their own, adapted to their own conditions and notions—whether it be a true republic, like ours, or better, or a dictatorship like that of Porfirio Diaz in Mexico, or an oligarchy like the one maintained by us in Hawaii, or even something like the boss rule we are tolerating in New York and Pennsylvania.

Let Them Walk Alone.

"Those who talk so much about 'fitting a people for self-government' often forget that no people were ever made 'fit' for self-government by being led in the leading strings of a foreign power. You learn to walk by doing your own crawling and stumbling. Self-government is learned only by exercising one's own self responsibility. Of course, there will be mistakes and troubles and disorders. We have had and now have these, too—at the beginning of our persecution by the tories, our flounderings before the constitution was formed, our Shay's rebellion, our whisky war and various failures and disturbances among them a constant succession, not to a loss of life and treasure horrible to think of, and the murder of two presidents. But who will say that on account of these things some foreign power should have kept the American people in leading strings to teach them to govern themselves? If the Philippine islanders do as well as the Mexicans, who have been doing it their way since we left them alone after our war of 1847, through many disorders, to an orderly government, who will have a right to find fault with the result? Who will take it as a general rule that he who wants to reign over others is solemnly convinced that they are quite unable to govern themselves.

"Now, what objection is there to the policy dictated by our fundamental principles and our good faith? I hear the angry cry: 'What? Surrender to Aguinaldo?' Will not the world ridicule and deride us for such a confession of our incompetency to deal with so feeble a foe? What will become of our prestige? No, we shall not surrender to Aguinaldo. In giving up a criminal aggression we shall surrender only to our own sense of right and justice, to our own understanding of our own true interests and to the noble principles of our own republic. Nobody will laugh at us whose good opinion we have reason to cherish. There will, of course, be an outcry of disappointment in England. But from whom will it come? From such men as James Bryce or John Morley, or any one of those true friends of liberty who understand and admire and wish to perpetuate and spread the fundamental principles of its vitality? No, not from them. But the outcry will come from those in England who long to see us entangled in complications apt to make the American republic dependent upon British aid and thus subservient to British interests.

"The true friends of this republic in England and, indeed, all over the world, who are now grieving to see us go astray, will rejoice, and their hearts will be uplifted with new confidence in our honesty, in our wisdom and in the virtue of democratic institutions when they behold the American people throwing aside all the puerilities of false pride and returning to the path of their true duty."

MAY TRY AGAIN.

Sir Thomas Lipton Intimates That He Will Try to Capture the American Cup With a Baltic Yacht.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Through wild and hoary seas, in a breeze that approached the dignity of a gale the gallant sloop Columbia Friday vanquished the British challenger Shamrock by six minutes and 18 seconds actual time and six minutes and 34 seconds corrected time, thus completing the series for the America's cup with a magnificent rough weather duel and a glorious yankee victory. For the 11th time

THE AMERICA'S CUP.

[The America's cup is the most famous yachting trophy in the world. It was once the property of the Royal Yacht Squadron of England, and was won by the schooner yacht America from the entire fleet of that squadron on August 22, 1851. Ever since the English have tried to win it back. The cup is of solid silver and weighs 134 ounces. It is 27 inches high and 36 inches in circumference.]

the attempt of a foreigner to wrest from America the yachting supremacy of the world has failed.

The trophy won by the old schooner America 48 years ago is still ours, a monument to the superiority of American seamanship and American naval architecture, and a standing challenge to the yachtsmen of all nations. Unbeaten America again tastes the glory of victory. The intrinsic value of the reward which hundreds of thousands of dollars were expended to secure is small—simply an antiquated piece of silver ware which Queen Victoria offered to the best sailing ship in the world in the early days of her reign, but around it cluster the precious memories of unbroken American triumph and the honor of mastery in the noblest of sports. To Sir Tomas Lipton, whose name is now added to the list of defeated aspirants for the honor of carrying the cup back across the Atlantic, failure was a crushing blow. His hope had been high. But like the true sportsman that he is, the sting of defeat has left no bitterness and with undaunted courage he intimates that he may be back with a better boat to try again.

COAST DEFENSES.

Annual Report of Brig. Gen. Wilson, Chief of Engineers of the Army, to the War Department Office.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The annual report of the chief of engineers of the army, Brig. Gen. John M. Wilson, made public Friday, submits estimates for river and harbor works already authorized by congress, but not provided by continuing contracts amounting to $26,906,821. In addition he asks for $15,582,636 to carry on works already contracted for.

The report shows that the existing approved projects for sea coast defenses contemplate the emplacement of about 500 heavy guns of 8, 10, 12 and 16 inch caliber, of about 800 rapid fire guns and of about 1,000 mortars, at an estimated approximate cost for the engineering work of $55,000,000. An estimate of $4,500,000 is submitted for continuing the work of construction of these batteries and for the defense of Porto Rico. The sum of $5,663,000 was allotted by the president out of the national defense fund in all for the engineering department.

Under the head of fortications, Gen. Wilson says that in addition to the 30 localities in the United States for which projects for permanent sea coast batteries have been adopted the defense of several other localities is now under consideration. Considerable study has been given to the subject of the defense of our insular possessions resulting in complete projects for San Juan and preliminary projects for Honolulu and Pearl Harbor so that the construction of batteries for these places can begin as soon as congress appropriates the funds. There has been a considerable revision of exisiting projects for other points caused by the development of the rapid fire gun and further revisions will be required to meet improvements in ships and ordnance. The proposed deep water entrance to New York harbor necessitated an extensive revision of the projected defenses for the southern entrance.

Work on sea coast defenses has been vigorously carried on at 25 localities, nearly all of which are even now so supplied with heavy guns and mortars as to permit of effective defense against naval attack. An increase in rapid fire armament, Gen. Wilson says, is now the most urgent necessity, there having been delay in securing these guns in the past year owing to difficulties with contractors. Up to date provision has been made for emplacing 297 heavy guns, 508 rapid fire guns and 344 mortars. During the year there was added to the sea coast complement 11 12-inch guns, 13 10-inch guns and 24 8-inch guns, 20 rapid fire guns and 32 mortars. With this rapid growth of the coast defenses the artillery organization which must care for them has been utterly unable to cope, and the difficulty has been increased by the withdrawal of two regiments for foreign service and by the necessity for the services of skilled electricians and mechanics to care for the highly complex ordnance.

GREAT BRITAIN'S PLANS.

Cape Colony, the Transvaal, Natal, Orange Free State and Rhodesia Are to Be Formed Into a Dominion.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—It is reported that Great Britain's immense military preparations against two insignificant republics are viewed with considerable curiosity in some of the European capitals, notably Paris and St. Petersburg, notes have been exchanged on the subject and it is even hinted in unofficial quarters that inquiries will be addressed to the British government as to the contemplated absorption of the two republics by the British empire.

The Press Association Friday night announced with an air of authority that the government's plan is to terminate the war in the speediest manner possible after the forts at Pretoria and Johannesburg have been razed and then to promulgate by order of the queen in council a new constitution for a group of five federal states—Cape Colony, the Transvaal, Natal, the Orange Free State and Rhodesia—under the title of the Dominion of South Africa, the crown to nominate a governor general and the five states having power each to elect its own lieutenant governor and to have local legislatures with a dominion parliament to meet at Cape Town.

With some modifications the scheme is based upon lines similar to those of the Canadian government.

"Babe" Conner has been out on the circle the past week, as a political hustler and heard some talks along the lines of politics that rang in his ears even when asleep. One man he asked about voting for Brown jumped straight up in the air 7½ feet and came down curving a blue streak aud weut around the house like he was shot out of a gun.

Hon. Robt. Willis, of Big Boue, was talking electric road to the people here, one day last week, and said among other things: "The people of Boone county have used their thinkers and talkers until they are worn out, and now is the time for action." The railroad he thinks will be an advantage to the people in many ways they can not realize until it is in operation. His report of the Big Bone Springs meeting held Saturday was flattering and boded success to the enterprize.

In reporting the railroad meeting held here last Monday week, your informant by telephone failed to note the fact that J. W. Conner made a speech, but he did and it was his maiden speech too. Burl has never been a man of words, but rather inclined to silence, never fails to put up his cash and use his influence where it does good, therefore this is the wherefore of our calling your attention to the matter. Equal chances to all, &c., is what the RECORDER believes in we know.

Thomas Carlisle from Hathaway, was in town Friday looking down hearted and hard to curry. He handed us the followlug notice and asked for its publicatiou in the Recorder: "Some gauder-necked, chicken-hearted, conscienceless cur, with a desire to do wrong without the decency and manhood to do so out and above board, poisoned three of my dogs. The dogs have never been suspicioned of killing sheep or trespassing upon my neighbors in any way, therefore I regard the cur in human form that did the deed with absolute contempt, and will give anything in reason to get my eye on him for one minute and guarantee to fix his hide so it will not hold clover seed."

Col. H. F. Blase, of Covington, has taken great interest in the railroad through our county, and among other motives that prompted him to want the road built, one was to have means of transportation for a suit of Corduroy clothes sold to Lau Norman for winter. They were larger than "all out doors," consequently had to be made indoors—one of the largest factories of the U. S. was run on full time (full all the time, eh!) for three months to get the goods ready for Mr. Blase by September 16th. A transfer wagon brought them out Saturday, so Lucien Dickerson, jr., tells, and when "Jonas" got them on Saturday night he looked like Richard (the lion hearted) with a suit of clothes on made for the Colossus of Rhodes. His order to Mr. Blase was, "make them large."

While assisting H. G. Blanton to put on a load of hay over at Dr. Furnish's barn, Monday, something gave away between William Fullilove's shoulders, and the pain resulting was excruciating. In a few minutes he fainted away, but his suffering continued after he became again conscious. Mr. Blanton telephoned for a carriage to come over and convey him to Erlanger.

We passed Jacob Crigler's sorghum plantation, last Friday, and seeing the plant had shut down for the season, the proprietor was asked how many gallons of molasses were the output of his mill, this season, and he replied 420, one half of which is mine, when it occurred to us if Jake consumes his 210 gallons of molasses this winter that he will come forth in the spring looking very sweet.

Clinton Blankenbeker had some bad luck in Burlington, last Friday night. After the dance was over he went to get his horse and buggy which were hitched to the rack across the street from Clutterbuck's store, and had the horse unhitched when it became frightened, presumably at the blanket with which it was covered, and getting loose it ran across the street and collided with the stone and brick stiles in front of the store The horse was thrown down, and in its struggles broke one of the buggy shafts.

Died—Of that fell disease, consumption, at her home in Dupont, Indiana, October 10th, 1899, Mrs. Susie H. Marshall, wife of Thos. A. Marshall, formerly a resident of this county and State. Mrs. Marshall was born in Gallatin county, March 10th, 1847. She united with the Tennille Baptist church at the age of 18, and was a member in good standing at the time of her death. She was married to Thos. A. Marshall, October 18th, 1868. She leaves a husband, three children, four sisters, one brother and countless friends to mourn her death. No children ever had a more devoted mother, no man a better wife. She was buried in the Graham church cemetery.

The meeting at Sand Run Baptist church closed last night. There were ten additions, four by letter and six by baptism and experience. The following persons united: Mr. Bruce Henry, and wife, Thomas Eggleston and wife, Misses Katie Estes and Sadie Eggleston, Mr. Eggleston and wife, Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Brown. The meeting was largely attended. Elder M. J. Hoover did the preaching. Sand Run is now without a pastor, but the wide awake membership is looking after a pastor and we hope that they may soon have a good man for pastor. The baptizing will take place Sunday afternoon at the landing near Wm. Kirtley's.

Burlington 10; Petersburg 6.

When the Burlington ball team started to Petersburg, last Saturday, it was not accompanied by an escort of rooters as it generally is when it goes from home. This was because the rooters were sure the boys were going to certain defeat, some predicting a full set of goose eggs as their portion. And it did look that way until the fifth inning, when the Burlington team got onto Alloway's curves and various specimens of shoots and kept pounding him until enough runs were made to put them on easy street. Brady pitched good ball, and the team behind him gave him good support for once. Sandford at first and Kirk in center made several brilliant plays. These two men had been on the bench for several games, but showed up in splendid form Saturday. Here is the score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	—T
Petersburg	0	0	2	0	2	1	0	0	1	—6

A STRONG SWIMMER.

From Him Dr. Talmage Draws a Noble Lesson.

The Always Ready Helpfulness of Religion for Those Who Struggle Against Adverse Circumstances.

(Copyright, Louis Klopsch, 1899.)

In this discourse Dr. Talmage employs a very bold figure of the Bible to bring out the helpfulness of religion for all those in any kind of struggle. The text is Isaiah 25:11: "He shall spread forth His hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands."

In the summer season multitudes of people wade into the ponds and lakes and rivers and seas to dive or float or swim. In a world the most of which is water all men and women should learn to swim. Some of you have learned the side stroke introduced by George Pewters in 1850, each stroke of that kind carrying the swimmer a distance of six feet, and some of you may use the overhand stroke invented by Gardener, the expert who by it won the 500 yard championship in Manchester in 1862, the swimmer by that stroke carrying his arm in the air for a more lengthened reach, and some of you may tread the water as though you had been made to walk the sea, but most of you usually take what is called the breast stroke, placing the hands with the backs upward, about five inches under the water, the inside of the wrists touching the breast, then pushing the arms forward coincident with the stroke of the feet struck out to the greatest width possible, and you thus unconsciously illustrate the meaning of my text: "He shall spread forth His hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim."

The fisherman seeks out unfrequented nooks. You stand to-day on the bank of a river in the broiling sun and fling out your line and catch nothing, while an expert angler breaks through the jungle and goes by the shadow of the solitary rock and, in a place where no fisherman has been for ten years, throws out his line and comes home at night, his face shining and his basket full. I do not know why we ministers of the Gospel need always be fishing in the same stream and preaching from the same texts that other people preach from. I cannot understand the policy of the minister who, in Blackfriars, London, England, every week for 30 years preached from the Epistle to the Hebrews. It is an exhilaration to me when I come across a theme which I feel no one else has treated, and my text is one of that kind. There are paths in God's Word that are well beaten by Christian feet. When men want to quote Scripture, they quote the old passages that everyone has heard. When they want a chapter read, they read a chapter that all the other people have been reading, so that the church to-day is ignorant of three-fourths of the Bible.

You go into the Louvre, at Paris. You confine yourself to one corridor of that opulent gallery of paintings. As you come out your friend says to you: "Did you see that Rembrandt?" "No." "Did you see that Reubens?" "No." "Did you see that Titian?" "No." "Did you see that Raphael?" "No." "Well," says your friend, "then you did not see the Louvre." Now, my friends, I think we are too much apt to confine ourselves to one of the great corridors of Scripture truth, and so much so that there is not one person out of a million who has ever noticed the all suggestive and powerful picture in the words of my text.

The text represents God as a strong swimmer, striking out to push down iniquity and save the souls of men. "He shall spread forth His hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim." The figure is bold and many sided. Most of you know how to swim. Some of you learned it in the city school, where this art is taught; some of you in boyhood, in the river near your father's house; some of you since you came to manhood or womanhood, while summering on the beach of the sea. It is a good thing to know how to swim, not only for yourself, but because you will after awhile perhaps have to help others.

I do not know anything more stirring or sublime than to see some man like Norman McKenzie leaping from the ship Madras into the sea to save Charles Turner, who had dropped from the royal yard while trying to loosen the sail, bringing him back to the deck amid the huzzas of the passengers and crew. If a man has not enthusiasm enough to cheer in such circumstances, he deserves himself to drop into the sea and have no one help him. The Royal Humane society, of England was established in 1774, its object to applaud and reward those who should pluck up life from the deep. Anyone who has performed such a deed of daring has all the particulars of that bravery recorded in a public record, and on his breast a medal done in blue and gold and bronze, anchor and monogram and inscription, telling to future generations the bravery of the man or woman who saved some one from drowning. But if it is such a worthy thing to save a body from the deep I ask you if it is not a worthier thing to save an immortal soul. And you shall see this hour the Son of God step forth for this achievement. "He shall spread forth His hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim." In order to understand the full force of the figure, you need to realize that one is in a sinking condition. You have heard people talking of what is the most beautiful words in the English language. One man says it is "Excelsior." Another man says it is the word "Jesus," but I tell you the bitterest word in all our language, the most angry and baleful, the word saturated with the most trouble, the word that accounts for all the loathsomeness and the pang and the outrage and the harrowing, and that word is "sin." You spell it with three letters, and yet those three letters describe the circumference and pierce the diameter of everything bad in the universe. Sin is a sibilant word. You cannot pronounce it without giving the sins of the flame or the hiss of the serpent. Sin! And then if you add three letters to that word it describes everyone of us by nature—sinner. We have outraged the law of God, not occasionally, or now and then, but perpetually. The Bible declares it. Hark! It thunders two claps! "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." What the Bible says our own conscience affirms.

After Judge Morgan had sentenced Lady Jane Grey to death his conscience troubled him so much for the deed that he became insane, and all through his insanity he kept saying: "Take her away from me! Lady Jane Grey! Take her away! Lady Jane Grey!" It was the voice of conscience. And no man ever does anything wrong, however great or small, but his conscience brings that matter before him, and at every step of his misbehavior it says: "Wrong, wrong!" Sin is a leprosy; sin is a paralysis; sin is a consumption; sin is pollution; sin is death. Give it a fair chance, and it will swamp you and me, body, mind and soul, forever. In this world it only gives a faint intimation of its virulence. You see a patient in the first stages of typhoid fever. The cheek is somewhat flushed, the hands somewhat hot, pereceded by a slight chill. "Why," you say, "typhoid fever does not seem to be much of a disease." But wait until the patient has been six weeks under it, and all his energies have been wrung out, and he is too weak to lift his little finger, and his intellect gone, then you see the full havoc of the disease. Now, sin in this world is an ailment which is only in its first stages, but let it get under full way and it is an all-consuming typhoid. Oh, if we could see our unpardoned sins as God sees them, our teeth would chatter and our knees would knock together, and our respiration would be choked, and our heart would break. If your sins are unforgiven, they are bearing down on you and you are sinking—sinking away from happiness, sinking away from God, sinking away from everything that is good and blessed.

Then what do we want? A swimmer—a strong swimmer, a swift swimmer! And blessed be God, in my text we have him announced. "He shall spread forth His hands in the midst of them, as He that swimmeth stretcheth forth his hands to swim." You have noticed that when a swimmer goes to rescue anyone he puts off his heavy apparel. He must not have any such impediment about him if he is going to do this great deed. And when Christ stepped forth to save us He shook off the sandals of Heaven, and His feet were free, and then He stepped down into the wave of our transgressions, and it came over His wounded feet, and it came above the spear stab in His side—aye, it dashed to the lacerated temple, the high-water mark of His anguish. Then, rising above the flood, "He stretched forth His hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim."

If you have ever watched a swimmer, you notice that his whole body is brought into play. The arms are flexed, the hands drive the water back, the knees are active, the head is thrown back to escape strangulation, the whole body is in propulsion. And when Christ sprang into the deep to save us—He threw His entire nature into it—all His Godhead, His omniscience, His goodness, His love, His omnipotence, head, heart, eyes, hands, feet. We were far out on the sea and so deep down in the waves and so far out from the shore that nothing short of an entire God could save us. Christ leaped out for our rescue, saying: "Lo, I come to do thy will!" and all the surges of human and satanic hate beat against Him, and those who watched Him from the gates of Heaven feared He would go down under the wave, and instead of saving others would Himself perish, but, putting His breast to the foam and shaking the surf from His locks, He came on and on until He is now within the reach of everyone here; eye omniscient, heart infinite, arm omnipotent, mighty to save, even unto the uttermost.

Oh, it was not half a God that trampled down bellowing Gennesaret; it was not a quarter of a God that mastered the demons of Gadara; it was not two-thirds of a God that lifted up Lazarus into the arms of his overjoyed sisters; it was not a fragment of God who offered pardon and peace to all the race. No. This mighty swimmer threw His grandeur, His glory, His might, His wisdom, His omnipotence and His eternity into this one act. It took hands of God to save us—both feet. How do I prove it? On the cross were not both hands nailed? On the cross were not both feet spiked? His entire nature involved in our redemption!

If you have lived much by the water, you notice also that if anyone is going out to the rescue of the drowning he must be independent, self-reliant, able to go alone. There may be a time when he must spring out to save one, and he cannot get a lifeboat, and if he goes out and has not strength enough to bear himself up and bear another up he will sink, and instead of dragging one corpse out of the billows you will have two to drag out. When Christ sprang out into the sea to deliver us, he had no life buoy. His Father did not Help Him. Alone in the wine press, alone in the pang, alone in the darkness, alone on the mountain, alone in the sea! Oh, if He saves us, He shall have all the credit, for "there was none to help." No oar, no wing, no ladder! When Nathaniel Lyon fell in the battle charge in front of his troops, he had a whole army to cheer him. When Marshal Ney sprang into the contest and plunged in the spurs till the horse's flanks spurted blood, all France applauded him. But Jesus alone! "Of the people there was none to help." "All forsook Him and fled." Oh, it was not a flotilla that sailed down and saved us. It was not a cluster of goodoles that came over the waves. It was one person, independent and alone, "spreading out His hands among us as a swimmer spreadeth forth his hands to swim!"

I want to persuade you to lay hold of this strong swimmer. "No," you say; "it is always disastrous for a drowning man to lay hold of a swimmer." There is not a river or lake but has a calamity resultant from the fact that when a strong swimmer went out to save a sinking man the drowning man clutched him, threw his arms around him, pinioned his arms, and they both went down together. When you are saving a man in the water you do not want to come up by his face. You want to come up by his back. You do not want him to hold you while you take hold of him. But, blessed be God, Jesus Christ is so strong a swimmer He comes not to our back, but to our face, and He asks us to throw around Him the arms of our love and then promises to take us to the beach, and He will do it. Do not trust that plank of good works. Do not trust that shivered spar of your own righteousness. Christ only can give you safe transportation. Turn your face upon Him, as the dying martyr did in olden times when he cried out: "None but Christ! None but Christ!" Jesus has taken millions to the land, and He is willing to take you there. Oh, what hardness to thrust Him back when He has been swimming all the way from the throne of God, where you are now, and is ready to swim all the way back again, taking your redeemed spirit!

I have sometimes thought what a spectacle the ocean bed will present when in the last day the water is all drawn off. It will be a line of wrecks from beach to beach. There is where the line of battleships went down. There is where the merchantmen went down. There is where the steamers went down, a long line of wrecks from beach to beach. What a spectacle in the last day, when the water is drawn off! But, oh, how much more solemn if we had an eye to see the spiritual wrecks and the places where they foundered! You would find thousands along our roads and streets. Christ came down in their awful catastrophe, putting out for their souls, "spreading out His hands as a swimmer spreadeth forth his hands to swim," but they thrust Him in the sore heart, and they smote His fair cheek, and the storm and darkness swallowed them up. I ask you to lay hold of this Christ and lay hold of Him now. You will sink without Him. From horizon to horizon not one sail in sight, only one strong swimmer, with head flung back and arms outspread.

I hear many saying: "Well, I would like to be a Christian. I am going to work to become a Christian." My brother, you begin wrong. When a man is drowning, and a strong swimmer comes out to help him, he says to him: "Now be quiet. Put your arm on my arm or on my shoulder, but don't struggle, don't try to help yourself, and I'll take you ashore. The more you struggle and the more you try to help yourself the more you impede me. Now, be quiet, and I'll take you ashore." When Christ, the strong swimmer, comes out to save a soul, the sinner says: "That's right. I am glad to see Christ, and I am going to help Him in the work of my redemption. I am going to pray more, and that will help Him, and I am going to weep extravagantly over my sins, and that will help Him." No, it will not. Stop your doing. Christ will do all or none. You cannot lift an ounce, you cannot move an inch, in this matter of your redemption.

This is the difficulty which keeps thousands of souls out of the Kingdom of Heaven. It is because they cannot consent to let Jesus Christ begin and complete the work of their redemption. "Why," you say, "then is there nothing for me to do?" Only one thing have you to do, and that is to lay hold of Christ and let Him achieve your salvation and achieve it all. I do not know whether I make the matter plain or not. I simply want to show you that a man cannot save himself, but that the Almighty Son of God can do it and will do it if you ask Him. Oh, fling your two arms, the arm of your trust and the arm of your love, around this omnipotent swimmer of the cross!

Have you ever stood by and seen some one under process of resuscitation after long submergence? The strong swimmer has put him on the beach after a struggle in the waters. To excite breathing in the almost lifeless body what manipulation, what friction of the cold limbs, what artificial movement of the lungs, what breath of the rescuer blown into the mouth of the rescued! And when breathing begins, and after awhile the slight respiration becomes the deep sigh, and the eyes open, and the blue lips take on a smile, what rejoicing, what clapping of hands all up and down the beach, what congratulation for the strong swimmer and for all who helped in the restoration, what shouting of "He lives, he lives!" Like this is the gladness when a soul that has been submerged in sin and sorrow is "coming to." What desire on the part of all to help, and, when under the breath of God and under the manipulation by the wounded hands of Christ, the life eternal of the soul begins to show itself, all through the ranks of spectators, terrestrial and celestial, goes the cry: "He lives. Rejoice, for the dead is alive again!" May the living Christ this moment put out for your rescue, "spreading His hands in the midst of you, as a swimmer spreadeth his hands to swim!"

THE HARD, COLD FACTS.

McKinley's Statements Are at a Variance with Matters of Record.

In his speeches in defense of his Philippine war Mr. McKinley is giving point to the cynical observation that "history is fiction agreed upon." It is not a pleasant duty to correct misstatements of facts made by the president of the United States, but when a president "takes the stump" he cannot object to that public criticism upon which the people rely to separate truth from error.

In his speech at Fargo, N. D., Mr. McKinley said: "We did not go to war until every effort at peace was exhausted."

If true, this statement would justify the war. Unfortunately it is not true. Did the president offer to the Filipinos, our accepted allies at Manila, the terms and conditions which congress imposed upon the United States and held out to the Cubans when it set about freeing Cuba? Did he assure the Filipinos

"That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction or control over said island, except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is completed to leave the government and control of the island to its people?"

Does anybody doubt that if Mr. McKinley had given this assurance to the Filipinos after the capture of Manila there would have been no war? Was not this an "effort for peace" which the president was in duty bound to make?

If he should give this assurance now is there any reason to doubt that it would end the war? The president himself admits that "the leader of the insurgent forces says to the American government: 'You can have peace if you will give us independence.'" Would not such a termination of the trouble be more honorable and just, more in accordance with American principles, than to send an army of 65,000 men to subjugate a people who after all are only fighting for their freedom as our forefathers did?

The cold truth is that, alike in his proclamation of December 27 and in the subsequent proclamation of his commissioners, the president demanded the unconditional surrender and submission of the Filipinos to the "sovereignty" of the United States. Never one "effort" for peace has he made by offering them even autonomy under a protectorate.

But Mr. McKinley said further at Fargo: "The insurgent leader made an attack upon our men, and then our boys let loose."

If this were true it would justify "shooting back." No American worthy the name would suggest—whatever his views of the merits of the main question—that our soldiers should not repel attack. But the official record contradicts the president. His own general—the one and only Otis—in his official report of the opening of hostilities said:

Feb. 4, 1899.—Firing upon the Filipinos and the killing of one of them by the Americans, leading to return fire. The chief insurgent leaders did not wish to open hostilities at that time.

Mr. McKinley further says: "We never gave a bribe for peace in all our history, and we never will."

Again, this would be important if true. But the president's peace commissioner, Mr. Schurman, reports that he made a bargain or "treaty" with the sultan of Sulu, agreeing for the sake of peace and to secure the privilege of flying our flag at the seaport to pay the sultan $250 a month and to nine of his chiefs $510 a month, in addition to "recognizing" slavery and polygamy in his domains as "established institutions." Was not this a "bribe for peace"—and a very reprehensible and nasty bribe?

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

The Democratic Leader Gives Utterance to Some Forcible Truths.

In his speech at Sigourney, Ia., a few days ago William J. Bryan, speaking to the farmers, said:

"No man who works a farm and toils for his daily bread," said he, "can afford to support the republican party, and no man who lives in town can afford to support the republican party.

"You will sometimes find the commercial classes arraying themselves against the agricultural classes. Prince Bismarck made a speech to the farmers of Germany once. He told them that they must stand together and protect themselves from the tolls of a society which produces nothing but laws.

"You can talk to a financier in New York, and he will tell you that a republican convention in 1896 declared that this government should be carried on by a business man. In the interests of business men of the country. You ask what is a business man, and find how narrow is the difference. Is a farmer a business man? No; he just works. He begins in the morning and works all day. He is not a business man. The man on the board of trade, who bets on the price of that farmer's wheat—he is the business man. He is the one to be considered in legislation.

"We believe in bimetallism, and it should not take a farmer one minute to decide on which side he stands. A dear dollar means low prices; low prices mean hard times. I never have claimed that I was a precocious child. I never have bragged of how early in life I learned things, yet I can say that I cannot look back to the time when I did not know that when one end of a teeter board was up the other was down. The money question is just the same. When money goes up property goes down.

"The trust question is one you are now thinking about. Until a year ago no republican had ever heard a republican leader defend a trust, but now you hear republicans and republican papers defend trusts. You hear them say there are good trusts and bad trusts, and you must be very careful not to hurt the good trusts. There is a lumber combination in this country. Do you know that lumber has advanced five dollars on a thousand feet? The farmers are not on the inside of this combination.

"One branch of industry after another is being controlled by these great aggregations of wealth. I believe these trusts are antagonistic to every interest of our government. Remember the enormous campaign fund collected from the corporations in 1896. This aggregation of wealth created the republican administration, and the republican party is now directed to obey the commandment 'Remember thy creator in the days of thy youth.'

"People do not want a big army. They do not want an imperial policy. We cannot excuse ourselves in this expansion question on religious grounds when we go forth to spread the blessings of salvation out of bursting shells. We cannot say that God is in it.

"A republican senator said: 'God opened the door of the Philippines, pushed us in and shut the door.' When a man says that God sent him to notify the world that we are going to cross the ocean to make slaves of people who are fighting for their independence, I think he is mistaken. I state to you as my opinion that when God wishes to speak to the American people He will not choose Mark Hanna for His mouthpiece."

NOTHING BUT BRAG.

Republicans Rejoicing Over the Effects of the Magic Dingley Law.

The appearance of the September statement of our foreign commerce by the treasury department statistician is made the occasion for another hurrah for the great advance agent of prosperity and the party which furnishes forth the show.

According to the statement the excess of exports over imports of merchandise during the nine months ending September 30 was $317,292,362. This is about $76,600,000 less than the excess of merchandise exports during the same time last year. But the administration economists hasten to assure us that this decrease in the favorable balance is not due to any falling off in merchandise exports, which, in fact, have increased $35,750,000, but to the increase in imports, which amounts to $110,360,000.

And curiously these economists profess to be delighted at this proof that the Dingley law has not decreased our imports. Why should they be delighted at this is a mystery, seeing that the avowed purpose of the Dingley law was to exclude foreign goods. When boosting of the miraculous efficacy of the law why should they also boast that it has failed in the accomplishment of its chief purpose?

The truth obviously is that the natural effect of the law is to reduce imports, and the fact that they have increased only proves that the country in its rapid recovery from panic depression takes more foreign goods in spite of duties intended to be prohibitory.

The monthly hurrah over the commerce reports reminds one of the almost equally absurd hurrah over the debt statements when Grant was president. These statements showed a considerable reduction of the debt nearly every month, and the republican papers and orators all held them aloft and shouted: See what our president is doing! How our administration is paying the debt! The people who were earning the money by hard day's work were given no credit; all the glory went to the administration.

So now McKinley and his magic tariff are given all the credit for short crops in Europe and Asia and for the rain and sunshine and labor which have enabled us to supply the wants of the rest of the world at good prices. Indeed, the men of to-day are even more absurd in their worship of parties and statutes than were the men of a quarter of a century ago.—Chicago Chronicle.

——President McKinley, in his parting speech at Chicago had something to say about the ship building interests of the United States, and he said "more large ocean steamers are under construction in the United States than ever before," and he dwelt upon the fact that ship plants are being enlarged and new establishments are being projected. Yet Hanna, backing a shipbuilding subsidy, will attempt to force a scheme through congress requiring taxpayers to go down in their pockets and pay in the shape of subsidies millions annually to Hanna's shipping trust. The president and Senator Hanna failed to confer before the Chicago speech.—Nashville American.

QUALITY AND NEWS.

Fame and Excellence Are Determining Factors in Successful Development—One of the Important Functions of High-Class Newspapers.

In presenting interesting phases of scientific and economic problems, high-class newspapers frequently give information of as great value in their advertising columns as in those devoted to the publication of the principal events of the day; and when the fame of a product is extended beyond its natural limits into foreign lands, and a large demand created throughout Great Britain and her Colonies and the principal seaports and cities of Europe, Asia and Africa, it becomes a pleasant duty to note the fact and to tell of the points of excellence on which so great a success is based. We refer to the now world-famed laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, the product of the California Fig Syrup Company. The merits of this well-known excellent laxative were first made known to the world through the medical journals and newspapers of the United States; and is one of the distinct achievements of the press. It is now well known that Syrup of Figs is an ethical proprietary remedy, approved by the most eminent physicians everywhere, because it is simple and effective, yet pleasant to the taste and acceptable to the system, and not only prompt in its beneficial effects, but also wholly free from any unpleasant after-effects. It is frequently referred to as the remedy of the healthy, because it is used by people who enjoy good health and who live well and feel well and are well informed on all subjects generally, including laxatives. In order to get its beneficial effects, it is necessary to get the genuine Syrup of Figs, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

A MAGNIFICENT WOMAN

Holds Up Peruna as the Ideal Remedy For Female Catarrh.

Mrs. Clara Makemer.

Mrs. Clara Makemer, housekeeper for the Florence Crittenden Anchorage Mission, of Chicago, writes the following letter from 302 Chestnut street, Chicago:

"Peruna is the best tonic I have ever known for general debility, a sure cure for liver complaint, and a never failing adjuster in cases of dyspepsia.

"I have used it in cases of female irregularities and weak nerves common to the sex, and have found it most satisfactory."

From early girlhood to the end of the child-bearing period few women are entirely free from some degree of catarrh of the pelvic organs.

With Peruna the thousand and one ailments dependent upon catarrh of the pelvic organs can be wholly averted.

BRYAN IN KENTUCKY.

Travels 410 Miles and Delivers Ten Speeches.

Supports Goebel for Governor, Subordinating National Issues to the Solidity of the Party in the Commonwealth—His Address at Bardwell.

Mr. Bryan's first speech was at Bardwell to a crowd of over 5,000 who had gathered from Ballard, Carlisle, Hickman, Fulton, Graves and McCracken counties. He spoke as follows:

"LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: Whether the next President of the United States is a Democrat depends somewhat on what you do in Kentucky this year. Three years ago Kentucky did not help the Democratic party to any great extent. I believe that the people voted better than the countera connted. [Applause.] That is, I am not sure that we did not carry the state, but I am quite sure we did not get it. A year afterward we carried the state by 18,000 plurality, and then Kentuckians in other parts of the country lifted up their heads again and admitted that they were born in Kentucky.

This state is a Democratic state. We have a right to expect that this state will be Democratic in 1900, but if this state goes Republican this fall it will make it more difficult to carry it next year, and a defeat this fall will encourage the Republicans throughout the country and discourage the Democrats.

"I am told that down in this state some of the Democrats have an idea that they can divide the Democratic party in two and then whip the Republicans with either half. You can't do it. You can do a great deal in Kentucky, but you cannot divide and defeat the Republicans. Do you realize the importance of the issues that are at stake? Do you realize that upon a triumph of these great questions depend? Do you realize what the Republican party has been doing in this country? Do you realize how it has been placing the dollar above the man? And in all of its policies has been enthroning wealth and debasing mankind? You have seen it on questions of taxation laying the burdens of government upon the backs of the struggling poor, while the rich and corporate wealth have escaped their just share of taxation.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

"You have found them on the money question transferring to financiers living under another flag the right to determine our financial policy. You have seen them disregarding the interest of wealth producers and turning the instrumentalities of government over to a few, that they may enrich themselves at the expense of the many, and since the Spanish war you have seen them embarking upon two un-American policies. You have seen a Republican president asking for a standing army of 100,000 men. We only had 25,000 in 1896, and that was enough. I know it was enough, because the Republican party in its platform did not ask for any more; and yet a Republican president, in December, 1898, asked congress for authority to make the army, not temporarily, but permanently, a hundred thousand strong, and the Republican house of representatives, prompt to do his bidding, authorized this great increase, and but for the Democrats, the Populists and Silver Republicans in the senate we would to-day have a standing army of 100,000.

"This increase was asked, not to put down the Philippine war. It was asked two months before there was a Philippine war. If the Republican party remains in power the army will be raised. If an imperial policy is indorsed by the people and followed by the government we will have an army of 100,000, and when you vote this fall you are to condemn or to commend the policy of President on these great questions. And when these great questions are at stake, shall people stop to quarrel among themselves as to who would have been the best man to have nominated for any particular office? Why, to my mind, bringing a great contest like this down to the low level of a scramble over personalities and persons is degrading the issues for which we contend. What difference does it make whether my Democrat or your Democrat or somebody else's Democrat is nominated? Is not any Democrat who stands for the Chicago platform and its principles better than any Republican who desires your suffrages? [Applause.]

"In this district we had a great majority in 1896. In this county we had a great majority in 1896, and yet with all the majority in this district and all the majority in this county, we were not able to secure the electoral vote of this state. Shall we be able to do better if we allow our forces to divide and fight against each other while the enemy presents a compact army. The republicans never fight among themselves to amount to anything. I want you to realize that in this fight this fall you not only have it in your power to announce to the United States that Kentucky is Democratic, and will be Democratic in 1900, but you have it in your power to elect a Senator in this state at this election who will stand there in the United States Senate for six years as a champion of the wealth-producing masses, not only of Kentucky but of the entire United States. We in Nebraska feel an interest in your choice for Senator, because that Senator votes on our interests as well as upon yours, and if any of you think that one Senator does not count I want you to know that questions are sometimes so close in the Senate that one Senator may decide the fate of a resolution.

"If we win in 1900 and place a Democratic President in the Executive Chair, he can not secure a single reform until that reform passes the House of Representatives, and the Senate also; and shall we in this state permit the loss of a United States senator, so that after a campaign as we have in 1900, we shall throw away the fruits of victory because we divided among ourselves in a Democratic state like Kentucky?

"When the question of a large army comes before the Senate, and the senate decides between an army like we have had and an army that approaches the military establishments of the Old World, I want Jo Blackburn there to vote no against a large army. When the question comes up whether this shall be a republic or an empire, whether this nation shall build securely upon the Declaration of Independence or build upon the shifting sands of force and conquest. I want Jo Blackburn there to thunder out in favor of the Declaration of Independence and a government that derives its just powers from the consent of the governed.

"This is the first time when a president of the United States has openly abandoned the Declaration of Independence and looked to force or to purchase as a foundation for title. They tell us we have a good title to the Philippines by buying it from Spain. Ah, my friends, you can't buy a title of 8,000,000 Filipinos. You can't buy it from a discredited monarch after we ourselves armed the Filipinos to fight against that monarch. And yet those great questions and all the other questions that I have mentioned are now pressing upon the people for solution; and while these questions that affect the very foundation of our government, questions that affect the welfare of the people, questions that affect the financial policy of 70,000,000 of freemen—while these questions are pressing upon us for solution there are some Democrats who think that this is the right time to divide. I am not here to enter into a discussion of that convention. My friends, I do not believe anythiug in that convention was so bad as to deserve the remedy that they want to apply, namely, the election of the Republican ticket and a Republican senator. [Applause.]

"And when men tell me what they think has been done, the question I ask of them is, what is your remedy? Democrats, are you dissatisfied with what has been done? I ask you what is your remedy? Is it to elect a Republican state ticket? Is it to elect a Republican senator? I do not believe you will apply that remedy when you realize how much that would mean against our cause and our principles. [Cries of "No, no."]

"I want to see the Goebel ticket elected in this state from top to bottom. [Applause.] I want to see every man on the Goebel ticket elected by an overwhelming majority. [Applause.] I want to see a Legislature that will send Jo Blackburn to the Senate on the very first ballot. [Applause.] Then when you have joined your sister states in the remedy of the evils that are now threatening the very existence of this Government, when you have done this, you will have time to take up your local affairs and administer such punishment to any Democrat as you think he may deserve. SHE STOOD HIGH.

Her Name Had Appeared in the Society Column and She Was Arrogant.

A family living in a North side flat lately welcomed a new housemaid. The girl had just come from Michigan and her appearance was prepossessing. Soon after her advent it was discovered that she was inclined to treat the family with a patronizing air.

"Mary, you must do better, or I shall have to find some one to take your place," the mistress remarked the other morning.

"I don't allow anyone to speak to me that way," replied Mary, with a toss of her head. "I'm just as good as you are, and I want you to know it."

Mary flounced out of the room and returned in two minutes with the weekly paper from her room. Among the social items was the following:

"Miss Mary Hansea has gone to Chicago, to spend the winter. Miss Hansen is an acknowledged belle in the leading circles of Sawdust Creek."

Mary waited until her employer had had time to read the "personal," and then she said, with witherin, scorn:

"As I have always been accustomed to going with the very best in my town, and as I don't believe you even have your name on the society page of the Sunday papers, I guess I can't afford to stay with you."

A Thrifty Damsel.

A spirit of thrift was shown by a young woman who entered a car with sundry boxes and bundles. Another young person came in at the next station and recognized her.

"Oh, my, who is to be married?"

"Nobody; and me last of all."

"Then what are the flowers for?"

"A funeral; our teacher died, and we girls put together to get this wreath."

"Poor thing; did she know she was going to die?"

"I don't think so;" then, after a pause, she added, cheerfully: "but she does by this time," all being said in the most unconscious way.

"How much was the wreath?"

"Two dollars and sixty cents. I only had two-twenty-five."

"Did you pay the difference?"

"Dear, no. I made him give it to me for two dollars, so I saved my own quarter I put in, but I'm going to make the girls think I paid two-sixty."

"Well, that's right; the wear and tear is worth a quarter, surely."—Detroit Free Press.

BOUND TO FAIL.

The Loss of Football Players Sealed the College's Doom.

This promising young Detpiter, six feet in the clear and trim as a racing spar, went into his father's office the other day and gave him a shock. "What is there for me about the establishment to do?" he began, without prologue.

"We'll find a place for you, my boy, when the time comes."

"But now? What is there now?"

"See here, my son, if you've been getting into trouble, and need money, say so. Don't approach me in this roundabout way. I'm no spring chicken, and I've been over the course. Out with it."

"I don't owe a dollar and there's nothing to conceal from you. I can see that there will be no more college for me, and I'm not going to stay around home as a deadhead."

"No more college? Some one must have misled you. The business was never more prosperous, and I have plenty. Of course you'll go back and complete your course. I'll swell the allowance if you think best."

"No, I've concluded to cut it all and go to work. I'm not so fickle as to take up with another alma mater. Besides, the other fellows would all be new. I would have no class memories, and I'd simply be a cat in a strange garret."

"Certainly you'd not change. No one thought of such a thing. Go back and finish with the boys you started in with."

Railroad Enterprise.

The constantly increasing business of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad has necessitated very material additions to the telegraph service. During the past year nearly 2,000 miles of copper wire, 166 pounds to the mile, have been strung. New lines have been placed in service between Baltimore and Pittsburg, Baltimore and Parkersburg, Newark, O., to Chicago, Philadelphia to Newark, Philadelphia to Cumberland and Cumberland to Grafton. During the summer several of these wires were quadruplexed between Baltimore and Cumberland and duplexed west.

Like all new Baltimore & Ohio work, the lines are constructed in the best possible manner.

Dewey Had No Grievance.

"Where do you take command of the fleet?" a lady friend asked Dewey just before he left for Manila.

"At Hong Kong," he replied.

After a silence the lady said:

"Aren't you aggrieved, in view of our possible trouble with Spain, over being ordered to the remote Asiatic station, which can hardly be in the picture in case of war?"

"Sailor's luck!" replied Dewey. "Moreover, I haven't entertained grievances for years."

And then he added, evidently as an afterthought: "Besides, you know, Spain owns the Philippines."—Ladies' Home Journal.

EVERY-DAY TALKS WITH WOMEN

MRS. PINKHAM says that irritability indicates disease. Women who are nervous and snappish are to be pitied. Their homes are uncomfortable; their dispositions grow constantly worse. Such women need the counsel and treatment of a woman who understands the peculiar troubles of her sex.

MRS. ANNA E. HALL, of Milldale, Conn., was all run down in health and had completely lost control of her nerves. She wrote to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Now she writes:

"I wish to thank you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. It has helped me more than anything else. I suffered for a long time with nervousness, pains in back and limbs and falling of the womb; also had neuralgia in my head and could not sleep. I told my husband that something must be done, for I was nearly frantic with pain. Having read of the wonderful cures Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had performed, I determined to try it. I have taken it and am happy to say I am cured. I recommend it to all my friends and never tire of telling the benefit I have derived from its use. I have you alone to thank for my recovery."

MRS. ELLEN ELANAGAN, 1810 Mountain St., Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—Three years ago I was a sufferer from chronic dyspepsia, was irritable and cross, and can say that after taking seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was entirely cured. I take great pleasure in writing this to you and would be pleased to be interviewed by any one who is afflicted with that distressing complaint. I am very grateful to you."

FOR 30 DAYS YOU CAN TRY IT FOR 10 CENTS.

READ WHAT A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN

Has to say who has had 35 YEARS of active Practice of Medicine:

I have never before in my 35 years of practice of medicine given my testimonial or recommendation to any patent medicine; but there is a remedy, the result of which has come under my own observation; for there is no Disease which has so baffled the medical skill of all ages as Rheumatism and to find a Reliable remedy for the same. At last we have found it in "5 Drops," manufactured by the Swanson Rheumatic Cure Company, Chicago, Ill. The "5 DROPS," has proven itself wonderful for its curative power in Rheumatism, not as a Temporary Reliever only, but to give a Permanent Cure even in chronic cases. Sometime ago, I had among others several Rheumatic cases under my treatment and prescribed for these patients the very best Remedies which I skillfully selected, but without desirable results. I then heard of "5 DROPS" and of its Wonderful Cures, and prescribed it to a few patients who found relief from its use within a few days. After that I prescribed it to a great number and to my surprise, I will say that in the course of Two or Three Weeks after they had used "5 DROPS" and "5 Drop" Plasters they were Cured. Among these were a few who had, for a number of years, been suffering with Chronic Rheumatism, who had gained themselves around on Crutches. They came to my office without Crutches and told me they were perfectly Well. They give all the credit to "5 DROPS" and to "5 Drop" Plasters and this is their testimony to the Swanson Rheumatic Cure Company for their kindness and for the conscientious way in which they are placing these Wonderful Remedies among suffering humanity, which they told me to write to the Company as an acknowledgement. As I have seen the Curative Power of "5 DROPS" and "5 Drop" Plasters, in a great many instances, I can Truly recommend them and also that the firm is perfectly honest and reliable to deal with.

C. A. JACKSON, Physician and Surgeon, Kearney, Neb., Aug. 29, 1899.

SWANSON'S "5 DROPS" is the most powerful specific known. Free from opiates and perfectly harmless. Relief is usually felt the first night. It is a positive cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Backache, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Bleeplessness, Nervousness, Nervous and Neuralgic Headaches, Earache, Toothache, Monet Weakness, Croup, Swelling, La Grippe, Malaria, Creeping Numbness, etc., etc.

THIRTY DAYS longer to enable sufferers to give "5 DROPS" at least a trial, we will send a 25c sample bottle, prepaid by mail, for 10 cents. A sample bottle will convince you. Also, large bottles (300 doses) $1.00, 3 bottles for $2.50. Sold by us, druggists, and agents. Agents wanted in new territory. Write us to-day.

Maj. G. W. Saunders has filed suit in the circuit court at Mayfield against Jack Lewis for $1,000 damages for assault and battery. Cooper Hurt and Newton Hurt will go to Scott county and bring them back to Kentucky. This is not the first time these outlaws have violated the laws while here."

Without warning an explosion occurred blowing open the oven door. The roast came tumbling out of the oven followed by other eatables. Upon investigation it developed that a mild eyed irish tuber had swelled up and let go. A similar accident occurred near Monterey in which a potato exploded in a kettle throwing hot water on the lady of the house and seriously scalding her. As a warning to housewives the above is related. It would be well to watch Mr. Potato when being subjected to heat. It might be that a little dynamite has been engrafted into him in some unknown way.—Owen News.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1899. NO. 2.

If you want the trusts controlled in this State, vote the Democratic ticket.

If Blackburn is your choice for U. S. Senator, vote the regular Democratic ticket next Tuesday.

If you are in favor of cheaper school books, vote the regular Democratic ticket next Tuesday.

The political boodle will be placed this week, and if reports be true, some who are to shove it in this county are novices.

The rooster is at the head of the first ticket on the ballot, and under it is the only place if will be necessary to make your stencil mark.

Two thousand trusts have been organized in new Jersey within the last year, and they are authorized to issue stock to the amount of three and one-half billion dollars.

The State Board of Election Commissioners at Frankfort do not appoint the county election officers, notwithstanding the Hon. Hal Corbett's representations to the contrary.

There will be six tickets on the ballot given you when you go to vote next Tuesday, and above but one of them is the emblem of Democracy, and it is so recognized in every election from that of President down to that of constable.

Affidavits made by voters in Judge Hobson's district have been published, showing that John Young Brown endorsed the Goebel election law when he (Brown) was assisting Hobson in his race for the office of Judge of the Court of Appeals, last fall,

The bitterest campaign that has been waged in Kentucky for many years is now drawing to a close, and it is only a fair sample of all campaigns in which a portion of a great political party delegates to itself what it supposes to be authority to engage in the work of purification of politics.

A belated spring poet sings to his Uncle Sam in this wise: "Spain had a little lamb, the slickest lamb around. She sold the lamb to Uncle sam for twenty millions down. Then Sammy took it by the tail, to lead it home, you know, the mutton rare, turned out a bear, and Sam can't let it go.

You may think all you please and say all you like against the ticket nominated, and against the convention that nominated the ticket; and yet that ticket and that platform stand for Democratic principles and Democratic policies, as against Republican candidates, Rupublican platforms and Republican principles.—W. J. Bryan.

Nadaud, Republican candidate for Mayor of Covington, made a speech last Saturday night in which he gave the names of those who had tried to bribe or hire him to withdraw in favor of Geo. H. Davison, the fusion candidate. He gave the several amounts offered. Those engaged in trying to get Nadaud to side-track, were prominent Republicans, and the expose of Saturday night created a sensation.

Out in Nebraska the temperature of both the air and politics is up in the 90's, and on every prairie-dog hill is an orator spouting caloric like a volcano. Five States besides Kentucky hold elections two weeks from to-day, and in several of them—notably Ohio, Kentucky, Maryland and Nebraska—the skirmishing preliminary to the Presidential battle of next year is as hot as a lime-kiln.—Louisville Times.

The unscrupulous campaign orators and campaign sheets persist in saying that the State Board of Election Commissioners can count in whomsoever they please for Governor, which statement is the very essence of falsehood. If there is any dispute as to the election of a candidate the General Assembly disposes of the contest, and not the State Board of Election Commissioners, and yet there are men who take their cue from the campaign prevaricators and persist in spreading the falsehood.

When you tell me that you can best advocate the principles of Democracy by voting the bolting ticket, I tell you I do not believe you can do so. I do not believe that in a great contest like this you can afford to withdraw your support from the Democratic ticket even though you vote for another Democratic ticket, if by doing so you enable a Republican to be elected. I know something of bolters. There were some in 1896. —W. J. Bryan.

I come to Kentucky to tell the Democrats of Kentucky that the nation is looking on. It is watching to see whether Kentucky is to be with us or against us in the next great fight. In 1897 you gave Shackelford 18,000 majority, and if this year you elect a Republican Governor you will excite bonfires in Republican ranks all over this nation. If you elect Goebel and those with him on the ticket, and then send Jo Blackburn to the United States Senate, there will be a hurrah in the Democratic ranks from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the lakes to the gulf.—W. J. Bryan.

In 1876 some of the Democrats who say they will not support Goebel, were cursing the Republican party, declaring that it stole the Presidency of the United States from Samuel J. Tilden, and no later than 1896 these same fellows were charging the Republican party with stealing ten of Kentucky's electoral votes for William McKinley, but now some of them are proposing to assist directly, and some indirectly, in the election to the Governorship of Kentucky a member of a party at whose door they have laid two crimes that have no parallel. Does it not look strange that men would want, in so short a time, to keep company politically with those they have accused of such offenses.

Gov. Bradley has set an example that should be emulated by the Democrats of this State, who are going to withhold their support from the regular Democratic ticket. It is a notorious fact that Gov. Bradley entertains a great dislike for the Republican candidate for Governor, having about as little use for him politically as one member of a party can have for another, but, notwithstanding this, when Gov. Bradley sees defeat staring his party in the face he waives his personal dislike for candidate W. S. Taylor, and goes to the aid of his party, regarding the cause greater than any man. This is a lesson from the common enemy—a lesson from the greatest Republican in Kentucky today, a lesson that should be heeded by Democrats, because it is such party devotion as that displayed by Gov. Bradley that maintains party organization that leads to victory at the polls. A Republican victory in this State next Tuesday will not rid the Democratic party of a single evil, real or imaginary.

The Louisville Dispatch, the great anti-corruptionist, truth-lover and sanctified political sheet either willfully garbled C. J. Bronston's Lexington speech or the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune falsified that speech in its report. Here is what the Commercial Tribune reported Bronston as saying was the cause of his declaring that the Democratic party was in the hands of cut-throats and assassins:

"I knew full well that on the floor of the convention three were two contending forces that were actuated, as I believed, not by any desire to further the interest of the Democratic party, but to satisfy personal ends. One of them originated from the local city administration and the power which evidently controls it. The other came from John Whallen and the power behind him, the Louisville & Nashville railroad. These two powers alternately filled the convention hall with treacherous and, I believe, armed men, first threatening the Chairman of the Executive Committee, Mr. Johnson, and afterwards the temporary Chairman, Mr Redwine. In the midst of this I could not refrain from exclaiming as I did that the Democratic party was in the hands of cut-throats and assassins."

On that subject the Dispatch reports Bronston as saying:

"Two powers alternately filled the convention hall with treacherous, and, as I believe, armed men, first threatening the chairman of the executive committee, Mr. Johnston, and afterward the temporary chairmen. Mr. Redwine. In the midst of this I could not refrain from exclaiming, as I did that the Democratic party was in the hands of cutthroats and assassin."

The Dispatch garbled the speech for the sole purpose of protecting the L. & N. Railroad, which Bronston charged was one of the disturbing powers in that convention. The time is comeing when the Democrats of Kentucky will discover that the Dispatch has been edeavoring to deceive them in many ways.

The above shows you where to put your X next Tuesday if you desire to vote the Democratic ticket.

Citizent of Boone County.

I am a Democrat. I take my Democracy straight. I take it regular. I want no mixture. I want no "Brown" in it. I take the Redwine Democracy. It will not do, my friends, for each of the crew to say, "if I can't have my way I will sink the ship." If they do the ship will be sunk. There must be system, organization, leadership and unity of action to succeed. In union there is strength. In union there is victory. Napolean Bonaparte massed his forces against divisions of his enemies and defeated them. Stonewall Jackson massed his forces and defeated in quick succession four divisions of the enemy. Kentucky's motto is "united we stand, divided we fall." Our party has given us good and safe candidates for State offices. Their records wil prove this. Goebel is the people's stalwart friend. He has ever battled for the interests of the toiling masses—the bone and sinew of our State. It will be base ingratitude in them to forsake him now. He is a man of the type of Bryan and Blackburn. So are Beckham, Breckinridge & Co. When we desert these standard bearers we strengthen the Republican party which has increased our taxes and our burdens. Taxes on our houses and lands have been increased, while personal and corporate property has not borne its part. Property in sight is unjustly burdened. Equalize burdens, no special privileges.

Our fiscal court has madepro visions for building a bridge over Woolper creek. We should build all needed bridges or none. We should deal tenderly and carefully with the taxpayers. The price of corn and wheat is below the cost of production. The tobacco grower is at the mercy of the trust. The robber us gold standard prevails. The lov of liberty and free government is to be knocked out of the Philippines at the expense of our treasure and blood. The sharp crack of the taxgather's whip has a brisk move on us already. A bill will be introduced in the next legislature to build new state buildings. I was interviewed on this subject by a prominent official in our county before our candidates were selected. I said then, as I say now, that our state buildings are good enough and that I am opposed to taxing our people for that purpose at this time. I hope our Senator and Representative will oppose it, and I believe they will.

N. S. Walton.

If the Republican ticket succeeds next Tuesday, Gov. Bradley can be U. S. Senator.

The Boers gave the English a clear cut threshing in the first general engagement. They took two thousand British prisoners.

The result of another effort to save (?) the Democratic party in Kentucky will soon be told, and it is to be seen whether or not it will be as successful as was the effort made in that direction in 1896, and headed by Palmer and Bucker.

I have thoroughly considered the Goebel election law and consider that it is a fair law. I am satisfied the Republicans of this county would prefer it to the old law, because we have a Democratic county Judge, who, under the old law would appoint all the election officers. I believe a true Democrat prefers to have two Democrats and one Republican to appoint the election officers than to have a Republican County Judge appoint them. Let every true Democrat answer this question: If Boone had a Republican County Judge, as some other counties have, would you not rather, instead, have an election board as the Goebel law provides, to appoint the county election officers?

I was for Hardin for Governor but the answer I received as to what he has done for the people has been, "nothing, much." After the Louisville convention I had to consider. I concluded that all conventions are like the new constitution, a fraud on the people. Then I read the Louisville Dispatch, which I did not consider. At last I thought we had a sure enough man, but considered I would not vote for such men as John G. Carlisle and Grover Cleveland—quite a relief as I know. I will not have to consider between Goebel and Taylor. I can go across the river into a Republican State, and see the burden of taxation resting upon the poorly ruled and the misruled, which I am satisfied the people of Kentucky would not indorse. I consider Mr. Goebel has done more for the people in the way of reducing taxes than any officer I know of. He has stood between the people and the trusts, and worked for the people's interest. If he intends to fight for the people I consider he is worthy of the vote of Kentucky. I believe him to be the cleanest of the three. Yet I reserve the right to consider.

[Keutuckian-Citizen.]

Every citizen is interested or should be interested in the welfare and prosperity of the State. For nearly four years the Republican party has been in power, and the question for each voter to consider is: Has, that party so administered the government and affairs of the State as to entitle it to a new lease of power?

Almost at the inception of the Republican administration of the State government, for the first time in the history of the State the military was called out, and practically martial law was established at the Capital, and soldiery surrounded the halls of legislation. It was an attempt show of power, but a pitiable display of weakness—and an ineffaccable disgrace to the Common wealth.

The financial interest and conditions of the State are of paramount importance. How have the Republicans managed the finances of the State?

The amount paid for the general expenditure fund, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1892, to June 30th, 1895, was $8,469,885,87.

Under Republican rule, amount paid out for same fund, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1896, to the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1899, was $10,425,766,57; showing a difference in favor of Democratic control of the State in four years of $1,964,900.14, or nearly $500,000 per annum; a pretty heavy outlay for the luxury (?) of Republican rule.

The school fund has not been managed as well under Republican rule as under Democratic rule. During the four years, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, the amount distributed aggregated $7,880,568.14. During the years 1897, 1898, 1899, 1900, the amount distributed aggregated $6,869,162.30; showing a difference in favor of the Democratic administration of $1,011,403.84, in four years. The per capita is fixed in advance. The distribution of the fund in 1896 was made by Republicans, but the per capita for that year was fixed in 1895 by the Democrats.

Under the Democratic administration the per capita distributed during the four years averaged $2,75. Under the present Republican administration the per capita has averaged only $2.35.

The rate of taxation had been largely increased, and yet, according to the Auditor's statement for August, 1899, shows existing deficit to be $468,879.31.

Should not the tax payers of the State examine such statements as these and ascertain for themselves whether it is longer safe to trust the Republican party with the management of the financial afiairs of the State?

Voters should not permit abuse and side issues to obscure the great and vital issues between the two leading political parties. If the people want good government, State and National—and an economical and safe administration of public affairs, the only way to accomplish that result is by placing the Democracy in power.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.
[Courier.]

The revival meeting at the Oak Ridge Baptist church came to a close last Thursday night with thirteen additions to the church.

Hon. Tim Needham has returned from a busines trip to the Black Hills, where he has extensive mining interests. He says that it snowed every day while he was in North Dakota.

There are more hickory nuts on the market in Williamstown than ever known before. The crop of nuts in Grant county has been little short of wonderful this year, and the price paid for the nuts is the lowest for many years.

The religious editor was not drunk last week, but had only gone to Covington to see Bryan and hear him speak—that is the reason a notice of the Oak Ridge meeting said that five convicts had joined the church on the preceding Saturday night when it should have read converts.

Capt. Joseph Garrard a Cincinnati recruiting officer has opened a sub-station in Williamstown and will remain till the latter part of the week. He is recruiting for the regular army service for a term of three years, both white and colored soldiers, and those who enlist under him will probably see service in the Philippines. Capt. Garrard is accompanied here by an old Grant county boy, Thomas Savage, who has been in the service for 16 years. The war department requires that all volunteers must be able to read and write the English language.

CROP AND STOCK.

A firm at St. Louis, Mo., recently received an order for 350,000 lbs. of dressed poultry. The order made fourteen carloads.

It is the opinion of the farmers of this county that they never saw a finer prospect for wheat than at present. A large crop has been put in and it all looks well.

Bailey Bros., of Woodford, have sold to W. Schlessinger & Co., the Australian horse buyers, the bay stallion, Aristocrat, 5-year-old by Wilton, dam Oweena, by Alcantaro, for $2,500.

Wm. M. Hendrick, of Fleming, who is at Natchez, Miss., writes that the advance in the price of cotton will make a much better market for mules this winter. Those who have mules on hand may profit by it.

A writer put the matter very aptly when he said: "Corn loaned to hogs is cash and a good investment safe and at a very large interest. A hog is a condenser; he will put ten bushels of corn in less space than a bushel measure. He has been styled a manufacturer of hams, lard, hair brushes, head cheese, tooth brushes, glue, buttons, fertilizer, fats, bacon, knife handles, soap, whistles, sausage and satisfaction. He converts corn into coin and can buy what he will.

Parties who have taken a look at the Burley crop in central Kentucky pronounce the quality very fine in Jessamine, Woodford, Clark and Fayette counties, but the acreage is about the same as last year, and it is conservatively estimated the yield is about 25 per cent. less than the '98 crop. In Garrard, Casey, parts of Madison and Lincoln counties, the crop is not good, being poor in quality and of a very small yield. The past few days have furnished a good season to handle tobacco, and it is reported that many farmers in the Blue-Grass section, where the crop was early housed and cured, have commenced stripping their tobacco and preparing it for market. It would not be a surprise to us to see a fair amount of the new crop on the market in the next few days. None of the crop was house-burned and but little of it was field-burned. —Louisville Weed.

The polls open at 7 o'clock and close at 4, next Tuesday.

KURNEL BUNKER

Some of His Army Experiences, as Related by Himself.

BY M. QUAD. (Copyrighted)

"Yes, sah, I will smoke, sah," replied Kurnel Bunker after tenderly setting down his glass and carefully wiping off his mustache. "I hold, sah, that smoking is one of the attributes of a gentleman, sah, and that there is as much gentleness in smoking a cigar in proper form as in bowing yourself out of a drawing room. Therefo' I smoke, sah, and I enjoy it, sah, and this cigar promises to be a good one.

"Speakin' of the wah, sah—speakin' of what had been termed the fratricidal tragedy," continued the Kurnel as he settled down, "I have every reason to believe that I came out of it with credit to myself and the cause. I don't refer altogether to my conduct in battle. There were side issues, sah—several side issues—which I had to face and overcome. Soon after I became majah of my regiment I met up with Majah Goldwin, of an Alabama regiment. We were thrown together by accident, sah, and we became convivial, sah, and it was while in a state of conviviality that Majah Goldwin expressed the wish that we had a Napoleon to lead the confederate troops. I could only take his words as an imputation on the military skill of the gallant Gen. Lee, sah, and almost as soon as he had uttered them my glove struck his face, and I asked him to name the time, place and weapons. There we were, sah—Majah Bunker vs. Majah Goldwin, and we met at sunrise the next mawnin' with swords as weapons. I was never in better spirits in my life, sah—cool, calm and determined, and I resolved to fo'ce the fighting from the word. I even had the spot selected through which my sword was to pass into the majah's body. I should have killed my man, sah—pierced him through and through, but as we received our swords he remarked to me:

"'Majah Bunker, I wish it to be understood that I had no thought of casting aspersions on the character of our brave general. I meant that Napoleon should only lead under Lee.'

"That put a different look on matters, of co'se," said the Kurnel, "and after some further conversation the duel was declared off. As a man of honah, sah, I had taken the majah at his said; as a man of honah, sah, he had said one thing and meant another. Gen. Lee sent for me, but what passed between us I shall hold sacred—sacred as the grave, sah. Don't you think smoking conduceive to thirst?"

I did, and after the Kurnel had put in eight minutes assuaging the dryness of his throat he picked up the remnant of his cigar and continued:

"Egad, sah, but give a man a reputation as a duelist and his work will be cut out for him. It soon became noised about that I had brought Majah Goldwin to book, and I had scarcely been promoted to a lieutenant colonelcy when Adjt. Gen. Graham, of the Third corps, took opportunity to criticise the way I led my men into action at Glendale. When we charged, sah, I was at the head of the regiment, sah. I waved my sword five times around my head and then lowered it, and the adjutant contended that I was short by two waves. We had an argument which grew into a dispute, and at length I looked him straight in the eyes and said:

"'Adjt. Graham, should it be your pleasure to meet me on the field of honah I will endeavor to wave my sword until one or the other of us has received full satisfaction!'

"Egad, sah, but I've been told that my remarks were trite and to the point, and I rather reckon they were. We met early next mawnin'. My attitude was the same as befo', sah—the same as befo'. That is, it was calm and determined, with a feeling that I should conquer. To do the adjutant justice, he toed the mark, but there was a great difference in our demeanor—a great difference in my favor. We were about to place ourselves on guard when the adjutant stepped back and said:

"'Kurnel Bunker, I am heah at your service—at your service, sah—but as a man of honah I wish to make an explanation.' At Glendale you waved your sword five times around your head and called upon your brave men to follow you. I was under the ideah, sah, that the tactics called for seven waves, and hence our dispute and this meeting. Last evening I looked up the matter and discovered that we were both wrong. It is six waves of the sword, Kurnel Bunker—six waves and a determination to conquer or die.'

"Well, sah," said the Kurnel as he slowly pushed the ashes off his cigar with his finger, "as we were both wrong, and as we were both men of honah, the only way to do was to shake hands over the matter and become reconciled. I was pleased, and yet not quite satisfied. I had determined to pink the adjutant, sah — to pink him in the right shoulder, and I felt that I had surrendered a privilege. The credit of calling him out was mine, however, and I could not fail to observe that I had gained a point or two. Fo' weeks later I was a full kurnel. You can draw your own inference, sah—your own inference. I observe that it is now three o'clock in the evening. It is my usual custom at this hour—. That is, at three o'clock in the evening—."

There was no reason why his usual custom should be broken in upon, and after it had been duly respected he gracefully crossed his legs and musingly observed:

"I should have killed Kurnel Hopson, sah—killed him stone dead at the first fire, but for an unlooked-for interruption. At the battel of Manassas I had three horses shot under me — three horses, sah. A year later, one day while conversing with Kurnel Hopson on the incidents of that battle, he turned and said:

"'Kurnel Bunker, allow me to tip my hat to you, sah. You had 11 horses shot under you at Manassas, and yet you took it as a matter of co'se. You are a chevalier of old, sah—a chevalier of old.'

"'Only three horses, Kurnel Hopson—only three,' I replied.

"'Eleven, Kurnel Bunker.'

"'Three, Kurnel Hopson.'

"'And thus we disputed, sah. The kurnel had somehow got the number of horses at 11 and wouldn't give up, and of co'se I stuck to three. The result was that I called him out. He was a brave and gallant man, and he was on hand to the minute. He chose pistols, and I felt it my duty to remove him to another sphere of action. A brave and gallant man, sah, but he was killing too many horses for my credit. We had taken our stand and were ready for the word when the federals suddenly attacked our center. Gen. Lee sent an aide to find me and to order me to hurl my regiment into the thick of the fight, and he came upon us at the critical moment. I was about to shoot Kurnel Hopson through the head, but orders from the chief were not to be disobeyed. As I turned away I said:

"'Kurnel Hopson, our affair is off for an hour or so.'

"'When we have beaten the federals back,' he replied.

"'But it was not to be, sah—not to be,' sighed Kurnel Bunker as he rose up. "When we had beaten the federals back—when my gallant regiment had performed deeds to live in history forever—I returned to the field of honah. Alas! I had no opponent! Kurnel Hopson had fallen in the thick of the fight, dying as a soldier should, and there was no one for me to shoot at. And, egad, sah, he probably went to his death still firmly convinced of the report of the 11 horses—the 11 horses shot under me at Manassas! Too bad, sah—too bad! It was an utter waste of eight good horses!"

Old Rooms Under New Name.

There is a constant craving in the American mind for something new. When this craving cannot be satisfied in any other way, we call old things by new names, and, until the novelty wears off, we are quite happy. We are told the parlor is no longer to be called the parlor, but is now the drawing room, the sitting room is the living room, the bedroom the sleeping room. If the hall is large enough to put a chair in, it is called the reception hall. The dropping of the word parlor is not to be regretted, as it has a cold, formal sound and suggests horse-hair furniture and a general feeling of discomfort. Drawing room seems a little pretentious for the average best room, and the library, if there is one, is usually the living room. It will be a little difficult for some to accept the now preferred names and they will continue calling rooms by their old and familiar names.

STRANGE LAPSE OF MEMORY.

President McKinley's Talk About Acquiring Territory Through Providence.

President McKinley should have been a little more careful in his rear platform speeches on his car tour about the country. He made a serious break in his talk at Cedar Falls, Ia.

After saying that since he was last in Iowa we have added some territory, meaning the Philippines, he continued: "I believe, my fellow citizens, that this territory came to us in the providence of God. We did not seek it. It is ours, with all the responsibilities that belong to it; and as a great, strong, brave nation we mean to meet them and we mean to carry out our education and our civilization there."

It being very early in the morning, possibly the president was not quite awake, or surely he would have remembered the letter written the other day by Judge Day, in the interest of his friend, the president for effect on the Ohio election.

Judge Day made no pretense that the Philippine territory "came to us," but distinctly declared that we did "seek it." Our forces had not captured it, and at no time held more than the bay of Manila and a small part of the land adjoining. While the peace negotiations were in progress at Paris, with Judge Day as chief agent of the president, no hint was given for some time that we wanted all the Philippines, or more than a small bit of territory if we desired any. The proposition, when at last made, took the Spaniards by surprise, and they protested vigorously.

Then Judge Day made an offer of $20,000,000 for the entire group and, still protesting vigorously against being forced to sell, the Spanish commissioners finally consented to the deal. Here is the judge's own language in his campaign letter:

"Our proposal at Paris embodied the concessions which for the sake of immediate peace the American government was willing to make. There was doubtless other reasons actuating the commissioners in making the proposals.

"It was not claimed that the United States had a right to the Philippine islands as a matter of conquest. The United States has never undertaken, so far as I know, to wrest from a foreign country lands or possessions simply by right of conquest. Had we been disposed to do so, it must be remembered that we were in possession only of the city, bay and harbor of Manila under the protocol of August 12, 1898. The capture, after the signing of the protocol, by Gen. Merritt and his forces, whatever its legal effect may have been, included no more territory than we were entitled to hold under the protocol."

The offer was made partly for the sake of immediate peace, but "there were doubtless other reasons actuating the commissioners in making the proposals." Very likely. Judge Day, as one of the commissioners, and the recognized immediate confidential agent of President McKinley, knows all about those "other reasons," though he may not deem it advisable to tell.

But here is the fact clearly stated in his letter. The territory did not "come to us in the providence of God" without our seeking it. On the contrary, it was not in our keeping; we had not won it; it was still the property of Spain to hold, or sell, or to give away. President McKinley desired it, and his commissioners made a bid for it. It will be remembered that at the time it was distinctly declared that every step taken by the commissioners at Paris was directed from Washington, and that the president was "the whole thing" in the transaction. When the Spanish commissioners became indignant at the proposition, they were told plainly that they must sell, and that they could not get a raise of another dollar on the bid.

It is strange that President McKinley should have forgotten those circumstances and Judge Day's recent letter detailing them, when he told the people of Cedar Falls that the Philippine islands territory "came to us in the providence of God" and without our seeking it. But it was very early in the morning, and the president had not cleared his mind with his morning coffee.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PRESS COMMENTS.

——Hannaism is the issue in Ohio this year. The people of every county want to have their affairs run by Mark Hanna just vote the republican ticket. —Hamilton (O.) Democrat.

——William McKinley is kept aware that there is such a person as William J. Bryan and that he represents the sentiments of a large number of his countrymen.—Chicago Democrat.

——In spite of Mr. Foraker's professed devotion to the Ohio republican ticket it is to be observed that Mr. Hanna involuntarily dodges every time his senatorial colleague makes a motion in the direction of his hip pocket.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Up to the present time Mr. McKinley, in his swing 'round the circle, has referred to "patriotism" 193 times, to "the flag" 176 times and to "Providence" 164 times. "Providence" appears to be getting a little the worst of it, while "humanity" isn't in it at all. —Wheeling Intelligencer.

——The farmer gets especially the worst of it in the trust management. It is not to be expected that he can be fooled with specious essays on the benevolence of the "combines." One of the campaign inconveniences of the Hannaites is that they cannot secure the circulation of one sort of newspapers among the agriculturists and another sort among the people of the cities.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Mr. McKinley, in every speech delivered in his stumping tour this fall, takes occasion to express his gratification that the people of the United States are still patriotic and true to the flag. The American people were patriots and lovers of the star-spangled banner when Mr. McKinley was one of the eventualities of future time. They will so remain when he is a memory of the past.—Omaha World-Herald.

INCONSISTENT McKINLEY.

The President's Queer Way of Handling the Philippine Troubles.

President McKinley declared in speech No. 55, delivered on his trip around the circle, that: "It is no longer a question of expansion with us; we have expanded." This being so, why does the president say that the matter is with congress?

Perhaps President McKinley has in mind the McEnnery resolution, which saved from defeat by a single vote the treaty with Spain.

The resolution read as follows:

That by the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it the intention to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States. But it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands, to prepare them for local self-government and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

With such a declaration as this lingering in his memory, McKinley, although assuring the people that "we have expanded," yet feels called upon to hedge by saying that the matter is in the hands of congress.

In speech No. 56, McKinley said of our position in the Philippines:

"We are not there to oppress. We are there to liberate. We are not there to establish an imperial government, but we are there to establish a government of liberty, and law, and protection to life, property and opportunity to all who dwell therein."

This is a pleasing fancy sketch, but a correspondent of the Hong-Kong Mail gives another view. He says:

"Taxes are higher now than under Spanish rule and the inhabitants bitterly complain that living expenses have doubled. The native police have been discharged and the Americans appointed in their stead, being totally unacquainted with the language and modes of life of the civil population, and giving endless dissatisfaction. The old inhabitants state that murders, robberies and crimes of every description are greater than before, and the American police, in their blundering endeavors to search out criminals, resort in their ignorance of the haunts and methods of the criminals to the most tyrannical means to obtain information for the capture of offenders.

"Another source of discontent is the use of the money secured from taxes and from customs for the support of the army, instead of using the funds for carrying out much-needed municipal necessities. All these causes serve to prolong the war by keeping the natives, who have lived in hope on promises of good government, in a constant state of irritation."

It appears from this that McKinley will have to deliver more than 56 speeches to convince the people of this country that everything is lovely in the Philippines.—Chicago Democrat.

OHIO MUST BE BOUGHT.

Boodle Must Be Freely Used to Carry It for the Republicans This Year.

Mr. McKinley might readily disavow all responsibility for this direct demand upon government officeholders all over the United States, that they violate the law which they are sworn to obey and go down in their pockets for money with which to buy the venal-floating vote of Ohio; but, as the president's political conscience is the property of Mark A. Hanna, and the circular in question could have been issued without that gentleman's consent and indorsement, the country at large perforce will accept it as only another executive step in the direction of a return to the old corrupt political spoils system.

With all the money Hanna or his friends have made out of Spanish war contracts in coal, wood and sundries, there certainly should be a sufficiency of available republican money in Ohio to pay the "legitimate" expenses of a local campaign. Hanna, himself, may be penurious, but he has ways to extract saccharine matter from trusts, and should not be in need of outside help to pay for printing, stationery, postage stamps and the services of as many orators as may be required, even in an emergency.

The appeal of the Ohio state committee will strike the average American voter as evidence that, in the opinion of the administration, not only the election of Judge Nash as governor, but the general result in 1900 is jeopardized and that, regardless of cost, the "president's home state" must be bought up in November. It is tantamount to a confession that the party is in a bad way everywhere.

In view of the Hanna-McKinley panic, which induces the manipulators of the combination to insist that public servants shall commit moral if not technical crime, and which is sending the chief of the state and his official family all over the western states like a party of hired spellbinders, the question naturally suggests itself: What are the real chances for republican success in the states that hold elections this autumn?—Washington Times.

——The president has felt himself encouraged as the result of his recent political campaign to avow the determined purpose of his administration to hold on to the Philippines at all hazards. We all know what to expect as the outcome of the imperialist programme and we will all be prepared to resist its fulfillment to the uttermost. This is compensation enough to the people for the palpable breach of good faith and good taste of which William McKinley has been guilty in assuming the attitude of a political stump orator in connection with the reception of the recently discharged volunteer regiments.—St. Paul Globe.

ART IN ARCHITECTURE.

DESIGNED AND WRITTEN ESPECIALLY FOR THIS PAPER.

THIS building is designed in an attractive manner. The cost to build is $3,200. The plan has many excellent features. The underpinning is built of red brick laid up in red mortar. The superstructure is sheathed on the exterior, and then covered with clapboards and painted a rich red color, brilliant in tone, with ivory white trimmings.

FRONT ELEVATION OF SEMICOLONIAL RESIDENCE.

The roof is covered with shingles and stained a moss green in harmony with the remainder of the color scheme. Dimensions: Front, 28 feet; side, 37 feet, not including the veranda. Height of ceilings: Basement, 7 feet; first story, 10 feet; second story, 9 feet; attic, 8 feet.

The interior arrangement is excellent, and is finished off in a handsome manner. The hall is trimmed with cherry, and it contains an ornamental staircase turned out of cherry, with handsome newel posts, balusters and rail, and it is lighted effectively by delicate stained glass. The parlor is treated in ivory white and has an open fireplace, trimmed with tilefacings and hearth, and mantel treated in ivory white same as the trim.

The library is trimmed with cherry; and this room and parlor are separated from the halls by archways supported upon columns rising up, and finishing in Ionic capitals at archways.

The fireplace in the library is trimmed with tiles and finished with a carved mantel. The dining room is trimmed with oak. It is furnished with a paneled wainscoting, ceiling beams and buffet of handsome design built in the nook shown on plan. The center window is a French window and runs down to the floor, opening onto the balcony at side.

The kitchen and pantries are trimmed and wainscoted with yellow pine, and are fitted up in the best possible manner with all the modern and necessary fixtures. The rear hall and toilet are conveniently arranged and fitted up.

The second floor contains five chambers, some of which are treated in cherry, while the remainder are treated in white. The bathroom is wainscoted and furnished with porcelain fixtures and exposed nickel-plated plumbing. The attic floor can be fitted up with chambers, store room, etc.

The basement floor is cemented and fitted up with furnace room, coal rooms, laundry, fruit room and other necessary rooms. GEO. A. W. KINTZ.

Fruit Pits in Demand.

Growers of stone fruits can count upon a new source of revenue. The pits of peaches, apricots, nectarines, plums and prunes, heretofore thrown away or used for fuel, have a market value. Especially is this true of peach and apricot pits. This year there is a strong demand for them at from eight to ten dollars a ton, delivered in San Francisco. The kernel is the product sought. From the apricot kernel that delicious French "nut candy" is made, displacing the almond. Cinnamon, allspice and nutmeg are adulterated with this same pit, ground and highly prepared for the purpose. Prussic acid and essence and oil of almonds are made from the peach and prune pits, and these flavors are used in a thousand different ways. The pits are cracked in San Francisco and the kernels are then sent east.

Unhealthy Slate Pencil.

The use of slate and pencil by children is denounced as unhealthy. It has been forbidden in the schools of Zurich, Switzerland, and pen, ink and paper have been substituted instead. The reasons given are that the light gray marks on the slate cannot be followed without straining the eyes.

Velocity of Human Blood.

It is estimated that the velocity of the blood movement in the arteries is about 12 inches a second, and that the length of time required for the blood to make an entire circuit of the vascular system is about 20 seconds.

Crocodiles Eat Big Stones.

Crocodiles, like ostriches, swallow pebbles and small stones, which serve the purpose of grinding their food. The natives assert that it is possible to tell the age of a crocodile by the number of stones in its stomach, for they swallow one each year. In point of fact 15 stones have been found in the stomach of a crocodile 12 feet long, whereas the average number for younger ones varies between four and eight. So says Mr. Voltzkow, who has been studying this matter for several years.

Dynamo and Dynamite.

Till recently the employment of electricity in any shape or form in Constantinople was strictly forbidden. Incredible as it may appear the sultan naively imagined that a dynamo must have something to do with the manufacture of dynamite.

Intelligence in Melons.

Something like intelligence is often exhibited by plants. If, during a dry season, a bucket of water be placed near a dry pumpkin or melon, in the course of a few days it will turn from its course, and get at least one of its leaves in the water.

Bangles Regarded Sacred.

In the northwest province the glass bangles worn by the Hindoo and Mussulman women are regarded as sacred objects. If a glass bangle be accidentally broken the pieces are gathered together and kissed three times.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

Immense Loads Hauled Over a Correctly Macadamized Road Near Camden, N. C.

The illustration shows one of the advantages of having good roads. The size of a load that can be handled is very much greater than that possible to be drawn on a common dirt road. Relative to these roads, Prof. J. A. Holmes says: In macadamizing, the following general plan has been adopted: Upon the graded and settled earth surface, a macadam road, 12 feet wide and about nine inches thick, is constructed. Usually in the center, though in places on one side of the road, an excavation from four to six inches deep is made in the earth's surface, and the bottom is then carefully rolled with a steam roller. Upon this excavated surface is placed a layer of field stone about four inches thick, and this is then thoroughly rolled. Upon this surface is placed a three-inch layer of stone crushed to from one to two inches in size, and after this has been thoroughly rolled there is placed a third layer, about two inches thick, of finely crushed stone, including screenings, and this latter is in turn thoroughly rolled. The average cost of these roads, including grading and macadamizing, is about $2,000 per mile.—Farmers' Review.

FARMERS' DAUGHTERS.

They Should Learn How to Milk a Cow and How to Harness and Drive a Horse.

The girls on a farm should learn to milk as well as the boys, even if they are not expected to take full charge of such work. In many countries milking is thought to be essentially a woman's work; not only because it requires little physical strength when one is accustomed to it, but because they generally are quieter, and do not get angry with the cow, and because they are naturally better and the milk is cleaner. We believe the farmer's daughter should know how to milk and to harness and drive a horse. Occasions frequently come, perhaps in cases of an accident, when it is very important that a woman should ride or drive a horse perhaps to the village for a physician, and to find them ignorant and helpless at such a time may cause the loss of a life, and a life-long regret to them and to others. We know on many farms their education goes much farther than this, and that many girls and young women can drive the team and manage the mowing machine, horse rake, seed drill, or other machinery on the farm as well as their brothers if they have many, and we know no good reason why they should not do so, as well as ride a bicycle, if they will learn, though we do not care to advocate the regular employment of women in farm labor. But we have seen a woman, New England born and bred, who could handle the scythe and pitch-fork in the hayfield or the plow and hoe in cultivated fields, better than most men and do it all day, too. Yet she was as capable of doing good work in the house or dairy room as she was out of doors. We knew a German in western New York whose "boys were all girls," as he said. There were some half dozen of them, well educated, graduates of a high school in a neighboring city, accomplished musicians, refined and ladylike, and yet any one of them could go into the harvest field and do a day's work that would compare in amount or neatness with the best of farmhands. And they were also skilled in housework and dairy work.—American Cultivator.

Changing in the Ripening.

Dr. E. W. Allen, assistant director of experimental stations in the agricultural department at Washington, has just returned from the west, after inspecting the various stations. One of the most interesting matters to which he devoted his attention was the collection of facts relating to cheesemaking. The station at Wisconsin is taking the lead in this matter, and the discoveries which have been made there are at variance with those made in Europe—that the ripening of cheese is due to bacteria. American experiments demonstrate beyond doubt that the principal change in the albuminoids which takes place in the ripening process is dependent upon the fermentation in the milk itself and not upon the bacteria.

Borers should be cut or probed out whenever they are present. Their presence may be known by the sawdust like castings of the insect or by depressions in the bark.

ONE-YEAR-OLD TREES.

According to a Kansas Horticulturist They Can Be Planted Safely in Most Sections.

The injury and destruction to nursery trees caused by the severity of last winter has made it necessary to sell younger trees for a year or two to come than are usually sold. Many who wish to plant orchards are doubtful of the wisdom of planting apple and pear trees less than two years old. While there may be some objections to planting one-year-old trees there are several points in their favor. In digging them very few roots are cut, compared with the older trees. The labor of setting is less than with larger ones. There being no side branches the head can be formed to any desired height and of any style. There is less danger of getting San Jose scale or any other like pest on small and young trees than on large and old ones. The original cost of one-year-olds is less than of older ones. They are small and light, and therefore cheaply transported. The objections are greater liability of injury from careless persons in working about them than if they were larger, and later coming into bearing. There may be others, but these are the two that are commonly raised. The latter one is disputed by some orchardists, they claiming that the younger trees having more roots in proportion to their tops than large ones grow better and within a few years are fully as large and bear as soon as the older ones. This has come true in some cases in my own experience, and I have sold many thousands of one-year-old apple trees to my Kansas neighbors and others, many of which I have had opportunity to observe until after bearing age. They were very satisfactory wherever well cared for.—H. E. Van Deman, in Farm and Fireside.

PLANTING CHESTNUTS.

How an Eastern Horticulturist Obtained Success After a Number of Failures.

Three years ago I came into possession of practically an abandoned farm 150 acres in chestnut and pine and 100 in tillage, with many hillsides and places which could not be cultivated. I wished to get trees growing on these places; how to make them grow from the seed I did not know, nor could I find anyone who did. So I went to work planting chestnuts in different ways, to see which would succeed, writes a contributor to Country Gentleman.

I first took a six-tined fork, forced it into the turf two inches deep and say four inches forward, threw a chestnut under and drew out my fork. I saw that one man was working at a disadvantage, so calling a man, I did the lifting of the turf and he threw the chestnuts. The result was that every chestnut grew, and they are now two feet high. I then plowed a half-acre, dropped a chestnut every two steps and stepped upon it. Not one of the chestnuts grew. I plowed a furrow on another piece, every four feet, dropped a chestnut every four feet on the edge of furrow, and back-furrowed against this. Not 20 trees started on the whole piece; those which did start were where they were covered lightly and nature's conditions were complied with. It is so simple and quick to plant a seed with man and fork, that I shall do more of it in the future.

PROTECTING TREES.

Wrapping the Lower Part of the Trunk with Tarred Paper Will Keep Away Mice and Borers.

Much protection against mice and borers can be given young fruit trees by wrapping the lower part of the trunk with tarred paper, but do it as suggested in the illustration. Dig away the earth about the tree so the paper can be put down below the surface. Then fold the paper about the trunk according to the diagram at the right, making the edges join as do the edges of a stovepipe. This prevents the entrance of insects to lay eggs under the bark. When the paper is in place, put back the earth about it and tie the top of the paper closely to the tree.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Proper Road Maintenance.

Even with so many miles of improved roads being built in different states, there is not yet sufficient attention paid to the subject of maintenance. Nothing remains long without change, and highways are no exception. When completed and brought into perfect shape they reach their maximum condition of efficiency, but they do not retain it long unless they are constantly watched and cared for. The results obtained resemble what would occur if a railway company should neglect its roadbed and discharge its trackwalkers and inspectors. In France the national roads are cared for on just the same system that railroads use to keep their roadbeds in order, and the result is that the French roads are the finest in the world.

In an old plantation of both blackberries and raspberries, more suckers will appear than should be allowed to grow. All unnecessary ones should be cut away.

THE WELSH IN PATAGONIA.

Efforts Have Been Made to Suppress the Little Colony of British Subjects.

The agents in this country of the Welsh colony in Patagonia are by no means inclined to rest satisfied with the official rebuff which they have received through the refusal of the government to intervene in their behalf. They recognize that their demand, however logically sound and historically well founded, was somewhat inopportunely put forward, and was, from a departmental point of view, rather unreasonable. The senior delegate is frank on this point. "The reply of the foreign office," he says, "was not so favorable as what was wished, but then we wished more than could be expected, seeing that no great efforts had been made in furtherance of the object in view." It has, therefore, been determined to carry the movement into the provinces and endeavor to educate and stimulate public opinion by the organization of meetings at which the case for the colonies may be explained. Lancashire has been the first district selected for this purpose. The expedition by means of which the colony was originally founded was largely financed from Liverpool, and it is probable that a good deal of sympathy could easily be aroused in that locality. The delegates are perhaps not unmindful of the old adage: "What Lancashire thinks today England will think to-morrow."

Meanwhile matters are not improving in Patagonia. Though public meetings continue to be held in favor of the administrative independence of the colony, it is evident that the speakers are embarrassed by the direct opposition on the part of the Argentine government. A keen sense of disappointment is felt at the fact that no notice was taken in parliament of the high-handed arrest and unconstitutional detention in jail of Messrs. Evans and other British born settlers in January last, and it is feared that the absence of any protest on the part of this country will serve to increase the active hostility of the authorities at Buenos Ayres. A more serious and practical cause of complaint is to be found in the policy of isolation by means of postal blockade which has been carried into effect by Argentine. "The communication," it is said, "between Buenos Ayres and Chupat seems to be open now, but for some months past the steamers carried no mails to the colony, and in all probability the heavy mails which have been accumulating in Buenos Ayres have been designedly kept back, or destroyed by government order." Additional friction is also to be apprehended on religious grounds.

It will be remembered that one of the gravest complaints made by the colonists was that their young men drafted into the national guard were compelled to drill on Sundays. It was deeply resented, too, that Sunday was chosen for the arrest of the colonial reform leaders, which actually took place during the holding of a religious service, and it was believed, rightly or wrongly, that these things were expressly intended to outrage their feelings. They are threatened now with an attempt at direct propagandism. A number of Roman Catholic priests have recently been sent into the colony considerably in excess of the spiritual needs of their co-religionists. The Roman Catholics in Chupat—that is to say, the few shopkeepers and officials of the Latin race and the half-caste laborers—constitute only a very small minority of the population, and their numbers are practically stationary. It has been the avowed determination of Maj. O'Donnell, the governor, to denationalize the little community at Chupat by striking at its system of education. With this view he has endeavored by financial starvation and other methods to stamp out the Welsh schools and to replace them by others on a Latin model. To do this would be to badly wound the susceptibilities of the little colony of exiled Welshmen, and it can easily be understood that a feeling of very genuine alarm has been excited by the priestly invasion from Buenos Ayres.

The Chupat delegates have an extremely interesting case to lay before their fellow countrymen at home. The remote and romantically circumstanced colony of shepherds and farmers in Patagonia feel that they have a claim, in blood, if not in law, on the support of the country from which they sprang, and from which they have never seceded even by the process of naturalization. They ask that there should be extended to them something of the active friendliness which Great Britain has so freely and properly exhibited toward the Outlanders and the Armenians. They are universed in the conventions of international politics, but their common sense goes straight to the point. They make their countrymen acquainted with their grievances, and they refuse to believe that the resources of diplomacy are unable to provide a remedy.—London Post.

Possibility of Trouble.

"You tallow-faced slob!" snarled the bad boy of the neighborhood. "For two cents I'd break yer face!"

"I shall go and consult the lexicons in reference to that word 'slob,'" responded the other; a little boy from Boston, wrathful but self-possessed, "and if it has an opprobrious signification I will return and chastise you."—Chicago Tribune.

The Bitters invariably strengthens weak stomachs and torpid livers, and is one of the blessings of the age.

WOMEN do suffer!
Even so-called healthy women suffer!
But they are not healthy!
The marks left by pain are on the young faces of many of our daughters. Pain that leaves its mark comes from a curable cause. If that cause is not removed its influence reaches out and overshadows a whole life. The reason Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so uniformly successful for over a quarter of a century in overcoming the suffering of women, is that it is thorough and goes directly to the cause. It is a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

MUST WOMEN SUFFER?

MISS EMILY F. HAAS, of 148 Freeman St., Greenpoint, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I wish to state that I used your Vegetable Compound with the greatest success. I was very sick for nearly a year with hysteria, was blown-hearted and nervous; also suffered with painful menstruation and pain in back and limbs. I often wished for death, thinking nothing would cure me. I had doctors, but their medicines did me no good. At last, by the advice of a friend, I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. and I am happy to say it has entirely cured me.

JENNIE SHERMAN, of Fremont, Mich., Box 748, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel that I must write you and tell you what your medicine has done for me. I had neuralgia of the stomach for two years, so bad that I could not do any work. I had two or three doctors, but did not seem to get any better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and improved from the first, had better appetite, and after taking three bottles of Compound and one box of Liver Pills, can say that I am cured. Your Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine."

Miss Lou Williams returned from Cincinnati, Saturday.

Geo. H. Stephenson has killed between 50 and 75 squirrels this season.

Mrs. McConnell, of East Bend, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. C. P. Baker.

Most boys in Union have put in a full stock of hickory nuts and walnuts for winter.

Miss Lottie Fail is very much pleased with her school at Richwood and progressing nicely.

Miss Josie Gutzon returned from Covington after a pleasant visit of several weeks with her sister.

R. T. Clements had fresh beef for sale Saturday, the first offered by Union butchers this season.

Mrs. Matilda Huey's funeral at Big Bone, Sunday, was attended by a large number of Union people.

Larry Judge, of Jassamine county, dropped into town Saturday evening after taking in the barbecue.

In reporting the Grange Hall school, last week, Miss Louise Bristow's average should have shown 94½ instead of 94 as printed.

Uncle Lewis Corbin is as brown as a berry, politically, and we may be red as a Gob-el-er, but we get along nicely together all the same.

Joseph Huey has been staying in Walton and attending school, but on account of Mrs. Hick's illness he is going from home now. He boarded with Mr. and Mrs. Dave Hicks.

Matson Rachal is like every other man of silent, quiet habits, he can do anything that comes before him to do, as his labors of late in the field of architecture and building fully prove.

"Uncle Hook" Senour and your correspondent have made arrangements to celebrate xmas by breaking the neck off of a bottle of "Mum's Dry" and he is going to be mum and we will be dry.

Noah Tanner continues to have trouble with his rheumatism. The disease traveled all over his body but finally located in his hip and back where electric belts and medicine fail to dislodge it.

James Crisler, of Long Branch, was up Saturday evening, and talked about old fashioned cooking, such as roasting corn in the ashes with the shucks on, baking corn bread in the ashes wrapped in corn shucks, &c.

In using the telephone, people are not always particular to use the very politest and choicest language, as they expect no one to listen except the other fellow, but madame rumor says, "there are others!" who listen.

Neal Bros., of Hathaway, were hauling corn to Erlanger, Thursday. Buck will be mighty lousome without Pitt, but the livery stable business will keep him hustling. Mr. Neal is moving there in order that his daughter may attend Covington high school.

On account of the rain J. L. Frazier felt a little jubus about going to the barbecue at Florence, but when he saw the veteran Democrats from Big Bone going in the dreuching on rain horseback and no top buggies, he became enthused, hitched up and pulled out.

Prof. Voshell thinks American people are too much given to picking out one hero from 10,000 and giving him a great boost to the neglect of 9,999 equally deserving. His motto is, "remember the men who pull the triggers and carry 75 lbs. of ammunition the same as Admirals and Captains."

The telephone line has done more business by 200 per cent. than any one here supposed it would. Thos. Garrison wanted to buy stock sheep, Saturday, and instead of driving through to Cincinnati, he telephoned for 30 cents and got his sheep all the same, saving say $2.70 in cash, and a long ride. This is only one instance out of many.

At a meeting of the Blade Club, Friday night, the dry weather was discussed and some facts like these were brought out: One farm was so barren of grass that rabbits were seen with a canteen of water and lunch basket tied around their necks as they hopped over the dry land; another farm was so hard and dry that the sheep on it had to be shod, andcattle put on stilts so they could live by picking twigs from the trees, &c.

Saturday morning a flue top on Esq. Bannister's residence fell down even with the roof, and caused the cry of "fire" to be raised on the street. Mrs. Burkett had just built a fresh fire in the stove and the flue being choked up caused smoke to roll out of the stove below. Fortunately no damage resulted from fire, but the falling brick and rolling of smoke caused lots of excitement for a few minutes. A ladder was handy and soon brought into use and our friend J. M. Wilson, tripped up it like a boy of sixteen.

In going around the circle, Thursday we struck Gunpowder about 7:30, with Mr. Taggart and the United States. Three of the leading citizens told us positively it had rained at Florence the evening before and was cool and serene up there. Mr. Taggart being better acquainted with the world and its ways, said he believed the "rain story" a fake but your correspondent, child-like and innocent, in our credulity swallowed the "rain story" and ventured on to the good old town where we have spent many pleasant days, in the last twenty years, to find it dryer than a dry-dock and wetter than a ship-canal, if you had the wherewith to start the overflow. The political situation was at boiling temperature, say 212° in the shade. Just as we went into town Mr. Thomas, the Insurance hustler, and Mr. Thos. Clutterbuck went out, and this might be called the in-and-out of the situation. If you saw two men talking that agreed politically they were giving some other fellow hadess, that did not agree with them; then if you saw two fellows talking together that did not agree, they were both giving the other hercules on toast. We had a nice time with the boys and left for Union, believing Florence to be all-right, but a "little warm."

Mrs. Corbin has had a very sick mule for several weeks. Applegate, of Aurora, is treating it, and thinks it will get well, but will take some time. It is afflicted by inflammtion of the pia mater or organ surrounding the brain.

The writer spent last Sunday with J. K. Corbin, near Aurora. We were surprised on nearing his place at the change caused by the many buildings erected since last we visited him. He has also razed the ancient landmark, a huge log building here just past the middle of the 18th century, and around which the Indians used to prowl and disturb the occupants, some of which, no douht, were the old pioneers that aided in the settlement of our grand old Commonwealth. There were the apertures through the walls made purposely for the reception of the old flintlock, to ward off the enemy. Mr. C's farm has taken the name of Sunny Slope. He is certainly a practical farmer and has made a wonderful change in the old farm known as the old Henry farm. To say we were royally entertained is putting it mildly.

He was formerly a resident of Boone county, but about 30 years ago went to Howard county, Mo., with hardly capital enough to pay his expenses there. He went in debt for a small farm and went to work to win, and has succeeded in accumulating nice a little fortune. He has also been honored by the people of his county by being elected County Judge. He reports great harmony among the Democrats of his State, and says that William J. Bryan is the choice of every Democrat for President in 1900.

Uncle Joel Tanner will celebrate his 92nd birthday next Thursday, Nov. 2. He is one or the oldest men in the county, but is still enjoying very good health, and is very active for a man of his age. We called on him last Sunday morning, and during his conversation he spoke of a tree he sawed into wood last week. He has also been a great student of the Bible, and while his eyes have failed to such an extent as to prevent him from reading he still remembers the many truths which he gathered from the Bible years ago, and converses very intelligently on any subject. His life has been one of great activity and he still has a considerable amount of energy, and when his health permits he does some kind of work every day.

Huggins, in which will be taught a private school for the conveuience of those interested in the enterprise, as they reside remotely from the public schools to which they severally belong.

Everybody here is anxious for the 7th of November to come and go to relieve the terrible suspense created by the fervency of political excitement. Several parties from here went over the river last week to buy corn. We never before had an idea of what an immense body of corn is produced annually so close to us. The Miami and White Water bottoms, stretching from Aurora to Harrison, Ohio, a distance of 30 miles, are one continuous corn field, and they are now busy gathering to save their crop from the overflow which annually covers much of the bottoms. Great interest is being manifested in this, to Boone county, very important enterprise, and a large attendance is desired next Friday. H. F. Blase, of Covington, who is taking great interest in the road gives it as his opinion that it will be a go. If this road is constructed it will not only prove a valuable artery of trade to Covington, but the people for quite a distance on each side of it will find themselves in close touch with both Covington and Cincinnati.

The rain last Saturday came very near proving a knock-out blow for the Democratic barbecue at Florence, only about 600 or 700 people braving the elements and wending their way to the fair grounds where there was to have been a feast of oratory for the unterrified Democrats of Boone and adjoining counties. Judge James P. Tarvin was on hand promptly at the hour for the speaking to begin, and being introduced by J. M. Lassing, chairman of the meeting, he made a speech of about two hours in length, devoting about one half of his speech to state and the other half to national issues. The audience was full of enthusiasm, and the speaker was frequently applauded to the echo. The speech was highly complimented by all who heard it.

D. C. Collins followed with a speech of some length, in which he haudled, without gloves, the President's conduct towards the Filipinos. He also had considerable to say about the financial question, taking the Bryan end, and making a strong argument in favor of it. He urged upon the Democrats the necessity of standing shoulder to shoulder, and presenting a solid front at the election on the 7th inst. Mr. Collin's speech was well received.

It was while Mr. Collins was speaking that dinner was announced, and he suspended that the inner man might be refreshed by the bountiful supply of excellent burgoo and barbecued meat that had been prepared for the occasion.

In the afternoon speeches were made by S. W. Toiin, J. G. Furnish, Benj. Stephens and Steven Henry, in the order named, each advocating the cause of the Democratic ticket. Mr. Toiin, who was a delegate in the Louisville convention told of the working of that body, placing it in a very different light from that which the opposition press seeks to throw about it.

NOTES.

The Burlington contingent joined the Hebron club at Limaburg.

Had the day been like last Monday the crowd would have been a crusher.

A worse day for a barbecue has not been seen in this neck 'o woods for three months.

It was regretted by all that Hon. E. E. Settle was unable to be present on account of illness.

The brass band furnished by that real live Democratic organization at Hebron was greatly appreciated the entire crowd.

W. T. German and Sheriff Beall were color bearers. They lead the procession, each bearing aloft a handsome specimen of old glory.

Dr. Sayre, of Hebron, was grand marshal and was kept busy keeping the boys on horseback properly alligned. He made a good marshal.

Wash Tanner, Manlius Goodridge and Henry Hafer did the cooking. The continued rain rendered the work very difficult, and had they not been expert barbecue cooks they could not have made the success of the cooking that they did.

Hal S. Corbett spoke at the court-house here, last Thursday afternoon in the interest of the Brown ticket. By actual count his audience was composed of 80 voters, divided as follows: Republicans, 22; Goebel men, 23, leaving 35 for Brown men, including some that are doubtful. Mr. Corbett is an entertaining speaker, but at the same time he is one of the most misleading that ever spoke here. The election law he discussed is not the one that prevails in Kentucky, as there is no law here that makes the decision of the State Board final in the event of a contested gubernatorial election; nor does the State Board appoint the county election officers under the Kentucky law, as Mr. Corbett endeavored to leave the impression.

It is frequently stated by persons here that when they go to the cities they never drink water but drink beer, and these very people are prohibitionists at home. Our council will do nothing to remedy the bad sanitation of the town and it is about time the people should take matter in hand themselves.

F. E. Curley has sold his Annotated Digest of Kentucky decisions to Anderson, the publisher of law books in Cincinnati, at a very satisfactory price," the way Frank puts it, and it will appear in Febuary. The people of this local option town have been suffering from the drought for several weeks. It was scarcely possible to get water fit for culinary and drinking purposes, and typhoid fever has become almost if not quite epidemic. High medical authority asserts that this class of fever arises from the use of impure water. Now in consideration of the prevalence of this disease and the historical fact that scarlet fever and erysipelas have heretofore devastated the town, would it not be well for the citizens to hold a mass convention and devise ways and means to obtain a supply of wholesome water?

Bro. Jas. W. Rogers, of the Walton Lodge, was greeted with an intelligent and appreciative audience at the Christian church on last Sunday afternoon. The lecturer is an ardent Mason and portrayed the growth of the order from its origin at the building of Solomon's Temple in a very able and eloquent manuer; his thoro knowledge of history ancient, mediaeval and modern enabled him to rivet the attention of his hearers in a very remarkable way. They did not lose a word he uttered. There are about a dozen applications for membership now before the Lodge, and from the manner in which his words were received it is safe to predict that many more will be sent in very soon. A young lady whose father was master of the lodge when he died, has already announced her intention of applying for the degree of "The Eastern Star," and no doubt many other Masous' wives and daughters will do the same. Anyhow they appeared to be as much if not more deeply interested in the lecture than the men were. Look out for a Masonic revival in this locality very.

THE rector of a New York Episcopalian church does not think the quality of Sunday school instructions is what it should be. He would like to have his parishioners raise an endowment fund of $100,000, the income of which shall be used to hire properly qualified teachers.

A NEW and greatly improved style of watertight doors and windows is being introduced into the navy. A strong pneumatic tube fits in a groove around the door or window. When shut this tube is fully inflated by automatic action, and makes the door or window absolutely air and water tight.

A BRIDGE composed wholly of telegraph wire was built over the Jhelum river at Kohala, in the Punjab, in the place of a bridge that was swept away by the floods in 1892. A similar bridge was constructed during the first Soudan campaign over the Kokora river for military purposes.

MELBOURNE has recently had its first taste of snowstorm, and to the great majority of the citizens it was as much of a novelty as an earthquake. The fall was not particularly heavy, but young Melbourne found quite enough snow on the ground to enable it to enter with enthusiasm into the novel sport of snow-balling.

IN one way, and that a financial one, the Dreyfus trial at Rennes was a direct benefit to France. All the telegraph and telephone lines in the republic belong to the government, and the great demand for news of the trial increased the receipts from telegrams $120,000 and from telephone messages $60,000 while the case was on.

A FRENCH officer, Captain Gerard, has invented an army bicycle which promises to do good service. It folds. At the word of command, the soldier riding the bicycle dismounts, folds the machine in two, whips out the handlebars, attaches two broad straps, slings it over his back and walks off, with no more inconvenience than if he is carrying his pack.

A LARGE paper house, with 16 rooms, has been erected by a Russian nobleman on his country estate in Padolia. It was constructed in New York by an American engineer and cost 80,000 rubles. Its architect declares that it will last longer than a stone building. To make the triumph for paper more emphatic, the owner has resolved that all the furniture shall be of the same material.

MR. AND MRS. WM. K. VANDERBILT, Jr., contemplate an Egyptian outing, for which they have engaged a dahabeah, the most luxurious one obtainable on the Nile. It is a sort of flatboat, with a house at one end and an immense rail at the other. In this picturesque boat, surrounded by half a dozen friends, they will float under a lilac-hued sky to the music of stringed instruments touched by native performers.

THE 50,000 workmen who are engaged in making a living on buildings in New York have not only had steady work for months, but thousands of them have had to work overtime at increased wages. Carpenters get $4 for eight hours; portable hoisting engineers, $4.50 for eight hours, and lately a number of contractors who have rush jobs offered as much as $1 an hour for first-class bricklayers, and had hard work to get as many men as they wished, even at this price.

IN the great New York March blizzard of 1887 Henry O'Donnell had his feet frozen so badly that both were amputated. Until a few weeks ago he walked on crutches. Then he had a pair of artificial feet made, but his clumsiness with them caused his friends to laugh. Mr. O'Donnell at once offered to bet that he could walk 1,000 miles with them. A heavy wager was laid and O'Donnell is now on his way, having reached Baltimore. He bets he can walk to New Orleans, 1,200 miles, in five months.

AFRICA has now nearly 10,000 miles of railway and offers an unlimited field for extensions. The dream of a great line extending the whole length of the country from Cairo to Cape Town, some 5,500 miles, seems likely to be realized early in the new century. On the north end about 1,100 miles are in operation, and on the south about 1,400 miles, leaving something like 2,500 miles yet to be built through the Dark Continent, which locomotive headlights will ere long illuminate.

CONSUL DUDLEY, of Vancouver, informs the state department that the telegraph line from Skaguay to Dawson was completed September 23, and is now in operation. The nearest point to Skaguay reached by telegraph from the south is Cumberland or Comax, B. C. Arrangements have been made for steamers to call at Comax to deliver messages from Skaguay, and on their north-bound trips messages to be delivered at Skaguay. Messages can now reach Dawson within about two and one-half days from Washington.

LEGENDS in India run that if a woman stricken with leprosy suffers herself to be buried alive the disease will not descend to her children. There was in the northwest provinces of India the wife of a gardner on whom the loathsome malady had fallen. Children were born to her. The disease grew worse. She importuned her husband to bury her alive. He, at last, yielding to her prayers, summoned his sons. The two dug the grave, and four neighbors assisted at the sepulture. The woman died. These facts were incontrovertible in a magistrate's court where proved.

BIG BATTLE IMMINENT

The Boer and British Forces Are Gathering in the Vicinity of Ladysmith.

BRITISH OUTNUMBERED BY BOERS.

The Former Have 17,000 Men as Against 12,000 of the Latter, With Better Artillery.

The Delay in the Boer Attack Reported to Be Due to the Non-Arrival of Commandant Gen. Joubert's Column.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The position at Ladysmith, without being alarming, is sufficiently dangerous to excite anxiety. Evidently the Boers are trying to repeat their Dundee tactics.

Roughly estimated they have 17,000 men as against 12,000 British.

Gen. Sir George Stewart White has the better artillery, but his is of lesser range. The delay in the Boer attack is reported to be due to the non-arrival of Commandant Gen. Joubert's column. This has given the British a much needed respite after their recent exertions.

Everything, it is now considered, hinges upon Gen. White's resource and judgment. Nothing is known regarding the progress of defensive works for the protection of Ladysmith. The censorship is more active than ever.

According to the Daily Chronicle's correspondent, "the new regulations limit the number of words allowed for press messages to one-fourth the number allowable before."

Farmers in the neighborhood of Ladysmith have left their farms and stock at the mercy of the Boers and are congregated in the town. The two guns the Boers have mounted are powerful weapons. They are the ones used in shelling Dundee, and it is a matter of considerable surprise how they managed to transport such heavy pieces.

Again it is reported that President Kruger accompanied Gen. Joubert to the front in a splendidly fitted traveling wagon.

The Standard's correspondent at Ladysmith telegraphing Saturday, sends a statement that the Boers have captured 1,500 mules, a loss that must seriously inconvenience British transport.

The wife of Gen. Jan Kock has arrived at Ladysmith under a flag of truce to nurse her wounded husband. All the unwounded Boer prisoners have been sent to Durban to prevent any attempt at rescue.

The explanation of the alleged Boer massacre at Dundee appears to be that a portion of the town guard, although fairly warned by Gen. Yule before his retirement, continued to carry arms, and 30 of them were shot before the Boers discovered who they were.

The body of Sir William Symons was buried without a coffin, shrouded in the union jack. Among the papers found upon him was a telegram from Lady Symons congratulating him upon his success.

Late accounts of the first battle and the evacuation of Dundee do not give these affairs a rosier hue. Owing to the shelling of Glencoe camp the telegraph operators were compelled to scamper with numerous unforwarded dispatches.

When the Boers entered Dundee they indulged in general looting of stores but apparently did not otherwise molest the populace.

In the first battle the Boers captured the Maxim of the 18th hussars, but only after the entire crew of the gun with one exception, had been disabled.

The survivor effectually damaged the gun. Only two officers of the staff of Gen. Symons came off without a wound.

Again it is asserted the moment the Royal Dublin Fusiliers reached the summit of the kopje at Glencoe the Boers showed a white flag and asked a truce to bury their dead. The British artillery was ordered to cease firing and the Boers took advantage of the opportunity to retreat en masse. Otherwise they would have been decimated by the British cannon.

The special correspondent of the Daily Mail at Ladysmith, telegraphing Sunday, describes the arrival of the war balloon there on Saturday. It was welcomed, he said, with wild dances by the Kaffirs, who regard it as a deity. Gen. White and Gen. Sir Archibald Hunter both ascended on Sunday and reconnoitered the enemy's position.

LADYSMITH, Oct. 30.—The Boers are gradually closing around Ladysmith. They have mounted two big guns in Tinta Ingoni 4,500 yards from the British camp. An attack is expected.

Freight Clearing House and Yards.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—The Chicago Transfer and Clearing Co. Friday acquired 3,300 acres of land, known as the Stickney tract, for the site of the long proposed freight clearing house and yards.

GOING FORWARD.

Gen. Young, With Infantry, is Advancing Upon Cabanatuan—The Gunboat La Guna de Bay Disperses Rebels.

MANILA, Oct. 30.—Gen. Young with the infantry is advancing upon Cabanatuan under difficulties. The country is furrowed with rivers and deep ravines, the bridges over which have been destroyed, the mud is deep, rations are short and the transportation of supplies has been delayed by low water and the poor condition of roads. There are sufficient stores however to keep the brigade.

The insurgents for a long time have lived off the country, impoverishing it. The American horses are not yet accustomed to the native grass and a long bullock train has left San Fernando, carrying hay for the cavalry.

The Spaniards report that there are no insurgents at Cabanatuan. The gunboat La Guna de Bay dispersed a force of rebels who were engaged in constructing trenches beyond Santa Rosa. The boat was fired upon by a party of insurgents bearing a white flag. She is now aground. Numbers of Chinese are coming to Angeles from Tarlac, paying the insurgents for the privilege.

It is reported that Aguinaldo and the Filipino congress are still at Tarlac. There are about 500 insurgents before Angeles. They have been quiet for the past week. Two thousand rebels are at Bamban, five miles to the north. Gen. Bates has been recalled from San Fernando and ordered to sail for the southern islands as soon as possible.

FLOODS AND LANDSLIDES.

Severe Rainstorms Swept Over Jamaica Doing Much Damage—Fears for the Safety of Shipping.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Oct. 30.—Reports of the severe rain storm that has swept the country arrive from various points and confirm the fear that extensive damage had been done. The Rio Cobre inundated Spanish towns, doing considerable harm, particularly to the power plant of the electric railway. The railroad lines are interrupted and most of the highways are impassable in consequence of the floods and landslides.

Advices from the town of Black River report great damage to shipping and wharves there, as well as serious injury to crops.

A Ward liner has been delayed four days. The United States transport Burnside has been kept cruising outside the harbor and fears are entertained for the safety of the fleet of schooners from Hayti and Jamaica that usually arrive on Monday morning. The rain is still falling.

MINE CAVE-IN.

Eight Men Reported Buried Alive in the Isabella Mine at Cripple Creek—Physicians Sent For.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Oct. 30.—A special to the Gazette from Cripple Creek received Monday morning says:

Word has been received here of a cave-in on the Isabella mine, burying alive about eight men.

The superintendent of the mine will neither confirm nor deny the rumor. However, several doctors have been summoned from Cripple Creek to the Isabella, which is located on Bull hill, several miles away.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Col., Oct. 30.—At 2:30 a. m. the officials of the Isabella mine denied to the coroner and sheriff that the cave-in reported Sunday night was in their property. Victor had been asked to send physicians by some mine in that vicinity, but at this hour it is unknown in which mine they are wanted.

WILL DOUBLE HER NAVY.

Believing That the United States Is to Become a Great Sea Power, Germany Is Preparing For the Future.

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—The Berliner Tageblatt declares that the imperial government intends to double the strength of the navy. The reason given is the great increase of the navy of America, which is evidently destined to become a great sea power. The report from Washington that no solution of the Samoan question has been found is stated to be due to the fact that no agreement can be come to between England and Germany. There is reason to believe that this is not quite correct, and that the negotiations have not been broken off.

Sailors and Marines for Manila.

BOSTON, Oct. 30.—A squad of 100 sailors and marines left this city Sunday night bound for New York, their ultimate destination being the Philippine Islands. The marines, 56 in number, will be taken to Cavite on the United States steamer Buffalo. The sailors will go direct overland to San Francisco.

Bubonic Plague at Santos.

RIO JANEIRO, Oct. 29.—Twelve cases of bubonic plague are now under treatment in the hospital at Santos. One of the patients is a physician. There have been no deaths from the disease since Saturday last.

Heavy Order for Coal and Freight Cars.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 29.—The Pennsylvania Co. and the New York Central Railroad Co. have just placed orders for coal and freight cars to the number of 15,000, the aggregate cost of which will be about $13,000,000.

GEN. LEE ON CUBA

People of the Island Slowly But Surely Rebuilding Their Wasted Homes.

The Cubans Are Tractable and Quiet and the Revolution Has Given Them Self-Respect and Self-Reliance—Money Gradually Going Into Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, who arrived in Washington Saturday night from New York, in an interview Sunday, said that the people of Cuba are steadily improving under the existing protectorate of the United States, and are slowly but surely rebuilding their war-wasted homes and repairing their crippled fortunes.

Life and property are secure in Cuba owing largely, he said, to the salutary restraint exercised by American military authority. He thinks the time not ripe yet however, for a purely Cuban government. "Cuba" said Gen. Lee, "is improving. The Cubans are tractable and quiet and the revolution has given them self respect and self-reliance.

"Their impulses are generally in the right direction, but of course, both in the theory and practice of self-government, they are wholly without experience. There is among certain Cubans a deep seated prejudice against some men who, the Cubans think, oppressed Cubans under Spanish rule, and if given a free rein the Cubans would make short work of them.

"The United States government is pledged to grant independence to Cuba after the island has been pacified, and I believe that promise should be fulfilled just as swiftly as we can in reason and justice. The industrial situation is improving and money is gradually going into Cuba, but nothing like as fast as it would if investors were sure that property would remain safe for years to come and be protected by a government strong enough to enforce law and order."

COTTON INDUSTRY.

The Southern States Have Vital Interests in the Development and Control of Asiatic Markets by America.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 30.—In addressing a large gathering of southern cotton manufacturers and planters at Charlotte under the auspices of the chamber of commerce, John Barrett, late United States minister to Siam, said: "The south has vital interest in development and control of Asiatic markets by America. The time will soon come when the far east will consume every surplus pound of cotton manufactured or raw, that the south can produce, making her independent of the markets of England and Europe.

To accomplish this result four important conditions are necessary which in themselves are inter-dependent—first, construction of trans Isthmian canal; second, laying of a trans-Pacific cable; third, protection of markets in China according to treaty rights, and fourth, permanent control of the Philippines."

The sentiments expressed were received with warm approval.

Adm. Schley Will Visit Atlanta.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 30.—An invitation was telegraphed Monday to the 1st regiment of Maryland, the 1st battalion naval reserves of that state and the Baltimore drum corps to be a special escort of honor to Adm. Schley in the big parade which will attend the admiral's reception here next Saturday. Adm. Schley will be the guest of Atlanta November 4 and 5, going the day following to Birmingham.

Coal Famine Threatened.

HURON, S. D., Oct. 30.—A coal famine is threatened in this part of the state. There is a shortage of 200,000 tons, and wholesale dealers find it almost impossible to get their orders filled. One reason for the shortage is the fact that it is nearly impossible to get cars, owing to the heavy business being transacted by the roads.

The 20th Kansas Leaves for Home.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—The 20th Kansas volunteers, who were mustered out of service Saturday, left for home Sunday in a special train made of three sections and provided by the people of the Sunflower state. Brig. Gen. Funston and H. J. Allen, private secretary of Gov. Stanley, accompany the regiment.

Tortured to Extort Confession.

KOSCIUSCO, Miss., Oct. 29.—Lawlessness reigns in Leake county, the scene of the murder of five of the Gambrill family, for which Joe Leflore, colored, was burned at the stake. Citizens have been trying to get evidence against Leflore's accomplices. Several colored men have been whipped and one tortured by firebrands, in an endeavor to extort a confession.

Arm Amputated at the Shoulder.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ind., Oct. 30.—Jacob Heintz was bitten on the arm so severely by a vicious horse that attending physicians have decided the limb must be amputated at the shoulder in order to save his life.

Suicided by Shooting.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 30.—Christopher C. Chew, 49 years old, proprietor of the largest department store in southern New Jersey, committed suicide in his store in this city Sunday by shooting himself in the head.

THE SYSTEM TESTED.

Experiments in Telegraphing Between War Vessels Without Wires by the Navy Department.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The navy department continued its tests of the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy Friday. The demonstrations are being made on the flagship New York and the battle ship Massachusetts in the North river off the foot of Thirty-fourth street. The ships lay 448 yards apart and the demonstration was one of speed and accuracy. Code messages, using both the navy and the international Morse codes, were sent, besides numbers and letters selected at random. The largest continuous message was a newspaper article of 200 words. In all, there were six demonstrations and the work continued with intervals of preparation for about two hours. Signor Marconi said he paid no attention to the speed attained as the navy department was more particular as to the accuracy.

The equipment overhead consisted only of wires strung from the cross beams of both vessels. On the New York the apparatus was in the after gun room, and here Signor Marconi did his work. On the Massachusetts the receiving and sending was done in the captain's office, where one of Marconi's assistants was stationed. The clicking of the instruments is vibrant and could be heard throughout either ship.

Of the naval board which is supervising the tests, Lieut. Commander Newton and Lieut. Hill watched the work on the flagship and Lieut. Bliss was on the Massachusetts. When the tests were concluded they held a conference on the New York and compared notes. They will make a final report to the chief of the bureau of equipment of the navy department. Signor Marconi does not know whether these preliminary tests will be continued on Saturday but it is expected that on Monday the New York and the Massachusetts will cruise off Sandy Hook in order to make a long distance test of the system. They may be away from the anchorage for several days. At times the vessels will be 40 miles from each other and this will be the crucial demonstration. If successful it will prove how valuable the system would be during a naval engagement, or while a fleet is blockading an enemy's coast. During the long distance test the great guns of the war ships will be discharged as a further test.

None of the members of the naval board would give an opinion of the work done by Signor Marconi.

Adm. Farquhar watched the demonstrations for a time and seemed greatly interested.

A MEMORIAL PARK.

It Will Include the Battlefields of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Tebbs Tavern and Several Others.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—The members of the Fredericksburg national park commission called on the secretary of war Friday to lay before him the plans of the commission for a memorial park which will include the battlefields of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Tebbs Tavern and several other fields, comprised in an area of twelve miles square on the south side of the Rappahannock. A bill is pending before congress on this subject, and it was one to which Secretary Alger had given his indorsement. The committee, headed by Gen. King, of the commission, and Gen. Ruggles, also a member of the commission, and representing the army of the Potomac, laid the plans before Secretary Root to give him a fuller idea of the feasability of the undertaking and to secure, if possible, his indorsement of the plan before the next congress. The secretary of war, without binding himself to any positive action, promised to do what he could to further the wishes of the commission.

To Fight for Great Britain.

MANILA, Oct. 27.—An informal meeting was held here Friday evening of men proposing to proceed to South Africa to fight for the British. More than a hundred Englishmen, Australians and Americans decided to go. They organized a party and believe they can secure 900 more men. The volunteers include ex-soldiers, frontiersmen, Englishmen familiar with the Transvaal and commercial clerks.

Died From an Operation.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Capt. Charles H. Lester, U. S. A. retired, died Friday night as the result of an operation for cancer of the mouth. He fought in the civil war and had spent much of his time since then with the army in Dakota and Texas. At the time of his retirement he was in the 8th artillery.

The value of the total imports into Great Britain from the United States in 1898 was $612,662,073, a gain of 23.8 per cent. In five years; the value of Canadian imports in 1898 was $99,161,544, a gain of 38.7 per cent. in five years.

Too Late.

A horseman burst into the prison yard.

"Reprieved!" he shouted, and waved a paper aloft.

"Too late," replied the warden, sadly.

"Is the man hanged already?"

"No; but he has eaten the hearty breakfast of ham and eggs, coffee and potatoes!"

Executive clemency was all right in its place, but it could not be suffered to interfere with the conventional course of events. Yes, the horseman's speed was undeniably foaming, but even that availed little or nothing under the circumstances.—Detroit Journal.

Jason Crow, Oscarville, Ga., Says:

"I feel it my duty to write and let you know what your medicine, '5 Drops,' has done for me. I have had rheumatism about 18 years, but was able to be up most of the time, until a year ago last May, when I was taken down and not able to move about. About six weeks ago I saw your advertisement and wrote for a sample bottle. After taking a few doses, it did me so much good that I ordered some more for myself and friends and in every case it has done wonders and given perfect satisfaction. Dr. Woodliff, my family physician, who has had rheumatism 15 years, is taking '5 Drops,' and says it is the most efficient rheumatic medicine he has ever used. May 31, 1899."

The above refers to "5 Drops," a perfect cure for rheumatism, kidney and all kindred complaints. The proprietors, Swanson Rheumatic Co., 164 Lake St., Chicago, offer to send a 25c. sample bottle for only 10c. during the next 30 days. Be sure to read their advertisement of last week.

Thoroughbred.

A New York society dame, who is an ardent upholder of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, owns a little fox terrier of which she is exceedingly fond. A man who called on her the other day was admiring the dog and asked her mistress how she, who in all her humane theories, could have allowed the cruel dog fancier to cut off Snap's tail and ears to the fashionable degree of brevity. The dame drew herself up and replied, with some hauteur:

"My dear sir, Snap expected it. Every thoroughbred fox terrier expects to have his tail and ears shortened." And that humbled man went away saying to himself: "That's the first time I ever thought of 'noblesse oblige,' as applying to fox terriers."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

In addition to the regular Pullman porter, each car is accompanied by an intelligent, competent and courteous "courier," who will attend to the wants of passengers en route. This is an entirely new feature of tourist car service and will be appreciated by families or by ladies traveling alone. Particular attention is paid to the care of children, who usually get weary on a long journey.

We Are Guarded by Angels Says Dr. Talmage.

Supernal Beings Who Give Warning When Evil Approaches—Next to God, They Control Our Destiny.

(Copyright, 1899, Louis Klopsch.)
Washington, Oct. 29.

The brilliant beings supposed by some to be imaginary are by Dr. Talmage in his sermon shown to be real and to have much to do with our everyday life. The text is Judges 13:19: "And the angel did wondrously."

Fire built on a rock. Manoah and his wife had there kindled the flames for sacrifice in praise of God and in honor of a guest whom they supposed to be a man. But as the flame rose higher and higher their strange guest stepped into the flame and by one red leap ascended into the skies. Then they knew that was an angel of the Lord. "The angel did wondrously."

Two hundred and forty-eight times does the Bible refer to the angels, yet I never heard or read a sermon on angelology. The whole subject is relegated to the realm mythical, wierd, spectral and unknown. Such adjournment is un-Scriptural and wicked. Of their life, their character, their habits, their actions, their velocities, the Bible gives us full length portraits, and why this prolonged and absolute silence concerning them? Angelology is my theme.

There are two nations of angels, and they are hostile to each other—the nation of good angels and the nation of bad angels. Of the former I chiefly speak to-day. Their capital, their headquarters, their grand rendezvous, is Heaven, but their empire is the universe. They are a distinct race of creatures. No human being can ever join their confraternity. The little child who in the Sabbath school sings: "I want to be an angel," will never have her wish gratified. They are superhuman, but they are of different grades and ranks, not all on the same level or the same height. They have their superiors and inferiors and equals. I propose no guessing on this subject, but take the Bible for my authority. Plato, the philosopher, guessed and divided angels into supercelestial, celestial and subcelestial. Dionysius, the Areopagite, guessed, and divided them into three classes, the supreme, the middle and the last, and each of these into three other classes, making nine in all. Philo said angels were related to God as the rays of the sun. Fulgentius said that they were composed of body and spirit. Clement said they were incorporeal. Augustine said that they had been in danger of falling, but now are beyond being tempted. But the only authority on this subject that I respect says they are divided into cherubim, seraphim, thrones, dominions, principalities, powers. Their commander in chief is Michael. Daniel called him Michael. St. John called him Michael. These supernal beings are more thoroughly organized than any army that ever marched. They are swifter than any cyclone that ever swept the sea. They are more radiant than any morning that ever came down the sky. They have more to do with your destiny and mine than any being in the universe except God. May the Angel of the New Covenant, who is the Lord Jesus, open our eyes and touch our tongue and rouse our soul while we speak of their deathlessness, their intelligence, their numbers, their strength, their achievements.

Yes, deathless. They had a cradle, but will never have a grave. The Lord remembers when they were born, but no one shall ever see their eye extinguished or their momentum slow up or their existence terminate. The oldest of them has not a wrinkle or a decrepitude or a hindrance, as young after 6,000 years as at the close of their first hour. Christ said to the good in Heaven: "Neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels." Yes, deathless are these wonderful creatures of whom I speak. They will see world after world go out, and there shall be no fading of their own brilliance. Yea, after the last world has taken its last flight, they will be ready for the widest circuit through immensity, taking a quadrillion of miles in one sweep as easy as a pigeon circles a dovecote. They are never sick. They are never exhausted. They need no sleep, for they are never tired. At God's command they smote with death, in one night, 185,000 of Sennacherib's host, but no fatality can smite them. Awake, agile, multipotent, deathless, immortal!

A further characteristic of these radiant folk is intelligence. The woman of Tekoah was right when she spoke to King David of the wisdom of an angel. We mortals take in what little we know through the eye and ear and nostril and touch, but those beings have no physical incasement, and hence they are all senses. A wall five feet thick is not solid to them. Through it they go without disturbing flake of mortar or crystal of sand. Knowledge! It flashes on them. They take it in at all points. They absorb it. They gather it up without any hinderment. No need of literature for them. The letters of their books are stars. The dashes of their books are meteors. The words of their books are constellations. The paragraphs of their books are galaxies. The pictures of their books are sunrises and sunsets and midnight auroras and the Conqueror on the white horse with the moon under his feet. Their library is an open universe. No need of telescope to see something millions of miles away, for instantly they are there to inspect and explore it. All astronomies, all geologies, all botanies, all philosophies at their feet. What an opportunity for intelligence is theirs! What facilities for knowing everything and knowing it right away!

There is only one thing that puts them to their wits' end, and that the Bible says they have to study that. They have been studying it through all the ages, and yet I warrant they have not fully grasped it—the wonders of redemption. These wonders are so high, so deep, so grand, so stupendous, so magnificent, that even the intelligence of angelhood is confounded before it. The apostle says: "Which things the angels desire to look into." That is a subject that excites inquisitiveness on their part. That is a theme that strains their faculties to the utmost. That is higher than they can climb, deeper than they can dive. They have a desire for something too big for their comprehension. "Which things the angels desire to look into." But that does not discredit their intelligence. No one but God Himself can fairly understand the wonders of redemption. If all Heaven should study it for 50 centuries, they would get no further than the A B C of that inexhaustible subject. But nearly all other realms of knowledge they have ransacked and explored and compassed. No one but God can tell them anything they do not know. They have read to the last word of the last line of the last page of the last volume of investigation, and what delights me most is that all their intelligence is to be at our disposal, and, coming into their presence, they will tell us in five minutes more than we can learn by 100 years of earthly surmising.

Another remark I have to make concerning these illustrious immortals is that they are multitudinous. Their census has never been taken, and no one but God knows how many there are, but all the Bible accounts suggest their immense numbers—companies of them, regiments of them, armies of them, mountain tops haloed by them, skies populous with them. John speaks of angels and other beings round the throne as ten thousand times ten thousand. Now, according to my calculation, ten thousand times ten thousand are 100,000,000. But these are only the angels in one place. David counted 20,000 of them rolling down the sky in chariots. When God came away from the riven rocks of Mount Sinai the Bible says He had the companionship of 10,000 angels. I think they are in every battle, in every exigency, at every birth, at every pillow, at every hour, at every moment, the earth full of them, the heavens full of them. They outnumber the human race in this world. They outnumber reasomed spirits in glory. When Abraham had his knife uplifted to slay Isaac it was an angel who arrested the stroke, crying: "Abraham, Abraham!" Across the stairway of angels that Jacob saw while pillowed in the wilderness. We are told an angel led the hosts of Israelites out of Egyptian serfdom. It was an angel that showed Hagar the fountain where she filled the bottle for the lad. It was an angel that took Lot out of doomed Sodom. It was an angel that shut up the mouth of the hungry monsters when Daniel was thrown into the caverns. It was an angel that fed Elijah under the juniper tree. It was an angel that announced to Mary the approaching nativity. They were angels that chanted when Christ was born. It was an angel that strengthened our Saviour in His agony. It was an angel that encouraged Paul in the Mediterranean shipwreck. It was an angel that burst open the prison, gate after gate, until Peter was liberated. It was an angel that stirred the pool of Siloam, where the sick were healed. It was an angel that John saw flying through the midst of Heaven, and an angel with foot planted on the sea, and an angel that opened the book, and an angel that sounded the trumpet, and an angel that thrust in the sickle, and an angel that poured out the vials, and an angel standing in the sun. It will be an angel with uplifted hand swearing that time shall be no longer. In the great final harvest of the world the reapers are the angels. Yea, and the Lord shall be revealed from Heaven with mighty angels. Oh, the numbers and the might and the glory of these supernals—fleets of them, squadrons of them, host beyond host, rank above rank, millions on millions, and all on our side if we will have them!

What an incentive to purity and righteousness is this doctrine that we are continually under angelic observation! Eyes ever on you, so that the most secret misdeed is committed in the midst of an audience of immortals. No door so bolted, no darkness so Cimmerian, as to hinder that supernal eyesight. Not critical eyesight, not jealous eyesight, not baleful eyesight, but friendly eyesight, sympathetic eyesight, helpful eyesight. Confidential clerk of store, with great responsibility on your shoulder and on one to applaud your work when you do it well and sick with the world's ingratitude, think of the angels in the counting room ruptured at your fidelity! Mother of household, stitching, mending, cooking, dusting, planning, up half the night or all night with the sick child, day in and day out, year in and year out, worn with the monotony of a life that no one seems to care for, think of the angels in the nursery, angels in all the rooms of your toiling, angels about the sick cradle, and all in sympathy!

Railroad engineer, with hundreds of lives hanging on your wrist, standing amid the cinders and the smutch, rounding the sharp curve and by appalling declivity, discharged and disgraced if you make a mistake, but not one word of approval if you take all the trains in safety for ten years, think of the angels by the throttle valve, angels by the roaring furnace of the engine, angels looking from the overhanging crag, angels bracing the racing wheels off the precipice, angels when you mount the thunderbolt of a train and angels when you dismount! Can you not hear them, louder than the the bell at the crossing, louder than the whistle that sounds like the scream of a flying fiend, the angelic voices saying: "You did it well, you did it well?" If I often speak of engineers, it is because I ride so much with them. I always accept their invitation to join them on their locomotive, and among them are some of the grandest men alive.

Men and women of all circumstances, only partly appreciated or not appreciated by all, never feel lonely again or unregarded again! Angels all around; angels to approve, angels to help, angels to remember. Yea, while all the good angels are friends of the good, there is one special angel your bodyguard. This idea until this present study of angelology I supposed to be fanciful, but I find it clearly stated in the Bible. When the disciples were praying for Peter's deliverance from prison and he appeared at the door of the prayer meeting, they could not believe it was Peter. They said: "It is an angel." So these disciples, in special nearness to Christ, evidently believed that every worthy soul has an angel. Jesus said of his followers: "Their angels behold the face of my Father." Elsewhere it is said: "He shall give His angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways." Angel-shielded, angel-protected, angel-guarded, angel-canopied, art thou! No wonder that Charles Wesley hymned these words:

Which of the petty kings of earth
Can boast a guard like ours,
Encircled from our second birth
With all the heavenly powers?

Valerius, in the Thebaic legion, was put to death for Christ's sake in the year 287 and after the day when their bodies had been whipped and pounded into a jelly, in the night in prison and before the next day when they were to be executed, they both thought they saw angels standing with two glittering crowns, saying: "Be of good cheer, valiant soldiers of Jesus Christ! A little more of battle, and then these crowns are yours." And I am glad to know that before many of those who have passed through great sufferings in this life some angel of God has held a blazing coronet of eternal reward. Yea, we are to have such a guardian angel to take us upward when our work is done. You know, we are told an angel conducted Lazarus to Abraham's bosom. That shows that none shall be so poor in dying he cannot afford angelic escort. It would be a long way to go alone, and up paths we have never trod, and amid blazing worlds swinging in unimaginable momentum, out and on through such distances and across such infinitudes of space we should shudder at the thought of going alone.

But the angelic escort will come to your languishing pillow or the place of your fatal accident and say: "Hail, immortal one! All is well. God hath sent me to take you home." And with our tremor or slight sense of peril you will sway and upward, farther on and farther on, until after awhile Heaven heaves in sight and the rumble of chariot wheels and the roll of mighty harmonies are heard in the distance, and nearer you come, and nearer still, until the brightness is like many mornings suffused into one, and the gates lift, and you are inside the amethystine walls and on the banks of the jasper sea, forever safe, forever free, forever well, forever rested, forever united, forever happy. Mothers, do not think your little children go alone when they quit this world. Out of your arms into angelic arms, out of sickness into health, out of the cradle into a Saviour's bosom! Not an infant perished in the shipwrecks of Mediterranean ships. It was an angel that burst open the prison, gate after gate, until Peter was liberated. It was an angel that stirred the pool of Siloam, where the sick were healed. It was an angel that John saw flying through the midst of Heaven, and an angel with foot planted on the sea, and an angel that opened the book, and an angel that sounded the trumpet, and an angel that thrust in the sickle, and an angel that poured out the vials, and an angel standing in the sun. IN BRYAN'S STATE.

Former Governor of Illinois Talks to Nebraskans.

Charges McKinley with Being Under the Control of Syndicates and a Corrupt Colonial Policy.

Former Gov. John P. Altgeld, of Illinois, opened his speech making tour of Nebraska at Blair October 25. An immense crowd greeted the Illinois orator, and when he ascended the speakers' stand he received an ovation. His speech was punctuated with enthusiastic applause. In part, he said:

"We witness in our country to-day a most remarkable political phenomenon. The men who helped to bring the republican party into being and who guided that party in its great career, and through it helped to shape the destiny of the country, find themselves now forced to leave it. We see John Sherman, ex-Senator Edmunds, ex-Senator Boutwell, ex-Senator Henderson, Carl Schurz and a host of men who made the republican party great now vigorously denouncing the executive elected by that party and declaring that the life of the republic is threatened. The conscience of the party is leaving it and the slimy hand of corrupt greed is exercising absolute control.

"The party began its career as the child of humanity and the champion of liberty. His was when it was ledded by Lincoln and his associates. But it seems now to have traveled the semicircle and reached the opposite pole, where it is guided by the slimy hand of Mark Hanna and stands for despotism and pelf. When we see men severing their connections of a lifetime, casting loose from all that has helped to build up and raising a cry of alarm for their country we may feel assured that the republic is in danger.

Question of Despotism.

"What, then, is the question which has created the alarm? It is not a question of expansion. It is not a question whether we shall add territory to the republic and increase the population that shall be subject to the constitution and laws of the United States; for, however men might differ as to the wisdom of such act, they would not regard it as destructive of our institutions.

"Personally, I have no doubt that, moving in the line of a natural growth and development, this republic will expand. It will in time extend to the frozen seas of the north. It will in time embrace the West India islands. Such development will come naturally, will come by constitutional methods and with the consent of the inhabitants of the country that acquired, will become subject to our constitution and laws and the inhabitants will become citizens of the United States. No violence will be done to the principles of free institutions. I repeat, if it were merely a question of expansion we would not to-day see the distinguished men I have named raising their voices in alarm and severing their connection with the party they had helped to make great.

"It is a question of establishing a despotic system of government. The question of following in the wake of England and acquiring and holding subject colonies whose people shall be governed not according to the principles of our constitution and laws, but in violation of them, and whose people, instead of becoming American citizens, are to occupy the relation to us that they formerly occupied toward Spain. We are to go into the business of robbing other nations of their liberty, and it is because this must result in the ultimate destruction of our own liberties and the overthrow of our own institutions that the alarm is raised.

The Money-Making Influence.

"On April 18, 1898, congress declared war against Spain. It declared that the island of Cuba was and of right ought to be free and independent, and, among others, adopted this resolution unanimously, That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts the determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people."

"This was high ground and was in harmony with the principles of our government. It commanded the respect of the world and placed us in a most favorable and honorable light than any nation had ever occupied. But a change soon came over the spirit of the administration. You recall that prior to the declaration of war the great syndicates and the influences that were controlling the administration were opposed to interfering. It was claimed that some of them were interested in Spanish bonds and other property rights and were, therefore, willing to see the Cubans slaughtered so long as it did not affect them, and President McKinley, who was apparently under the control of these influences, stated that rather than embark his administration in an unholy war he would have it go down into history as a failure. Note the words. He was asked to go to war in the cause of liberty, and he talked about an unholy war.

"But the American people forced congress to act, and no sooner did congress adopt the declaration of war than the syndicates, the politicians and the powerful interests that had opposed it turned around and apparently took charge of the government and went in with a determination to make as much as possible out of the world in the way of contracts, in the way of offices and in the way of advantages of money-making which the island where the war was to be carried on should offer, and from that time on the entire tone of the administration was changed.

A Corrupt Colonial Policy.

"By successive steps we have followed in the footsteps of England and have embarked upon a corrupt colonial policy. England maintains a colonial policy in order to have offices for the younger sons of her aristocrats and in order to be able to exploit the industry of others. We are embarking upon a colonial policy in order to furnish places for certain favored politicians and to enable syndicates to exploit the industry of the Philippine islands. After having stood upon the declaration of independence for a century and a quarter and held it out to the world as a guide for all people, we are now stabbing it to death, turning our backs upon this glorious career and are entering into a scramble with other despotic nations of the world on the low and barbarous plane of brute force.

"The president has been practicing a confidence game upon the American people. Everything points to the fact that the policy of imperialism and forcible acquisition of the Philippine islands was settled upon early in the summer of 1898, when the syndicates were camping in the white house and straddling the nation. Early in August, 1898, Gen. Merritt, who had just come from Washington and was in the secret of the administration, took command of the American forces and reversed the policy of a friendly attitude toward the Filipinos. He refused to recognize Aguinaldo and the Philippine officers, and publicly stated that he could take no more interest in Aguinaldo than if he were a mere boy in the street.

Filipinos Are Snubbed.

"During September and October, 1898, the Philippine commissioner who had gone to Paris for that purpose asked to have the peace commission consider and respect the rights of the Philippine people, and the doors were slammed in his face. The attitude of the American commissioners was one of hostility toward him and his people. The commissioners framed a treaty upon the theory that Spain was in full possession and control of the Philippines and had a right to sell and deliver them. Instead of looking with a friendly and encouraging eye upon a people who were making a life and death struggle for the liberty of man Secretary Day wrote to the United States consul in China that the McKinley administration would take no other view of the Filipinos than that they were simply rebellious subjects of Spain.

"The war could even now be ended in 24 hours if we would assure them of ultimate independence. To still further show the deep scheme that President McKinley, at the dictates of the syndicates, had endeavored to carry out I direct your attention to the fact that he had applied to congress when it convened in December, 1898, for a standing army of 100,000 men. Not an army of volunteers, mark you, but a regular army of 100,000 men. The despotisms of Europe rely on regular armies, but this republic has always depended upon the volunteers. The glory of this republic largely rests upon the achievements of volunteers, yet in the face of this record the president makes a new departure. Our regular army had rarely exceeded 25,000 men, but President McKinley in December, 1898, after the war with Spain was over, when there was no enemy threatening our institutions or assailing our rights anywhere, asked congress to establish a regular army of four times its former strength. What was this for?

Two Kinds of Soldiers.

"If there was a definite purpose in view why did he insist upon having a regular army? My friends, the explanation was recently given by Gov. Lind, of Minnesota, when he stated that the volunteer soldier carries a conscience as well as a gun. This kind of a soldier is not so well suited for purposes of despotism as the so-called regular soldier, who is supposed to be a mere brutal fighting machine and to have no conscience. So long as we adhere to the principles of the declaration of independence just that long a volunteer army is the most desirable, but when we wish to depart from republican principles of government and to enter into a brutal struggle for the subjugation of weaker people, when we wish to establish despotic principles of government, then we need a different kind of soldier. Have you reflected upon the consequences of having a body of men set apart from the rest of the community, having false standards of honor and supported by the government and spending their time largely in gambling, flirting, scheming, intriguing and dissipating?

"The American people were shocked at the revelations of the recent Dreyfus trial. Yet, my friends, the conditions existing in France, as disclosed in that Dreyfus trial, are the natural and legitimate outgrowth of militarism. It rests on brutality and force. No set of men who are permitted to eat bread that is earned by the sweat of other men's brows understand free institutions or are safe guardians of liberty. It was a man swaggring in a glittering uniform who recently declared that we had outgrown the constitution. Brushing aside the constitution with brass buttons and a sword is a performance that the world has become familiar with, and it always signifies the same thing."

Eloquence from Hanna.

This is a great year for the discovery of orators in holes and corners where they were not previously known to exist. We have praised the blossoming Gage and glorified the new mown Hay. We will now, for our instruction, reproduce a gem from the Youngstown effort of the unexampled Hanna. He said in part and in one breath:

"I hold and being a business man and being in a community where men have engaged themselves in this business and who have devoted all of their lives to the accomplishment of industry that much credit can be given to them who have tried to shape the destiny of this government and the policies of it in the direction which will be in the best interests of this country and which has been due to the old and care of the republican party."

Cicero in his reply to Hayne, or Daniel Webster in collaboration with his language-murdering cousin Noah, denouncing Cataline, would not have been a foot high by the side of this eloquent burst.—Washington Times.

——Combinations of capital are the outgrowths of the protective tariff, according to Mark Hanna. He is the first republican of his kind to acknowledge that the tariff is the parent of the trusts. Many more progressive and broader minded republicans have recognized that the trusts gain an immense benefit from the tariff and they have declared themselves in favor of abolishing tariffs wherever they protect trusts. But Mr. Hanna is the only man in the country who has the temerity to commit the double folly of defending trusts because they are the creation of the tariff and of praising protection because it has built up the trusts.—Kansas City Star.

——As late as May 1, 1898, there wasn't a traitor in the United States. The nation was in ecstasy over its unity and self loyalty. The McKinley administration has many merits, yet most distinguished of all is the fact that within less than two years it has managed to make more "traitors" out of sincere, conscientious, liberty-loving and God-fearing citizens than any other administration in an equal period of time since this republic was founded. Hence arises the imperative necessity that Mr. McKinley should be indorsed. —Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

——"It is no longer a question of expansion with us; we have expanded," said President McKinley at Iowa Falls, Ia., adding: "If there is any question at all it is one of contracting, and who is going to contract?" Well, perhaps congress will have something to say on that subject. That body may consider it dangerous to let one man, even the president, have such unlimited power over the constitution and the traditional policy of this country as is implied in Mr. McKinley's position on the Philippine question.—Philadelphia Ledger.

——Mr. McKinley always has a weather vane up to see which way the wind is blowing. He does not possess the courage and foresight to decide great problems on their merits. He is not a leader of men in the sense of formulating ideas for the people to follow or of molding public sentiment. He is constantly on the lookout to see what is the popular thing to do. He has pursued this course all through his public life, not so much from his desire to serve the people as to promote his own political fortunes.—Kansas City Star.

——In the last presidential campaign Candidate McKinley was too busy romancing on the beauties of the protective tariff to discuss the money issue. Candidate McKinley is now too much engaged in unfolding the charms of imperialism to discuss the trust, which is the offspring of his erstwhile lovely code of protection.—Houston Post.

FREAK FARMING.

There are six farmers in Indiana given up to growing skunks, says the Indiana Farmer, and some of them raise them by the tens of thousands each year.

There are three rabbit farms, the largest being of eighty acres. This is being stocked with Belgian hares, and the company owning it has now an agent buying them by thousands in France and Belgium. These sell when dressed at about the prices of poultry, and the skins are worth from 10 to 25 cents each. Many also can be sold as pets or for breeding purposes.

A number of farms have been devoted to raising Angora cats, most of them in the vicinity of New Harmony, and a cat broker in Evansville has put 3,000 of them on the market during the three years since the business started there. BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1899. NO. 3.

At the time of going to press, Wednesday at noon, there is some consolation in the election returns for the Democrats.

Ohio was carried by the Republicans by 60,000

Tamany carried New York City but the Republicans won in the State.

Massachusetts went Republican by 60,000.

The Fusionists, lead by Bryan, carried Nebraska by 12,000.

Virginia went overwhelmingly Democratic.

Mississippi came up with a majority of 30,000 on the right side.

Furnish, for Senator, and Stephens, Representative, are undoubtedly elected.

Gov. Bradly had the soldiers parading the streets of Louisville.

Just as these columns close, a telephone message was received from Covington that Goebel is elected by from 6,000 to 7,000.

TRUSTS and Inperialism are very much on top in this country.

IT now looks very much like the Republicans have a good start for winning the next Presidential derby.

YOU can talk about Tuesday's election until Saturday night, when you should dismiss the subject and go to business.

VIRGINIA voted almost unanimously for the Democratic ticket, Tuesday, electing only two Republicans to the Legislature.

The judgment of the Grant Circuit Court giving James H Green, executor of the will of George W. Menefee, a judgment of $5,000, the amount of a life policy held by him, against the Washington Life Insurance Company of New York, was affirmed with damages by the Appellate Court, last week. Judge Du Relle delivered the opinion of the court and took occasion to make a few caustic remarks on the policy of the company in fighting the case. The policy on Menefee's life was issued just a month or to before his death, a note for $340, the first premium, being accepted by John Alley Parker, the Louisville general agent of the company. After death of the insured the company resisted payment on the ground that the terms of the policy were that the premium should be paid in cash. The lower court gave judgment against the company. In affirming that holding Judge DuRelle said: "Everyone who knows anything of insurance knows, and this court knows, that this is a usual and customary mode of taking out life insurance policies. The general agent represented the company in this State. It was within the general scope of his authority to deliver policies and receive premiums. The applicant had the right to assume. The policy was delivered with full knoweledge of the facts upon which its validity might be disputed. To insist now upon those facts as ground for avoiding the policy is to attempt fraud, the company can not play fast and loose, nor ask the court's assistance in the issuance of policies for the purpose of collecting the insurance. This being our view of the case, the form of the findings of the trial court becomes immaterial."

The Lawrenceburg News has this personal notice of a returned soldier: "George S. Gaines, son of Esquire and Mrs. George Gaines, has just returned from the Philippines, where he has been serving in the regular army. A few weeks ago he completed his three years of service, and received an honorable discharge. He was in several battles with the natives, and says the papers give very inaccurate and erroneous accounts of results of these battles. In his opinion, the war is far from being ended, for he does not consider that the inhabitants are in any degree subdued. Mr. Gaines is in the best of health, but says he has seen enough of army life and the world in general, and is now ready to settle down to a quiet life."

Mrs. M. J. Stovall and M. M. Morris have filed suit at Bowling Green against the Western Union Telegraph Company, asking for $1,950 damages. They allege in their petition that a telegram announcing the death of a sister of Mrs. Stovall, in Missouri, was not delivered when it should have been, and that this was negligence and carelessness on the part of the company, and that by reason of the failure to deliver they were damaged.

It will prevent or cure smallpox though the pittings are filled. It will cure scarlet fever. Here is the receipt as I have used it for smallpox. When learned physicians said the patient must die, it cured. Sulphate of zinc, one grain; foxglove (digitalis), one grain; half a teaspoonful of water. Take a teaspoonful every hour. Either disease will disappear in twelve hours. For a child a smaller dose according to its age. If counties would compel physicians to use this there would be no use of pest houses. If you value advice and experience use this for that terrible disease."—Ex.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The light sales of the present week stimulated the bidding to a certain degree and the market can be quoted stronger, on low and medium grades at least, while there is no change in fine goods. The latter sell for less money than they did at the highest point last month, but they are still very much higher in price than just before the rise in latter part of September. In fact our market is by no means to be considered dull; on the contrary, the attendance of buyers is always large and the bidding quick.

As to the lower prices for fine tobacco, they have probably resulted from the offering of too much of this kind in a given time. There had been large private sales of fine tobacco to manufacturers and the demand in the open market was thus curtailed. We have no fear of the future on these goods because it will be a long time before the New crop can be in competition, and the supply is certainly none too large.

Besides, it now appears that with the several new factories which will surely be in operation by the first of the year, there will be brisk contention, and the market will be much less one sided than during the present year. One thing is sure, the formation of the large combination of manufacturers has, as yet, not had near the effect on the market value of tobacco that was so much feared, and the company is nearly a year old.

Several crops of new tobacco were sold on the breaks this week and averages up to 9 to 9½ cents were realized. There are many crops in perparation for immediate shipment and quite a number of hogsheads may be expected on the sales next week. Recent reports on the quality of the crop are very encouraging. It seems to have plenty of body and color. If we judge it correctly there will be a scarcity of red goods.

CROP AND STOCK.

Messrs. J. B. Kennedy, Harry Holt and L. B. M. Bedford shipped 10 cars of fat cattle to the Chicago market.

In Winchester, at the public sale of Shorthorns, 36 head averaged $72. The three bred by Frances Hall, of Bourbon, brought $50, $55 and $75.

There is a ripple in the western hay market, caused by the demand for 500 tons by the British government, to be shipped from New Orleans to South Africa.

Cattle are high in Clay county, if the following is true: Henry Marcum bought a yoke of oxen weighing 3,000 pounds, in that county for $300.—10c per pound.

"If farmers only knew it," said a groceryman the other day, "they could get a much better price for fruit products it they would take the trouble to assort it and market it in better shape. Apples ought to be assorted and each variety kept in separate receptacles, but instead of this all kinds are thrown into sacks and it is impossible to grade them up suitably for market. The same may be said of all other products of the farm. Fancy articles bring fair prices.

The potato crop is better than for two years past, but not much better than a medium yield. Mr. Snow estimates it at about 242,000,000 bushels—181 bushels per acre. It is better in the East than in the West. Prices should be remunerative, yet they will be comparatively moderate. In most cities of the Illinois slope they are quoted at about 50c—higher in New York, but lower in some inland markets. They are abundant at near 50c. in Boston as the crop is generally good in New England and abundant in the Aroo-stock region. Small crops are reported in Germany and France, and generally in Europe.

The sale of horse flesh as human food is legal under the laws of the State of Wisconsin, and the ordinances of the City of Milwaukee. When it was discovered recently that horses were being killed and their flesh made into sausage and sold, the Health Department endeavored to get sufficient evidence against the people doing the business to warrant a prosecution. Then it was found that the city ordinance was ineffective and an appeal was made to the State Dairy and Food Commissioner H. C. Adams. His reply has been received, and he says that under the state law there is no remedy. The men who are engaged in slaughtering played-out horses say they ship the meat to Chicago, where it is principally used on saloon free lunch counters.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

An exchange says, "Not in the palmiest dnys of prices were such offers made for two and three-year-olds as at Lexington, last week, and the reports are from reliable men, such as Charles Marvin, who reported the offer of $8,000 for Endow. James Golden says he refused $8,000 from Mart Demarest for the Dexter Prince filly; John Kinney reports that Mr. Winter could have sold the Directum Lady Winter filly on two occasions during the week for $7,500, Boralma did change hands for more than $15,000, while a short time ago Thayer got close to $10,000 for The Tramp, and priced The Bondsman at $10,000 on Friday. Two or three more are ready to take the seven-year-old sire Boreal for $20,000. These figures need no prophesy as to the future of the high class harness horse.

The trite saying that everything comes from the soil and goes back to it, holds good even in the case of the combines and trusts. The farmers of Brown county are now enjoying one of the most expensive object lessons in their commercial history and the schoolmaster is the founder of the great tobacco trust. The Brown county farmer, in looking over his products, finds that but one of them has advanced in price—cattle. On corn, wheat, hay and tobacco he loses and heavily so. He is also well aware of the fact that everything he must buy is enhanced in value because of the unmercifulness of the trusts. And he well knows that it is because of one combine that his tobacco is kept below its actual value. The first day of the present year saw the tobacco stocks in the Cincinnati warehouses lower than for many years. The Inspectors' reports are proof of this fact. A short crop had been marketed on a market that had continued to decline the year previous. The suspicion was that it so declined because of the fact that the Continental Tobacco Company has secured options on leading plants with instructions to keep the raw stocks low.

The conditions of a short crop and short stocks throughout 1898 under the former regime of independent factories would have advanced the price of leaf so that the farmer for his crop of 1898, marketed in 1899, would have received about 50 per cent. more money without affecting the price of the manufactured article. What he would have done with this surplus the country merchants know. According to figures from the Inspector's reports the Brown county district ships to Cincinnati at least 12,000 hogsheads of tobacco annually. At an average of 1,200 pounds to the hogshead the total product is about 1,440,000. The average price this year paid by county shippers is seven cents a pound. An advance of 50 per cent., which the condition would justify, would be equal to 3½ cents, or $504,000. This is the amount the tobacco growers in this district lost and the tobacco trust gained.

A half million dollars paid to the farmers in this district would mean flush times for everybody, from the farm hand to the storekeeper. The tobacco user does not get the benefit of the farmers' loss. It goes into the maw of the trust. It becomes dividends to the stockholders. The tobacco growers here are fully advised upon this vital question, because, perforce, the facts have been pounded into them by their diminished exchequer. Any one of them familiar with the conditions know that this should be a "ten-cent" year for leaf tobacco. Owing to trust manipulation it is a "seven-cent" year. The same rule applies to the West Virginia, Indiana and Kentucky tobacco districts, and it is but a simple arithmetical problem to show that the combine this year has swallowed millions that under natural and independent conditions would have gone to those who till the soil.—Ripley (Ohio) correspondent Cincinnat Enquireri, Oct. 18.

"We carried every county in which I addressed the voters."

"The English Government is as good as ours."

"Large combinations of capital have existed for 200 years in England."

"The great commercial success of England has been due to those same trusts."

"These combinations known as trusts are not a political question at all. They are simply and purely a business question."

"The trusts have the best men in the country at their head. I believe in their organization."

"I think the trusts will result beneficial to the men who work in the factories."

"What harm can these trusts do to the people of this country?"

"The formation of trusts is a step forward."

"They are not intended to increase profits, but to reduce cost."

"Trusts! There's no such thing!"

"The story that I have defended trusts in any of my speeches is absolutely false."

"The combination of corporations is simply the evolution of business. I don't know of a trust in the United States."

"I say they are not trusts. If they are, prove it."

"There is not a trust left in the United States. There never were more than about a half dozen, and they all have been dissolved and converted into large corporations."

"I am not defending trusts, nor am I repudiating a single word or phrase in the Republican platform."

Thompson M Morton, who has been at work in Ecuador, South America, since early in July as assistant engineer on the line of the Guayaquil and Quito railroad, reached Winchester last Tuesday morning. The President is expressing his apprehension that the business pendulum, which has swung so far in the right direction, may soon swing the other way. But so long as he and Mr. Hanna can control American crops and foreign famines and apply the stimulant of war to our productions why should Mr. McKinley be apprehensive?—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

OUR HAREM KEEPER.

[St. Louis Republic]

Among the salaried officers recognized by the American Military Governor of the Sulu Islands in keeping up the royal court of the Sultan of Sulu it may someyhat astonish Americans to encounter the duly recorded title of Raja Mura, keeper of the royal harem, who is to receive from Uncle Sam's representative a stipend of $40 per month for looking after his master's many wives.

At first sight it will probably seem to the average citizen of this monogamous country that the United States Government made a sufficient surrender of principle in officially sanctioning the Sulu Sultan's practice of polygamy. The generosity and breadth of moral view which leads the McKinley Administration to assume the cost of keeping the Sultan's harem in order, supervising his women and providing the necessary retinue of harem servants, may not prove altogether grateful to the American mind, still more or less faithful to oldfashioned standards of Caucasian decency and morality.

The terms of the treaty entered into between President McKinley and the Sulu Sultan, providing among other things for this American recognition and payment of the Sultan's harem keeper, are now in the hands of Secretary of State Root, an approved and duly authenticated part of the historical records of American acts. It is in order, therefore, to hail Raja Mura, superintendent of harems, as an officially accepted American institution. Under the impelling impetus of imperialism we are cutting strange capers these days.

A sauerkraut famine is threatened in this city. What such a famine means is not understood by those who are not aware that sauerkraut is the great popular dish of St. Louis, and occupies the place taken by beans in Boston. It is estimated that more sauerkraut is consumed here than in Chicago, which has twice the population of this city. Missouri soil is said to be specially adapted to cabbage growing, and, as there are many Germans in this city, the consumption of sauerkraut follows naturally. The Germans have popularized sauerkraut among their American friends until a St. Louis house without sauerkraut is like home without a mother.

There were heavy frost at the beginning of the season, which killed many plants, and consequently the cabbage crop was light. When the sauerkraut makers came into market this fall for their raw material they discovered this state of things. Prices went up at a jump. Cabbages sold by the ton a year ago at from $6 to $8. Now they bring $15 to $18 a ton by the carload, and are hard to get at that.

Market men say that this means a bonanza for Southern truck gardeners, particularly those of Florida who will begin planting cabbage next month. By the time it is ready for market it is expected that the price will be enormous.—St. Louis telegram to the New York Sun.

MILK TRUST.

New York World

The $15,000,000 Milk Trust raised yesterday the price of milk 10 cents per can of 40 quarts.

This is the fourth increase that has been made in a little more than a month.

On September 30 the price of a forty-quart can of milk was $1 31. On October 1 it was raised to $1 41. On October 20 it was advanced to $1 51. Yesterday the price was increased to $1 61. Within the next week or 10 days there will be a further advance. During the early fall the price was $1 21 per can. The increase has thus been 33 per cent.

Greater New York consumes about 38,000 cans of milk a day that are affected by the manipulations of the trust. Thus the consumers will pay $15,200 a day more into the pockets of the trust than was the case a trifle over a month ago.

All of this is not clear profit to the trust, the producer or dairyman getting a share of it, but his share is comparatively small.

The official title of the Milk Trust is the Farmers' Dairy and Produce Company. It was incorporated under the beneficient trust laws of New Jersey on December 21, 1897. The trust controls about four fifths of the routes in this city.

The present price of $1 61 per can is 20 per cent higher than at this time last year. It is an increase of a half a cent a quart. The advance was announced at the Milk Exchange in the Mercantile Exchange Building. The President of the Exchange, W. A. Wright, presided at the meeting.

The figures given above refer to the price of the can delivered at the depot. To this must be added the cost of transporting it from the depot and of distributing it to the consumer and the small retail dealer.

Members of the Exchange when questioned as the cause of the advance gave various reasons. A few said they believed milk was rather scarce.

One member said frankly there was no scarcity, and that the advance was made simply because it was regarded as good business to lift the price.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier.]

A large transfer of real estate was made last week, in which a Williamstown man was interested. William Cates exchanged his business house and residence at Erlanger for a farm of 156 acres of good land about one mile from Parsons, Kans., owned by Dr. R. P. Thomas, a small cash consideration completing the transfer. The doctor and his estimable wife will begin housekeeping in their new home as soon as their goods arrive from the west, and as Erlanger is a good field for a physician and druggist it is probable that the doctor will do well there. The best wishes of his friends in this section are extended.

Last Sunday was a big day in the Baptist church in Williamstown. It was the occasion of the ordination of Rev. William R. Elliston into the ministry of the Baptist church. People from all the surrounding country were present in goodly numbers. D. C. Points presided as church moderator. The meeting began early in the morning and continued all day. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. Lafayette Johnson and a grand sermon it was. Rev. Will Elliston answered all of the questions of faith and creed propounded to him and his knowledge of the scripture and theology were found to be excellent. Hands were laid upon him, the prayer was said and he was ordained as a preacher of the gospel according to the Baptist faith and belief. Rev. Elliston is a most worthy young man and is worthy of all honor in the house of the Lord. His will be a burning light in the house of the Lord for many a day.

Of the states that have added 100 miles each or over, Arkansas leads with 224 miles, Minnesota 157 miles, Penusylvania 136 miles, New Mexico 135 miles, Oklahoma 103 miles, Florida 102 miles, Louisiana 135 miles, and Alabama and Mississppi 100 miles each.

STOCKHOLM has more telephones than any other European city. It is stated that the central station has about 100,000 calls a day, or about one for every three persons in the city.

MISS EVE BLANTURE SIMPSON who is now visiting in Boston, is the daughter of the late Sir James Young Simpson, the discoverer of chloroform. She has written a life of her father and one of Robert Louis Stevenson, with whom she was intimately acquainted. Her home in Edinburgh is the center of the literary life of that city.

THE late czarowitz of Russia left a widow and family. His imperial highness was morganatically married to a beautiful young girl, who before her marriage with him was in poor circumstances and earned her living as a telegraphist, but who was descended from a princely family of the line of the last king of Grusien.

A GORGEOUS bicycle has just been sent from France to an Indian rajah, the parts which on an ordinary machine are nickel-plated being made of gold. Even the spokes are cased with gold, while the gold-cased rims are studded alternately with turquoises and rubies. A scarlet cloth held down with jewels covers the saddle.

THE Kashmir railway is to be constructed over 186 miles in the most mountainous part of India. It will be operated by electricity, water power being used. This permits of a much higher motor for drawing the same load and also permits of grades which a steam engine could not climb without recourse to the rack system.

A NEW long-distance bicycle record has just been made. Mrs. Jane Lindsey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., recently finished a ride of 600 miles on a bicycle within 72 hours, thereby wresting the woman's long-distance world's championship from Miss Jane C. Yatman, whose record she beat by 100 miles. Mrs. Lindsey slept only three hours during the ride.

MUSIC boxes for bicycles are now manufactured by a firm in Hamburg. The round, box-shaped apparatus, which is said to give the sound of a better-class accordion, is attached in front to the lower part of the handle bar and connected with the front wheel in such a manner that the revolution of this wheel causes the music to play.

PROF. TOTTEN, once lieutenant in the army, but for some time past a professional and most persistent prophet of the end of the world and similar events, is now out with a new prediction. He says that the infant son of the duke of York is destined to gather the Jews from the four quarters of the earth and to unite them under his banner.

PHILATELISTS will shudder at the mere thought of the latest revolutionary idea over which the post office is brooding, says Invention. It is proposed to abolish the postage stamp. It is suggested that a form of automatic machine should be employed, with a slit into which the letter should be inserted. When a penny is placed in a slot the machine will stamp the letter, and thus obviate the use of ordinary stamps.

ENGLAND is going into battle with a unique array of modern war equipments. Machine guns, motor cars and bicycles are not so novel, but wireless telegraphy is an up-to-the-minute accoutrement the British will employ, while her balloon service has long been recognized as an integral part of her military system. Like all other first-class powers, England has for some years past had an army balloon department, a school of instruction in the use of such "air ships."

A BIG shaft of granite will soon be erected by the government of the United States at North Perry, a village about 20 miles from Calais, Me. The purpose of the erection is to mark the geographical spot which is midway between the North Pole and the equator. On the stone is the inscription: "This stone marks latitude 45 degrees north, half way from the equator to the North Pole." The shaft will rise near North Perry's solitary church, and will be the most curious sight in the vicinity.

PRESIDENT KRUGER is six feet tall, with abnormally long legs, huge hands, feet and ears. He once outran a horse for a hundred yards. In his youth he was a wonderful horseman; his feats of equestrianism almost equaled those of a circus rider. It is said of him when young he could stand on his head on a galloping horse, holding on by the stirrup straps. He is intensely religious, and, curious as it may seem, an American missionary confirmed him. He knows the Bible from cover to cover, and has a text for every day in the year and for almost any occasion.

ARE WAITING FOR GUNS

It is Believed in London That is the Reason Ladysmith Was Not Attacked.

SURRENDER OF GEN. WHITE REPORTED.

Gen. Sir Redvers Buller Appears to Have Ordered a Retirement From Stormberg.

Third Class Cruiser Pelorus Ordered From Gibraltar to Durban—The Fearless Goes to the Same Point From Port Said.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The colonial office has received a dispatch saying Colenso has been evacuated by the British, who are withdrawing to the south.

Colenso is 20 miles south of Ladysmith. The British are "withdrawing" from the key point of Gen. White's line of retreat. At this point is the big bridge, which is the only way reinforcements can get through to Ladysmith. The capture of Colenso means that Gen. White's forces are entirely cooped up by the Boers.

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 5.—The occupation of Colesburg by the Boers is officially admitted. Colesburg is just south of the Orange Free State, in Cape Colony, and is an important town strategically. It is not more than 100 miles due east of De Aar, from which place Gen. Buller will begin his great campaign to take Pretoria.

LISBON, Nov. 6.—Persistent reports are in circulation here that Gen. Sir George Stewart White, British commander in Natal, has capitulated to the Boers.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The general belief in London is that the Boers are now waiting for more guns from Pretoria before attacking Ladysmith.

The fact that Sir Redvers Buller appears to have ordered a retirement from Stormberg, and perhaps from other places, relieves to some extent the public mind which otherwise would have been further alarmed. Confidence is felt in any measures that Gen. Buller may deem desirable. The knowledge that the pigeon post is working has also come as a relief to the great anxiety previously felt.

The third-class cruiser Pelorus has been ordered from Gibraltar to Durban, and the third-class cruiser Fearless from Port Said to the same point. Dispatches from Cape Town and other centers in Cape Colony indicate that the Cape Dutch are becoming very restless in consequence of Boer successes.

The Morning Post Ladysmith correspondent, telegraphing November 1, says: "We can not understand the Boer tactics. It is incomprehensible that they should have refrained from using their big guns this morning."

Commenting upon this dispatch the Morning Dispatch observes: "It is easy to guess the reason why the Boers have been nonplussed by the arrival of the naval guns at Ladysmith. They are now regretting a lost opportunity, as they might have cut the railway and thus prevented the appearance of those guns on the scene."

The troop ship Rapidan, which sailed from Liverpool for South Africa on November 1, but was obliged to turn back owing to the damage received in Friday's storm, lost 200 horses overboard in the gale.

Crazed From Typhoid Fever.

FT. WAYNE, Ind., Nov. 6.—J. Rudolph, aged 25, made a murderous assault on his brother with a hatchet. He wounded his brother, but other relatives intervened in time to prevent murder. The maniac fled upstairs and got onto the roof through a scuttle hole, where he defied capture. The police were notified and several officers and deputy sheriffs surrounded the house and, finally, at great risk, succeeded in capturing and disarming the man. Rudolph had recently recovered from an attack of typhoid fever.

GEN. SIR REDVERS BULLER,

COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE BRITISH FORCES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

IMPORTANT EXPEDITION.

A Fleet of Gunboats and Transports Leave Manila, Their Destination Supposed to Be Some Northern Port.

MANILA, Nov. 6.—Sunday evening a fleet of transports and gunboats left Manila for the most important expedition of the autumn campaign. Its destination is supposed to be Bagupan or some other northern port. Gen. Wheaton commands, with a brigade consisting of 13th infantry, the 33d Infantry, the guns of the 6th artillery and two Gatlings. The transports Sheridan, Francisco Di Reyes and Actec carry the troops, with the gunboat Helena as escort.

A dispatch boat was sent ahead to arrange a rendezvous with the United States cruiser Charleston and the other warships that are patrolling the north coast of Luzon.

The landing will be made under cover of the guns of the fleet. It is assumed here that the purpose of the expedition is to move down the Dagupan-Manila railroad toward Tarlac or to prevent Aguinaldo's forces making another base farther north. Dagupan and Asparri are the strongholds of the insurgents in the north and it is supposed the points where most of the filibustering parties land.

Since the beginning of the hostilities it has been the unanimous opinion of military experts here that Dagupan should be made a base of operations, but sufficient troops have heretofore been lacking. With Gens. Wheaton, MacArthur and Lawton moving upon Tarlac from three directions, and the mountains hemming in the other side, the insurgent capital will soon become untenable.

Aguinaldo may attempt to shift his headquarters to the rich tobacco country at the northern end of the island. Possibly he may slide around Gen. Lawton's front to the southern provinces; but, as MacArthur's and Lawton's troops are spread across the country from Angeles to Cabanatuan, it will be difficult for the insurgents to escape.

Should the concerted operations succeed, organized insurrection on a large scale should be at an end early next spring, although guerilla warfare is likely to continue for a long time. No one anticipates that the insurgents will make many hard battles. The problem is to move the troops about the country to maintain transportation and to hold the territory gained.

FIRED ON THE HOUSES.

A Body of Negroes at Mine No. 61, Macon, Mo., Break Out of the Stockade and Do Considerable Damage.

MACON, Mo., Nov. 6.—In spite of the vigilance of Superintendent Vail, a body of Negroes got out of the stockade at mine No. 61 Sunday and again started toward town. On arriving near mine No. 7 they stationed themselves in a railroad cut and began firing into houses over the hill. David Gamble's residence was riddled with bullets and the family had to lay flat on the floor to escape the fusilade. O. L. Trollard's house was also attacked in similar manner and several others had to evacuate their homes. Sheriff Clean came home Saturday night, and the Negroes took advantage of his absence to resume their outrages. He returned to Bevier Sunday and immediately went to Mine No. 61 and will endeavor to locate the guilty parties and arrest them. Several persons came to Macon Sunday in quest of rifles and ammunition. A show of force is necessary before the Negroes will consent to be disarmed.

FREE DELIVERY.

Annual Report of the First Assistant Postmaster General Perry Heath.

The Adoption of a Uniform Style of Mail Box for the Service to Be Put Up and Kept in Repair By the Department Urged.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—A vigorous plea for rural free delivery is made in the annual report of First Assistant Postmaster General Perry S. Heath, made public Sunday night.

Mr. Heath says the service so far has resulted in increased postal receipts; enhancement of the value of farm lands reached by rural free delivery of from $2 to $3 per acre; a general improvement of the condition of the roads traversed by the rural carriers; better prices for farm products, the producers being brought into daily touch with the state of the markets; besides educational benefits conferred by relieving the monotony of farm life through ready access to wholesome literature and knowledged of current events.

On November 1 rural free delivery was in successful operation over 383 services, radiating over 40 states and one territory, Idaho, Wyoming, Mississippi and Montana being the only states unrepresented.

Between the beginning of the new fiscal year, July 1, 1899, and November 1, an additional expenditure of $150,000 rural free delivery has been extended to nearly 180,000 persons, at an annual cost of about 84 cents per capita against an average per capita cost of $2.80 in small towns of 5,000 population.

"It is a small matter to a resident of a town," says the report, "to be saved a walk of a few hundred yards to the post office, while on the contrary it is a great accommodation to the farmer to be spared a drive of five or ten miles over corduroys roads to get his mail. In a recent public discussion advocates of the system who took the value of the time thus lost in the busy farming season at only 50 cents per head found that their figures run up into many millions of dollars lost to the agricultural interests through being obliged to send to the village for the mails. Rural carriers are shortly to be authorized to receive and receipt for letters for registration as city carriers do now.

The report recommends the adoption of some uniform style of mail box for the rural free delivery service, with two compartments, one for delivery and one for collection, with one master key for the carrier to open the collection compartments of all the boxes and a key for the delivery compartment to be furnished to each patron of the delivery.

These boxes are to be put up and kept in repair by the post office department, for rental at moderate prices, which would not only pay the government interest on its investment but yield a revenue. The rural mail boxes would thus have thrown around them the undisputed protection of the United States laws. By illustration it is shown that the rural delivery at Westchester, Pa., not only paid for itself but left in the nine months of its operation up to September 30, a balance of $393, after delivering 155,805 pieces of mail matter at the doors of the farmers. The reports of hostilities of postmasters and from star route contractors are dismissed as having no substantial grounds and as animated by no desire for the public good. A modification of the postal laws is recommended to permit star route messengers under special appointment and oath to perform rural free delivery service. Four additional postal wagon routes with auxiliary carriers in the traveling rural post office whose experimental operation in Carroll county, Maryland, has attracted general interest, is recommended.

JEFFRIES-SHARKEY FIGHT.

The Former Given the Decision in the Twenty-Fifth Round, Thereby Retaining the Championship.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—James J. Jeffries retains the championship of the world, Referee George Siler giving him the decision at the end of the twenty-fifth round over Sailor Tom Sharkey at the Coney Island Sporting club Friday night. It was one of the most marvelous battles that has taken place, and the greatest crowd that ever gathered in the Coney Island club house witnessed the desperate struggle for supremacy.

In the fifth round Jeffries had the better of the fight, in the first two and the last three. During the other 20 Sharkey forced the issue, and like a bull terrier, was at his man with both hands unceasingly. In these 20 rounds Jeffries' great weight and brawn helped him to hold off the sailor, and in the 22d round swung in a couple of vicious uppercuts that made Sharkey groggy. Tom came back again in the 24th and 25th, but was weakened greatly by Jeffries' vicious blows.

One minute before the gong sounded to end the fight Jeffries left glove came off and practically the contest was over. The referee motioned to Jeffries corner; an American flag was flung around the champion's shoulders and the crowd on that side and end of the arena cheered wildly. The crowd on the opposite side and end, in Sharkey's corner, yelled for Sharkey and the men were led back to their dressing rooms.

The thousands of spectators were banked 40 feet high in the building, the place being packed from ringside to rafters and the aisles around the ring were lined. The tremendous crowd sweated under the glare of 400 arc lights 15 feet or less from the canvass of the squared circle. The heat was intense. The fighters were almost exhausted and the spectators shrieked themselves hoarse.

It seemed at first as though it would be a short fight, for in the second Jeffries put the sailor to the ropes with a left on the jaw, and the referee began to call off the seconds as Sharkey kneeled on the floor.

But from the third round on, Sharkey, with his vicious swings to the ribs and the jaw, kept the crowd on its feet waiting for a knockout.

Jeffries stood the terrific punishment and with his eye, nose and ear split, came back just as viciously in the last three rounds and almost retrieved himself. Then came the unfortunate and unsatisfactory ending. Jeffries glove flying off, bringing the fight to an end, although the crowd urged Sharkey to rush in and end it. This he tried to do but Jeffries fought him back and Referee Siler rushed to the rescue. It was noticeable that Jeffries used his weight to its best advantage, throwing himself all over the sailor, but the latter did his share of the hugging and both were warned repeatedly.

Ten thousand spectators gathered around the ringside. Though Coney Island was swept by a gale, the cars came down crowded to the guards in a swiftly moving line, and the sports waded to the narrow entrances leading to the arena.

When seen in his dressing room after the contest Jeffries said: "Sharkey is the hardest and best man I ever met, and I hardly expect to meet a better in the future. Within six months I have met and defeated the best two men in the world and will now take a long rest, probably nine months or a year. Never again will I fight under the same conditions. The heat from the lights overhead tended to take away a great deal of my steam and the glare from the floor weakened my eyes. My left arm, the one that was injured while training, gave out in the fourth round and I could not use it properly for the rest of the battle, or the result would have been different, for I think that I could have knocked him out."

Sharkey was inconsolable and cried like a child when he went to his quarters and refused to talk, but Tom O'Rourke, his manager, expressed the opinion that the sailor should have received the decision. He said that two of Sharkey's ribs were broken, and that during the last four rounds Tom's left hand was useless, having been broken on Jeffries' head.

PEACE OFFERINGS.

They Preceded Him and as His Wife Predicted He Was Home with His Purchases.

She received a large box full of American beauty roses by messenger from her husband along toward four o'clock the other afternoon.

"James is absorbing Martigny cocktails again," she mused shrewdly.

Half an hour later another messenger brought her five pounds of expensive candy from her husband.

"James has ordered that $80 overcoat he was talking about, but said he couldn't afford," she mused again.

Half an hour later a wagon drew up, with a florist's name painted on the sides thereof, and two handsome, full-grown palms were delivered at her door marked as coming from her husband.

"Olive branches preceding him," she mused some more. "He'll be home by dark."

He was home by dark. He had been absorbing Martignys. He had ordered the $80 overcoat. The prescience of the modern married woman is sufficiently awe-inspiring to persuade any man to raise his bonnet thereto.—Washington Post.

REBEL CABINET.

Crisis is Predicted as Result of the Resignation of Two Members.

Feeling of Disquiet at Iloilo Has Subsided—The Americans Occupy It and the Adjoining Towns of Jaro and Molo With 4,000 Men.

MANILA, Nov. 3.—Aguinaldo has issued a proclamation announcing that the American congress will meet in December to decide whether "the imperialist policy" and "this bloody work" are to be continued. He exhorts his soldiers to conduct themselves so that congress will consider them worthy of an independence, and requires the priests to abstain from politics and to redeem the church from the bad name the misdeeds of the friars have given it.

A crisis in the Filipino cabinet is predicted as the result of the resignations of Paterno and Buencamino, two Filipino leaders who have lost the confidence of the rabid revolutionists.

Filipinos who attempted to come to Manila with the Spanish commission received a message from Gen. Otis saying the women and children would be given American protection, but that the men who had cast their lot with the insurrection must remain with it. The party included a brother of Gen. Luna, who was assassinated by the guard before Aguinaldo's house, with his family and the Filipino secretary of the treasury's family. The families returned to Tarlac.

Lieut. Slavens, of Gen. MacArthur's staff, reconnoitering with 19 men in front of Angeles, discovered a Filipino outpost in a trench. The Filipinos numbered about 40 men. As the Filipinos had sighted the Americans, Lieut. Slavens' only course was to charge, and his party rushed to the trench shooting and yelling. They killed three of the insurgents and wounded several, who, however, succeeded in escaping. Not one of the Americans was hit. The lieutenant secured valuable information about the enemy's position.

The feeling of disquiet aroused at Iloilo by the arrest of Santiago, the wealthy Filipino, who is charged with forming a revolutionary junta has subsided. The natives in their quarter of the town were sullen and restless and were heard chanting the death song at night, with the refrain "The Americans sleep."

A provost marshal's force surrounded the quarter and drove the suspicious looking natives outside the lines.

The Americans occupy Iloilo and the adjoining towns of Jaro and Molo with 4,000 men, consisting of the 18th and 26th regiments, two battalions of the 19th regiment, a detachment of the 6th regiment and a battery of the 6th artillery. The insurgent force is now supposed to be between 500 and 5,000 armed men and many more unarmed. Their lines are about 900 yards from Jaro, which is occupied by the 26th regiment. The insurgents are supposed to have five smooth-bore cannon. For a long time past they have been building trenches between Jaro and their stronghold, Santa Barnara, eight miles north.

The insurgents attempted to ambush Capt. Batson's scouts between Santiago and Sarogassa, but Capt. Batson charged them, drove them up from their position, killing and wounding several of them. One American officer was killed and a private wounded.

The captures at the Taloura arsenal include 13 small brass Howitzers and 800 one-pound projectiles.

Maj. Bell's regiment Thursday advanced from Guamao on Florida Blanca, which was found to be deserted. Bishop's battalion is stationed there. Major also made another descent upon Porac, pursuing the Filipinos thence into the mountains, and capturing their horses and baggage. The American loss was one killed and two wounded. Maj. Bell reports that he entirely destroyed the insurgent cavalry that was operating in that section.

THE BOERS' GUNS.

Before The War Large Orders Were Placed With Gunmakers at Le Creusot, But All Were Not Delivered.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"I learn that the Transvaal and Free State governments, before the war, placed large orders with the gunmakers at Le Creusot, but that all the weapons could not be delivered, owing to the suddenness with which hostilities began. The guns the Boers are actually using are Creusot's 75 millimeter quick firers and 155-millimeter siege and garrison guns, all mounted on light carriages and adapted in every possible way for use over muddy roads.

"They had two months' firing practice under competent Creusot agents. If they could have had another month's practice, no European artillerist could have withstood them."

THEIR REPORT.

Philippine Commissioners Tell the President About the Islands.

A Statement of the Capacity of the Filipinos for Self-Government—They Lack in Previous Training and Experience and Need Tutelage.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—In accordance with the understanding reached at the conference at the white house Wednesday the Philippine commissioners Thursday submitted to the president the preliminary report which it had promised to prepare. The report appears to be a compact summary of conditions on the islands as the commission left them; of the historical events which preceded the Spanish war and led to the orignal Filipino insurrection; of the exchanges between Adm. Dewey and the other American commanders and the insurgents; the breaking out and progress of the present insurrection, and finally, a statement of the capacity of the Filipinos for self-government. A notable feature of the report is a memorandum by Adm. Dewey explanatory of his relations with Aguinaldo. The report is very voluminous.

The report says:

"Deplorable as war is, the one in which we are now engaged was unavoidable by us. We were attacked by a bold, adventurous and enthusiastic army. No alternative was left us, except ignominious retreat. It is not to be conceived of that any American would have sanctioned the surrender of Manila to the insurgents. Our obligations to other nations, and to the friendly Filipinos, and to ourselves and to our flag demanded that force should be met by force. Whatever the future of the Philippines may be there is no course open to us now except the prosecution of the war until the insurgents are redneed to submission. The commission is of the opinion that there has been no time since the destruction of the Spanish squadron by Adm. Dewey when it was possible to withdraw our forces from the islands either with honor to ourselves or with safety to the inhabitants."

The report sums up the fruitless efforts of the commission to negotiate terms of peace with the Filipinos as follows:

"No better proof could be furnished that the primary object of his (Aguinaldo's) struggle is not, as is pretended, the liberty of the Filipino people, but the continuance of his own arbitrary and despotic power. In any event, the American people may feel confident that no effort was omitted by the commission to secure a peaceful end of the struggle, but the opportunities they offered and urged were all neglected, if not indeed spurned."

The chapter devoted to "capacity for self government" is the result, the report states, of diligent inquiry for several months, in the course of which a great number of witnesses were examined, of all shades of political thought and varieties of occupation, tribe and locality. The most striking and, perhaps, the most signficant fact in the entire situation is the multipl city of tribes inhabiting the archipelago, the diversity of their languages (which are mutually unintelligible) and the multifarious phases of civilization—ranging all the way from the highest to the lowest.

"As to the general intellectual capacities of the Filipinos, the commission is disposed to rate them high. But, excepting in a limited number of persons, these capacities have not been developed by education or experience. The masses of the people are uneducated. That intelligent public opinion on which popular government rests does not exist in the Philippines, and it can not exist until education has elevated the masses, broadened their intellectual horizon and disciplined their faculty of judgment. And even then the power of self government can not be assumed without considerable previous training and experience under the guidance and tutelage of an enlightened and liberal foreign power. For the bald fact is that the Filipinos have never had any experience in governing themselves."

DANGER IN EXPANSION.

Gov. Schofield, of Wisconsin, Says America Should Not Keep the Philippines.

Gov. Scofield has written a letter to the Milwaukee Journal on the Philippine question in which he says it would be dangerous to the republic to keep the Philippines. The governor writes:

"While the question of the disposition to be made of the Philippines is political in the highest sense it has not become a party issue, and, I believe, is a question which is to be settled in the near future. I take it that the issue is not really one of expansion or anti-expansion, so-called, and it is only obscured by the talk of imperialism or anti-imperialism.

"It is essentially a public question and one which should be widely discussed. And let me say that the free discussion of it by a republican, whatever side he may take, in no sense involves disloyalty to the administration. Every man of intelligence in the country, I believe, is with the president in his efforts to suppress the insurrection; but what disposition is to be made of the new territory and the people who will become dependent upon us is a question to be settled by congress, and congress should express the will of the people.

"The real issue presented is this: Shall the government after it has suppressed the insurrection plan to remain permanent possession of the Philippines and make that archipelago a portion of our territory and its 8,000,000 or more people a part of our population? Is it expedient for this country to permanently add to its territory and its population those far-off islands and their group of motley inhabitants?

"If we maintain control in the Philippines they must be directly and completely subject to our authority; but we need not trouble ourselves as some do with the maxim that we must not attempt to govern without the consent of the governed. The consent of the governed in such cases may be predicated upon the inability to refuse to be governed. That maxim, therefore, if it is applicable at all to the case, may be used to strengthen rather than weaken the side of those who go in for a policy of acquisition.

"Leaving aside the danger which would threaten us on the side of a vigorous cultivation of the military spirit and a stimulated desire for acquisition, I do not believe this country can afford to assume so enormous a responsibility.

"We may talk splendidly of the brotherhood of man, but before we extend that principle we must conserve the existence of men. Whatever is to be done by us in the Philippines or elsewhere can only be accomplished while the integrity of our own national existence is intact.

"In other words, we cannot deal justly with the Philippines when such dealing is an injustice to ourselves.

"Possibly I may be taking a rather melancholy view of the situation, but it seems to me that the continued existence of our present form of government is threatened by this Philippine problem. We are a great nation, but we have our limitations. Let us recognize those limitations, and not allow the spirit of speculation and gambling to enter into the solution of our governmental problems. Let us be as a nation as upright as an ordinary business man, and not expand beyond the capacity of our capital.

"The people cannot, I believe, undertake with safety the assimilation of 8,000,000 or more of foreigners, alien to us in every characteristic. And it is folly to talk of maintaining permanently our supremacy over those people without working toward assimilation; it is worse than folly—it is criminal. Supremacy over those islands must mean either a control having in view the ultimate uplifting of the people to our level, or a control for the purpose of enriching ourselves materially at their expense."

ASSESSING OFFICEHOLDERS.

The Administration Scheme for Raising Money for the Coming Campaign.

The republican situation in Ohio is so grave that Senator Hanna has revived the Jay Hubbell system of levying campaign assessments upon all federal officeholders in Washington. A million dollars is needed, and needed at once, by the campaign committee in that state, and government employes are expected to furnish it.

Within a few days every federal officeholder, no matter how low, has received a circular from W. F. Burdell, treasurer of the finance committee of the Ohio republican executive committee, soliciting "liberal" contributions.

These circulars are addressed to the houses of the employes, and the fact proves that the administration not only approves of this money-raising scheme, but has compelled each cabinet officer to furnish to the republican campaign committee of Ohio the names and private addresses of the government employes.

The circular explains that its aims are within the law, that no member of the finance committee is employed in the federal service, that no effort to collect the money will be made in the departments, and because of the last fact contributions must be voluntary and made as individuals and unofficially. The circular is marked "confidential" and is typewritten, the signature being made with pen.

Many of the recipients of these letters are terrorized by the fear that they will lose their places if they fail to contribute, although they do not understand why they should be assessed to help out in Ohio when they have demands from other states made upon them at regular intervals. It is said that a "blacklist" will be made up showing all who fail to respond to the Hanna call for funds, and that the victims will be dealt with accordingly.

Senator Hanna, when here recently, said to a republican representative of note: "John R. McLean is putting up an exceedingly strong fight in all the big cities of the state, and it will require every dollar the republican committee can raise to secure a republican victory."—Washington Special, in N. Y. Journal.

——The prosperity of the country just now is based upon the important fact that our steel manufacturers are underselling everybody else in the markets of the world. And they are doing that because the ore and fuel can be assembled cheaper in this country than anywhere else in the world. The protective tariff of the republican party has nothing to do with it.—Toledo Blade.

——Many of the phrases used by President McKinley on his latest stumping tour through the west will be found neatly dovetailed into his Thanksgiving proclamation.—St. Louis Republic.

THE POSITION OF BRYAN.

His Proposition on the Philippine Question Wise, Logical and Just.

Republican newspapers are busily engaged misrepresenting the position taken by William J. Bryan on the Philippine question.

They assert that Bryan advocates a cowardly course and the immediate withdrawal of the American troops.

In order that the people may know just what Mr. Bryan thinks about this matter the following extract is made from a speech delivered by him at Des Moines recently. Among other things Mr. Bryan said:

"I do not favor the withdrawal of our troops. What I do believe, and what I have repeatedly asserted as my belief, is that we should at once declare our purpose in unequivocal terms so positive that the Filipinos cannot doubt it—to grant them full and complete independence the very moment they have established a stable government. I believe that if we should make such an announcement right now the war would cease in a short time, and our troops could withdraw without laying down their arms in the face of the enemy."

This puts quite a different phase on the matter. The condition of affairs in Cuba proves that Bryan is right in his suggestion, and that instead of advocating a cowardly course he makes a proposition which appeals entirely to logic, justice and wisdom.

Senator Hoar agrees with Mr. Bryan and asserts that by pursuing the same course in the Philippines as that pursued in Cuba this country would have avoided war.

In an interview Senator Hoar says:

"By pursuing such a course, instead of lasting enmity we should have the undying gratitude of that people. We should have had everything we could ask or wish in the way of trade advantage there. They would have taken our advice in the framing of their institutions. We should have sent our scholars and teachers to instruct them in good government and the ways of civilization, as we did to Japan. We should have kept other nations from interfering with them. We should have aided them in keeping order, and there would have been a nation in the east differing from Japan in the fact that it would have been a republic, and we should have had the glory forever of having been their liberators and benefactors."

Isn't it about time for the republican press to show a little honesty in its treatment of Bryan? Let them quote him fairly. His friends are quite willing to have his statements given the widest publicity, but they object to lies and distortions.—Chicago Democrat.

PROMISES TO BURN.

How Republicans Propose to Deal with the Trust Question.

Senator Hanna has discovered that there are some trusts after all, and that there are many more monopolistic combinations under other forms and names that are extremely obnoxious to even republican voters.

The World's correspondent at Cleveland has therefore been authorized to say that—

"A bill will be introduced at the next session of congress covering the defects of the Sherman anti-trust law. It will be championed by the leaders of the republican party, and as that party is in the majority its passage is assured."

It is hoped that in this way "the wind will be taken out of the democratic sails" on the trust question.

What is the proposed legislation but another promise. Haven't the people been fed upon promises on this question quite as long as their appetite will stand it? What is needed is not more law against monopolies, but an honest and resolute purpose to enforce the laws we have. Two or three attorneys general have demonstrated that even under the common law "conspiracies in restraint of trade" can be driven out of a state.

But when a president is elected through the aid of enormous campaign contributions from the trusts and combines, and is himself the supporter of a tariff law that encourages and protects them, and he appoints as attorney general a corporation lawyer and trust counsel, what can you expect?

If the issue can be fairly presented and squarely voted upon next year the politicians of Mr. Hanna's school are pretty certain to find that the people will not elect a monopoly breeder to put down monopolies.—N. Y. World.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——The republican managers are trying to get the federal officeholders and employes into a campaign trust.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Mr. Hanna is sufficiently frank in his defense of the trusts. With the head of the republican party approving the great combinations, what will an anti-trust plank in the next republican national platform amount to?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

——Mr. Hanna is still covering himself with oratorical glory. His latest utterance is one in defense of the trusts, which he says are organizations for the mutual benefit of their proprietors, with which neither politics nor the public have anything to do. They are beneficent institutions.—Washington Times.

——One of the frequent remarks made by Mr. McKinley on his late stumping tour was to the effect that the revenues of this country are now abundant. He did not go on to explain that this is because of the extra stamp tax which was levied to provide revenues to carry on the war. This tax is paid by the consumers, while the corporations in the main escape. In his "swing around the circle" Mr. McKinley omitted from his speeches many points of special interest to the people.—Buffalo Times.

It runs off standing still—turns over on level ground and backs up as it goes around. Goebel's plurality over Taylor, 1192.

NOTES.

Constance is the Republican banner precinct.

Bullittsville gave Goebel his largest plurality in the county.

A squint at the Brown poll of this county would be interesting.

So far as heard from the election in the county passed off quietly.

Constance gave Brown "nary" vote. Rabbit Hash was his banner precinct.

The telephone was a great assistance in receiving election returns last night.

The returns in this county indicate that very few of the Brown votes were switched to Taylor.

The fellow who bet Brown would receive 700 votes in this county, will have but little confidence hereafter, in their informant's political information.

It's up to the People.

Less than a week remains in which to garner facts, and information that will influence your vote for the next president of the United States.

That grievous wrongs have been committed, and grave errors allowed to exist without effort at correction, is evidenced by the speech, writings, and comments of eminent statesmen and jurists; congressmen and leading men of business; professors and clergymen in every state.

Party affiliations have been ignored in the outcry against thrusting aside the safeguards of our fathers and rushing pell-mell into the affairs of Europe. The situation is a deplorable one if not alarming; as is also our domestic affairs dominated by gigantic Trusts.

The evils are not of spontaneous growth! They are the result of years of labor and expenditure of millions of dollars! Beginning with the displacement of American silver for English gold, the cunning of England's diplomacy in shaping the destiny of our Republic is apparent to any ordinary observer seeking the true inwardness of events.

The Cincinnati Enquirer has frequently called attention to each and every move as it was transpiring, and during the campaign of 1900 will present its readers with a truthful array of facts that will be extremely interesting and startling.

No fair-minded American, be he Republican, Democrat or of other political faith, can afford at this critical time to ignore the truth. Partisan prejudice, with the Trusts as dictators, is a far more degrading slavery than that which existed previous to the Civil War of '61-64.

Trusts in the United States alone have a representative capital greater than all the gold and silver in the world. These will spend many more millions of dollars to suppress truth and facts and mislead all who fail to look beyond their plausible deceptions. Read the Enquirer and you will be able to discern the truth and combat falsehood. A victory for Trusts and the McKinley Administration in 1900 will end the era of greatest good to greatest number.

The greater part of the citizens of the county ought to be directly interested in this enterprise and all persons with any money to invest would do well to give this opportunity serious consideration.

THE SCHOOL BOARD'S ILLS

By GEORGE ADE.

"WELL,

I think it's about time
They begin to doctor these
Blamed school boards for the simples.
I'll swan to gracious it
Just seems to me our schools
Is bein' run these days by
A lot o' fool numskulls.
They ain't satisfied to leave well
Enough alone, but they've got to Experiment and tinker an' try this
An' try that, till it's no wonder
The children nowadays get their Heads filled up with the derndest
Lot of rubbish you ever heard of.
When I wuz a boy I went to school
Three months every year,
An' I confined my operations to
The three R's—readin', ritin' and 'rith metic.
That's all I wanted, an' that's
All I needed. I got them
Well set into my head, an'
Then I quit an' started out to Make my own livin' at an age
When most boys these times is Boardin' at home an' lettin' their
Pa an' ma buy their cloze.
I'm just about as well off to-day
As some of 'em that went to college
An' got their heads full of Them dog-goned 'ologies.'
I can skin a man at a trade
Just about as quick as if I'd Took Latin an' Greek year in an'
Year out ever since I was knee-
High to a duck,
An' don't you think no different.
When I wuz a boy we didn't
Have no frills on our schoolin'.
We give the young uns what they needed,
When a boy got so he could Read the New York Weekly Trybune an'
Cipher an' write a fair hand
He graduated mighty quick an'
Started in to earn his board an' keep.
I may say that I account for my
Success in life an' my all-round
Ability to get the long end of a trade
On three rounds, by ginger, that when
I wuz young I didn't learn a
Lot of hifalutin' tomfoolery.
It does seem to me the schools
These days is run by a pack of Sap-heads. F'instance—
As soon as young uns are big enough
To waddle they set 'em to work
In what they call a kindergarten,
Buildin' block houses an' drawin'
Pickchers an' so on—the derndest
Mess of tommy-rot you could imagine.
Then, when they're a little older,
They start 'em into readin' before
They even learn 'em their A B Cs.
If that ain't a fact I'll eat my hat.
Now, I claim, as a practical man,
That the only way to break in a
Child to readin' is just to learn 'em
The alphabet, then the a-baba
An' the short words, an' then after
That let 'em tackle the short Sentences, graduley workin' up to Oseian's Address to the Sun.
That's what I done.
The Lord Harry only knows what
They don't have the children
Do these days, though.
I says to my sister's little girl, Millie,
The other day, I says to her: 'What
Are you takin' at school now, Millie?'
An' she said she was takin'—
Well, I can't begin to tell you,
Only I remember two, Spanish an'
Physiology. I says: 'For the land's Sake, what does a girl no bigger'n a bag
o' salt
Want to learn to jabber
That stuff for? Ain't United States good enough
For you?' I says. 'What's the use of wastin'
Your time learnin' to talk that?' I say'
'Furthermore, I don't like the Spanish,
An' would'nt care to talk to 'em.
An' as far as
The other thing was concerned, if I
Had a daughter I wouldn't want her
To be studyin' about livers an' lights
An' all such entralls, becuz them
Things don't concern girls. It's all Right for a doctor to know about
In'ards an' what they're for, but
A girl had a dog-goned sight better
Learn how to keep house an' cook,
So't when she gets married she
Can help her husband save money.
But what I started out to say
Wuz this—I see by the papers
That the teachers ain't allowed to Punish the scholars any more.
They made 'em stop usin' the gad
Some time ago, an' now they go
So far as to say that the children
Must learn self-gover'ment!
What do you think of that?
Self-gover'ment! In other words,
Let the children be their own bosses.
I'd like to know what kind of a
Old granny got up that rule.
I know, an' you know, that there's
Some boys that need a good thrashin'
Now an' then, just the same as me
An' you need our meals.
It seems to regulate an' tone the System for 'em. 'Spare the rod
An' spoil the child.' They never Spared it on me. I used to get
It laid across my back regular
With a hickory derned near big Enough for a fence post. I used to Have welts up an' down my legs
An' be black an' blue most o' the time.
After I got it at school I'd go home
An' the old man'd do it all over again.
There's nothin' like a good larrupin'
Two or three times a week to Toughen up a boy an' sort o' keep
The orneriness dusted out o' him.
I got so I used to expect it,
An' if I went a whole week
Without gettin' my jacket tanned
I wuz sort o' restless, a good
Deal like a horse that feels
His oats an' wants to get out of
His box stall an' cavort around
Through the lot for awhile.
The teacher seemed to know what
I needed whenever I'd begin to Act a little cagey, so he used to Go for me about once a week
Whether he had any good excuse or not.
He just licked me on general
Principles, knowin' mighty well that,
Even if he couldn't ketch me in any Devlitry, it was only fair to conclude
That I'd been up to somethin' that
He didn't know anything about;
An' I'm free to say he didn't very Often get in a lick amiss.
There wuzn't any woman could teach
That school. It took a full hand.
A man didn't have to know very much,
But if he wusn't a good wrassler
An' if he couldn't choke the wind out of
A great big hulk weighin' about one-eighty
An' then get him down into a corner
An' baste him till he hollerd: 'Enough'—
Well, he didn't have no call to Try to teach the young idee how
To shoot around in them parts.
We didn't try any self-gover'ment
Experiments, I can tell you that.
The first day o' school the teacher
Licked the biggest boy or 'ce
Licked, an' after that we either
Knew who was boss or else
School let out till the board
Could hunt up a heavier man
For a teacher.
An' now, by thunder, if a teacher lays
A finger on a boy for some piece of Cussedness they get the law on him;
The school board fires him an'
Everybody says he's a brute.
What are we comin' to?
Do you think I'd be the man
I am to-day if I hadn't got some Sense pounded into me when I wuz young?
No, sir!
It's a mighty good thing I ain't on
The school board.
There'd be a change o' teachers
All around next Monday.
I'd put in some able-bodied men,
An' before Monday night there's many
A poor neglected child right in this Town that'd be settin' side ways."

OUR HOME IN HEAVEN

Dr. Talmage Preaches on the Glories of Our Father's House.

There Are in It Many Rooms, and There Is a Place for Every One of God's Children.

(Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.)

In a unique way the Heavenly world is discoursed upon by Dr. Talmage in this sermon under the figure of a home; text, John 14:2: "In my father's house are many rooms."

Here is a bottle of medicine that is a cure all. The disciples were sad, and Christ offered Heaven as an alterantive, a stimulant and a tonic. He shows them that their sorrows are only a dark background of a bright picture of coming felicity. He lets them know that, though they live on the lowlands, they shall yet have a house on the uplands. Nearly all the Bible descriptions of Heaven may be figurative. I am not positive that in all Heaven there is a literal crown or harp or pearly gate or throne or chariot. They may be only used to illustrate the glories of the place, but how well they do it! The favorite symbol by which the Bible presents celestial happiness is a house. Paul, who never owned a house, although he hired one for two years in Italy, speaks of Heaven as a "house not made with hands," and Christ in our text, the translation of which is a little changed, so as to give the more accurate meaning, says: "In my Father's house are many rooms."

This Divinely authorized comparison of Heaven to a great homestead of large accommodations I propose to carry out. In some healthy neighborhood a man builds a very commodious habitation. He must have room for all his children. The rooms come to be called after the different members of the family. That is mother's room, that is George's room, that is Henry's room, that is Flora's room, that is Mary's room, and the house is all occupied. But time goes by, and the sons go out into the world and build their own homes, and the daughters are married or have talents enough singly to go out and do a good work in the world. After awhile the father and mother are almost alone in the house, and, seated by the evening stand, they say: "Well, our family is no larger now than when we started together 40 years ago." But time goes still farther by, and some of the children are unfortunate, and return to the old homestead to live, and the grandchildren come with them, and perhaps great-grandchildren, and again the house is full.

Millennia ago God built on the hills of Heaven a great homestead for a family innumerable, yet to be. At first He lived alone in that great house, but after awile it was occupied by a very large family, cherubic, seraphic, angelic. The eternities passed on, and many of the inhabitants became way- left, never to return, and many of the apartments were vacated. I refer to the fallen angels. Now these apartments are filling up again. There are arrivals at the old homestead of God's children every day, and the day will come when there will be no unoccupied room in all the house.

As you and I expect to enter it and make there eternal residence, I thought you would like to get some more particulars about the many roomed homestead. "In my Father's house are many rooms." You see the place is to be apportioned off into apartments. We shall love all who are in Heaven, but there are some very good people whom we would not want to live with in the same room. They may be better than we are, but they are of a divergent temperament. We would like to meet with them on the golden streets and worship with them in the temple and walk with them on the river banks, but I am glad to say that we shall live in different apartments. "In my Father's house are many rooms." You see, Heaven will be so large that if one wants an entire room to himself or herself it can be afforded.

An ingenious statistician, taking the statement made in Revelation, twenty-first chapter, that the Heavenly Jerusalem was measured and found to be 12,000 furlongs and that the length and height and breadth of it are equal, says that would make Heaven in size 948 sextillion 988 quintillion cubic feet, and then, reserving a certain portion for the court of Heaven and the streets and estimating that the world may last a hundred thousand years, he ciphers out that there are over 5,000,000,000,000 rooms, each room 17 feet long, 16 feet wide, 15 feet high. But I have no faith in the accuracy of that calculation. He makes the rooms too small. From all I can read, the rooms will be palatial, and those who have not had enough room in this world will have plenty of room at the last. The fact is that most people in this world are crowded, and, though out on a vast prairie or in a mountain district people may have more room than they want, in most cases it is a house built close to house, and the streets are crowded, and the cradle is crowded by other cradles, and the graves crowded in the cemetery by other graves, and one of the richest luxuries of many people in getting out of this world will be the gaining of unhindered and uncramped room. And I should not wonder if, instead of the room that the statistician ciphered out as only 17 feet by 16, it should be larger than any of the rooms at Berlin, St. James or Winter palace. "In my Father's house are many rooms."

Carrying out still further the symbolism of the text, let us join hands, and go up to this majestic homestead and see for ourselves. As we ascend the golden steps an invisible guardsman swings open the front door, and we are ushered to the right into the reception room of the old homestead. That is the first place where we will meet the welcome of Heaven. There must be a place where the departed spirit enters, and a place in which it confronts the inhabitants celestial. The reception room of the newly arrived from this world—what scenes it must have witnessed since the first guest arrived, the victim of the first fraticide, pious Abell! In that room Christ lovingly greets all newcomers. He redeemed them, and He has the right to the first embrace on arrival. What a minute when the ascended spirit first sees the Lord! Better than all we ever read about Him or talked about Him or sang about Him in all the churches and through all our earthly lifetime will it be, just for one second, to see Him. The most rapturous idea we ever had of Him on sacramental days or at the height of some great revival or under the uplifted baton of an oratorio is a bankruptcy of thought compared with the first flash of His appearance in that reception room. At that moment when you confront each other, Christ looking upon you and you looking upon Christ, there will be an ecstatic thrill and surging of emotion that beggar all description. Look! They need no introduction. Long ago Christ chose that repentant sinner, and that repentant sinner chose Christ. Mightiest moment of an immortal history—the first kiss of Heaven! Jesus and the soul! The soul and Jesus!

But now into that reception room pour the glorified kinsfolk, enough of earthly retention to let you know them, but without their wounds or sicknesses or their troubles—see what Heaven has done for them!—so radiant, so gleeful, so transportingly lovely! They call you by name. They greet you with an ardor proportioned to the anguish of your parting and the length of your separation. Father! Mother! There is your child. Sisters! Brothers! Friends! I wish you joy. For years apart, together again in the reception room of the old homestead. You see, they will know you are coming. There are so many immortals filling all the spaces between here and Heaven that news like that flies like lightning. They will be there in an instant. Though they were in some other world on errand from God, a signal would be thrown out that would fetch them. Though you might at first feel dazed and overawed at their supernal splendor, all that feeling will be gone at their first touch of Heavenly salutation, and we will say: "Oh, my lost boy!" "Oh, my lost companion!" "Oh, my lost friend! Are we here together?" What scenes in that reception room of the old homestead have been witnessed! There met Joseph and Jacob, finding it a brighter room than anything they saw in Pharaoh's palace; David and the little child for whom he once fasted and wept; Mary and Lazarus after the heartbreak of Bethany; Timothy and grandmother Lois; Isabella Graham and her sailor son; Alfred and George Cookman, the mystery of the sea at last made manifest; Luther and Magdalene, the daughter he bemoaned; John Howard and the prisoners whom he gospelized, and multitudes without number who, once so weary and so sad, parted on earth, but gloriously met in Heaven. Among all the rooms of that house there is no one that more enraptures my soul than that reception room. "In my Father's house are many rooms."

Another room in our Father's house is the music room. St. John and other Bible writers talk so much about the music of Heaven that there must be music there, perhaps not so much as on earth was thrummed from trembling string or evoked by touch of ivory key, but if not that, then something better. There are so many Christian harpists and Christian composers and Christian organists and Christian choristers and Christian hymnologists that have gone up from earth, there must be for them some place of especial delectation. Shall we have music in this world of discords and no music in the land of complete harmony? I cannot give you the notes of the first bar of the new song that is sung in Heaven. I cannot imagine either the solo or the doxology. But Heaven means music, and can mean nothing else. Occasionally that music has escaped the gate. Dr. Fuller, dying at Beaufort, S. C., said: "Do you not hear?" "Hear what?" exclaimed the bystanders. "The music! Lift me up! Open the windows!"

In that music room of our Father's house you will some day meet the old masters. Mozart and Handel and Mendelssohn and Beethoven and Doddridge, whose sacred poetry was as remarkable as his sacred prose, and James Montgomery, and William Cowper, at last got rid of his spiritual melancholy, and Bishop Heber, who sang of "Greenland's icy mountains and India's coral strand," and Dr. Raffles, who wrote of "High in yonder realms of light," and Isaac Watts, who went to visit Sir Thomas Abney and wife for a week, but proved himself so agreeable a guest that they made him stay 36 years, and side by side Augustus Toplady, who has got over his dislike for Methodists, and Charles Wesley, freed from his dislike for Calvinists, and George W. Bethune, as sweet as a song-maker as he was great as a preacher and the author of "The Village Hymns," and many who wrote in verse or song, in church or by eventide cradle, and many who were passionately fond of music, but could make none themselves, the poorest singer there more than any earthly prima donna and the poorest players there more than any earthly Gottschalk. Oh, that music room, the headquarters of cadence and rhythm, symphony and chant, psalm and antiphon! May we be there some hour when Haydn sits at the keys of one of his own oratorios, and David the psalmist fingers the harp, and Miriam of the Red sea banks claps the cymbals, and Gabriel puts his lips to the trumpet and the four and twenty elders chant, and Lind and Parepa render matchless duet in the music room of the old heavenly homestead! "In my Father's house are many rooms."

Another room in our Father's house will be the family room. It may correspond somewhat with the family room on earth. At morning and evening, you know, that is the place we now meet. Though every member of the household has a separate room, in the family room they all gather, and joys and sorrows and experiences of all styles are there rehearsed. Sacred room in all our dwellings, whether it be luxurious with ottomans and divans and books in Russian lids standing in mahogany case or there be only a few plain chairs and a cradle. So the family room on high will be the place where the kinsfolk assemble and talk over the family experiences of earth, the weddings, the births, the burials, the festal days of Christmas and Thanksgiving reunion. Will the children departed remain children there? Will the aged remain aged there? Oh, no! Everything is perfect there. The child will go ahead to glorified maturity, and the aged will go back to glorified maturity. The rising sun of the one will rise to meridian, and the descending sun of the other will return to meridian. However much we love our children on earth, we would consider it a domestic disaster if they staid children, and so we rejoice at their growth here. And when we meet in the family room of our Father's house we will be glad that they have grandly and gloriously matured, while our parents, who were aged and infirm here, we shall be glad to find restored to the most agile and vigorous immortality there. If 40 or 45 or 50 years be the apex of physical and mental life on earth, then the Heavenly childhood will advance to that, and the Heavenly old age will retreat to that. When we join them in that family room we shall have much to tell them. We shall want to know of them, right away, such things as these: Did you see us in this or that or the other struggle? Did you know when we lost our property and sympathize with us? Did you know we had that awful sickness? Were you hovering anywhere around us when we plunged into that memorable accident? Did you know of our backsliding? Did you know of that moral victory? Were you pleased when we started for Heaven? Did you celebrate the hour of our conversion? And then, whether they know it or not, we will tell them all. But they will have more to tell us than we to tell them.

Ten years on earth may be very eventful, but what must be the biography of ten years in Heaven? They will have to tell us the story of coronations, story of news from all immensity, story of conquerors and hierarchs, story of rewards unsurpassed, story of angelic victory over diabolic revolts, of extinguished suns, of obliterated constellations, of new galaxies kindled and swung, of stranded comets, of worlds on fire and story of Jehovah's majestic reign. If in that family room of our Father's house we have so much to tell them of what we have passed through since we parted, how much more thrilling and arousing that which they have to tell us of what they have passed through since we parted! Surely that family room will be one of the most favored rooms in all our Father's house. What long lingering there, for we shall never again be in a hurry! "Let me open a window," said a humble Christian servant to Lady Raffles, who, because of the death of her child, had shut herself up in a dark room and refused to see anyone. "You have been many days in this dark room. Are you not ashamed to grieve in this manner, when you ought to be thanking God for having given you the most beautiful child that ever was seen, and, instead of leaving him in this world till he should be worn with trouble, has not God taken him to Heaven in all his beauty? Leave off weeping and let me open a window." So to-day I am trying to open upon the darkness of earthly separation the windows and doors and rooms of the Heavenly homestead: "In my Father's house are many rooms."

How would it do for my sermon to leave you in that family room to-day? I am sure there is no room in which you would rather stay than in the enraptured circle of your ascended and glorified kinsfolk. We might visit other rooms in our Father's house. There may be picture galleries pencilled not with earthly art, but by some process unknown in this world, preserving for the next world the brightest and most stupendous scenes of human history, and there may be lines and forms of earthly beauty preserved whiter and chaster and richer than Venetian sculpture ever wrought — rooms beside rooms, rooms over rooms, large rooms, majestic rooms, opalescent rooms, amethystine rooms. "In my Father's house are many rooms."

I hope none of us will be disappointed about getting there. There is a room for us if we will go and take it, but in order to reach it it is absolutely necessary that we make the right way, and Christ is the way, and we must enter at the right door, and Christ is the door, and we must start in time, and the only hour you are sure of is the hour the clock now strikes, and the only second the one your watch is now ticking. I hold in my hand a roll of letters inviting you all to make that your home forever. The New Testament is only a roll of letters inviting you, as the spirit of them practically says: "My dying yet immortal child in earthly neighborhood, I have built for you a great residence. It is full of rooms. I have furnished them as no palace was ever furnished. Pearls are nothing, emeralds are nothing, chrysoprasus is nothing, illumined panels of sunrise and sunset nothing, the aurora of the northern heavens nothing, compared with the splendor with which I have garnitured them. But you must be clean before you can enter there, and so I have opened a fountain where you may wash all your sins away. Come now! Put your weary but cleansed feet on the upward pathway. Do you not see amid the thick foliage on the heavenly hilltops the old family homestead?" "In my Father's house are many rooms."

HE COULDN'T BE BLAMED.

Did Everything in His Power to Secure Support But Was Handicapped.

"I suppose it was a little cheeky," said the young man to the old fellow on the rear platform of the car, "but what are you going to do in such a case?"

"Yes, what are you going to do?" queried the old fellow, in reply, though having no knowledge of what was meant.

"I got up the courage to ask her hand in marriage and she murmured yes."

"They generally murmur."

"Then to be in good form, I had to go and ask the old man's consent."

"Perfectly correct, young man—perfectly correct."

"I took a bracer and walked in on him," continued the young man, "and in due time I had stated my case. He waited a decent length of time and then said I could have her."

"That was beautiful—beautiful."

"Yes, as far as it went. Yes that was all right, but I wasn't through with him yet. I had to ask him if he'd lend me a hundred dollars to get married on. Wasn't no other way, you know."

"No, no other way," repeated the old fellow as he got a new brace for his back. "And he loaned it to you?"

"Noap. Threw me down with a dull thud."

"You don't say!"

"Did for a fact. Yes, the whole thing is off, and I have loved and lost. I don't see where I'm to blame, though."

"Not a bit of it. You loved and wanted to marry; but it takes money to get married on. He had it, but wouldn't lend it. No money—no marriage. Plain as the nose on your face, and you're not a bit to blame. "Put it thar, young man, and cheer up and get a new hold with your toes. You had to do it—had to do it—and anybody as says you hadn't is a liar and a hoss thief and dasn't stand up before the undersigned for three rounds!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE ICE MACHINE'S PART.

At Last There Has Been a New Feature Introduced Into Uncle Tom's Cabin.

There is a new wrinkle in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" theatrical companies. One of them, which is ransacking the state of New Jersey for audiences, has hit upon the device of buying a refrigerating machine and using real blocks of ice in the scene in which Eliza, pursued by a pack of barking mongrels, crosses the river carrying in her arms a stuffed doll.

The icemaking machine has proved an enormous success. At the Ridgewood opera house, where the ice machine played a few evenings ago, a frantic crowd fought its way through the doors. At the first performances the ice machine was kept in the background. Several cakes were manufactured before the performance and placed on the green baize river. They were carefully handed on the surface, so that when Eliza made her grand dash for liberty she would not turn undignified somersaults. The ice machine, however, had been so largely advertised that yokels wanted to see it. They sat in their places after the curtain descended upon the solemn death of Little Eva and howled for the ice machine to come out and show itself. The stage manager and a couple of deck hands had to carry it down to the footlights. When they turned the handle and, amid uproarous applause, the machine produced a cake of real ice.

Since then a part has been written in the play for the ice machine. When the river scene opens a couple of southern speculators are discovered experimenting with the machine. They produce their ice, and not having any immediate use for it turn it into the river, and it sits upon the river surface at proper intervals to accommodate Eliza's footsteps. A colored man comes out and sprinkles sand over the ice in full view of the audience.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE RATTLEBOX WEED.

Its Poisonous Constituent Is Unknown, But Resides Both in Its Leaves and Seed.

The Latin name of this weed is Crotalaria sagittalis. It is popularly known as rattleweed and wild pea. A government bulletin has this to say of it: It is a hairy annual three to eighteen inches high, with simple undivided leaves one to two inches long and small yellow pea-like flowers appearing in July. The seed pods are about an inch long when mature and are nearly black. They are much inflated, and, as the walls are stiff and thin and very resonant, they make excellent miniature rattles when the seeds have become detached from their fastenings inside the pod. The rattle-box is native in low sandy soils from the Atlantic westward to Minnesota and eastern Kansas. It is also found in New Mexico. It is common in Connecticut, New Jersey and North Carolina, and in some years is very abundant in bottom lands along the valley of the Missouri, in South Dakota and Iowa.

The poisonous constituent is unknown, but it resides both in the leaves and in the seeds. Horses, and sometimes cattle, are killed by eating grass mixed with the plant. They are not poisoned so often by eating the plant in the fields. Public attention was first called to the poisonous nature of the rattlebox by Dr. Stalker, of Iowa, who, in 1884, while investigating the cause among horses in Iowa, was led to believe that it was mostly, if not altogether, attributable to this plant. Experiments were made that proved the supposition to be correct.

The percentage of rattlebox in meadow hay will be much reduced if the fields are burned over when the seeds mature the preceding summer. The growth of perennial grasses will not be materially affected thereby.

THE BEST PAYS BEST.

Farmer Who Grows Something Better Than Can Be Found in the Market Makes Money.

The great difficulty in making farms pay is that most farm crops cannot be assorted into good, better and best. They must be sold at so nearly a uniform price that there is no money in it. In stock growing and in fruit growing such wide differences in value can be made that it is possible to charge the very rich, who always want the best, whatever the best is worth more, and if it be not too easily produced, than this. So long as a man grows only for the universal market, he must sell at prices which even the poorest can pay. But let him grow something better than can be found in the market, and he can get enough higher prices to pay him double for all his extra trouble. This is the secret of getting rich in all kinds of business. Money is to be got from those who have it, and not from those who have it not. Does this forget the poor? Not at all. The struggle to improve quality is always changing its ground. The best of one year is thus placed within the reach of all a few years later, and another best has taken its place.

Barring accidents from untimely frosts, it is the best fruit that pays the most profit and that can be grown most cheaply if the average of years is considered. The labor of spraying with insecticides and with fungicides to make the fruit fair, and the further labor of thinning it, produces so much more fruit every year that it can be sold with profit at rates within the reach of all. The very rich will still get the best and pay for it, but the poorest will get more and better fruit than they ever before enjoyed.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

From Potatoes to Rye.

The land that was devoted to potatoes this year should be seeded to rye, limed in the spring and corn grown on the same land next year. Such a plan gives the land two weedings and cleans it thoroughly. It is also an advantage not to grow potatoes on the same land oftener than one year in four as a precaution against disease. Rye should cover all land that is plowed in the fall, as it prevents loss of fertility, and when turned under in spring it will add fertilizing material to the soil, the lime being used to neutralize any acidity that may exist.

HEAVY CORN FEEDING.

Turnips, Pumpkins and Damp Mill Feed Should Be Given in Connection with It

There is no economy in stinting the ration given to growing and fattening pigs. The aim should always be to induce as heavy feeding as possible. Always much care should be given to secure perfect digestion, as heavy feeding sometimes causes trouble with the digestive organs. After green corn commences there is always a desire to hurry the pigs to market, and corn is fed to the utmost limit.

It must be remembered that the modern, quickly-developed pig is a soft creature as compared with his ancestors of 60 years ago, that the four to six months' old pig will not corn and digest it like the yearling or 18-months-old hogs of the past. Something must be done to keep up the appetite of this young thing.

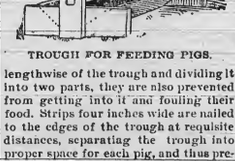
A range over a grass sward will give exercise, if it is clover sod that they run over; they will get much to keep their systems in tone.

Heavy feeding by some may be thought to consist in having corn always by them. This is not correct, as they will consume more if fed at stated intervals and only fed enough to keep their appetites sharp. When once starved to fatten the feeding should be heavy to the finish, as a limited feeding is always attended with loss.

It will be found an advantage to give variety in feeding. While corn is the main ration, a good grass ration is a help—or an occasional feed of pumpkins. Turnips they learn to eat in time as other succulent foods fail them. Mangels they take to at once, and while they may not add much weight they help the appetite. A ration of mill feed is always acceptable if fed damp and in proper quantity.

We do not regard these things as a cut-off on the amount of corn fed, but rather as an aid to heavy corn feeding, and also an aid in prolonging the time corn may be fed without the hogs stalling on it and getting entirely off feed. —John M. Jamison, in American Cultivator.

HORSES IN GERMANY.



Hamburg Paper Deplores the Fact That American Animals Are in Growing Demand.

Exports of horses to Germany continue to attract attention both at home and abroad. Regarding American horses in German, the Hamburger Nachrichten, in a recent article, says: "Importations from American have caused the horse-raisers of Holstein to suffer much of late. A stock company has just been formed in Berlin for the express purpose of importing horses from the United States. The Americans have succeeded in breeding a horse which compares very favorably in every way with the Holstein animal, especially in those points so highly prized in a work horse, namely, broad hips and large build generally. The best markets for Holstein horses have always been the provinces of Saxony, Thuringia and Brunswick. The demand is created by the large sugar factories. This market has been decreasing of late, owing to American horses being purchased in Berlin. A few days ago this Berlin company shipped a drove of 80 through Hamburg en route for Milan, Italy, where they are to be used on the tramways. Almost every week a long freight train filled with American horses leave the Berliner Bahnhof for various parts of Germany. In spite of expensive freight and a tariff of seven dollars per head, the Americans have built up a very respectable competition in the German market."

lengthwise of the trough and dividing it into two parts, they are also prevented from getting into it and fouling their food. Strips four inches wide are nailed to the edges of the trough at requisite distances, separating the trough into proper space for each pig, and thus prevents crowding. In order to avoid fighting among the animals, there should always be more spaces provided than there are pigs to feed.—Fred O. Sibley, in Ohio Farmer.

Cheap Shelters for Sheep.

One of the advantages in keeping sheep is that they do not need an expensive building as a shelter. A shed open on one side suits them as well as a tight barn, and even better, as they require considerable ventilation. But it should be so arranged that both rain and snow can be kept out of it, for the sheep should not get their fleece wet in cold weather. It takes too long to get it dry again, and the whole body gets chilled, reducing vitality, even if they do not take colds to set them coughing and running at the nose. Nor should water be allowed to run into the shed from outside. A sheep will not lie down in the mud or on wet straw. Keep the inside of the shed dry and well littered with clean straw and the sheep will be healthy and thrive well, even on moderate feed.—American Cultivator.

WHITE MICE HIS PLAGUE.

The Multiplication of a Pair Is Driving Their Owner's Father to Insanity.

Two men met on La Salle street.

"Hello!" ejaculated one of them, "been ill, Tom?" The other man shook his head.

"No, not ill; not physically ill, Jack. It's—it's white mice."

"Great heavens!" gasped his friend, "why, I didn't know you ever drank enough for—for that!"

"It wasn't drink, Jack; it wasn't drink. But come with me. Let me tell you all!"

When they were seated at opposite sides of a small table the afflicted man continued:

"Yes, Jack, it's white mice. My boy, Thomas, Jr., got it into his head that he ought to have a pet. He wanted a dog, but the house is small, and the cook is nervous, and so we told him no, not a dog; most anything but a dog, and we finally compromised on a pair of white mice. I brought them home in a nice, roomy wire cage, and Thomas, Jr., was delighted. That was two months ago." The speaker paused and sighed feelingly.

"Well, all went finely until about three weeks afterward. Then, one morning, the boy came bursting into my room to inform me that the 'mices had got some lovely little mices.' And so they had; five of them. Luckily, the cage was large enough for the growing family. But—well, in four weeks we had 47 mice, in six weeks 160. We gave up trying to accomodate them all in one cage, and so cigar boxes, work baskets, cracker tins, and even the bathtub were brought into requisition.

"Naturally two or three escaped every day and lived at large, feasting in the pantry at night and begging by our chairs at meal time. They took such a liking to the cook that they got to making her room a sort of meeting place. The result could have been foreseen. My wife has been doing the cooking now for several weeks. I have got so that I shake my boots from force of habit before putting them on. One morning I found two in my shaving mug. And we have them served up to us at table and in the cracker jar, the sugar bowl and the cheese dish."

"But why didn't you get cats?" asked his friend.

"Cats? Great heavens! We've had 20 of them. We can't keep them about. They stay three or four days, get so fat that they can't walk and then crawl dejectedly to the door, accompanied by a frisking contingent of white mice. We've tried cats, Jack."

"Well, then, rat poison; have you tried that?"

"Oh, yes; quite early in the game. The mice seemed to thrive on that poison. We tried traps, too; they caught a few; just a drop in the bucket. And all the time they keep right on increasing. We haven't taken a census for nearly three weeks now, but a moderate estimate would place the number at about 600. Just now, when I met you, I was on the way to see a man who has ferrets; I shall try to get a few dozen good, healthy ones. If they don't help—What's that?" he shrieked.

"What's what?" asked his friend. "That? Why, just a piece of white paper."

"Oh, I—I thought—Well, I must get on. I don't suppose you'd care to buy that house, would you? No? Well, good-by."

And the man afflicted with white mice crept dejectedly around the corner, looking nervously at every piece of torn paper that fluttered in the breeze.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

FOND OF AUTOMOBILES.

The French Have Numbers in Use Contrasted with Those of Other Countries.

It would appear from data now in our possession that in Europe there are at present well over 7,000 owners of automobiles. Many of these own more than one vehicle, so that perhaps the number of vehicles could be put at 10,000. Of the 7,000 no fewer than 5,600 are in France. The general idea has been that in France the interest was centered in Paris, but this is erroneous, there being of the 5,600 no fewer than 4,541 scattered all through the departments. For the remainder of Europe the figures are far from complete, but it would appear that there are 268 owners of automobiles in Germany, 90 in Austro-Hungary, 90 in Belgium, 44 in Spain, 204 in Great Britain, 111 in Italy, 68 in Holland, 114 in Switzerland and 35 in Russia, Denmark, Portugal, etc.

As to the investment, if the 10,000 automobiles in Europe be averaged at $1,000 apiece they have cost the purchasers $10,000,000. In this country at the present time the like investment averaging the automobiles at $2,500 apiece would only be $1,250,000, but the orders and contracts now in hand represent perhaps ten times that amount, while the companies with a nominal paper capital of about $400,000,000 have announced their intention of building automobiles. The American output the coming year ought to be worth $10,000,000, and it will be largely electrical at that.—Electrical World and Engineer.

Potentates Who Stay at Home.

There are but two European potentates who manage to get along without change of residence or outlays of any description. These are the pope of Rome and the sultan of Turkey. The sultan has never left Constantinople since he ascended the throne under such tragic circumstances, 20 years ago. And his hollnese has remained within the precincts of the vatican since the triple tiara was placed upon his head in 1878. —Chicago Times-Herald.

The New Explosive.

Thorite, the new explosive, has been distinguishing itself by passing through a 44 inch Harveyized steel plate. It's a good remedy to try when everything else has failed.

Matter of Length.

"How long should mourning gowns be worn by a widow of 22?" was the question that came sobbing through the mails. Now it chanced to be the sporting editor's day off, and the religious editor, therefore, was attending to the Side Talks with Young Persons. Now Everybody Can Ride.

If you have any doubt about it be sure to read the advertisement of the John M. Smyth Co., Chicago, in this paper, in which they propose to sell a high-grade Top Buggy for $34.95. How they do it is a puzzle, but as the firm is one of the largest in the country and of the highest standing, that's their matter. Better find the advertisement now, while you think of it, and read it through carefully. The firm issues a Mammoth Catalogue, in which is listed "everything to eat, wear and use at lowest wholesale prices."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

How Mrs. Pinkham HELPED MRS. GOODEN.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 14,732]

"I am very grateful to you for your kindness and the interest you have taken in me, and truly believe your medicines and advice are worth more to a woman than all the doctors in the world. For years I had female troubles and did nothing for them. Of course I became no better and finally broke down entirely. My troubles began with inflammation and hemorrhages from the kidneys, then inflammation, congestion and falling of the womb and inflammation of ovaries.

"I underwent local treatment every day for some time; then after nearly two months the doctor gave me permission to go back to work. I went back, but in less than a week was compelled to give up and go to bed. On breaking down the second time, I decided to let doctors and their medicine alone and try your remedies. Before the first bottle was gone I felt the effects of it. Three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of her Sanative Wash did me more good than all the doctors' treatments and medicine.

"The first remark that greets me now is 'How much better you look!' and you may be sure I never hesitate to tell the cause of my health."—MRS. E. J. GOODEN, Ackley, Ia.

The doctor insist on her taking "5 Drops" and assure her that it is now only a matter of a few days and she will be entirely cured, and as we are very well known here, the "5 DROPS" is receiving considerable attention and praise. Wm. Whiteneck was given 21 years in the pen by a Harrodsburg jury for the murder of his brother-in-law, James Wickersham.

Fire at Boxville, Union county, Ky., destroyed every store in that village except one. The total loss is about $14,000 with only about $3,000 insurance.

Chief of Police McNulty, of Mayfield, has run down Tom Lewis, a horse-thief, who has operated extensively in Western Kentucky. Lewis was captured in Texas.

In Clay county Mrs. Jas. Colins committed suicide by taking poison in preference to appearing in court at Manchester to testify against the men charged with her husband's murder.

Alex. Abbott, charged with murder of his wife in 1895, was acquitted at Morehead. On three previous trials he had been convicted. the Court of Appeals reversing the case in every instance.

Rebecca Allen, the seven year-old daughter of ex-County Assessor Richard M. Redd, of Fayette county, died from the effects of striking her head against a tree while at play near Belmont school house.

A table in the annual report of the Adjutant General of the army, shows that 1,017 citizens of the State of Kentucky are enrolled as members of the volunteer regiments, now in and enroute to Manila.

Breckinridge News: "Wm. Miller, of this county, sold to Geo. Harris three or four hundred popular logs for $200. He sold the oak timber off the same land to the Cincinnati Cooperage Company for $4,400.

Ex-Gov. Alvin Saunders died at Omaha. He was a native of Kentucky, and was the first Governor of Nebraska after that State was admitted to the Union, serving previously as Territorial Governor.

Kate Kyle has filed suit in the Kenton Circuit Court against the Lagoon Park Company for $15,000 damages alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff by being thrown from a pony at the Lagoon Park last summer.

The damage suit of the Rev. R. L. Bowman, former pastor of the Versailles Baptist church, against Thos. Sellers, his brother-in-law, a deacon in that church, to recover $40,000 for alleged slander, was dismissed, an agreement having been reached out of court.

At Ford, Jerry Taylor and Joe Taylor, brothers and colored, fought and Joe was disembowled by Jerry with a pocket knife. The wound is fatal. Jerry fled and has not been apprehended. A dispute over the way to raise children caused the trouble.

Charles S. Lesher, a prominent and wealthy New York man, is to locate near Lexington. Mr. Lesher his inspected several noted Bluegrass farms, and he decided that the Barbee farm, on the Winchester pike, suited him, and he accordingly purchased it for the sum of $12,000 cash.

Sam Adkisson, who lives about a mile and a half from Webster, Breckinridge county, has a shepherd dog which has been trained to be useful. Every day he is sent to the post-office with a little mail sack tied around his neck. When the mail is placed in the sack he starts for home, and never stops until it is safely delivered.

The Catlettsburg Record says:—One of the largest cross-tie companies in the United States wants to erect a tie elevator in Louisa, with which to hoist ties from the river and load them on cars. It would employ twenty-five men constantly and will pay out at Louisa to the people of the valley $150,000 to $200,000 per year. They want a free site for five years. A suitable site has been optioned by Mr. J. F. Ratcliff, and if subscriptions enough can be raised in Louisa the construction of the elevator will begin immediately.

The Williamsburg Times narrates the following fishing incident: "An old lady named Oliver, while trying to save her child from drowning in the river, near the flour mill came near drowning herself a few days ago. The woman and her husband were fishing, and the child fell in while playing. The woman started out on a log to save it, and the log turned, precipitating her. Then the man went to her rescue, but being very rheumatic, could not do more than hold the wife up. Their screams attracted Ben Snyder, who was driving past, and he managed to rescue all parties from their dangerous position."

"In all gambling games," said an old time sport, "there is a percentage in favor of the 'house.' Anybody, except a born fool, knows that a man couldn't afford to equip an establishment, hire help, pay rent, and defray all the hundred and one incidental expenses unless he derived a profit that was based on some fixed principle, and not dependent on mere luck or chance. Just where the profit comes in, however, is something that few people understand. Most of them imagine it is derived from some slight advantage in the arrangement of the game, such as the 'zero' numbers in roulette or the 'splits' in faro, but they are much mistaken. It really depends on a principle that applies to all games alike, and is what might be termed the 'percentage of capital.' Strange as it may seem, I could take a capital of $1,000 and begin pitching nickels, in which the chances are perfectly even, letting the players guess either way they wanted to, and I would make a steady profit, day in and day out. The secret is this: The average player has only a limited amount of money, and a slight run of bad luck wipes him out. He is obliged to quit, and somebody else takes his place, while the house keeps right on through good luck and bad, continually swelling its reserve with the cash of the broken players. To simplify the matter, suppose I have 100 pennies and you have one, and we begin matching. One loss breaks you, but I can stands 100 losses before having to quit. You may have a spurt of luck at the start, but in the long run I am morally certain to wipe you out. That principle of the percentage of capital is at the bottom of the profits of every gaming house in the world, from Monaco to Long Branch."—New Orleans Democrat.

Look In Your Mirror

Do you see sparkling eyes, a healthy, tinted skin, a sweet expression and a graceful form? These attractions are the result of good health. If they are absent, there is nearly always some disorder of the distinctly feminine organs present. Healthy menstrual organs mean health and beauty everywhere.

McELREE'S

Wine of Cardui

makes women beautiful and healthy. It strikes at the root of all their trouble. There is no menstrual disorder, ache or pain which it will not cure. It is for the budding girl, the busy wife and the matron approaching the change of life. At every trying crisis in a woman's life it brings health, strength and happiness. It costs $1.00 of medicine dealers.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1899. NO. 4.

THERE will be no blood spilt on account of the Kentucky election unless some erratic fellow like Bronston should burst a blood vessel in his effort to stir up trouble.

COUNTERFEIT half dollars have been discovered that are actually worth more than the genuine, having more silver in them, but not being turned out by Uncle Sam's workmen they are n. g. as money.

As to who will be the next governor of Kentucky is yet undecided, both sides claiming the victory. The Democrats' figures bring Goebel out a winner by 26 votes, including all contests. The Republicans claim to have won by 3,000.

THE United States immigration authorities some time ago had called to their attention the fact that a firm in New York City is building up a lucrative business in importing wives. It is estimated that nearly 20 per cent. of the female immigrants from certain foreign countries during the last year have been brought over by this firm. Foreigners of the lower class, especially German and Italian laboring men, very seldom marry American girls. They prefer a wife from their native land, because such a woman would better understand their tastes and their manner of living than would a girl born and brought up in the United States. They also claim that foreign-born women are less extravagant and are better able to get along upon a small income than the others.

A natural cave of honey is the latest addition to the riches of Colonel Moses C. Wetmore, the millionaire St. Louis politician. This cavern of honey has just been discovered on Colonel Wetmore's 7000-acre game preserve in the wilds of Taney County Missouri. It is a large cave, hidden from view, in one of the most isolated spots of the Ozark Mountain region. The bees have probably had undisputed possession of the cave for many years, for it appears to be literally filled with honey, just like a hive in a well-kept apiary. How far into the side of the mountain this cave extends is an unsettled question. The mouth of the cave is about six feet in diameter and it presents a front of solid honeycomb. While the bees appear to be of the common species, they are unusually hostile.

It was officially announced in Berlin Wednesday that an agreement subject to the approval of the United States had been arrived at between Germany and Great Britain by which the Samoa act is repealed and the islands of Upola, Savaii and smaller adjacent islands fall to Germany as free property, and the island of Tutuila and the subsidiary islands go to the United States.

The trust in coal comes home to everybody. It is an infamy of the worst class, as it lays a burden upon an absolute necessary of life. And yet the people are not aroused to the enormity of the millionaire coal kings. As yet, there are two things the combines have not succeeded in controlling, viz: Sunshine and air. Water used to be free, too and is yet in the form of rain, but upon the seas, lakes and rivers, the monopolies and corporations virtually have control for navigation purposes, and in cities the water used in manufacturing and for household purposes is heavily taxed by corporations or by municipal authorities for the benefit of the party leaders.—Rising Sun Recorder.

It seems now to be pretty generally conceded that two new independent tobacco factories will be in operation in the near future. One is to be located in Louisville and the other in St. Louis. From the amount of capital, which is said to be behind these two enterprises, they will be of sufficient magnitude to become formidable competitors of the Continental Co. The identity of the promoters of these independent factories is not certainly known, but it is generally believed that they are men who were formerly connected with some of the factories absorbed by the Continental. Work has commenced on the Louisville plant, which is to be located at Twenty-sixth and Courtney Strs. Tobacco growers will certainly welcome the new competitors for the raw leaf.

KENTUCKY CROP REPORT.

Replies were received this month from 136 correspondents, representing 102 counties.

WHEAT—The close of October saw practically the entire wheat crop seeded. The contemplated acreage is estimated at 101 as compared with the acreage of 1898, 93 per cent. of which was seeded prior to November 1. This is in striking contrast with the same date of 1898, when fully 30 per cent. of the acreage remained to be sown.

The western section reports the acreage same as last year, the increase being in the central section. The southeastern section, where comparatively little wheat is grown is not included in the estimate of acreage and condition of the wheat crop.

A considerable number of counties show a substantial increase in acreage, and a few of these report it the largest in the history of the counties. This is offset by reports from counties where the drouth prevented the seeding of any but the corn and tobacco lands, by reason of which the acreage is materially reduced.

The condition compared with average year is 97. For the past three years the condition on November 1 has been as follows: 1898, 96; 1897, 62; 1896, 96. In the western section the condition is 97, while for the central section it is 99.

The soil was in most excellent condition for seeding, and generally there was sufficient moisture to permit rapid and perfect germination. As a result the stand is good and the plant vigorous. In a number of counties local showers from time to time have made the condition phenomenally high. In the central section, Bourbon county reports the condition 140 compared with average years; Clark, 120; Scott, 115; Lincoln, 120 and Madison, 125.

In the western section, Hickman county reports a condition of 120 and Larue a condition of 125.

Against these very favorable reports, however, are reports from counties where the drouth was long and severe and where the plant had difficulty in sustaining itself against the combined influences of heat and lack of moisture. In such counties the condition is correspondingly low. Some injury also has resulted from insects. In Mercer county cut worms have caused considerable damage, and in Warren the crop is infested with "fly," resowing to some extent being necessary.

On the whole, however, farmers have every reason to be encouraged by the prospect. The cultivation was probably never better, and now that the drouth is broken, we may expect an improvement on even the present flattering outlook.

PASTURES AND LIVE STOCK—Pastures have improved slightly during the month. The condition November 1 averages 69 as against 65 on October 1. Feeding has been necessary, and where neglected, stock cattle, especially, are reduced in flesh. Farmers have curtailed the number of stock on hand so as to better enable them to care for the remainder. Few cattle are being fed for market, and on account of the absence of the usual grazing and the scarcity of stock water the condition of these is but 86 compared with average years.

Hogs have been marketed freely, and but a small portion of the number fed remains unsold. The condition, compared with average years, 90. Thirty two correspondents report hog cholera and 97 report none in county.

The weather has been favorable and good progress was made in housing the corn crop. The yield has proven disappointing, falling far below expectations. More than the usual attention has been given to saving the fodder crop, and the supply of roughage is considered ample.

Commissioner of Agriculture.

Sam Holden, the well-known bootblack at Nelson's barbershop, is dead. At least he is practically dead. His customers are simply worrying the life out of him. Sunday the society "gang" fixed it up on Sam and played a practical joke on him. Every young man who came into the barber shop told in the boy's hearing that he had dreamed the night before that Sam had died. After hearing about the tenth dream Holden became so ill he had to be taken home in a carriage. He is still very ill and while he may recover he will never get over the effects of the joke.

Great Britain and the United States.

Great Britain and the United States have an understanding whereby

The former will secure all her supplies from this country, and the United States will refuse

To participate in an offer of mediation, or

In an interrogation as to Great Britain's ultimate intentions in South Africa, or

In any subsequent joint action of the powers, and will agree

To preserve the status quo in Samoa;

To preserve the integrity of the Shanghai concessions,

And to prevent aggression in any direction or quarters where the United States has martial interests at stake.

That Great Britain has an understanding with the United States is obvious. It is similar to the understanding between the two countries prior to and during the Spanish war. Great Britain at that time foresaw the future, knowing her own intentions, and realized that her only possible aid would come from the United States.

The State Department is evidently preparing for some official development along this line, for it permitted to become known that the powers prior to the Spanish war were preparing an identical note of interrogation as to our ultimate intentions in the war.—Ex.

Slave Labor.

It was once said by a great leader of men in the United States that this government cannot exist half slave and half free, and the truth of that dictum was demonstrated by the war between the states.

But the Republican party has taken an opposite view of this matter and is trying to establish slavery once more on the territory owned by the United States.

In Hawaii and the Philippines Chinese contract labor, which is slavery, is protected and approved by the McKinley administration.

Laws that exist here forbidding the importation of Chinese immigration have been abrogated there and the crack of the slavedriver's whip is heard under the flag of liberty.

What do the workingmen of the United States think of this? What chance are they to have in these new possessions?

Imperialism was never a good thing for labor. It never will be a good thing. It makes slaves of free men by impoverishing them and forcing a serfdom as real as that of the dark ages.

When laborers struck in Havana the American commander imprisoned the leaders of the strike. That's freedom for you under the stars and stripes.

Americans want no such system of government. Autocrats like Hanna and tools like McKinley may advocate imperialism, slave labor in the Philippines and Hawaii and military law for striking workmen in Cuba, but the freedom-loving citizens of this country will not support such monstrous iniquity.—Chicago Democrat.

[Frenchburg Agitator:]

In the eastern confines of Frenchburg stands a curiosity the like of which, perhaps, exists nowhere else upon the habitable globe. Majestic in proportions and grim and rugged in outline, this towering and silent sentinel stands head and shoulders above the lesser hills and cliffs as if keeping watch over the country round, and is known as Donothan Rock. Through the center of this mammoth rock, about half way down between the summit and the towering hill upon which it sits like some mighty monarch upon the throne, is a hole several feet square through which daylight peeps at the break of dawn, but the grandest sight of all is when Old Sol rests his chin upon the lower rim of the eastern horizon and begins to pick his way through the pathless pastures of the sky. Along in the latter days of October in the course of his journey South he arrives at a point from which he looks square through this colossal stone telescope at the Western world, at about 6:30 a. m. If you wish to see something both beautiful and grand—a sight not to be seen anywhere else on earth—take a stroll some fine clear morning during the latter days of October along the brow of the ridge north of town before the god of day gets his eyes open good, and watch him place his optics to the hole in that mountain of granite and blink at you.

An Unusual Case.

[Richmond Climax]

Green Dunham, a sixteen-year-old negro jockey, who last June drank a half pint of concentrated lye, thinking it was whisky, lies at his mother's home on Burham Hill, a mere skeleton. His stomach and throat were almost totally destroyed by the lye, and food could not be swallowed.

Last Monday week, Drs. Gibson & Gibson and Frazee performed an operation upon the boy whereby food is conveyed to his stomach through a four-inch rubber pipe that enters the stomach above the naval. We witnessed the spectacle on Wednesday when a quart of fresh milk was poured through this pipe directly into the stomach. This is repeated thrice daily. No food whatever passes through his mouth, as the canal leading to his stomach is entirely closed by a stricture. As the lad's condition is improving under the new treatment, it is hoped by the physicians that ere long the stricture will be reduced so that he may take food in the usual manner, and his recovery thereby assured.

Dr. Gibson says when the boy's stomach was lifted out during the surgical operation that it was shriveled up to the size of a walnut. It was punctured and the rubber pipe inserted, and when the milk was introduced the stomach yielded and expanded slowly, the patient experiencing instant satisfaction from the artificial method of nourishing. He is now rapidly improving.

[Glasgow Times.]

The Times is in receipt of the following story from one of its correspondents and it is printed without comment:

Mr. Butler Rogers, who lives out on the Burksville road, recently missed from his flock of sheep a lamb about six months old. For a while he believed it had been stolen from him and gave it up as gone forever. He finally concluded however, to make a diligent search for the missing animal and then, if he failed to seek out the thief who had robbed him. He searched high and low, in woods and pasture, in every hollow log and stump and finally discovered it in an old hollow stump close to his home, and it was still alive. The lamb had been in the stump exactly twenty-four days without food of any kind. It was in very thin condition and was so weak it could not stand alone, but has been eating a little at a time, and, it is believed, will probably recover. This story may seem improbable, but Mr. Rogers is a truthful man, and vouches for its truthfulness.

The smallest republic in the world is that of Tavolara, an island about five miles long, with an average width of a little more than half a mile, situated about a dozen miles to the northeast of Sardinia. The total population of the whole republic does not exceed 60, but they elect a President every six years, and a Council of six members, all of whom serve the state without pay. The women of this island go to the polls and vote with the men, and ever since it became a republic in 1886, all public business has been transacted without turmoil; the elections taking place without any high party feeling or undue excitement.

In 1836 King Charles Albert of Sardinia granted the Island of Tavolara to a family of the name of Bartoleoni, but in less than half a century the inhabitants threw off the yoke of monarchy and took to themselves. This little war did not alarm the world, and was quite a peaceful one. King Paul I. reigned until 1882, and on his deathbed requested that none of his kin should succeed to the throne, and as no one claimed the honor four years later the people decided to draw up a constitution, and Tavolara has been a very successful little republic since.

Twelve years ago its independence was recognized by Italy, and, it is to be presumed, other Powers would have recognized it also if they had known of its existence. The inhabitants live principally by fishing and raising fruits and vegetables. They fear no sudden invasion, for they dispense with any army or navy, and, presumably, in case of need, would rely upon the entire population to uphold the freedom of the country.

About thirty persons were injured Thursday night by the derailing of a passenger train on the Michigan Central railroad, between Alexis and Vienna, Mich. Three of the injured will die, and ten others are seriously hurt. The accident was caused by the spreading of the rails.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The election on Tuesday interfered considerably with this week's business and the offerings in consequence were very light. This should have stimulated prices somewhat, but it did not, and we can only report an equally good market as the week before. There was no change worthy of note. The character of the offerings is generally quite indifferent; very little really fine tobacco and only a small proportion of good mediums is being shown.

There were some sales of new stock this week and prices ranged up to $12 75, something over 20 hhds bringing an average of about 8 cents; very good figures for green tobacco, in our opinion, but they don't seem to justify the high prices which we understand are being asked and paid for crops in the country.

The sales between now and New Year will be light unless there are unusually heavy receipts of new tobacco and that is not probable.

It is stated that a new line of steamboats will be run between Louisville, Cincinnati and Pittsburg. The new steamer City of Pittsburg, after having new modern boilers put on her it is stated, will be one of the boats, and a new vessel, equally as fine as the Pittsburg is now being built at Marietta, Ohio. The company was granted a charter last month for the Pittsburg, Cincinnati and Louisville Transportation Co., with a capital stock of $75,000, with the privilege of increasing the same to $150,000.

The Congress which convenes under the Constitution December 4 next is the Fifty-sixth. It promises to be an important one. Predictions are made that at its first session it will enact such legislation as will solve the problems pending in Cuba, Porto Rico and Hawaii, with the chances that at its close the Philippine question will be in such shape as to give definite idea as to the future government of those islands. Legislation on our foreign possessions will, of course, hold the center of the stage.

Internal legislation promises to be uninteresting. The appropriation bills will go through with a disposition on the part of those having them in charge to do as much trimming as possible.

The increased expenses of the Government promise to play havoc with appropriations for all kinds of internal improvements.

Another matter giving the coming session importance is that it immediately precedes a presidential election, and on both sides nothing will be left unsaid to mold public opinion. Subscribers of the Congressional Record will find the pages of that publication enlivened with scores of campaign speeches.

A Toronto paper states that the influence of the British-Boer war is beginning to be felt in the price of Canadian hay, which has advance 50c to $1 per ton.

ALL IN GOD'S HANDS.

Dr. Talmage on Divine Interposition in Human Affairs.

Fate of Nations as Well as of Individuals Settled in Heaven —World Not Governed in a Haphazard Way.

(Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.)

The idea that things in this world are at loose ends and going at haphazard is in this discourse combated by Dr. Talmage. The text is Psalm 119, 8: "Forever, O Lord, Thy word is settled in Heaven."

This world has been in process of change ever since it was created—mountains born, mountains dying, and they have both cradle and grave. Once this planet was all fluid, and no being such as you or I have ever seen could have lived on it a minute. Our hemisphere turns its face to the sun and then turns its back. The axis of the earth's revolution has shifted. The earth's center of gravity is changed. Once flowers grew in the arctic and there was snow in the tropics. There has been a redistribution of land and sea, the land crumbling into the sea, the sea swallowing the land. Ice and fire have fought for the possession of this planet. The chemical composition of it is different now from what it once was. Volcanoes once terribly alive are dead, not one throb of fiery pulse, not one breath of vapor—the ocean changing its amount of saline quantities. The internal fires of the earth are gradually eating their way to the surfaces—upheaval and subsidence of vast realms of continent.

High up in the palace of the sun at least five things are settled—that nations which go continuously and persistently wrong perish; that happiness is the result of spiritual condition and not of earthly environment; that this world is a schoolhouse for splendid or disgraceful graduation; that with or without us the world is to be made over into a scene of arborescence and purity; that all who are adjoined to the unparalleled One of Bethlehem and Nazareth and Golgotha will be the subjects of a supernal felicity without any taking off.

Do you doubt my first proposition—that nations which go wrong perish? We have in this American nation all the elements of permanence and indestruction. We need not borrow from others any trowels for upbuilding or torches for demolition. Elements of ruin—nihilism, infidelity, agnosticism, Sabbath desecration, inebriety, sensuality, extravagance, fraud; they are all here. Elements of safety—God-worshiping men and women by the scores of millions, honesty, benevolence, truthfulness, self sacrifice, industry, sobriety and more religion than has characterized any nation that has ever existed; they are all here. The only question is as to which of the forces will gain dominancy—the one class ascendant, and this United States government, I think, will continue as long as the world exists; the other class ascendant, and the United States goes into such small pieces that other governments would hardly think them worth picking up.

Have you ever noticed the size of the cemetery of dead nations, the vast Greenwood and Pere le Chaise, where mighty kingdoms were buried? Open the gate and walk through this cemetery and read the epitaphs. Here lies Carthage, born 100 years before Rome, great commercial metropolis on the bay of Tunis, a part of an empire that gave the alphabet to the Greeks and their great language to the Hebrews; her arms the terror of nations, commanding at one time 16,000 miles of coast; her Hamilcar leading forth 30 myriads, or 300,000 troops; her Hannibal carrying out in manhood the oath he had taken in boyhood to preserve eternal enmity to Rome, leaving costly and imposing monuments at Agrigentum a ghastly heap of ruins; Carthage, her colonies on every coast, her ships plowing every sea; Carthage—where are her splendors now? All extinguished. Where are her swords? The last one broken. Where are her towers and long ranges of magnificent architecture? Buried under the sands of the Bagradas. As ballast of foreign ships much of her radiant marble has been carried away to build the walls of trans-Mediterranean cathedrals, while other blocks have been blasted in modern times by the makers of the Tunis railway. And all of that great and mighty city and kingdom that the tourist finds to-day is here and there a broken arch of what was once a 50-mile aqueduct. Our talented and genial friend, Henry M. Field, in one of his matchless books of travel, labors hard to prove that the slight ruins of that city are really worth visiting. Carthage buried in the cemetery of dead nations. Not one altar to the true God did she rear. Not one of the Ten Commandments but she conspicuously violated. Her doom was settled in Heaven when it was decided far back in the eternities that the nation and kingdom that will not serve God shall perish.

Our own nation will be judged by the same moral laws by which all other nations have been judged. The judgment day for individuals will probably come far on in the future. Judgment day for nations is every day, every day weighed, every day approved or every day condemned. Never before in the history of this country has the American nation been more surely in the balances than it is this minute. Do right, and we go up. Do wrong, and we go down. I am not so anxious to know what this statesman or that warrior thinks we had better do with Cuba and Porto Rico and the Philippines as I am anxious to know what God thinks we had better do. The destiny of this nation will not be decided on yonder capitoline hill or at Manila or at the presidential ballot box, for it will be settled in Heaven.

Another thing decided in the high places of the universe is that this world, with or without us, will be made over into a scene of arborescence and purity. Do not think that such a consummation depends upon our personal fidelity. It will be done anyhow. God's cause does not go a-begging. If all the soldiers of Jesus Christ now living should become deserters and go over to the enemy, that would not defeat the cause. A large part of the Bible is taken up with telling us what the world will be. There is a large army, human and angelic, now in the field, but God's reserve forces are more numerous and more mighty than those now at the front, and if He could in Gideon's time rout the Midianites with a crash of crockery, and if He could in Shamgar's time overcome a host with an ox goad, and if in Samson's time He could defeat an army with a bleached jawbone, and if the walls of Jericho went down under a blast of perforated ram's horn, and if in Christ's day blind eyes were cured by ointment of spittle, then God can do anything He says He will do. As yet He has taken only one sword out of a whole armory of weapons. Do not get nervous, as if the Lord were going to be defeated. The redemption of these hemispheres was settled in Heaven, and Isaiah and Ezekiel and Habakkuk and Malachi and St. John only reported what the Lord God Almighty had decided upon. My only fear is that our regiment will not get into the fight to do something worthy of the Christ who redeemed us and we be left in lazy encampment at Tampa when we ought to have been at Santiago.

Oh, that coming day of the world's perfection! The earth will be so changed that the sermonology will be changed. There will be no more calls to repentance, for all will have repented; no more gathering of alms for the poor, for the poor will have been enriched; no hospital Sunday, for disjointed bones will have been set and the wounds all healed, and the incurable diseases of other times will have been overcome by a materia medica and a pharmacy and a dentistry and a therapeutics that have conquered everything that afflicted the nerve or lung or tooth or eye or limb—healthology complete and universal. The poultice and the ointment and the panacea and the catholicon and the surgeon's Knife and the dentist's forceps and the scientist's X ray will have fulfilled their mission. The social life of the world will be perfected. In that millennial age I imagine ourselves standing in front of a house lighted for levee. We enter among groups filled with gladness and talking good sense and rallying each other in pleasantries and in every possible way forwarding good neighborhood; no looking askance, no whispered backbitings, no strut of pretension, no oblivion of some one's presence because you do not want to know him; each one happy, determined on making some one else happy; words of honest appreciation instead of hollow flattery; suavities and genialities instead of inflations and composities; equipage and upholstery and sculpture and painting paid for; two hours of mental and moral improvement; all the guests able to walk as steadily down the aisle of that mansion as when they ascended them; no awakening next morning with aching head and bloodshot eye and incompetent for the day's duties; the social life as perfect as refinement and common sense and culture and prosperity and religion can make it; the earth made better than it was at the start, and all through gospelizing influences, directly or indirectly.

I suppose the greatest tidal wave that ever rolled the seas was that which in 1868 was started by the Peruvian earthquake. At Arica, Peru, the wave was 50 feet high and swung warships a mile forward on the land. At San Pedro, Cal., the wave was 60 feet high. It moved on to the Sandwich islands and submerged some of them and beat against the shores of New Zealand and rolled up the beach of Japan and stopped not until it had encircled the entire globe. Oh, what a wave! But the earthquake that shook the mountain where our Lord died started a higher and swifter and mightier tidal wave that will roll round and round the earth until all its rebellions and abominations have gone under.

That was an exciting scene after the battle of Bosworth, which was fought between Richard III. and the earl of Richmond, the king falling and the earl triumphing, when Lord Stanley brought the crown and handed it to the earl, seated on horseback, while the dying and the dead of the battle were lying all around. But it is a more thrilling spectacle as we look forward through the centuries and see the last armed and imperial iniquity of the world slain and the crown of universal victory put upon the conqueror on the white horse of the Apocalypse and all nations "hail the power of Jesus' name." That the whole earth will be redeemed is one of the things long ago settled in Heaven.

Another thing decided in that high place is that all who are adjoined to the unparalleled One of Bethlehem and Nazareth and Golgotha will be the subjects of a supernal felicity without any taking off. The old adage says that "beggars must not be choosers," and the human race in its depleted state had better not be critical of the mode by which God would empalace all of us. I could easily think of a plan more complimentary to our fallen humanity than that which is called the "plan of salvation." If God had allowed us to do part of the work of recovery and He do the rest, if we could do three-quarters of it and He do the last quarter, if we could accomplish most of it and He just put on the finishing touches, many could look with more complacency upon the projected reinstatement of the human family. No, no! We must have our pride subjugated, our stubborn will made flexible and a supernatural power demonstrated in us at every step. A pretty plan of salvation that would be, of human drafting and manufacturing! It would be a doxology sung to ourselves. God must have all the glory, not one step of our heavenly throne made by earthly carpentry; not one string could we twist of the harp of our eternal rejoicing. Accept all as an unmerited donation from the skies, or we will never have it at all.

"Now," says some one, "if Christ is the only way what about the heathen, who have never heard of Him?" But you are not heathen, and why divert us from the question of our personal salvation? Satan is always introducing something irrelevant. He wants to take it out of a personality into an abstraction. Get our own salvation settled, and then we will discuss the salvation of other people. "But," says some one, "what percentage of the human race will be saved? What will be the comparative number saved and lost?" There Satan thrusts in the mathematics of redemption. He suggests that you find out the mathematical proportion of the redeemed. But be not deceived. I am now discussing the eternal welfare of only two persons, yourself and myself. Get ourselves right before we bother ourselves about getting others right. O Christ, come hither and master our case! Here are our sins—pardon them; our wounds—heal them; our burdens—lift them; our sorrows—comfort them. We want the Christ of Lartimeus to open our blind eyes, the Christ of Martha to help us in our domestic cares, the Christ of Olivet to help us preach our sermons, the Christ of Lake Galilee to still our tempests, the Christ of Lazarus to raise our dead. Not too tired is He to come, though He has on His whipped shoulders so long carried the world's woe and on His lacerated feet walked this way to accept our salutation.

By the bloody throes of the mountain on which Jesus died, and by the sepulcher where His mutilated body was inclosed in darkened crypt and by the Olivet from which He arose, while astonished disciples clutched for His robes to detain Him in their companionship, and by the radiant and omnipotent throne on which He sits waiting for the coming of all those whose redemption was settled in Heaven, I implore you to bow your head in immediate and final submission. Once exercise sorrow for what you have done and exercise trust in Him for what He is willing to do, and all is well for both worlds. Then you can swing out defiance to all opposition, human and diabolic. In conquering His foes He conquered yours. And have you noticed that passage in Colossians that represents Him "having despoiled principalities and powers, He made a show of them, openly triumphing," so bringing before us that overwhelming spectacle of a Roman triumph?

When Pompey landed at Brindisi, Italy, returned from his victories, he disbanded the brave men who had fought under him and sent them rejoicing to their homes, and, entering Rome, his emblazoned chariot was followed by princes in chains from kingdoms he had conquered, and flowers such as only grew under those Italian skies strewed the way, and he came under arches inscribed with the names of battlefields on which he had triumphed and rode by columns which told of the 1,500 cities he had destroyed and the 12,000,000 people he had conquered or slain. Then the banquet was spread, and out of the chalices filled to the brim they drank to the health of the conqueror. Pelisarius, the great soldier, returned from his military achievements and was robed in purple, and in the procession were brought golden thrones and pillars of precious stones and the furniture of royal feasts, and amid the splendors of kingdoms overcome he was hailed to the hippodrome by shouts such as had seldom rung through the capital. Then also came the convivialities. In the year 274 Aurelian made his entrance to Rome in triumphal car, in which he stood while a winged figure of Victory held a wreath above his head. Zenobia, captive queen of Palmyra, walked behind his chariot, her person encircled with fetters of gold, under the weight of which she nearly fainted, but still a captive. And there were in the procession 200 lions and tigers and beasts of many lands and 1,600 gladiators excused from the cruel amphitheater that they might decorate the day, and Persian and Arabian and Ethiopian embassadors were in the procession and the long lines of captives, Egyptians, Syrians, Gauls, Goths and Vandals.

It was to such scenes that the New Testament refers when it spoke of Christ "having despoiled principalities and powers, He made a show of them, openly triumphing." But, oh, the difference in those triumphs! The Roman triumph represented arrogance, cruelty, oppression and wrong, but Christ's triumph meant emancipation and holiness and joy. The former was a procession of groans accompanied by a clank of chains, the other a procession of hosannas by millions set forever free. The only shackled ones of Christ's triumph will be Satan and his cohorts tied to our Lord's chariot wheel, with all the abominations of all the earth bound for an eternal captivity. Then will come a feast in which the chalices will be filled with the new wine of the kingdom." Under arches commemorative of all the battles in which the bannered armies of the church militant through thousands of years of struggle have at last won the day Jesus will ride, Conqueror of earth and hell and Heaven. Those armies, disbanded, will take palaces and thrones. "And they shall come from the east and the west and the north and the south and sit down in the kingdom of God." And may you and I, through the pardoning and sanctifying grace of Christ, be guests at that royal banquet!

THE WIND RAISER.

It Was an Ingenious Idea, But Its Working Was Only Moderately Satisfactory.

He was a tall man with shifty eyes and a telescope hand bag. Aside from this, he had on a dilapidated storm coat and a tuft of hair on his pointed chin.

"Sir," he said, with courtly gravity—police courtly or otherwise—"sir, I have here a most remarkable model," and he pointed a skinny forefinger at his telescope. "I want you to look at it, sir, and if it meets your approval I ask you to give me a card of introduction to some New York newspaper man who can put me in touch with either Sir Thomas Lipton or Ollie Iselin, or both."

"In touch, eh?" said the scribe, quite softly.

The visitor slightly reddened.

"It is a figure of speech," he hastily said.

"I hope you make the figure low," said the scribe.

"Lemme show you the model," quoth the stranger, and diving into the telescope he pulled out a wonderful conglomeration of strings, and spools and wheels. "I made it all since breakfast," he smilingly asserted.

"When did you have your last breakfast?" queried the scribe, as he toyed with the largest spool.

"I call it," the inventor hastily went on, "the wind compeller." You turn the crank 'A,' which is geared to the cylinder 'B,' which causes the flywheel 'C' to revolve with great rapidity—which naturally produces the wind. By enlarging the flywheel and the cylinder—"

"And the crank?" interrupted the scribe, with a meaning look at the visitor.

"No," said the latter, "the larger machine would be run by a powerful donkey engine."

"I suppose it's much the same thing," said the scribe. Then he leaned back and surveyed the outfit with his eyes half closed. "Will you tell me," he asked, "what this mechanical nightmare means?"

"I knew it would interest you," chuckled the stranger. "Well, sir, this simple little device is intended for use on racing yachts when becalmed. Put one of these, sir, on the after deck of the Columbia, we'll say; attach to its wind-producing focus a huge funnel of the graphophone order, couple on your motor, press the button, and when the cylinder gets to revolving you'll have breeze enough to fill every blessed sail—spinnaker and all. Of course, I would also have a 'compeller' on the after deck of the Shamrock, the exact duplicate of the Columbia one, and both would be officially geared to exactly the same speed. Why, just see what a saving of labor it would be! All the sailors would lie around and smoke cigarettes, leaving the whole job of running the boat to the man at the helm. There'd be no excursionists disappointed, no reporters disgusted. Great scheme, isn't it? What do you think of it?"

"As a wind raiser?" queried the scribe.

"Yes."

"As a raiser of the wind," said the scribe, solemnly, "it's only a partial success. The best I can do for you, my friend, is ten cents. Here you are, and good morning."

The inventor connected with the dime with great promptness and accuracy, and together they drifted out.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WHAT IS GOOD MEAT.

It Has But Little Odor and Bears Cooking Without Much Shrinkage.

Poisoning by alimentary substances is so frequent, and the grave symptoms following the ingestion of tainted food are often so transitory, that their causes elude detection. Recently it has been proposed to make use of the clumping reactions, made familiar by the Widal test, to determine the bacillaenic qualities of meat, and it would seem that the method promises much. It may be wise to recall a few of the characteristics of sound meat. Good, wholesome meat is neither of a pale pinkish nor of a deep purple tint. It has a marbled appearance, from the ramifications of little veins or intercellular fat; the fat of the internal organs especially is firm, hard and suety, and is never wet; whereas that of diseased animals is often soft and watery. Good meat has but little odor, whereas diseased meat smells faint and cadaverous. Good meat bears cooking without much shrinking or losing much of its weight, but bad meat shrivels up and boils to pieces—this being due to the larger proportion of watery and gelatinous material and the absence of true muscular substance. Under the microscope the fiber should be clear and well defined and free from infusorial animalculae, while that of diseased meat is sodden, as if it had been soaked in water; the transverse streaks are indistinct and wide apart, and animalculae abound in it.—Sanitary Record.

An Effective Trimming.

The stitching in of large cords, almost as big round as one's little finger, is an odd but smart style introduced of late. There are cloth gowns with skirts corded in this style almost to the knee, and the cords are run across the tops of bodices to form yoke effects and around the tops of sleeves. A black silk tailor gown was trimmed in this way, with not a sign of ruffle or plait. There was such an air of quiet elegance about this gown that one found it easy to forgive the show of pride on the part of the owner as she showed it to a few admiring women friends.—Detroit Free Press.

IN THE HEART OF AFRICA.

Lord Kitchener's Tribute to the Energy of American Bridge Makers.

Ambassador Choate transmits to Secretary Hay from London the speech delivered by Lord Kitchener at the opening of the bridge over the Atbara river, in the Sondan. In the course of his remarks Lord Kitchener said: "As regards this magnificent bridge, I think we may fairly claim that it is a record achievement. It was only well into last October that the credits were authorized for the extension of the line to Khartoum. The sites of the bridge had then to be determined, the boring, soundings, and sections of the river had to be completed, and eight solid double piers to carry the superstructure had to sunk down to the rock below the river bed to meet the Atbara flood, which arrived 25 days earlier than our experience led us to expect. But this did not catch us napping. Owing to the energy displayed, the piers were completed more than 25 days earlier than was thought possible. When the first wave came it passed harmlessly, carrying away only the temporary bridge by which we push on railway construction to the southward. In November and December every effort was made to place the order for the superstructure in England, but it was found impossible for British firms to supply so big an undertaking in the time allowed. The matter is one of considerable regret to me personally, I think it demonstrates the relations between labor and capital in our country are not such as to give confidence to capitalists to induce them to run the risk of establishing great up-to-date workshops with the plant necessary to enable Great Britain to maintain her proud position as the first constructing nation of the world. Well, where Englishmen have failed I am delighted to find our cousins across the Atlantic have stepped in. The opening of this bridge to-day is due to their energy and ability and the power they possess in so marked a degree of turning out works of this magnitude in less time than can be done by anyone else. I congratulate the American foremen and workmen on the excellent success which has crowned their efforts in the erection of this bridge in the heart of Africa, far from their homes, during the hottest months of the year, and depending solely upon the labor of men speaking a foreign tongue."—Washington Post.

Traveling in Java.

A man who has been traveling in Java thus writes about the Dutch colonial railways. He says: "Trains are used in Java, not on account of their speed, but on account of the long distances one has to cover. If you are in a hurry and you haven't more than five miles to go—walk. You may find some difficulty in keeping up to the train if it is going down a stiff gradient, but you will more than make this up on the flat, and you'll romp past it on coming to the slightest ascent. It is a solemn fact," he continues, "that once in the course of a mile walk along a highway running parallel with the railway line I caught up to and passed a 'snell' (express train). Toward the end of the walk I entered a shop to purchase some cigars, and only after I had been in the shop ten minutes did the train again pass me."—Pinang Gazette.

Preservation of Milk.

In a bulletin of the West Virginia experiment station Mr. Hite describes a series of experiments which he made for the preservation of milk with a pressure of from five to ninety tons per square inch. At the end of five days some of the samples were perfectly sweet, but in no case were all the injurious bacteria killed, and on the whole the experiment can hardly be regarded as a success. Great difficulty was experienced in procuring cylinders sufficiently strong to withstand the great pressure. In some cases low or moderate pressure for several days was tried.—Chicago Tribune.

TAKEN AT HIS WORD.

The Purchasers Complained of a Lack of One of the Elements in the Oil.

The faculty of terse and forceful speech is ordinarily an advantage, but occasionally a man gets hoisted by his own epigram. A hustling young New Yorker who was recently established in a branch of the oil business, had set out to get the patronage of a certain firm. The head of the concern was reluctant to make a change.

"The oil we have been getting is not satisfactory," said he, "and I fail to see why we should make a change. Are there any extra inducements you can offer? How do you propose to improve on the old quality?"

"In this way," was the prompt answer. "I propose to give the business my personal attention. I intend to put some of my brains into every barrel of oil we send out."

The rejoinder pleased the old gentleman, and he became a customer.

A few months later the hustling young man was obliged to make a journey, and in his absence, through some oversight, the quality of oil was allowed to deteriorate. It was quickly noted, and a letter now on file in the office records one of the protests. It reads: "Gentlemen: When we were induced to use your product we were assured Mr. Blank would put some of his brains into every barrel of oil. We deeply regret to observe that Mr. Blank is threatened with paresis."—Washington Star.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

BEST FARM WAGON.

An Indiana Experience from Which Farmers in Other Sections May Draw a Valuable Lesson.

I have often wondered why it was that manufacturers did not make farm wagons more especially and particularly adapted for use on the farm than they do. The kind that are usually put out all over the country do very well on the road, but they do not fill the bill on the farm. The wheels are as a rule too high and it takes one side of a ten-acre field to turn round in, unless the body is made so narrow that it won't hold anything. We have had our farm wagons of late years made to order in the following manner: The front wheels are 40 inches high, hind wheels 50 inches. We prefer broad to narrow tires for farm use. The front axle is made eight inches shorter than the hind one. Hind bolster nine inches wide, front one ten inches. The break is fastened to the gear. The standards are made of iron, projecting above bolster six inches, and extending down through same and taking a nut. The width of body is 51 inches, almost a foot wider than ordinary beds. The front wheels turn under the wagon bed, and by this means you can turn round in a very small space, as is often necessary to do on the farm. The doubletree extends out on either side even with the front wheel, thus throwing your horses far apart, and on the road they follow the wagon track.

In addition to the regular wagon body we take two scantling, 16 feet long, two inches thick and six inches wide, and on this we bolt on cross pieces (a), two at each end, one on top and another on bottom of rail, and then bolt one piece in middle (b) on the under side of rail. This makes a good support for the floor, and thus we have a good rack for hauling all kinds of grain, grass or straw. Outside this frame, between the rails and hind wheels, we nail a board (c) about three feet long and 15 inches wide, to keep the hay or grain off of the wheel. Or instead of board, a frame can be made out of 1x3-inch slats to answer the same purpose. This rack is also very convenient to haul threshed wheat, potatoes, fertilizer or anything that is in bags, and being low down is easily loaded and unloaded. If a farmer tries this sort of an outfit once he will not have any other. It costs little more to have a wagon made in this style than to buy one as usually found on the market, but this additional cost is nothing compared with the great convenience found in using such a wagon for all purposes on the farm.—Orange Judd Farmer.

ELECTRIC FARM ROADS.

When the Population Is Dense Their Construction Could Not Fail to Prove Profitable.

The good roads problem is assuming a new and interesting phase. The success of rural electric railways has led some of our progressive farmers to consider the practicability of a co-operative system of electric lines on country roads for use in hauling both passenger and freight traffic. Just at this time, when steel and all the other materials entering into railway construction are so high, it may not be advisable to enter extensively into a work involving such heavy expenditure, but in many sections of our great agricultural states, where for long distances roadways are lined with producing farms which stretch back perhaps for miles, and where the quantity of products involves a vast amount of expensive transportation, made uncertain through the influence of weather conditions upon the roads—under such circumstances there is no doubt but the plan would prove entirely feasible, while the effect upon the social life of the farm would be immeasurably advantageous.

The proposition involves the construction of a track at one side of the roadway with switches and side tracks and a main trolley system. This main system to be used by individual farmers at will, employing each his own cars as he now employs his wagons and buggies. Running from the main line to each farm would be a side track which may be extended to barns, cribs and bins to suit the wishes of the individual farmer. He could load his product when he chose, selecting those times when markets were most promising of returns, or take his family to church or institute, social gatherings or shopping, with swiftness and ease, the only thing to interfere, perhaps, being heavy snows.

The American farmer is studying the economies of agriculture these days as never before. He is becoming in very truth a "business man." He is learning what the railway man and the manufacturer long ago learned through necessity, that it is not the first cost, but the expense of operation that counts. He knows that the present conditions of roads make transportation the most expensive item in his list. If the farmers' electric railway is to lessen that expense it is bound to come.—Farmers' Voice.

GROW PRIME FRUIT.

Those Who Do It and Get Acquainted with the Consumer Are Bound to Make Money.

Every grower of fine fruit should aim to get acquainted in a business way with his customers. I have a friend who grows superb berries, and in every box he puts a ticket giving his name and the variety of fruit, and in the largest type he says: "Price always five cents above the market price." With berries selling at eight or ten cents ordinarily he gets five cents more and that means a big profit. Can he sell them? Certainly. He sells more than any other grower in the county and gets his price. Then, too, his berries are so fine and large he gets them picked for one-half cent less a quart than others, and he makes it pay both ways.

In the fruit growing of the future there must be a cutting down of the acreage of the majority of the growers. They must grow larger and better fruit, of greater beauty and higher quality, and the grower who gets the closest in touch with the consumer will get the highest price. Another thing will be the production on a tremendous scale by a few growers, by companies with certain lines of fruits in certain localities suited to them. The small growers might do better by cooperation, perhaps, as to methods of packing and selling and transportation, and it will bring more money to pay some specialist to place your products on the market in more desirable shape.

I have not said anything of the home supply. It is one of the most important things of all. Every farm home should have the greatest possible variety of fruit. You do not take interest enough to do this now, perhaps, but think it over, and you will see how important it is. Plant your grounds with beautiful trees and make home surroundings beautiful, your lawn attractive with beautiful flowers and the inside of your homes attractive as well. There is nothing better than this.—J. H. Hale, in Rural World.

PROTECTING SHRUBS.

An Easily Made Covering That Keeps Out the Cold and Prevents Crushing by Heavy Snow.

Protection against cold and protection against crushing snow are both furnished to shrubs and plants by such a covering as is shown in the cut. First, buy is bound around the plant, being brought out upon the ground to protect the roots. Then burlap is tied about the hay, and, lastly, three stakes are driven into the ground and tied together over the top. Winds cannot now blow the plant over nor snows crush it down. A similar result can be obtained by driving a stake down beside the shrub before putting on the hay and burlap, allowing the stake to project up through the covering. This stake holds the wind in check and also holds up the covering so that the snow that falls upon it will not exert a crushing weight.—N. Y. Tribune.

PERMANENT LABELS.

A Matter of Some Importance to Horticulturists Who Want to Keep Names of Plants.

The little wooden labels which are used to mark the trees and plants sent out from the nursery are not durable. They are light affairs and generally are fastened on with a piece of iron wire which soon rusts off. If it does not rust and break the limb will often grow around it, and may become so injured as to break off. The name is written on with a common lead pencil and the weather of one year will wear it off, and thus the name is lost.

If it is desired to keep the name of the plant on a label attached to it it may be done in this way: Get a heavy six or eight-inch label and rub it over with white lead thinned with the least bit of oil. Then with a soft pencil, and before the lead is dry, write on the name and anything else you may wish. This will last for several years.

Now procure some No. 14 or No. 16 copper wire and cut it in pieces a foot or more long. Make a loop on each end, give the middle a twist around the label and hang it around a small branch, hooking the loops together and pinching them up tight. Such a label fastened in this manner will last for years. —Edwin C. Powell, in National Stockman.

Lively Demand for Angoras.

The Shepherds' Bulletin says demand for Angora goats is increasing rapidly. Inquiries are mostly from the southern and western points of the United States. The demand from the Pacific northwest is brisk, especially on the western slope. Angoras are best adapted to rough land. Their favorite food is leaves and bark, and they will leave the best grass for browse. Angoras are therefore more valuable than sheep in very rough sections, and will grow fat where sheep will hardly exist.

NOTES OF THE FASHIONS.

The Latest Ideas in Coats, Wraps and Gowns for Early Winter.

Coats of Persian lamb, with revers and collar of chinchilla, are very handsome, and an odd and effective jacket of this rich fur had collar, revers and cuffs of white cloth, bordered with sable. The effect is extremely pretty. The newest boas are provided with a sumptuous array of tails, which form a fringe round the neck, and hang in a confused mass from the ends. The newest caps is of Persian lamb, bordered with rich, dark brown fox, with tails hanging over the arms and down the long stole fronts. Some of the mink and sable capes have shaped flounces, which fall back from the fronts in curled revers.

Among new fashions comes that of making out-of-door coats and likewise jacket bodies for indoor wear quite long in front, but short at the back, or short in front with greatly elongated backs. It is not unlikely that the old-style swallow-tail coats, with narrow lengths reaching well down on the dress skirt at the back, will again prevail. On one or two French models in this style the long directoire ends were lined with silk a shade lighter than the cloth fabric, one being a dahlia venetian cloth with a mauve silk lining. In another instance, on a cocoa brown, a pretty shade of reseda green formed the liberty satin lining.

Black and white effects both in dress and millinery are still in the height of favor. Many designs in silk and wool fabrics appear in these quiet combinations, and some are more expensive by the yard than silk. The newest black and white gowns worn at day weddings and receptions are those in brocaded patterns over checked taffeta of very rich quality, also in matelasse silks and satins, and in plain or flowered stripes, both wide and narrow, in silk and satin alternately.

Plaid silk linings appear in some of the wool dress skirts.

The idea for the disposition of fullness around the hips, promised for the immediate future, and already in sight, is an overdress with box plaits beginning at the waist on either side of the front, and extending around the back. There is a little space between these plaits, and they are caught down flat nearly to the knee.

Deep plum, garnet, gray and tan are the fashionable colors for cloth and velvet gowns.

Velvet, both plain and fancy, are to be very much worn.

Narrow bands of fur, especially sable, are a prominent feature of dress trimming for gauzy evening gowns as well as velvet and cloth costumes.—Boston Budget.

WOMAN'S WAYS.

Some Foibles and Frailties Which Crop Out in Her Everyday Life.

A grocer has the advantage of other men. Whenever he wants to take the conceit out of a woman he lets her pick out her own cantaloupes.

There is nothing more discouraging to a girl than to return home from a big town with a new wriakle in style and find that it has preceded her.

When the daughter of a rich man makes a salad, with two servants to prepare the ingredients and to wash up afterward, she gets credit for doing all the housekeeping.

Every woman must spoil something—a man, a baby or dog. We have noticed it is rarely a man.

If the Lord sends only one boy in a family of girls the mother and sisters drop into line and begin to revolve around him.

Look at a child and its mother will immediately take out her handkerchief and go to polishing its face.

What has become of the old-fashioned woman who has a "tidy" pinned on every chair in the house?

Accuse a woman of extravagance and she will remember that she saves all the strings that come around parcels and feel that her conscience is clear.

Women sometimes overestimate the power a pretty girl has on a man. An Atchison woman, finding that she would be late with her dinner, called to a pretty neighbor girl to come over and talk to her men folks while she got it ready. The pretty girl came and talked her best, but all the men folks quarreled with her before dinner was on the table and haven't spoken to her since.—Atchison Globe.

Improving Linoleum.

The floor covering known as linoleum is a preparation of pulverized cork and linseed oil pressed on a foundation of burlap. The natural color of linoleum is a yellowish brown. Sometimes the cloth is sold in this natural color, but it is more general to print a pattern on it, as in the case of oilcloth. When this pattern wears off one comes down to the natural color, sometimes much darkened by hard usage. There are several methods of treating linoleum when in this condition. First, simply washing it with soap and water whenever it becomes soiled, which is almost daily on a much-used floor. Again, washing it clean, drying it perfectly and rubbing it with a cloth dampened with paraffin oil, and afterward letting it stand an hour or two, and then rubbing it with a woolen cloth. This treatment will keep the linoleum soft and give it a gloss, but it will grow darker and will still soil quickly. Another treatment consists of painting it, and, when the coat of paint is thoroughly dried, putting on two coats of varnish.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Sweet Sandwiches.

Spread thin slices of buttered bread with strawberry jam and put together; or spread lady fingers, or a thin layer of sponge cake, cut in hearts and diamonds, with orange marmalade and put together.—Boston Budget.

Tea Poisoning.

Victims of tea poisoning are becoming alarmingly prevalent. Women demand the life and variety of Health, and instead of doing it naturally by building up their systems they resort to tea. They should take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters instead. By strengthening the digestive organs this brings beauty and good spirits. It tones up the nerves, drives away the blues, regulates the bowels and cures all forms of dyspepsia. All druggists sell it.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. A WOMAN HELPS WOMEN

THERE are women everywhere who suffer almost constantly because they cannot bring themselves to tell all about their ills to a physician.

Such women can surely explain their symptoms and their suffering by letter to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for the confidence reposed in her has never been violated. Over a million women have been helped by her advice and medicine.

Mrs. Pinkham in attending to her vast correspondence is assisted by women only. If you are ill, don't delay. Her reply will cost you nothing and it will be a practical help as it was to MISS ELLA E. BRENNER, East Rochester, Ohio, who says: "I shrunk from the ordeal of examination by our physician, yet I knew I must have treatment. My troubles were backache, nervous tired feeling, painful menstruation and leucorrhœa. I am so grateful to you now that I am willing to have my name published to help other girls to take their troubles to you. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound used as you wrote me has made me entirely well and very happy. I shall bless you as long as I live."

Mrs. Pinkham receives thousands of such letters from grateful women.

MISS NELLIE RUSSELL, of 138 Grace St., Pittsburg, Pa., in a letter to Mrs. Pinkham says: "From childhood I suffered from kidney trouble and as I grew older my troubles increased having intense pain running from my waist to my womb and the menses were very painful. One day, seeing your advertisement in one of our papers, I wrote to you.

"When your reply came I began taking your Compound and followed your advice and am now in perfect health, and would advise any lady rich or poor to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I can praise above all other remedies. It is a wonderful help to women."

Lee certainly deserves credit for his enterprise and push in putting up a building that will insure his many customers comfortable protection from cold and wet, while having their work done and will be a creditable improvement in the neighborhood besides. Mr. Baker at Limaburg, made just this kind of improvement and the people talked about it all over the country and admired his enterprise—so they will Busby's and no mistake.

Mr. Rich had very little to say but seemed ready to act. Mr. Utz favored getting a hustle on and going ahead. Mr. Kennedy spoke in favor of getting the matter in legal form by incorporating and getting charter, then survey route, get rights of way and have a franchise that could be used to good advantage in interesting capitalists.

The Election in Boone County.

The Board of County Election Commissioners, Messrs. Pearson, Watts and Hughes, met at the County Clerk's office Friday at 10 a. m. and proceeded to canvass the returns from the election on the 7th inst. The officers of election at the several precincts had performed their duties so well that nearly all the Commissioners had to do was to tabulate and count the votes as returned. There was only three ballots sent up, and as soon as the Commissioners saw them they agreed they should be rejected. One of these ballots came from Union, and the voter had stamped in the square under every device on the ballot except the rooster. The other two came from Walton, one being entirely devoid of any stencil mark, while the other was stamped under the rooster and the phoenix both—a strange combination. The official count showed only two changes in the vote for Governor as the RECORDER gave it last week. At Big Bone Goebel lost three votes and Brown gained two. The candidates for Governor on each ticket ran ahead of the other candidates On the Democratic ticket the lowest vote received for a State office was 1760, being 126 behind the head of the ticket. On the Republican ticket the lowest number cast for a candidate was 633, being 67 less than the head of the ticket. In proportion to the vote cast in this county the candidates below Governor on the Republican ticket ran further behind the head of the ticket than did those below Governor on the Democratic ticket.

O. P. Conner received, yesterday, a fine 7 months old Guernsey bull from J. E. Rouse, of Fayette county, and a fine Poland China male hog from a Woodford county stock raiser.

While raising Lassing's tobacco barn, last Friday afternoon, Henry Quick dropped a large hammer which he was using to force timbers to their place, and in its descent it struck on the bare head of John Baldon, who was working a few feet below Henry. J. A. KIRTLEY,

The following is from the Park City Times, published at Bowling Green, Nov. 7th: "The Times learns from Major W. C. Wilson, the well-known insurance man, that his worthy competitor, J. W. Furlong was caned yesterday just as he should have been, and Mr. Wilson is glad of the caning. Mr. Furlong who has been for a long while district manager for the Sun Life Insurance Co., is soon to be assigned another post of duty and the solicitors working under him testified their high esteem and good feelings yesterday by presenting him with a gold headed cane. He is an excellent gentleman, a fine insurance man and the cane presented him was thoroughly merited. He will be succeeded here by Mr. E. C. Olliver, who is also an efficient insurance writer and Manager. Mr. Furlong will go to Louisville where he will be connected with the home office of the Sun Life Insurance Company."

W. C. Brown lost a considerable area of his scalp while over in Indiana, last Saturday. He had loaded his wagon under a shed, and when he drove out he failed to "duck" his head, which struck the timber above it, removing a cake of hair and hide from a place as large as a silver half dollar. Wat thought his top piece was completely crushed. Had it not been for the protection afforded by the linen hat he wore there is no telliug what the result might have been.

Assessor Willis says one thing is certain, "I can make no headway in my official work so long as I am in reach of a telephone and the election remains mixed."

Thomas B. Youtsey, the former cashier of the First National Bank, of Newport, who was charged with having wrongfully used several thousands of dollars of the bank fuuds, and was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary for violations of the National Banking Acts, was granted a new trial by United States Judge Leveton Monday. The money was said to have been used in land speculations. He was indicted in 1897 and has been under heavy bond pending his appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. DEFECTIVE flues are responsible for over 11 per cent. of the fires and incendiarism is next as a cause. Last year 6,891 incendiary fires occurred. Lightning caused 3,479, spontaneous combustion 1,179, friction in machinery 295, natural gas 94, dust explosions 14, and five were caused by the sun's rays passing through window glass.

A SCIENTIST of some standing asserts that chemically pure water is poison to the human stomach, upsetting some hitherto accepted theories regarding distilled water by the argument that in distillation the water loses sundry salts that it greedily abstracts from the animal tissues when it is swallowed, thus constituting a protoplasmic poison.

ALEXANDER AGASSIZ of Harvard university has never received any salary for his services to the museum of comparative zoology. Between 1871 and 1897 he has expended $750,000 of his private means without making any communication concerning it to President Eliot. He is now in the southern Pacific ocean making deep sea explorations for the university collections.

IN the Austrian court it is contrary to custom for perishable articles to appear twice on the imperial table. The result is large perquisites for the attendants. If one man falls all uncorked bottles, to another the wine left in the glasses, to another the joints, and to another still the game or the sweets. Every morning a sort of market is held in the basement of the palace, where the Viennese come to purchase the remains.

IT is an Italian doctor who specially recommends laughter as a cure for modern ills. The diseases influenced by a hearty langh are numerous and range from bronchitis to anaemia. It will be interesting to see how the treatment is effected. A course of tickling is prescribed for bronchitis, for example; a course of farcical comedies might suit an anaemic patient; while puns, fired off at intervals, would be found efficacious in cases of pleurisy.

GEN. BOULANGER'S famous black horse Tunis has met an ignominious death. After the flight of Boulanger the animal passed from hand to hand, and finally descended to the inglorious service of drawing a cab through the streets of Paris. This proved too much for Tunis and he was sold to Armand Declogue, a well known dealer in horseflesh, by whom he was duly slaughtered, cut up and sold for stewing purposes in the market place of St. Anne.

AMONG the glaciers found in the Rocky mountains is Grasshopper glacier, which derives its name from the enormous quantity of grasshopper remains that are found on and in the glacier. Periodically the grasshoppers take their flight southward, and must cross the mountains. Their favorite route seems to be across the wide glacier, and in the passage scores of thousands of them succumb to the rigor of cold and wind, fall helpless upon the snow and are finally entombed in the ice.

ALL sorts and conditions of people patronize the Paris Mont de Piete, or municipal pawnshop. A report just issued shows that among the borrowers last year were 8,500 working people, 8,497 employes, 6,564 merchants, tradesmen and manufacturers, and 3,019 representatives of the liberal professions. Rentiers, who live on their dividends, frequently seek the help of the friendly Mont, and 2,209 of this class are among the borrowers. The institution is looked upon more as in the nature of a bank than is the pawnshop.

THE Vanderbilt bequests are subject to a war tax of from $2.25 to $15 on each $100. The tax is $2.25 for each $100 on amounts of $1,000,000 left to a brother or lineal descendant, and $15 for each $100 of sums bequeathed to strangers in blood or a body politic or the corporation. It is estimated that the national government will receive between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, according to present calculations, from the Vanderbilt estate. In addition to this, the state will collect an inheritance tax. The state will receive about $70,000 from the estate, which is valued at $70,000,000.

SIEGE OF LADYSMITH.

Dispatches From South Africa Tend to Show That the British Are Holding Ably.

CONFIDENCE IN GEN. WHITE'S ABILITY.

There Are Signs of Greatly Increased Boer Activity in Natal and on the Western Frontier.

The Boers' Bombardment of Ladysmith Has Been to some Extent Effective—The British Have Plenty of Lyddite Ammunition.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Monday morning's news from the seat of war in South Africa continues fairly satisfactory. The official cables are not very detailed with regard to the Belmont incident which, except for the loss of Col. Keith-Falconer, was not a very serious affair.

There are signs of greatly increased Boer activity in Natal and along the western frontier. All the dispatches tend to show that the British are holding ably. Col. Baden-Powell reports that all was well at Mafeking on November 6. Ladysmith's latest date is November 9. While nothing averse is heard from the latter point, and confidence is felt in Gen. White's ability, previous experience having shown that the Boer artillery is not very effective, it is beginning to prove that the acquisition of artillery which has destroyed the former mobility of the Boer forces, has also failed to give them any compensating advantage. On the contrary the reverse is the case. It is held here that, if the Boers had not been hampered by the transport of heavy guns and their rescue from tight places, Gen. Joubert might ere this, have been in Pietermaritzburg. Unless the Boer heavy artillery justifies itself by reducing Ladysmith it will again hamper him in the eventual retreat from Natal when Gen. Buller sends the relieving force. It is believed that the Boer retreat will be made over the Drakensburg range into the Zoutpansberg district, where every preparation for provisioning and maintaining the Boers is said to have been made for the last stand, and where it will be difficult to dislodge them. Already it is rumored that they are in straits for food around Ladysmith, and may, therefore, be obliged to abandon the siege.

Dispatches from Estcourt say it has been ascertained that the British have laid concrete beds for firing the lyddite naval guns showing that there is no foundation for the fear that the lyddite ammunition at Ladysmith has been exhausted. It is also reported from the same quarter that some fires have been seen in Ladysmith, indicating that the Boer bombardment has been to some extent effective. A special dispatch from Cape Town confirms the earlier report that it was Gen. Buller who ordered the British evacuation of Stormberg and Naauwpoort as he considered the frontier line too weak and too much extended.

It is understood, however, that Naauwpoort will be occupied again as soon as the advance from Queenstown is ordered. Strong bids are being made by the Boers for the support of the Cape Dutch, but without much success, although it is believed that the Dutch farmers, especially in Piequetberg district, are armed with Mausers and are watching the course of events before joining the Boers. From Stormberg it is reported that the Free State forces are working slowly toward Dordrecht with a view of attacking Queenstown and cutting off the towns in the northern districts of Cape Colony. The wounded are recovering in a remarkable manner. The Mauser wounds are small and heal rapidly. Many of the wounded apply for permission to return to the front.

The fact that the latest two official dispatches were received from Gen. Sir Forestier Walker, and not from Gen. Buller, seems to indicate that the latter may have already left Cape Town. A Brussels telegram asserts that he has actually reached Durban. This is certainly premature, but he may have started.

An unofficial statement is published that the troop ship Gascon, soon after her arrival at Cape Town, left for Durban and Delagoa bay.

The Stringency in the Money Market.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 10.—The first abstract of votes by counties received at the secretary of state's office Thursday indicate that A. W. Patrick, dem., may have been elected lieutenant governor. The abstracts from the vote in Warren and Greene were received and in two counties Caldwell ran 700 behind Nash, and Patrick 700 ahead of McLean.

Patrick carried Franklin county by 50, while Nash carried it by 1,700. Patrick carried Tuscarawas county by 800 and Nash by 200. In Cuyahoga county Patrick was away ahead of McLean.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 10.—The statisticians at the republican headquarters have been busy all day Wednesday and Wednesday night endeavoring to secure some accurate figure on the plurality of Judge Nash, the republican candidate for governor, and Wednesday night an unofficial table of pluralities by counties was completed. This shows that in 57 counties Nash, rep., has 84,399 over McLean, dem., and in 31 counties McLean has 34,035 over Nash. This gives Nash over McLean in the state 49,502. It is not believed the official returns will make any important change in these figures.

The republican figures on the legislature are: House—republicans, 62; democrats, 44; doubtful, 2. Senate—republicans, 18; democrats, 11; doubtful, 2.

THE VOTE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The Unofficial Footings of the Returns Show That the Republican Plurality For Treasurer Is 106,215.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—Complete figures from every county in the state, nearly all of them unofficial footings of the returns, show that the plurality of Barrett, republican candidate for state treasurer, over Creasy, democrat, is 106,215.

The full vote was: Barnett, rep., 436,790; Creasy, dem., 330,573; Caldwell, pro., 16,863. Total vote, 784,226, a slight increase over the vote for state treasurer in 1897, and 185,941 less than the vote for governor last year. Barnett was the victim of considerable cutting, he falling about 28,200 votes below Brown, the republican candidate for supreme court judge. Barnett carried 49 of the 67 counties. His pluralities in the two larger counties of Philadelphia and Allegheny were 69,543 and 14,709 respectively.

TYLER, Tex., Nov. 10.—United States Senator James K. Jones, chairman of the democratic national committee, is in this city. Upon being asked as to election results, the senator said he was satisfied and was not altogether surprised, though he did not look for quite such a republican majority in Ohio. The senator and Mrs. Jones will leave in a day or two for Washington.

The Nebraska Vote.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 11.—Complete returns from 87 of the 90 counties in the state give Holcomb, fusion, 103,951; Reese, rep., 99,259, a fusion majority of 13,692. Remaining counties, based on last year's vote, will make the fusion majority in the state 14,000. Fusionists elect Neville to congress in the Sixth district.

TARLAC TAKEN.

Col. Bell's Regiment and Small Force of Cavalry Met No Opposition.

Gen. Lawton's Headquarters is Still at Cabanatuan—The Whereabouts of Gen. Young, With Cavalry and Infantry, Not Known.

MANILA, Nov. 13.—Col. Bell's regiment and a small force of cavalry entered Tarlac Saturday night without opposition. Where Aguinaldo, with his army and the so-called government have fled is a mystery.

Gen. MacArthur and Gen. Lawton closed in on Tarlac. Communication with distant points is impossible, except by means of the government wire, which is crowded with official business.

Gen. MacArthur took Bamban Saturday. This is supposed to be the strongest position held by the Filipinos except Tarlac.

The brief accounts of the engagement received indicate that the rebels fought according to their recent tactics, retreating after firing a few volleys. One officer of the 36th regiment is the only American reported killed. Gen. MacArthur began his advice at daylight, Col. Smith with the 17th regiment on the right, Maj. Hall's command and the 36th on the left and the 9th in the center.

Col. Smith encountered a small force at 6 o'clock Saturday easily dispersing the rebels. Maj. Bell secured a position on the mountain from which he poured an enfilading fire from rifles and Hotchkiss guns upon the first line of the enemy's trenches. The Filipinos stood the fire for 20 minutes and then retreated to the mountains. Gen. MacArthur entered Bamaban at 10 o'clock Saturday and Col. Smith occupied Capas the first town beyond.

Gen. Lawton's headquarters is still at Cabanatun.

Gen. Young, with his cavalry and infantry, is still pushing ahead through the fearful mud, but his exact whereabouts is not known.

When Col. Bell left Capas, ten miles from Tarlac, at 1 o'clock Saturday he intended merely to reconnoiter. He had with him the 36th infantry, Slaven's scouts, troop E, of the 4th cavalry, a battalion of the 22d regiment and Gatling guns.

The scouts, mounted, preceded the main body up the railroad. They met a hundred rebels at Murcia, but the insurgents quickly retreated. The scouts found the depot burning, but extinguished the fire and saved the building.

The main column marched up the wagon road, but before reaching Tarlac divided, entering the town on two sides at 8 o'clock without a shot being fired. The insurgents had vacuated the place only a few hours before, setting fire to the railway station and the rolling stock.

They left a rear guard of 400 men, who, however, failed to make a stand and cover the retreat of the main force of insurgents, as they had probably been ordered to do.

The rebel ordnance is reported to have been shipped to the town of O'Donnell.

The Americans are continuing their advance so rapidly that the insurgents have not the time necessary to destroy the railroad.

One Man Killed and Three Injured.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 13.—A double-headed Pittsburgh & Lake Erie freight train of 55 loaded coal cars crashed into the caboose of another train at McKee's rocks Sunday night and piled the wreckage up high. Three men were in the caboose. One of them was taken out dead. Another had one foot crushed and both legs broken and a third was so badly injured that he may die. By some it is thought that another man, an unknown, probably a tramp who was stealing a ride, was also killed.

Bloody Battle Fought.

Six hundred and fifty persons were killed or wounded.

The attending physicians think all the injured will recover.

THE TENNESSEE REGIMENT.

It Arrives at San Francisco From the Philippines and Receives a Hearty Welcome Home.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—The Tennessee regiment Col. Childers commanding, arrived here from the Philippines Saturday, and were royalty welcomed by the committee of Tennesseans, who arrived a few days ago, and the citizens of San Francisco.

The Tennessee volunteers landed Sunday and went into camp at the Presidio preparatory to being mustered out.

In an interview Sunday, Col. Childers said:

"I have a very high regard for Gen. Otis and his ability as a soldier and a statesman. He has held a most difficult position, and I think he has handled it well. Of course he could have slashed in and laid the islands waste with fire and sword, but to do this without an effort first to show the natives that the United States wished to give them a fair, just and liberal government would have forever prevented American relations and it would have become a question of extermination and recolonization. The islands are too far away for such a policy, even if humanity and self-interest did not forbid.

"In my opinion a force of 75,000 to 100,000 men is needed to promptly and successfully settle this. This force will have to be retained until those who are friendly and take the oath of allegiance to the United States are strong enough to protect themselves, otherwise the natives will come down from the mountains, destroying the lives and property of all who are 'trailers,' as they would call them. I think local affairs should, as far as possible, be left in the hands of the natives."

Corp. L. B. Price, of the Tennessee volunteers, was killed shortly before the regiment left the islands under peculiar circumstances. He was subject to fits and somnambulism, and was in the habit of sleeping with a red cloth around his head to protect it from insects. One night while asleep he wandered by the line, and as he was returning he was mistaken for a Filipino by a member of the 6th infantry, who shot him.

THE CHICAGO ANARCHISTS.

The Workmen's Unions of Havana Hold a Meeting Commemorating Their Fate—Many Heated Speeches Were Made.

HAVANA, Nov. 13.—A meeting of the workmen's unions was held to commemorate the fate of the Chicago anarchists, described by the speakers as the "Cnicago martyrs." About 300 persons attended the proceedings at the headquarters of the union. To each was handed a special memorial number of the Jornada, the labor organ. Its leading editorial referred to Lingg, who committed suicide in his cell with a fulminate cartridge as "an immortal, who preferred to blow his head to atoms and thus disappoint his murderous would-be executioners."

It called upon all honest workers to imitate "the martyrs." Many heated speeches were made, the speakers abusing capital and the tyranny of the rich and calling upon workmen to have faith in the future.

Perfect Confidence.

Perfect confidence is desirable between couples engaged to be married, but it is not always that the young woman has as fine an opportunity to establish it as did a Norristown belle, to whom a wealthy bachelor had been paying assiduous attention. After worrying her a good deal about how many young men had been in love with her, and how many she had been attached to, he asked her to marry him, adding:

"Now let there be perfect confidence between us. Keep nothing concealed from me."

"Certainly," replied the giddy girl; "let us have no concealments;" and, jumping up, she snatched the wig he wore from his head and danced around the room with it.—Philadelphia Record.

KENTUCKY VOTE.

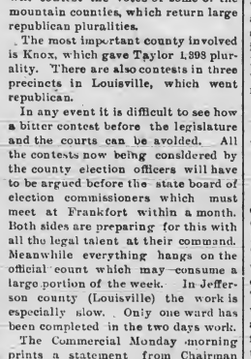
Both Sides Still Claim the Election and a Contest Will Follow.

Goebel Gives No Figures but Says He Is Elected Governor By 155 Plurality—The Republican Chairman Claims Taylor's Election By 3,111.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 13.—The second week of uncertainty regarding the result of the balloting for governor of Kentucky begins with little prospect of immediate relief. The official count has been in progress two days and official returns from a large majority of the 119 counties have narrowed the contest down to a nose finish. Each side claims the election of its ticket, but the estimated plurality of either does not exceed 3,000. While the returns so far received favor Taylor, the result of the count may hinge on the decision given by the county election commissioners in several places where contests have been begun on the ground of alleged irregularities.

One of these contests, that in Nelson county, has been decided adversely to the republicans. It involves 1,198 votes—nearly as many as either side claims as its plurality. Democrats will contest the votes of some of the mountain counties, which return large republican pluralities.

The most important county involved is Knox, which gave Taylor 1,898 plurality. There are also contests in three precincts in Louisville, which went republican.



In any event it is difficult to see how a bitter contest before the legislature and the courts can be avoided. All the contests now being considered by the county election officers will have to be argued before the state board of election commissioners which must meet at Frankfort within a month. Both sides are preparing for this with all the legal talent at their command. Meanwhile everything hangs on the official count which may consume a large portion of the week. In Jefferson county (Louisville) the work is especially slow. Only one ward has been completed in the two days work.

The Commercial Monday morning prints a statement from Chairman George V. Lange, of the republican state campaign committee, claiming a plurality of 3,111 for Taylor.

The Courier-Journal Monday prints a statement from Mr. Goebel, at Frankfort, declaring there is no doubt of his election, but gives no figures, the announcement being made that no returns have been received Sunday night when Goebel's plurality was figured at 155.

ALBERT BECKER HANGED.

The Chicago Wife Murderer Protests His Innocence to the Last—His Case Similar to Adolph Luetgert's.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Albert August Becker, the German butcher, who on January 27 last murdered his wife, Rachel, and afterwards chopped up and boiled the remains in order to dispose of them, was hanged in the county jail at 12:05 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Becker's neck was not broken by the fall and it was 16 minutes before he was pronounced dead.

On the scaffold Becker protested his innocence, and declared George Sutterlin, the father of his second wife, was the real murderer.

The case in many ways bore a remarkable similarity to that of Adolph Luetgert. Both of the condemned men were butchers, and the motive for the crime was the same in both instances, the desire to get rid of the wife in order to marry a younger woman. The manner of committing the crimes was also much the same, both men, according to the testimony, being extremely brutal in the killing and both using the same means to dispose of the body by boiling and burning. It was proven at Becker's trial that after killing his wife he had chopped her body to pieces and boiled the remains on his kitchen stove, afterward burying the remains in various places. As in the case of Luetgert, the rings of the murdered wife played no small part in the testimony leading to the conviction.

MEMPHIS CONFLAGRATION.

Two Warehouses and a Molasses Plant Destroyed, Entailing a Loss of About a Quarter Million Dollars.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 11.—The Planters' warehouse, the Goods-Chickasaw Co.'s warehouse and the plant of the Louisiana Molasses Co., located in Tennessee, Huling and Tolbert streets, were destroyed by fire Thursday night entailing a loss of about $250,000. The two warehouses were filled with merchandise and there was a large stock in the sugar refinery. The estimated value of the merchandise stored in the Planters' warehouse is between $150,000 and $200,000. The Woods-Chickasaw Manufacturing Co.'s stock was worth about $50,000, and the Louisiana Molasses Co. suffered a loss of $10,000. The building of the Planters' warehouse was valued at $35,000, and that of the Woods-Chickasaw Co. at $12,000. These losses do not include five box cars burned and the damage to adjacent property.

When half way across the wild country they were met by three masked men who shot their horses and wounded Mr. Robinson, who it is expected will die. The brothers were bound and the money taken. Bloodhounds are trailing the robbers.

COTTON BALLS IN PARIS.

The Mississippi Commissioner to the Exposition Thinks They Will Prove Quite a Novelty.

MERIDIAN, Miss., Nov. 11.—O. C. King, of this city, commissioner of the state of Mississippi to the Paris exposition in 1900, has arranged there for what promises to be a great novelty in the way of an exhibit from this state. The ceremony was strictly private and of the simplest character, and was performed with the ring according to the nuptial rites of the Catholic church, and including the address of Father Mackin, consumed less than five minutes. The bride was accompanied by Mrs. Washington McLean, her mother, and Mrs. Ludlow, her sister, while Adm. Dewey was accompanied by Lieut. Caldwell, his aide. There were no other guests.

At the close of the ceremony Adm. Dewey grasped Father Mackin's hand and said: "Father, I am greatly pleased to have been married by you, for I know that at one time in your life you were a sailor."

IMPERIALISM, PLAINLY.

The True Import of the Administration's Attitude on the Philippine Question.

Insidious methods are always used for the introduction of that which is void of merit. Under the name of patriotism venality shelters her hideousness, and under the name of liberty crime against God and man is often committed. Mme. Roland once exclaimed: "Oh, liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name!" She was mounting the scaffold steps to execution on the block as one of France's purest patriots. The crime was committed in the name of liberty. The flag is the potential representative of our country. An appeal for its defense quickens every sturdy and generous impulse. On the moment men are ready to do and die that its folds shall not be insulted or its colors dimmed. To trail it in the dust is one of the capital sins. To prostitute it for selfish purposes, to use its significance that personal thrift may follow, is to invite the condemnation of every liberty-loving man. To use it against those who pleaded for its purity and the protection of its character is but little less than sacrilege. In this day it is being used to engraft an imperial policy on our country. In the name of the starry banner an effort is being made to destroy a people which has been under the yoke of tyranny for centuries. It was properly used to drive from the Philippine group of islands the decaying monarchy of Spain. Under its ample folds liberty was enriched. The tyrant was driven from Luzon and all the people of those islands rejoiced. Under its stars and stripes an attempt is being made to reenslave the Filipinos. To them our government says: "You must be dependants. We will inaugurate government for you, and we will enforce the government which we give you. You must not question. You have nothing to do with the matter but to obey. If you claim that another system is better suited to your people you are insurgents—traitors. You do not know what is good for yourselves. The United States does. You shall not become a part of the great republic. You must simply and quietly obey. If a question is asked as to where lies hidden the basic principle on which rests our government we answer: 'Our people are in charge of the destinies of your people. We need these islands, but not to make them sharers of our liberty and participants in the exalted glories we are winning. You are unfitted for the enjoyment of liberty. You are ignorant and debased and need a master. We will be your master and you will be our subjects. In short, we are about to enter on an imperialistic career. We must commence it by enslaving others. You can be made tributary to our aims. We cannot take from our own people a single right which they now enjoy, but we deny to you whatsoever we may. To appeal to our people in a direct manner to become imperialists would be to have our appeal rejected with scorn. We must approach our desire by indirection. You shall be the instrument by which the path to imperialistic power shall be gained. We must practice deception. So, under the plea of patriotism and under the folds of the flag we will destroy the republic and take our place among imperial powers.'"

That answer is not strained. It represents the true state of the intents of the administration of William McKinley.

How long will our people remain deceived? When will their patience tire and revolt? These are questions which will soon be answered.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——Mr. Bryan will continue to have his clothes made with a vest pocket large enough to hold Nebraska.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

——One big mistake Senator Hanna makes in his speeches is to forget that the average American voter has an abnormally developed conscience, and no party has ever been successful that failed to appeal to it in some shape or form.—Atlanta Constitution.

——The preliminary report of the Philippine commission, hastily put together for publication at the president's "request," is obviously issued just now as a first-class campaign document. As such it naturally shares the amiable and well-known infirmities of that species of literature.—N. Y. Post.

——In his political speeches recently Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, has been laboriously demonstrating how far he falls short of the true presidential stature. We have had some small and narrow men in the white house, but let us hope the good sense of the people will never descend to the selection of a political mountebank like Teddy for the chief magistracy.—Houston (Tex.) Post.

——To elect his man Nash, Senator Hanna has urged the republican employers of labor in Ohio to coerce their employes into voting for Nash. The same game elected McKinley in 1896. Then for the first time in the history of the republic the theory was advanced that the employer knew better how to cast the employe's vote than the employe himself did. That's Hannaism. This year they are at it again.—Toledo Bee.

——Mr. Hanna is certainly sincere in his defense of the trusts. He can see in the destruction of competition a great benefit to both the crushers and the crushed. The masses are blind to the good that is coming to them through the curtailment of business and the discharge of hosts of employes, but it is perfectly clear to Mr. Hanna, the statesman for whom Senator Sherman was turned down, and who stands to-day as the head of the republican party.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

TRYING THEIR BEST.

The Administration Using Exceptional Pressure to Carry Imperialist Measures.

In the decision reached by President McKinley and his cabinet advisers to urge upon congress in December the immediate passage of a joint resolution declaring it to be the intention of the government to permanently retain the Philippines, it is evident that the administration proposes to exert all the pressure possible to commit this country to imperialism.

This decision followed a cabinet discussion of a report of the Philippines commission. The report had failed to gratify the president by officially indorsing his Philippine policy. The most that could be obtained from the commission was an utterance to the effect that the war in the Philippines should be vigorously prosecuted until order had been restored. That this stubbornness on the part of the commission proved a keen disappointment to Mr. McKinley may easily be believed. That it also alarmed the president may also be credited.

Hence it is that the administration will bring exceptional pressure to bear on congress to secure the adoption of an imperialist resolution. A personal conference with the president, called by him and held in the white house, failed to bring the Philippines commission to the president's way of thinking on the expansion issue. This result was a somewhat disquieting indication of the trend of public sentiment. It proved also that the imperialists could not afford to take chances with congress. The strongest card in their hand must be played—and it will now be played by the president and his cabinet.

If the American congress truly represents the American people, however, it is doubtful if it will yield to the president on this issue any more readily or to a further extent than did the Philippines commission in merely urging the restoration of order in the Philippines. The people of this country are opposed to imperialism. The president and the administration party are committed to imperialism. The national congress is supposed to represent the people. Many of its republican members are open in their opposition to American expansion into the eastern hemisphere. A faithful congress will mean the rightful triumph of the will of the people over that of the president, the servant of the people.—St. Louis Republic.

CLOSE TIN PLATE MILLS.

Beneficiaries of Protection Fail to Keep Pace with McKinley Prosperity.

Not long ago the president and the vice president of a monopoly combine called the American Tin Plate company appeared before the industrial commission in Washington and told what a beneficent institution the company was. They told how it had put an end to ruinous competition and enabled them to pay right royal wages to the men employed and at the same time sell tin plate cheaper than it was before the passage of the McKinley tariff. Admitting that the company had closed some mills, they said it had opened more than it had closed. They declared that, while it had reduced the number employed in office work, making sales, etc., it had not reduced the number of men employed in making tin plate. It was giving work to as many persons as ever and paying some of them as much as $10 a day, which was vastly more than workers in the same line could earn in Wales. In fine, the combine was doing no end of good and was entitled to gratitude from its employes and the general public.

But what is this we hear from Pittsburgh? A dispatch from that center of protected trust industries states that no less than 106 mills in the 80 plants controlled by the combine (which is not a trust, Mr. Hanna would have us understand) are shut down.

According to the Pittsburgh dispatch this means a loss of labor of nearly $371,000 a month. "Over 2,000 men are idle in the rolling mill department alone and thousands more in other departments."

The managers of the combine seem to have made haste to shut down mills and throw thousands of men out of work as soon as possible after telling the industrial commission what great things they had done for labor and for consumers of tin plate. Like other beneficiaries of protection, they manifest interest in labor chiefly when they are anxious to retain old tariff favors or secure new ones.—Chicago Chronicle.

"Prosperity" the Farmer Gets.

What is the Nebraska farmer's share in the boasted "McKinley prosperity?" Let the farmer carefully note the facts. Since 1898 the articles which the farmer must buy have increased in price as follows: Clothes baskets, 33 1-3 per cent.; galvanized oil cans, 20 per cent.; matches, 50 per cent.; galvanized buckets, 100 per cent.; soap, 15 per cent.; washboards, 50 per cent.; starch, 100 per cent.; salt, 50 per cent.; wire clotheslines, 100 per cent.; barbed wire, 115 per cent.; lumber, 33 1-3 per cent.; nails, 100 per cent.; iron pipe, 115 per cent.; iron castings, 100 per cent.; rolled oats, 35 per cent.; carpet tacks, 60 per cent.; spices, 50 per cent. Let the farmer compare these increases with the difference in the price of his products now and one year ago. The farmer who figuresit out for himself will see that prosperity has come only to the trusts and the profits of the trusts are wrung from the farmers of the nation.—Omaha World-Herald.

——The republican papers and speakers are kept busy defending Hanna from the attacks of members of his own party.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A terrible tragedy occurred Tuesday of last week at the home of Thomas Brock, near Poplar Grove, Owen county, in which Thomas Brock, aged seventy, slew his son, Luther Brock, aged thirty. Both had been to the election, and returned home about 6 o'clock. Mrs. Brock, who was the only witness, says that Mr. Brock was abusing her, and when reproved by Luther he left the room for a minute or more. Luther started out on the porch to close the shutters, at the request of his mother. Mr. Brock, who was standing on the porch, told Luther not to come out there. Luther replied that he simply wanted to close the shutters, and passed on out. While standing at the window Mr. Brock struck him with a knife in the abdomen, inflicting a terrible wound. Luther then walked into the room and told his mother he was dying. She laid him on the bed. Nothing more was seen of the old man, and some think he has taken his own life. Brock was under the influence of liquor.

The following are a few extracts from Judge Tarvin's instructions to the grand jury in regard to the U. S. Marshals and soldiers that were sent to Covington on election day:

"The people of this State," said he, "are not looking to force or to bloodshed as any remedy for wrong that may be committed. That sort of talk comes from the lips of very few people, and those who indulge in it are men who are carried away by their passion of the moment, their excitement or feeling, but the people of the State are looking to constituted authorities, are looking to grand juries, and when the constituted authorities have exhausted their powers and the end is reached, then the people of the Commonwealth will be satisfied and contented, no matter what happens.

"But, gentlemen, on the day of election the city of Covington was as quiet, peaceable and orderly as it has ever been any other time in its history. There was absolutely nothing in this town to justify any person in believing that there would be any riot, any disorder or any bloodshed or any trouble. The civil authorities were in the city, the Circuit Judge was in his room all the day of the election, ready at any moment to exercise all the power of his office in order to bring about a fair election, and to protect the interest of every candidate. The Sheriff and his deputies were here all day, waiting to be called upon.

He declared that the "Marshals have no more right at the polls of a State election than have the officers of the State of Ohio, of Great Britain or Germany, and that they should have been treated as a common enemy.

* * * * *

"I have always felt that the Governor ought not to order troops into the streets of a city like Covington until there was disorder, anarchy and riot in sight, and it was an absolute necessity to send them to save life and property before he did send them here. You can ascertain what representations were made to the Governor in bringing them here. One thing is certainly true, that after they were here they remained illegally and wrongfully. The law doesn't permit a band of armed troops to come into town on election day unless they remain in control of the civil authorities. The law of Kentucky provides that if the Governor sees fit to order a band of troops out he must put them under control of the Sheriff or Mayor.

"These soldiers were not under the control of the Sheriff or Mayor. They did not report to the Mayor or Sheriff or anybody else, but they remained, as far as our information goes, under the control and direction of an ignorant partisan, who had no more right to control them than any of you. They were here unlawfully; every one was a violator of the law and was a menace to the people of Covington. Every step they took upon the streets of this town was a violation of the law. There was never any danger of anything happening at all until they came. When they came here on a prominent, much frequented corner hundreds of men gathered, and that is where the danger was.

"Those United States Marshals and soldiers were in Covington to interfere with and obstruct and prevent a fair election. They were here wrongfully, illegally, unlawfully and oppressively. You have the right to find out who brought them here, and who made these representatives to the Governor, what they did when they got here, who directed them, who told them where to go and what to do. When you have ascertained these facts you have a right to indict every man who had anything to do with putting United States Marshals in Covington on the day of election. The duty devolves upon you. If there be any difference at all it is more important to indict people who throw soldiers and United States Marshals upon a peaceable and helpless community than it is to indict people for election frauds proper."

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1899. NO. 5.

THE news of the death of Congressman Evan E. Settle, of Owenton, was received here last Thursday evening about seven o'clock, his death having occurred about two hours before. Only on the first Monday in this month he addressed a large crowd of Democrats at this place, and endeared himself to all his hearers on that occasion, and the heart of each one was made sad by the report of his death. Mr. Settle had served one term in Congress and had entered upon his second, and no man in this State had a brighter and more promising future unfolding before him than had Evan E. Settle. Besides being an accomplished gentleman he was a man of great ability and but few equaled him on the hustings. The one term he had served his district in Congress achieved for him a national reputation as an orator. He was born in Franklin county, this State, December 1st, 1848. He graduated in the Louisville High School, and chose the law as his profession, and was admitted to the bar at the age of 18 by a special act of the Legislature, he being under age. He served three terms as County Attorney of Owen county, and represented the county twice in the Legislature. He was elected to Congress in 1896 and reelected in 1898. Mr. Settle's death was the result of heart disease and nervous prostration. He had been complaining several days, but no one suspected that his trouble was so serious, and he was thought to be improving when he suddenly became worse and survived but a few hours. He was one of the principal speakers for the Democratic ticket in the campaign that had closed only a few days before his death, and it is thought he overworked himself in the canvass. Boone mingles her tears with those of Owen at the grave of her distinguished son, and condoles with his family.

THEY will have an interesting time up in the Seventh Congressional District selecting candidates to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Congressman Settle. The probable candidates for the Democratic nomination are W. P. Thorn, of Henry county; June Gayle, of Owen; Robert Franklin and Andrew Scott, Franklin and Jas. H. Mulligan, of Fayette. On the Republican side are Geo. Denney, W. C. P. Breckinridge and Chas. J. Johnson, of Fayette and W. C. Owens, of Scott.

ANOTHER Congressional campaign will be waged next fall, and already has Congressman Berry got into the newspapers the announcement that he will make every effort this winter for an appropriation to have the Licking river locked and dammed as far as Falmouth.

THERE are several statesmen in Central Kentucky without jobs, who would now be trying for a Congressional nomination had they not been wabbling so bad politically in recent months. They present a sorrowful sight.

GOV. BRADLEY has called an election for December 18th for the purpose of electing a member of Congress in the Seventh District to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. E. E. Settle.

COMPELLING officers of election to sign returns which they swear are not correct is a new feature in elections, inaugurated by one Judge Tony, of Louisville.

Two or three statesmen in the central part of the State are now kicking themselves for the part they played in the campaign that closed a few days since.

THE settlement of the Samoan question resulted in all concerned getting what they wanted. It is the first settlement of that kind that was ever made.

ONLY about seventy-five counties have sent their official returns to Secretary Chenault of the State Board of Election Commissioners.

THE Governor takes his office December 12th—the remainder of the State officers, January 1st.

IT now looks like the race for Governor will have to be finally settled by the Legislature.

NASH'S official plurality over McLean in Ohio is 49,023.

Editorial Paragraphs.

Governor Bushnell of Ohio has shown how he feels over the election by appointing a Democrat to an office.

The combined vote of Jones and McLean the opposition candidates in Ohio exceeded that of Nash by over 50,000.

It has recently been decided by a New York City judge that Jim Corbett is an actor and not a pugilist. There will be no appeal from this judgment. The public reached the same conclusion some time ago.

From all accounts the election in Maryland left some deep seated political heartaches, which bear all the traces of being incurable.

When the size of the Republican majority in Pennsylvania is taken into consideration it is hard to understand just what the Philadelphia Republicans would want with repeaters, and yet a number were arrested at the last election in that city.

The Administration at Washington no longer disguises its intention of taking part in the ultimate partition of China. Shades of Washington and Jefferson what new insanity will McKinley develop?

General Wheeler writes from the Philippines that he will be home to take his seat in Congress. The jealousy of General Otis has apparently deprived this brave old leader of the opportunity he has sought to subdue the enemies of his country, but none, the less, his thousands of friends in the United States know his worth and esteem him highly.

Senator Hoar feels sorry for his party. He is not alone in his grief, since that Illinois chrysanthemum, Billy Mason, also thinks he must flock by himself.

Senator Wellington congratulated Governor-elect Smith on his triumph. The prospective Governor is now in a position to exclaim: "Deliver me from my friends."

Once more the sapient Otis and the indefatigable Wheaton have been foiled by Aguinaldo. At the present rate of progress peace will be established in the Philippines about the same time discovery is made of the identity of the man who struck Billy Patterson.

Up to date Aguinaldo has had no opportunity for a jollification. He must find his amusement in playing hide and seek with Otis's troops.

Wriggle whichever way they may the fact remains indisputable that the Republican party is wedded to imperialism. So many spouses has the G. O. P. that it is likely to be expelled from Washington for polygamous alliances.

That was a facetious message the Spaniards in banquet at Madrid sent to Premier Salisbury, after learning of the capture of the Gloucesters and the Dublin Fusiliers by the Boers in which the Dons said: "Upon the occasion of this disaster the dead nations salute you." This is a case of "chickens coming home to roost" with a vengeance, since it will be recalled that the defeat of Toral at Santiago, Lord Salisbury made an address in which he referred to Spain as a "dying nation."

Speaker Reed may have ruled Congress with an iron hand, but it is dollars to doughnuts that he is vanquished in his first "go" with his janitor of his New York flat.

General Ludlow is back from Cuba and declares that schools, not foils, are needed in the island. How will this comport with McKinley's sword-point idea of carrying civilization to our national wards?

With Rear Admiral Schley ordered to command the South Atlantic squadron it would seem as though the Administration is carrying the Sampson-Schley war into Africa.

A Tennessee squire is said to have used these words in tying a matrimonial knot: "Wilt thou take her for thy pard, for better or worse, to have to hold, to fondly guard, until hauled off in a hearse? Wilt thou let her have her way, consult her many wishes, make the fire every day and help her wash the dishes? Wilt thou comfort and support her father, mother, aunt Jemima and uncle John, three sisters and a brother? And his face grew pale and blank; it was too late to jilt as to the floor he sank, and he said, 'I wilt.'"

VICE-PRESIDENT HOBART died Tuesday after a long spell of sickness.

THE Jefferson County Election Commissioners will complete their work today, and then everything will be up to the State Board.

VALUABLE COINS.

Though at present there are 1,000,000,000 copper cents in circulation throughout this country, the Philadelphia mint has to turn out 4,000,000 a month to accommodate the demand. Ten big bags of copper represent a $100 bill.

There are no mint marks on copper coins and nickels, and collectors pay high for coins bearing a mint mark. The first cents struck for circulation bear the date 1793 and the six varieties sell from $2 50 to $6 25 apiece.

The $5 gold piece of 1832 is very rare. There was supposed to be but two in existence, one in Philadelphia, the other in Boston, but a short time ago one was found in a money changer's shop in New York.

In Texas some nine years ago a silver shekel was found dating back to 142 B. C. Intrinsically it is worth about half a dollar, but collectors put a price of $5,000 on it.

One of the earliest coins known is a didrachm of Aegina, coined in 700 B. C. It is worth in money value 30 cents, but sells to collectors for $7.

Only five of the New York doubloons coined in 1787 remain. On one side of this coin is a picture of the sun rising over a mountain surrounded by the words, "Nova Eberaca Columbia Excelsior." Below is the designer's name. "Brashear." The coins are worth about $500 each.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier.]

The receipts of the Grant County Building, Loan and Saving Association on last Monday night were $1,873,93.

Coal is now 15 cents per bushel in Williamstown, due, it is said, to the stage of the water in the Ohio river.

Shall it be electric lights, or no lights at all? That is a serious question that confronts every property owner in Williamstown.

The first delivery of the 1899 crop of tobacco was made at Dry Ridge Tuesday by Joseph Chance. The crop was purchased by N. Webster at a round price of 7¼ cents.

County Court day was quite a busy day in Williamstown. One of the largest crowds ever seen in Williamstown congregated on the streets, in the places of business and overflowed into the vacant lots and suburbs. A good day's business was done in all lines of trade. Politics was the main theme of general discussion and every body was interested. County Court day in Williamstown is a typical institution. We doubt if there is a town in the State as small as Williamstown where as large crowds gather once a month as at this place. The business in the county court proper was very small.

The large stock barn of Ace Franks at Stewartsville was burned to the ground on Wednesday morning at seven o'clock. The barn was a large, new, modern stock barn and was full of stock, hay grain, farming implements and lumber. Two corn cribs adjoining the barn were also burned and with them about 75 barrels of corn. The loss in the barn included a nice young mare that Mr. Franks used for his own driving mare and a young fillie belonging to John Blaine. Also one mule colt. The loss on building is about $700 with $300 insurance and the loss on contents including $200 worth of weatherboarding is fully $800 with only a small policy of insurance. The farm hands had been to the barn and had fed and watered their stock and gone back to breakfast when the fire was discovered. No one knows how the fire caught or the cause.

FROM GALLATIN COUNTY.

Independent

T. Jeff Winn, who resides on the old Payne place above town, has bought the farm of Wm. Washmuth, near Craigs creek, of about 55 acres for $1,713 27.

Payne & White, our tobacco buyers, shipped 14 hogsheads of tobacco to the Cincinnati market Tuesday, which winds up their purchase of last season.

Thos. C. Jack, who moved from Big Bone Springs, Boone county, to St. Louis, about a year ago, has moved to Sheridan, Ind., where he will make his home with relatives.

J. R. Brown, jr., has bought the farm of W. E. Crouch on Dry creek, consisting of 145 acres for $3,050. Mr. Crouch and family speak of moving to Oklahoma next spring.

Capt. Ben Wiley, who conducts the Warsaw and Indiana ferry, purchased the gasoline boat Kentucky Home, from O. J. Harris, of Rising Sun, last week for $550 and is using the boat for the purpose of ferrying between these two points.

Dr. Adolphus Sayre and Messrs. Ayres and Crutcher, of Bullittsville Boone county, were here Thursday enjoying a hunt in Gallatin county. They secured 20 birds, 36 rabbits and a gray eagle measuring 5 feet 2 inches. They were assisted by the thoroughbred Beagle hounds of Wm. Batterson.

J. Wesley Kefler, who resides on Paint Lick, near the church, met with a very serious loss about 3 o'clock, Monday morning, when his large barn, with all of its contents was destroyed by fire, from some unaccountable cause. In the barn were three horses, twenty bushels of wheat, corn, hay, fodder, tobacco, farming implements, etc., all of which were consumed by the flames. He carried no insurance.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

The rural free delivery system will receive considerable attention in the forthcoming report of First Assistant Postmaster-General Heath. The State of Indiana has a larger area now covered by rural delivery carriers than any other State in the Union, while Ohio comes second and California third. The best service in the country is said to be in the vicinity of Crawfordsville, Ind., which will be discussed in the report with illustrations. Much encouragement has been given to the department by the people of Indiana in establishing the service. The local authorities have shown their appreciation of it by spending money liberally for improving the highways. In one instance a community in Indiana paid $2,600 for improving a road to put into condition to facilitate the travel of the carriers. It is not likely that there will be any further extensions of rural free delivery until Congress makes another appropriation. The routes already established and those ordered will take up about all of the appropriation of $300,000 made by the last Congress for this service. The department does not wish to have a deficit. The great objection that has been urged against rural free delivery was that the carriers could not cover a sufficient area in a day to make rural delivery practicable. The department will be able to show some very good results in this line this year. On one route in the Santa Clara valley of California a carrier made forty miles in one day, and gave a satisfactory service along the entire route.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

The Owenton Roller Mill is taxed to its utmost capacity, running day and night.

More wheat has been sown in the county this fall than in many a year. The acreage is nearly double that of last year.

The well diggers have not been able to strike any water since the first vein of water about 30 feet below the surface. They are now about 200 feet in depth.

Owen county polled within 231 votes of the 1896 vote, when 4,631 votes were polled; this year 4,418 votes were polled. There are 5,000 in Owen county, and next year she will reach this mark.

Bub Hutcheson, son of J. P. Hutcheson, returned from Cuba Monday night. He has been a member of the 15th, U. S. Infantry, stationed near Havana. He hasn't much of an opinion of the Cuban's and he complains a great deal of flys, gnats, and fleas, says they make life miserable.

Mr. Thos. Brock, who killed his son, Luther Brock, last Tuesday night, was found the next morning about 3 o'clock in an almost frozen condition. He was taken home and lies there now in a most critical condition. As soon as able he will be brought to Owenton for trial.

[Herald.]

The Owen County Fair Company has declared a ten per cent. dividend, which is a remarkably good showing.

Two ministers of the Latter Day Saints have been in and around the Wheatly community for several weeks. No encouragement has been given them and they had much trouble finding lodging places.

Judge W. Bower Roberts, an intense Republican, has a horse that does not agree with him politically. The Judge drove to town a few days ago, and wishing to show his enthusiasm stuck a U. S. Flag on his horse's head, left him on the street and went around to hear the news. No sooner had the animal seen the flag than he began to run, and not until the buggy was considerably damaged could he be stopped.

It ruins a piano to keep it standing in a draft.

Bruised clover kept among furs frighten moths away.

Never let a child sob itself to sleep.

Sponge black silk with spirits to revive it.

Whiting and lime juice clean ivory knife handles.

The busy housewife should get an hour's sleep in the afternoon.

Apply arnica to a bruise if the skin is unbroken. It broken wash the bruise and apply vaseline.

Glycerine and lemon juice in equal proportions whiten the hands.

A hot bath taken at night affords refreshing sleep.

Lemons stowed separately in dry sand keep fresh.

Crawl out of a room where there are smoke and fire. If possible, hold a wet towel to your face while escaping.

Brush a baby's hair, but do not comb it.

Mr. McKinley now professes to feel a greater weight of responsibility. There can be no doubt that the country is feeling the weight of the burden he has placed upon it.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

UP GO PRICES.

[Maysville Bulletin.]

The trusts are reaping a rich harvest these days.

The advance in many of these articles needed by the farmer is startling, so great has it been in the past year. The same is true also of a great many other lines of goods.

You don't have to go away from Maysville, however, to obtain figures showing how the grasping combines are enriching themselves at the expense of the people. The advance in prices has been especially unprecedented on goods used by the farmers. Here are some figures obtained from Maysville merchants who handle the articles named, showing the prices a year ago and the present price:

	1898 prices.	Present prices.
Barbed fencing wire	$1.75	$4.50
Smooth wire	1.50	3.50
Galvanized wire	2.00	4.00
Shovels	.60	1.00
Steel wagon tire	1.75	3.50
Axes	.50	.90
Horseshoes (per keg)	2.50	4 00
Scythe blades	.50	1.00

Farm wagons costs from $5 to $10 more than a year ago; disc harrows from $10 to $25; disc drills, $7.50; plows, 25 per cent.; steel roofing, 33⅓ per cent; mowers have advanced $7 and binders $10; steel buggy tires have advanced 150 per cent.; steel axels, 100 per cent.; steel buggy springs, 125 per cent; wire nails, $1.25 to $2.60; cut nails, $1.05 to $2.20.

As startling as these prices are, the trusts are contemplating a still further increase. One of the local merchants last week received the following from the leading iron trade journal:

New York, Oct. 30th, '99.

Gentlemen:—Be kind enough to advise us whether the High Prices on goods which have been heavily advanced causes much objection on the part of buyers, or interferes to any important extent with their sale.

We ask this as it has an influential bearing on the probable course of the market. Very truly yours,

C. A. HEADLY,
Hardware Merchant.

"That letter," remarked the local merchant, "simply means that the trusts are going to still further pile up the prices, if they see the trade will stand it. It's outrageous,—infamous. I wish you had seen the answer I sent to this iron trade journal. I told it that farmers had to a large extent quit buying fencing wire, on account of the high price.

What is true of the advance in the articles above mentioned is also true in most every other line of trade.

Clothing has advanced, so have boots and shoes, dress goods, cottons and groceries. Here's an advertisement taken from a Cincinnati paper Friday. "Groceries are advancing. Every day we get notices of an advance in price on almost everything in our line. We have advised our customers from time to time to lay in their supplies. Many of them have taken advantage, but those who have not had better get in quick."

And so the thing goes. Trusts and combines are flourishing, but workmen's wages have not been advanced and farm products, with one or two exceptions, probably, are bringing about the same old prices.

Ex-Senator Washburn, the distinguished Minnesota Republican, in a recent article against trusts, sounds this warning:

"Individualism, as against combinations, must survive or the Republic will have lost its meaning and its mission. No men should be put in office who are in sympathy with trusts or trustmakers. The people can easily identify these men, and if the voters are properly aroused there will be no doubt of what they will do."

An increasingly great problem in agriculture is the insect problem; and it is now known that the depredating insects, in order to be fought successfully, have to be fought all the season through. "In cornfields, leaving the stumps in the ground throughout the winter offers a premium for the increase of insects. Such pests as cut worms can be easily kept in check by fall plowing and burning the butts and roots, and by this same course a good effect looking in the direction of destruction will also be produced as against the corn-root-louse and similar pests."—Home and Farm.

SENATOR CLARK, of Montana, will build a splendid summer residence in Hawaii. He has large investments there and says the climate is ideal for a summer home.

IT has been found that an apparatus for killing animals with chloroform in England would not work in India, because the high temperatnre prevented the concentration of the chloroform vapor. That this was the cause was proved by the fact that by placing ice in the box the animals were readily killed.

MRS. JOUBERT is rather an educated woman for a Boer vrouw and as a girl was remarkable for her musical accomplishments. She is known to have possessed one of the first pianos ever seen in Pretoria. She, like her friend, Mrs. Kruger, revels in domesticity and once bonsted that she had always cooked her husband's Sunday dinner.

GEORGE WYNDHAM, the under secretary of state for war in Great Britain, though only 35 years old, has been in parliament several years and has won a reputation as a strong debater. He entered the army in his twentieth year and saw hard service in Africa. He has also found time to edit an edition of "Plutarch," as well as a volume of Shakspeare's poems.

IT is a common experience among mountain climbers to find butterflies lying frozen on the snow and so brittle that they break unless they are very carefully handled. Such frozen butterflies, on being taken to a warmer climate, recover themselves and fly away. Six species of butterflies have been found within a few hundred miles of the north pole.

CONFEDERATE veterans of New Orleans are planning to purchase Beauior, Jefferson Davis's Mississippi home, for an industrial farm for ex-confederate soldiers who are still able to do light work. The organization has received an intimation that Mrs. Davis desires to sell the property, that she may invest in real estate in New Orleans and make that city her home.

PRESIDENT KRUGER, who has been wedded twice, chose both his wives from the Du Plessis family, which is not only one of the oldest in South Africa (its founder having gone to the Cape in the seventeenth century), but the family to which Richelieu belonged. Mr. Kruger by his first marriage had one child, who died young. By his second wife he had 16 children. His grandchildren number 104.

IN London and Paris some very fashionable weddings have recently taken place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Three of the most fashionable brides in New York have had no bridesmaids. Perhaps this was due to the fact that there were no bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Julia Dent Grant and Prince Cantacuzene. There is as much a fashion in bridesmaids as there is in floral decorations, and the cut and shape of the wedding gown.

BOLTON STAFFORD BIRD, the new premier of Tasmania, presents the rare sight of a congregationalist clergyman at the head of a British colony. Fifty-nine years old and a native of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, he settled in Hobart in 1879, as a minister of that city's leading congregationalist church. Three years later he entered parliament and later became colonial treasurer. He has represented Tasmania in two Australian federal conventions.

LADIES who go shopping have little idea of the cost of their trip, even in such a minor detail as the cost of paper for the packages they have sent home. A Baltimorean has recently compared the weight of paper with the food supplied to the purchaser. In one day's purchases it is said that the paper wrapping amounted to about 10 per cent. of the total. In a list of supplies costing about $1.40 he found that the paper which was weighed with the provisions cost 14¾ cents.

THE queen of the Belgians was brought up in her father's castle at Pesth amid surroundings and customs which remind one of the feudal ages. At night her father himself descended the great staircase to lock the outer gate and door of the principal hall. This hall was divided into two parts, one end being raised a little above the other. At the elevated end the daughters of the house sat at their needlework or painting or music, while their attendants sat at the lower end of the hall.

COLLIS P. HUNTINGTON, after a fight of a life-time, has finally succeeded in getting absolute control of the single gateway to San Francisco and the South California coast. He and his friends are now in complete possession of the great Southern Pacific and Central Pacific systems, which, under the plan of reorganization recently successfully accomplished, have become one organization. Under the terms of this plan the great government debt of $58,812,715 was liquadated without any distnrbance of the financial world.

THE guillotine is just now homeless. Some months ago the municipal council, in obedience to the powerful interests of property owners, decreed that public executions should no; longer take place in the Sqnare de la Roquette, but the choice of another place was postponed for a time. It is now stated that the authorities have on their hands an accumulation of criminals awaiting execution. The aldermen are at a loss to know where the ghastly machine may be erected. So far every proposal of a new place has met fierce opposition from the citizens of Paris.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The Commissioner Reviews the Progress of Affairs in the Service.

Over 2,000 Persons Are Employed in the Indian service—The Policy is to Employ Indians in Every Position to Which They Are Fitted.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The annual report of the commissioner of Indian affairs, William A. Jones, besides reviewing the progress of affairs in all branches of the service, urges more systematic methods, study of individual traits and consideration of subsequent environment in outlying studies in the Indian schools. The entire educational system of the Indian office, he says, is predicated upon the final abolishment of the anamalous Indian reservation system.

There are now 20,522 boys and girls in attendance in the various Indian schools of an enrollment of over 20,000.

The Indian population from which these are taken, being 181,000, while the population has remained stationary there has been such a steady increase in the number of the Indians being educated as to warrant the opinion that the next quarter century will witness, not a diminution of the Indian population, but an extinguishment of Indian tribes.

One discouraging factor however, is disclosed by the unsatisfactory results of the past nine years' trial of co-education of the Indians with the whites in the public schools. The report says the results of this co-education are not commensurate with the expenditnre; that the idea theoretically is an admirable expedient for breaking down prejudices and civilizing the Indian but the figures show it is not an unqualified success.

The full blood, who needs such contact most, is rarely secnred, and the groundwork, at least, of Indian education, must be laid under the government's auspices and control. Stronger measures for forcing the attendance on Indian schools are urged. There are 2,562 employes in the Indian service and the policy is to employ Indians in every position to which they are adapted by nature and education.

A thorough and exhaustive investigation of the Seminoles in Florida has resulted in the discontinuance of the offices of industrial teacher and other employes, and no school will be established for them at present, their real and fancied wrongs having embittered them against governmental assistauce.

Concerning the Indian territory, the report severely arraigns nepotism, lack of management and demoralized conditions and a deplorable state of affairs generally in administering the schools and orphan asyinms of the five Indian nations.

Opt of 21 boarding schools not more than four of the superintendents are competent to teach the ordinary English branches, and financial mismanagement is especially complained of. Reporting on the Chippewa outbreak of last autumn, Commissioner Jones says:

"For many years Chippewas have been arrested and taken from their homes to St. Paul and other points as witnesses or as offenders, chiefly in whisky cases. Often wholesale arrests have been made solely for the fees which would accrue to the officials. Indians have been helped to obtain whisky by the very ones who arrested them for using it.

"In some cases Indians carried off to court have been left to get back home as best they could. The whole matter of arrests by the deputy marshals have come to a farce, a fraud and hardship to the Chippewas and a disgrace to the community."

The Chicago Orchestra, Theodore Thomas, Leader, Declines the Invitation to Attend the Paris Exposition.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The Chicago orchestra, under the leadership of Theodore Thomas, has decided to decline the invitation of the directors of the Paris exposition to attend that show in 1900. In a letter addressed to Edourado Colonne, chairman of the board of directors, Theodore Thomas declares that as an American citizen he is a lover of justice and liberty and can not consistently visit the French capital.

Mr. Thomas freely admits that the verdict in the Dreyfus case was responsible for his determination to remain away from the exposition.

The Peacemaker Killed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—During a fight Saturday night between Charles F. Ormsby and George F. Barnes, Charles F. Golway, 28 years of age, who attempted to act as peacemaker, was hit a severe blow on the chin, knocking him down. The fall caused a fracture of the skull, from which he died early Sunday morning. The fatal blow, it is said, was struck by Ormsby, although he denies all knowledge of snch act. He has been locked up and a charge of murder entered against him.

LIFE INSURANCE.

Decision Rendered by the Internal Revenue Bureau Commissioner—Policies That Are Free From War Tax.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Commissioner Wilson, of the internal revenue bureau, has rendered an important decision in which he holds in effect that the policies of life insurance companies which are exempt from taxation under the war revenue act are only such as are issued by fraternal societies or orders; beneficiary societies or orders; farmers' purely local co-operative companies or associations; and employes' relief associations operated on the lodge system or local co-operative plan, and that the exemption does not apply to the policies of life insurance issued by mutual insurance companies, per se, although they may have features of mutality. A further restriction imposed by the law on the exempted companies is that they shall not be conducted for profit." The commissioner says in part:

"I am of the opinion that it was the intention of congress to exempt from taxation policies of life insurance issued by fraternal societies or orders, and beneficiary societies or orders which are operated on plans similar to the lodge or ritualistic form.

"It surely can not be said that a mutual life insurance company is a fraternal society or order, or can it be said that a mutual life company is a beneficiary society or order, although fraternal and beneficiary societies may be mutual.

"This office holds that all insurance companies that are doing business on the old line or fixed premium plan, where policies are issued for a given, definite, fixed or stated premium, payable or capable of being estimated in advance, in so far as determining the the question of taxation on their policies is concerned, are organized and conducted for profit, whether the premium is paid by assessment or not."

A FATHER'S CRIME.

A Chicago Man Shoots Four of His Children, Three of Whom Are Dead, Then Commits Suicide.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Carrying out a plot he had apparently planned with deliberation, Cornelius Corcoran, Friday shot four of his children, killing two of them, and then ended his own life. The tragedy occurred at his home 5401 Dearborn street. The dead: Cornelius Corcoran, 49 years old; Margaret Corcoran, 5 years old, died at Mercy hospital; John Corcoran, 7 years old, died at Mercy hospital; Lizzie Corcoran, aged 3, died at midnight.

The wounded: Kate Corcoran, 14 years old, may die. If she recovers she will lose her left eye.

The police are convinced the man was insane. Corcoran had lived with his seven children in a flat building at 5401 Dearborn street for a month past. To all outward appearance he was a kind and considerate parent. For some days he had plotted for the death of his children, and he nearly accomplished his purpose Tuesday night. Hearing the children cough he arose and in the dark administered landanum to five of them. Clifford, Timothy, John, Margaret and Lizzie. The first two were removed to the Mercy hospital, where Timothy died the next day. Corcoran exhibited such profound grief over the affair that the police and the coroner thought the giving of laudanum was a mistake.

Balked in his purpose to end the lives of the young ones, Corcoran, it is thought, made deliberate plans for his act of Friday.

FIRE IN NEW YORK.

The Building Occupied by the Unexcelled Fireworks Co., Lloyd's Fireworks Co. and E. Bissell & Co., Burning.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Fire broke out at 2:45 a. m. Saturday morning at No. 15 Park Place, in the building occupied by the Unexcelled Fire Works Co., Lloyd's Fire Works Co., and E. Bissell & Co. Three alarms were sent out in quick succession. The entire building is apparently doomed, the upper three stories having already been destroyed.

At 3 a. m. it was impossible to estimate the loss, as the fire was not yet under control.

Dynamite Under His Wife's Bedroom.

JANESVILLE, Wis., Nov. 18.—Fred O'Brien Friday placed a ten-pound stick of dynamite beneath his wife's bedroom. A terrific explosion followed, partly wrecking the house, which is a one-story frame building.

In the two small bedrooms were Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Brien and two small children, and Mrs. Fred O'Brien and child. O'Brien's act is said to be because his wife refused to live with him, she charging cruelty. All the persons in the house escaped injury. O'Brien is now in jail and has confessed, implicating two other men.

Took a Fatal Dose.

GERONA TAKEN.

People of the Town, Who Are of the Better Class, Welcome Americans.

Gerona Will Be Garrisoned With Two Companies of the 36th Regiment, and Gen. MacArthur Will Proceed Toward Bayomboog.

MANILA, Nov. 20.—The following dispatches have been received here from correspondents accompanying the American advance north.

GERONA, Nov. 18.—Gen. MacArthur entered Gerona, as already cabled this evening. The insurgents had fled last Monday, after burning the depot. Nothing else was destroyed by them. Gerona is the first town along the Manila-Dagupan railway line where the natives did not run at the approach of the Americans.

The padres offered quarters in the church and convent. The town has one good house. Gerona is the seat of heavy English sugar interests.

The trip here was a hard one, and occupied six hours in covering seven miles and a half, most of the time being spent in fording a quarter of a mile flood running out of the Rio Tarlac. We have no wagons, and pack mules and native bearers carry all our supplies.

The natives here say that Bayombong was captured last Sunday by mounted troops, probably Gen. Young's brigade of Gen. Lawton's division. The people here are of a better class than we have usually found, and they welcomed the Americans, as they evidently realize that their agricultural interests will revive.

Gen. MacArthur said this afternoon: We seem to be entering a different atmosphere. The people here seem to be less attached to Aguinaldo's cause than those in many towns we have entered on the railroad line.

The command will move northward at daybreak tomorrow toward Bayombong. Gerona will be garrisoned with two companies of the 36th.

Immediately on entering Gerona Slaven's scouts moved up the track toward Panique. On the way they encountered an entrenched party of insurgents whom they drove back, then entering the town and capturing four locomotives and 13 cars, as already cabled. They learned that 500 insurgents had left the town in the course of the afternoon.

PANIQUE, Nov. 18.—Gen. MacArthur's troops arrived from Gerona in the course of the morning. The railroad beyond this point has not been destroyed. The captured railway stock is being repaired to handle supplies. The expedition will go north toward Bayomborg probably to-day. The signal corps are constructing lines with great rapidity.

A native courier from Bayombong reports that the American troops left the town soon after they entered and that many natives remain, although no insurgents.

A continuous procession of refugees is entering Panique from the north, indicating the proximity of other American troops probably off the railroad line. These refugees say that the insurgents have not known which way to turn with the Americans occupying so many places in the north.

Panique is a rich sugar town. Some of the wealthy Chinese and the poorer natives fled at the first approach of our troops, but they are now confidently returning. The rain has ceased, the weather is fine and the country is drying rapidly.

Moncada, 12:30 a. m. Advancing through the enemy's country by train from Panique, a distance of five miles the Americans reached Moncada where the natives have displayed a friendly disposition. The train is stalled here by the wreck of two locomotives and 54 cars, evidently intentional, on the main track. The freight house and depot had been burned. No attempt will be made to save the wrecked rolling stock, but the track will be cleared, and as soon as two small breaks have been repaired, the expedition will continue northward. Thus far the advance has been a complete success. Capt. Carr, of the signal corps, has laid a wire from Panique.

Alleged Incendiaries Tarred and Feathered.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., Nov. 19.—A white woman and two negroes were tarred and feathered by prominent citizens of West Liberty, Logan county, at midnight Friday night. Their names are Nell Jackson, white, Edward Jackson, colored, her father-in-law; and David Rickman, colored. The trio of victims were confined in jail charged with incendiarism. A mob was organized and battered the doors of the jail, and, stripping the victims, they coated them with tar and feathers and then paraded them through the town.

THE LOUISVILLE VOTE.

Democrats Propose to Throw It and the Jefferson County Ballot Out—Republicans Find a Precedent.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 18.—A question which is likely to have an important if not a deciding influence on the contest for the governorship of Kentucky was brought up Friday before the canvassing board of Jefferson county which includes Louisville. Counsel for the democratic candidates gave notice of a motion to throw out the vote entirely because of the presence of militia at the polling places on November 7.

This action has been expected ever since the official count began. It was freely reported on election day that if the militia were called out it would result in some such step. With Louisville thrown out Goebel would have a safe plurality in the remainder of the state.

The official count was received Friday night from Floyd and Knott counties. Floyd gives Goebel 156 and Knott gives him 459 plurality. In the last tabulated returns printed would indicate, from democratic sources, Goebel's plurality in the state was figured at one vote. In this table Floyd, unofficial, gave Goebel 400 plurality and Knott 439 plurality. The official returns from these two counties show a net loss of 294 from the unofficial.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 18.—The proposition Friday from Goebel's lawyers to throw out the entire vote of Jefferson county, which includes Louisville was not wholly unlooked for by the republican leaders here. It is now said that Senator Deboe's visit here Thursday night was for the purpose of ascertaining definitely to what extent Gov. Bradley will support Taylor in the event that Goebel is given the certificate of election based on this proceeding.

Senator Deboe and Gov. Bradley are not on speaking terms, and the third party communicated with both of them. Deboe says he is satisfied Bradley will stand by Taylor and will vigorously resist Goebel.

The republicans have found a precedent, established by the state election commissioners last year, in which the board, by a unanimous vote, decided it was merely a canvassing board and had no power to pass on contests. This was in the case of Mordecai Williams (democrat), who filed a contest for the certificate of election as congressman in the Ninth district on the ground that fraudulent votes had been cast for Congressman Pugh in several counties.

The board declined to hear the contest on the ground of lack of jurisdiction and awarded the certificate of election to Pugh on the face of the returns.

Taylor's lawyers now claim under this decision the vote of Johnson and Knox counties at least must be counted as certified. They have not given an opinion as to the bearing of this ruling of the Jefferson county case.

BACK TO AFRICA.

Bishop Turner Favors an Appropriation of $105,000,000 to Be Used in Deporting 7,000,000 Negroes.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 18.—In an address before the Georgia conference of the African Methodist church Bishop H. M. Turner Friday urged every opposition to the Hardwick bill now pending before the general assembly of this state, to limit the suffrage of the Negroes in this state. Bishop Turner said he proposed to take the stump in Georgia against it, and implored every colored minister to do likewise. He said the law would reduce every Negro to the ignoble status of a free slave and their condition would be worse than before the war. The bishop denounced the supreme court of the United States for taking away the Negro's civil rights, but excepted Justice Harlan, who was the Negro's friend. He urged that every minister assist in getting signatures to the petition to congress for an appropriation of $105,000,000 to be used in sending 7,000,000 of the race to Africa, so that there would be an end of race conflicts in this country.

EFFORT WAS WASTED.

Pa Told His Son a Nice Little Story with a Moral, But It Was Unavailing.

I overheard a couple of well-known gentlemen relating their experience in domestic affairs a few days ago. One of them said his boy was inclined to devote too much of his time to athletic sports and neglect his studies, while the other found his boy devoting his energies to master half a dozen different musical instruments, which was the cause of his neglecting duties assigned him to perform.

"I took the boy aside," said the parent, "and told him the following story: A grasshopper wasted all the cheerful days of summer skipping gayly about in the fields and enjoying himself, while the prudent ant improved each hour by gathering food and storing it away. When winter came, and the thermometer registered in the vicinity of zero, the grasshopper approached the ant for the loan of provisions.

"But the ant said: 'What were you doing all summer?' 'Oh, singing and dancing,' said the grasshopper. 'Oh, well, chop ice now,' said the ant, so the hungry grasshopper went away and dropped dead from cold and hunger. I thought the moral of the story was too plain for me to make further comment, and as I was about to leave it with him to think it over the little fellow looked up and said: 'That's all right, pa, but there seems to be just as many grasshoppers.'

Bombardment of Kimberley Resumed—Boers Are Believed Encamped Six Miles From Estcourt—English Position There Is Good.

PRETORIA, Nov. 18.—By way of Lourenzo Marquez, Nov. 19.—At noon today 56 British prisoners including men of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers and several blue jackets, arrived here. There were large crowds at the railway station but no demonstration was made. Winston Churchill, who is wounded in the hand, was taken to the model school, while the rank and file are being sent to the race course.

One spy was lodged in jail. The wounded had been treated at Colenso. The Boer version of the conflict in which these prisoners were taken says that two British were killed and ten wounded.

The mining department has discovered beneath the manager's house at the Ferreira mine a passage leading to a suite of apartments 40 feet below ground, with gas and water laid on. This is supposed to have been intended to serve as a rendezvous for the employes of the Ferreira mine in the event of a bombardment of Johannesburg.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The first definite news regarding the fate of Winston Churchill was conveyed to his mother Sunday evening by a press representative. Lady Randolph had just returned home from a quiet dinner with a few friends when the gratifying intelligence that her son is living was conveyed to her. The fact that his wound is not necessarily dangerous, and that he is alive in Pretoria, caused her the greatest gratification, as she had been hitherto without the least intimation of his whereabouts.

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 20.—Advices just received here show that on Thursday, November 16, a combined force of Free State and Transvaal burghers occupied Colesberg, Cape Colony, without opposition by the residents and proclaimed the district to be Free State territory.

LOURENZO MARQUES, Nov. 18.—The following dispatch has been received here from Pretoria, dated November 16:

The British prisoners of the rank and file have received new outfits from the government.

"It is reported that the bombardment of Kimberley was resumed Sunday morning.

"Bateman, a British private, captured outside Ladysmith and brought to Pretoria, has since become insane."

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A special dispatch from Estcourt, dated Sunday, November 19, says:

"All is quiet here, the enemy is believed to be encamped six miles away. Our position is good and our forces are sufficiently strong to repulse attack."

GROWING WEAKER.

No Perceptible Change in the Vice President's Condition, But His Friends Are Not Hopeful of His Recovery.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 20.—Vice President Hobart passed the greater part of the day sitting at the bedroom window, at times reading the newspapers and having Mrs. Hobart read to him. He took less food than usual. This seems to indicate that his stomach trouble has returned. Mr. Hobart appeared to be as cheerful as ever and took a lively interest in the topics of the day as presented by the newspapers. There is no perceptible change in his condition but his friends are not as hopeful as they have been. They believe that the vice president is gradually growing weaker.

KENTUCKIAN BY BIRTH.

The Death of Gen. Clarence P. Greathouse at Victoria, B. C.—His Exciting Experience in Corea.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 17.—Clarence P. Greathouse, whose death was announced in Thursday's Oriental advices from Victoria, B. C., was a Kentuckian by birth and lived in Versailles up to the time of his appointment as consul general at Yokohama during President Cleveland's first administration. Greathouse's relatives have as yet no news of his death further than that conveyed to them by Thursday's press dispatch. They did not credit the report of Greathouse's critical illness published in the newspapers three weeks ago because several times before dispatches from San Francisco have reported the death of Greathouse or his mother, who, a few days later, would cable that they were in good health.

During his service as consul general at Yokohama Mr. Gereathouse had so greatly assisted Ni-Kung, the king of Corea, by giving him helpful advice, that the king urged him to accept the created office of "Ho-Pang," which, it is said, would correspond in civilized monarchies to the position of prime minister. Mr. Greathouse resigned his consulate in 1890 to accept the office tendered by the Corean king and went to Seoul to live.

His career in that country was one of constant excitement, and many times his head was in great jeopardy. During the violent disturbances in Corea in 1894, which culminated in the assassination of the queen in her chamber in the palace by a mob, Mr. Greathouse was appointed to investigate the murder of the queen, it is said, caused the arrest of several of the murderers, who were adjudged guilty and beheaded.

"Gen." Greathouse, as he was called by the king, was a strong factor in the development of Corea and the king is said to have been in hearty sympathy with the progressive views of his Yankee ally, favoring the building of railroads, the development of the mines, the opening of the ports to foreign commerce and the teaching of English in the Corean schools.

THE METEORIC SHOWER.

Fifty-Nine Leonids in All Were Counted at Pos.'s Observatory at Bayport, L. I., Thursday Morning.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Prof. Rees, of Columbia, and Mr. Moore, of Harvard, are at Charles A. Post's observatory at Bayport, L. I., watching for the shower of meteors. They had little luck up to 2 o'clock Thursday morning when the sky which had been overcast for about 48 hours cleared. During the following two hours several photographs were obtained. Fifty-nine meteors in all were counted during the morning. Only one of these was classed as of the first magnitude.

One of the meteors sighted exploded and few left trails. Prof. Rees said he feared the observations in this part of the country had all been failures, and that it was to be hoped that observers in other parts of the world had better success. He said there was a possibility that the showers had not yet passed by and that as Thursday night promised to be clear, valuable data might be obtained.

Thought the End of the World Had Come.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—In Russia the Leonid displays caused a panic in many places. It was believed that the end of the world had come. Churches were open all night and hundreds of thousands spent three nights in the open air fearing earthquakes and a general cataclysm. There are even rumors that in some villages Russian parents murdered their children to save them from an expected worse fate. There was rather a brilliant display between 2 and 5 o'clock Thursday morning in Berlin.

Acquitted and Rearrested.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—A special from Phoenix, Ariz., says that Pearl Hart, the alleged woman bandit who was charged with holding up a stage near Florence, was acquitted at the trial before Judge Doan at Florence. Miss Hart addressed the jury in her own defense and pleaded pasaionately for freedom that she might return to Toledo, O., to see her fast failing mother. Immediately after her acquittal, the woman was rearrested charged with interfering with United States mails and will be tried again.

Military Park at Fredericksburg, Va.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Commander-in-Chief Shaw, of the grand army, and Gen. Daniel Sickles, saw Secretary Root Thursday. Commander Shaw wanted to urge Secretary Root to make a favorable recommendation in his annual report for a national military park at Fredericksburg, Va. He was joined in this by Gen. Sickles. The secretary said he would make the recommendation.

The 47th Regiment at Gibraltar.

CLOSING ON HIM.

Aguinaldo and Government Are Making Desperate Efforts to Escape.

Twelve Barrels Containing the Wardrobe of Aguinaldo's Wife, Some Personal Effects, Records of the Secretary of War Captured.

MANILA, Nov. 17.—Reports have been received here from Gen. Young dated Humingan, Wednesday. Humingan is about 30 miles east of San Fabian. Gen. Young is supposed to have advanced considerably further toward San Fabian.

A correspondent telegraphs an account of the rapid pace with which Gen. Young covered the road with his cavalry. The Macabebe scouts completely surprised and demoralized the insurgents around the low country. A messenger and reinforcements who were captured say no town from San Jose to San Nicolas expected the arrival of the Americans until a day or two after they actually arrived.

Aguinaldo and his government are said to be making desperate efforts to escape to Bayombong. All the information here is that he is still in the low country. Lieut. Johnson, with Troop M, 3d cavalry, captured Wednesday at San Nicholas 13 barrels, containing the wardrobe of Aguinaldo's wife, some personal effects, the records of the secretary of war and much commissary and medical supplies. Senora Aguinaldo probably escaped over the divide, but the secretary of war is thought to be inside the lines. Thomas W. Hayes, a civilian, and Calvin S. Davis, of the 16th infantry, who were held prisoners by the insurgents, have been rescued.

Col. Wessels captured at Tayug several hundred thousand pounds of rice, 7,500 pounds of salt, 1,500 pounds of flour marked "Dayton, Ohio," 2,500 pounds of sugar, 1,300 new uniforms, and hundreds of thousands of Mauser shells.

The names of Lieut. Gilmore and seven of his men were found written on the walls of the convent of San Quintin. The garrisons of all the towns surprised resisted feebly. Gen. Wheaton has not yet appeared.

OPPOSED TO TRUSTS.

The National Grange Will Make an Endeavor to Secure Proper Legislation Against Combinations.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Nov. 17.—There is every indication that all important resolutions submitted to the national grange for adoption will be based upon the grand master's address, declaring war upon the trusts in no uncertain manner and carrying with them suggestions as to the measures necessary to secure the proper legislation to put them out of the business. While the grange is on record in this particular, yet it is believed even more radical action will be taken this year along this particular line. Reports from various officers indicate that the grange is growing both in membership and influence.

Passenger Trains Collide.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 17.—A head-end collision between passenger trains occurred at 8 o'clock Thursday morning at Pleasure Ridge park, Ky., eight miles south of this city. Passenger train No. 41 on the L. H. & St. L., bound for St. Louis, and the Illinois Central bound from New Orleans, came together in a dense fog. G. B. Shaw, postal clerk, is thought to be fatally injured; W. H. Hinsley, baggagemaster of the L. H. & St. L., was badly bruised and cut; A. M. Evans, conductor, and Engineer Chamberlain and Fireman Ridgeway, of the L. H. & St. L., were slightly injured. Beyond a severe shaking up none of the passengers were injured.

Democratic National Committee Meeting.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—A meeting of the democratic national committee will probably be held in this city January 8 or February 11. Chairman James K. Jones has settled upon these two dates as his own choice, and by his instructions Secretary Johnson has just completed the work of notifying members of the committee, and to send by letter their preference of the two dates suggested by Chairman Jones. At this meeting the committee will decide the time and place for holding the next democratic national convention.

Official Vote of Mississippi.

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 17.—The secretary of state Thursday made an official announcement of the returns from the recent state election. THE COMING SERMON.

Dr. Talmage on Future Modes of Preaching the Gospel.

How He Thinks Religious Truths Should Be Presented—Says Ministers Should Preach the Living Christ.

(Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.)

In this discourse Dr. Talmage addresses all Christian workers and describes what he thinks will be the modes of preaching the Gospel in the future; text, Romans 12:7: "Or ministry, let us wait on our ministering."

While I was seated on the piazza of a hotel at Lexington, Ky., one summer evening, a gentleman asked me: "What do you think of the coming sermon?" I supposed he was asking me in regard to some new discourse of Dr. Cumming, of London, who sometimes preached startling sermons, and I replied: "I have not seen it." But I found out afterward that he meant to ask what I thought would be the characteristics of the coming sermon of the world, the sermon of the future, the word "Cumming" as a noun pronounced the same as the word "coming as an adjective. But my mistake suggested to me a very important and practical theme, "The Coming Sermon."

Before the world is converted the style of religious discourse will have to be converted. You might as well go into the modern Sedan or Gettysburg with bows and arrows, instead of rifles and bombshells and parks of artillery, as to expect to conquer this world for God by the old style of exhortion and sermonology. Jonathan Edwards preached the sermons most adapted to the age in which he lived, but if those sermons were preached now they would divide an audience into two classes—those sound asleep and those wanting to go home.

But there is a discourse of the future. Who will preach it I have no idea. In what part of the earth it will be born I have no idea. In which denomination of Christians it will be delivered I cannot guess. That discourse of exhortation may be born in the country meeting house on the banks of the St. Lawrence or the Oregon or the Ohio or the Tombigbee or the Alabama. The person who shall deliver it may this moment be in a cradle under the shadow of the Sierra Nevadas or in a New England farmhouse or amid the ricefields of southern savannas, or this moment there may be some young man in one of our theological seminaries, in the junior or middle or senior class, shaping that weapon of power, or there may be coming some new baptism of the Holy Ghost on the churches, so that some of us who now stand in the watchtowers of Zion, waking to a realization of our present inefficiency, may preach it ourselves. That coming discourse may not be 50 years off. And let us pray God that its arrival may be hastened while I announce to you what I think will be the chief characteristics of that discourse or exhortation when it does arrive, and I want to make my remarks appropriate and suggestive to all classes of Christian workers.

First of all, I remark that that future religious discourse will be full of a living Christ in contradistinction to didactic technicalities. A discourse may be full of Christ though hardly mentioning His name, and a sermon may be empty of Christ while every sentence is repetition of His titles. The world wants a living Christ, not a Christ standing at the head of a formal system of theology, but a Christ who means pardon and sympathy and condolence and brotherhood and life and Heaven, a poor man's Christ, an overworked Christ, an invalid's Christ, a farmer's Christ, a merchant's Christ, an artisan's Christ, an every man's Christ.

A symmetrical and fine worded system of theology is well enough for theological classes, but it has no more business in a pulpit than have the technical phrases of an anatomist or a psychologist or a physician in the sickroom of a patient. The world wants help, immediate and world uplifting, and it will come through a discourse in which Christ shall walk right down into the immorta soul and take everlasting possession of it, filling it as full of light as is this noonday firmament.

That sermon or exhortation of the future will not deal with men in the threadbare illustrations of Jesus Christ. In that coming address there will be instances of vicarious suffering taken right out of everyday life, for there is not a day when somebody is not dying for others—as the physician saving his diphtheritic patient by sacrificing his own life; as the ship captain going down with his vessel while he is getting his passengers into the lifeboat; as the fireman consuming in the burning building while he is taking a child out of a fourth-story window; as in summer the strong swimmer at East Hampton or Long Branch or Cape May or Lake George himself perished trying to rescue the drowning; as the newspaper boy one summer, supporting his mother for some years, his invalid mother, when offered by a gentleman 50 cents to get some special paper, and he got it, and rushed up in his anxiety to deliver it and was crushed under the wheels of the train and lay on the grass with only strength enough to say: "Oh, what will become of my poor, sick mother now?" Vicarious suffering—the world is full of it. An engineer said to me on a locomotive in Dakota: "We men seem to be coming to better appreciation than we used to. Did you see that account the other day of an engineer who to save his passengers stuck to his place, and when he was found dead in the locomotive, which was upside down, he was found still smiling, his hand on the airbrake?" And as the engineer said it to me he put his hand on the airbrake to illustrate his meaning, and I looked at him and thought: "You would be just as much a hero in the same crisis." Oh, in that religious discourse of the future there will be living illustrations taken out from everyday life of vicarious suffering—illustrations that will bring to mind the ghastlier sacrifice of Him who in the high places of the field, on the cross, fought our battles and endured our struggle and died our death.

A German sculptor made an image of Christ, and he asked his little child, two years old, who it was, and she said: "That must be some very great man." The sculptor was displeased with the criticism, so he got another block of marble and chiseled away on it two or three years, and then he brought in his little child, four or five years of age, and said to her: "Who do you think that is?" She said: "That must be the One who took little children in His arms and blessed them." Then the sculptor was satisfied. Oh, my friends, what the world wants is not a cold Christ, not an intellectual Christ, not a reverend magisterial Christ, but a loving Christ, spreading out His arms of sympathy to press the whole world to His loving heart!

But I remark also that the religious discourse of the future of which I speak will be a popular discourse. There are those in these times who speak of a popular sermon as though there must be something wrong about it. As these critics are dull themselves, the world gets the impression that a sermon is good in proportion as it is stupid. Christ was the most popular preacher the world ever saw and, considering the small number of the world's population, had the largest audiences ever gathered. He never preached anywhere without making a great sensation. People rushed out in the wilderness to hear him reckless of their physical necessities. So great was their anxiety to hear Christ that, taking no food with them, they would have fainted and starved had not Christ performed a miracle and fed them. Why did so many people take the truth at Christ's hands? Because they all understood it. He illustrated his subject by a hen and her chickens, by a bushel measure, by a handful of salt, by a bird's flight and by a lily's aroma. All the people knew what he meant, and they flocked to Him. And when the religious discourse of the future appears it will not be Princetonian, not Rochesterian, not Andoverian, not Middletonian, but Olivetic—plain, practical, unique, earnest, comprehensive of all the woes, wants, sins and sorrows of an auditory.

But when the exhortation or discourse does come there will be a thousand gleaming scimeters to charge on it. There are in so many theological seminaries professors telling young men how to preach, themselves not knowing how, and I am told that if a young man in some of our theological seminaries says anything quaint or thrilling or unique faculty and students fly at him and set him right and straighten him out and smooth him down and chop him off until he says everything just as everybody else says it. Oh, when the future religious discourse of the Christian church arrives all the churches of Christ in our great cities will be thronged! The world wants spiritual help. All who have buried their dead want comfort. All know themselves to be mortal and to be immortal, and they want to hear about the great future. I tell you, my friends, if the people of our great cities who have had trouble only thought they could get practical and sympathetic help in the Christian church, there would not be a street in Washington or New York or any other city which would be passable on the Sabbath day if there were a church on it, for all the people would press to that asylum of mercy, that great house of comfort and consolation.

A mother with a dead babe in her arms came to the god Siva and asked to have her child restored to life. The god Siva said to her: "You go and get a handful of mustard seed from a house in which there has been no sorrow and in which there has been no death, and I will restore your child to life." So the mother went out, and she went from house to house and from home to home looking for a place where there had been no sorrow and where there had been no death, but she found none. She went back to the god Siva and said: "My mission is a failure. You see, I haven't brought the mustard seed. I can't find a place where there has been no sorrow and no death." "Oh!" said the god Siva. "Understand, your sorrows are no worse than the sorrows of others. We all have our griefs, and all have our heartbreaks." Laugh, and the world laughs with you;

Weep, and you weep alone;
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,
But has trouble enough of its own.

We hear a great deal of discussion now all over the land about why people do not go to church. Some say it is because Christianity is dying out and because people do not believe in the truth of God's Word, and all that. The reason is because our sermons and exhortations are not interesting and practical and helpful. Some one might as well tell the whole truth on this subject, and so I will tell it. The religious discourse of the future, the Gospel sermon to come forth and shake the nations and lift people out of darkness, will be a popular sermon, just for the simple reason that it will meet the woes and the wants and the anxieties of the people.

There are in all our denominations ecclesiastical mummies sitting around to frown upon the fresh young pulpits of America to try to awe them down, to cry out: "Tut, tut, tut! Sensational!" They stand to-day preaching in churches that hold a thousand people, and there are a hundred persons present, and if they cannot have the world saved in their way it seems as if they do not want it saved at all.

I do not know but the old way of making ministers of the Gospel is better—a collegiate education and an apprenticeship under the care and home attention of some earnest, aged Christian minister, the young man getting the patriarch's spirit and assisting him in his religious service. Young lawyers study with old lawyers, young physicians with old physicians, and I believe it would be a great help if every young man studying for the Gospel ministry could get himself in the home and heart and sympathy and under the benediction and perpetual presence of a Christian minister.

But, I remark again, the religious discourse of the future will be an awakening sermon. From altar rail to the front door step, under that sermon, an audience will get up and start for Heaven. There will be in it many a staccato passage. It will not be a lullaby. It will be a battle charge. Men will drop their sins, for they will feel the hot breath of pursuing retribution on the back of their necks. It will be sympathetic with all the physical distresses as well as the spiritual distresses of the world. Christ not only preached, but he healed paralysis, and he healed epilepsy, and he healed the dumb and the blind and the lepers.

That religious discourse of the future will be an everyday sermon, going right down into every man's life, and it will teach him how to vote, how to bargain, how to plow, how to do any work he is called to do, how to wield trowel and pen and pencil and yardstick and plane. And it will teach women how to preside over their households and how to educate their children and how to imitate Miriam and Esther and Vashti and Eunice, the mother of Timothy, and Mary, the mother of Christ, and those women who on northern and southern battlefields who were mistaken by the wounded for angels of mercy, fresh from the throne of God.

Yes, I have to tell you, the religious discourse of the future will be a reported sermon. If you have any idea that printing was invented simply to print secular books, and stenography and phonography were contrived merely to set forth secular ideas, you are mistaken. The printing press is to be the great agency of Gospel proclamation. It is high time that good men, instead of denouncing the press, employ it to scatter forth the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The vast majority of people in our cities do not come to church, and nothing but the printed sermon can reach them and call them to pardon and life and peace and Heaven.

So I cannot understand the nervousness of some of my brethren of the ministry. When they see a newspaper man coming in they say: "Alas, there is a reporter!" Every added reporter is 10,000, 50,000, 100,000 immortal souls added to the audience. The time will come when all the village, town and city newspapers will reproduce the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and sermons preached on the Sabbath will reverberate all around the world, and, some by type and some by voice, all nations will be evangelized.

The practical bearing of this is upon those who are engaged in Christian work, not only upon theological students and young ministers, but upon all who preach the Gospel and all who exhort in meetings and all of you if you are doing your duty. Do you exhort in prayer meeting? Be short and spirited. Do you teach in Bible class? Though you have to study every night, be interesting. Do you accost people on the subject of religion in their homes or in public places? Study adroitness and use common sense. The most graceful and most beautiful thing on earth is the religion of Jesus Christ, and if you awkwardly present it it is defamation. We must do our work rapidly, and we must do it effectively. Soon our time for work will be gone.

A dying Christian took out his watch and gave it to a friend and said: "Take that watch. I have no more use for it. Time is at an end for me, and eternity begins." Oh, my friends, when our watch has ticked away for us the last moment, and our clock has struck for us the last hour, may it be found we did our work well, that we did it in the very best way, and whether we preached the Gospel in pulpits or taught Sabbath classes, or administered to the sick as physicians, or bargained as merchants, or pleaded the law as attorneys, or were busy as artisans or husbandmen or as mechanics, or were, like Martha, called to give a meal to a hungry Christ, or, like Hannah, to make a coat for a prophet, or, like Deborah, to rouse the courage of some timid Barak in the Lord's conflict, we did our work in such a way that it will stand the test of judgment! And in the long procession of the redeemed that march around the throne may it be found that there are many there brought to God through our instrumentality and in whose rescue we exult. But let none of us who are still unsaved wait for that religious discourse of the future. It may come after our obsequies. It may come after the stonecutter has chiseled our name on the slab 50 years before. Do not wait for a great steamer of the Cunard or White Star line to take you off the wreck, but hail the first craft, with however low a mast and however small a hulk and however poor a rudder and however weak a captain.

Instead of waiting for that religious discourse of the future (it may be 40, 50 years off), take this plain invitation of a man who to have given you spiritual eyesight would be glad to be called the spittle by the hand of Christ put on the eyes of a blind man and who would consider the highest compliment of this service if, at the close, 500 men should start from these doors, saying: "Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not. This one thing I know—whereas I was blind, now I see."

Swifter than shadows over the plain, quicker than birds in their autumnal flight, hastier than eagles to their prey, hie you to a sympathetic Christ. The orchestras of Heaven have strung their instruments to celebrate your rescue:

And many were the voices around the throne.
Rejoice, for the Lord brings back His own.

Mrs. Reid's Grecian Art Entertainment at the Christian Church on Friday evening, Nov. 24th, promises to surpass anything in that line that has been seen here. Sixteen of our handsomest and most attractive young ladies in their most becoming gowns, will face the audience on dress parade, and what havoc will be made among the susceptible hearts of the young bachelors no tongue can tell. Wheugh, it makes ones blood run cold as ice-water through his veins to think of sixteen pair of eyes blue, black, brown, grey and hazel. Glances from any pair of them will be as destructive as Dewey's shells were in the battle of Manila. This scribe witnessed one of their rehearsals and for a time did not know whether he was on his feet or head. There were fairy like blondes and brunettes, graceful and lithe as young gazelles, some of medium height and some "divinely tall." The drill was a thing of marvelous beauty.

Prof. Hopkins is certainly a fine singer and the songs which were given both illustrated and otherwise, were very much appreciated. Excellent selections were rendered by "Billy" Graphophone. Among these was an amusing conversation between Prof. Hopkins and the graphophone, and the voice of the Hon. Wm. J. Bryan in his great Chicago speech was heard. The subjects of the various lectures were, America, Europe, War with Spain and the Man of Galilee. Fifteen of the boys with four wagons came in Thursday and helped Noah Tanner gather his corn. Noah is not in the habit of getting behind with his work, but this fall circumstances were such as to force him to that point, hence the kindness of his neighbors. Noah was delighted of course.

One day last week we cameupon our friend, George Smith, painting the Hamilton place red. Some men after elections go out and paint "towns red" but Mr. Smith prefers to do his painting on the roof of some secluded building, where the "cop" cometh not and safely walketh about with wooden shoes on.

The announcement of Hon. Evan E. Settle's death in our town, last Friday, came like a peal of thunder from a clear sky, for many of our people had seen him at Burlington, Nov. 6th, and fell in love with him at first sight. He was caught in a dead fall, and if you don't come over and help eat it there will be another dead fall or a pumpkin fall. Say, Mr. Ed, will you come?

Messrs. Huey and Walton, of Big Bone, passed through here Friday evening from the city and told us that the latest returns from the counting boards were "good enough for them" and of course they were good enough for us. Lee Huey says if there is a man in Boone county that deserves and should have a vote of thanks from every Democrat in the county for his stalwart defense of democracy and unceasing loyalty to its precepts and principles, that man is Douglas Moore, of Big Bone Springs, who, for years has stood like a "lone wall" and fought one of the strougest, best posted and aggressive regimeuts of the "euemy" there are in the county. Right you are, Bro. Huey.

About a dozen of the Burlington tobacco chewers chipped in and sent to Lithia Springs, Virginia, and bought a small hogshead of tobacco for their own use. It arrived Friday night and was parceled out among the chewers club Saturday morning. For awhile now, at least, a fellow can come in from the country without being asked for a chew of leaf tobacco by everybody he meets.

Lewis Ashbrook was renewing old acquaintances here Monday. He had not been in Burlington for 50 years, consequently he met but few of the residents at time of his last visit. He and his father were the principal livestock traders in this and adjoining counties many years ago. Mr. Ashbrook carries his age well, and is especially sprightly. He has an extensive acquaintance among the old citizens of Boone, and it is a great pleasure for him to meet them.

Met Supt. Voshell out on the North Bend road Friday. He had been among the schools in the northern part of the county since Monday morning, and had about completed his annual tour of the public institutions of learning in the county, having only Limaburg and Burlington to visit. The Superintendent has had delightful weather in which to make his round, and besides enjoying his trip, he was very much pleased with the manner in which the schools of the county are being conducted.

Louis Schorr, a Dearborn county, Indiana farmer, residing near the Ripley county line raised a large flock of ducks that he intended for the market, but is now afraid to sell them alive for fear he may dispose of a fortune. One of the ducks was killed last week for home consumption, and in dressing the carcass of the fowl its craw was discovered to contain a quantity of small lumps that were preserved for examination, and which have been pronounced by competent parties pure gold and worth more than $3. The finding of the precious metal in the duck's craw recalls the fact that for many decades gold has been supposed to exist in that locality.

R. E. Moore's large barn near here was destroyed by fire about 12:30 last Wednesday morning. Besides the building 4 horses, 1 mule, 1,000 bushels of corn, 7 acres of tobacco aud 75 bushels of wheat were burnt. The loss is estimated at about $2,000 with an insurance of $600 on the building. All our housewives are preparing to enjoy an old time Thanksgiving, Nov. 30th, eating turkey, cranberry sauce and good and palatable edibles. Our efficient school mistress, Miss Annie Wolfe, will on Weduesday preceding that day, entertain the patrous of her school with an exhibition in reading, recitations and dialogues by her pupils.

Our people are heartily in sympathy with the Big Bone Springs electric road project and hope to see it materialize, as it will be a great stimulus to the promoters of a turnpike road from Beaver to the Springs. Old fogies are disposed to "hoot" at the advanced ideas, but we can assure them they would be wonderfully astonished should they visit the place a century hence and see the substantial progress we have made.

The community was greatly alarmed last Wednesday morning at the burning of Edwin Moore's large barn, containing 5 horses, 8 head of hogs, 7 acres of flue tobacco, 2 tons of hay, 200 bbls. of corn, Fairbank scales, mowing machine, farm wagon and various farming implements. THE SUNSET OF THE YEAR.

In richer hues than Tyrian dyes could lend
Yon wooded hill by autumn's touch is dressed;
Where golden birch and silver poplar blend
With maples crimson as the robin's breast;
And fragrant pines and stately hemlocks vie
With cedars vested in perennial green,
While russet robes o'er oak and beeches lie,
And sumachs, raising flaming torches high,
In sunny spots and sylvan nooks are seen.

With dog and gun the sportsman eager hies
Through browning fields once fair with waving grain,
Where timid quail from out the stubble rise,
And poor "Bob White" must chant his plea in vain.
From yonder marsh there comes the plover's call,
A rabbit flits from friendly thicket night;
A lonely woodcock in the bushes tall
Whistles his note ere brown wings downward fall,
As rings his death-knell to the autumn sky.

In forest depths the evening's quiet broods,
Save where some lingering songster pipes his tune,
And in the amber glory of the woods
Perchance rejoices in the suns of June.
But through the aisles, with rustling carpets spread,
There falls no more upon the listening ear,
Through spacious nave and archway overhead,
The melody of song—the choir has fled:
The calm that tells the season's close is here.

O'er forest, field and marsh and wooded hill
The golden lights in wondrous splendor lie,
Ere winter comes, of stern and rugged will,
And autumn whispers to the world good-by;
But ere the song of mountain stream be stilled,
And russet robes give place to ermine drear,
Again is earth with summer's presence filled,
And nature's heart with joyous whisperings thrilled
In this, the radiant sunset of the year.

An Idyl of Hardstone District.

BY THOMAS S. COLLIER.

THE hot beams of an August sun fell almost perpendicularly on the red clay road, that ran through Hardstone district, a sterile and shadeless collection of much-tilled and small-producing farms on the seacoast of our land. The only good feature about the place was its sea breeze, rich with the aroma and coolness it gathered in journeying over thousands of miles of salt water.

Along the road, his brow beaded with perspiration, Obed Strong plodded stubbornly, as if both heat and cold were alike powerless to affect him.

He was commonplace enough in his looks and dress. His coat was slung across a stick on his shoulder, from which also depended a bundle; a rough straw hat covered his head, and still rougher boots, red with the dust of the road, shrouded his feet; while a coarse shirt, open at the throat, and a coarser pair of trousers completed his attire.

Had a traveler met him he would have passed him by, thinking him a rough farmer, made after the general making of his kind; but Obed Strong was a different man from the generality of his class, and his face was one to study and remember.

It was dark and stern now, and there was a deep glow in his eyes that sat deep in the shade of shaggy brows, and the lines about the brow were hard and firm. The lips were tightly pressed together, and the nostrils swelled and compressed with the working of his lungs, quickly and savagely; and his hands were clenched, so that the cords stood out in hard knots.

Some great passion was stirring the man's soul with its power; and he would have been dangerous even to a friend, had that friend sought to stay his way.

As he reached the brow of a small hill, where a single tree stood like a sentinel, he saw, sitting at its base, a woman's form. She was clad, like him, in coarse habiliments, and her hands showed signs of labor. Like his, her face showed signs of power and passion, but the eyes were full of tears and pleading, while his were full of wrath. As he stopped she arose and came toward him.

"I heard you were going, Obed, and I came here to have a few last words with you."

He did not speak, but his face grew sterner, harder, if that could be, and the knots on his hands worked with the added strain he forced on them.

"Perhaps"—and her voice faltered a little, "perhaps I have done wrong, but I love you, Obed, and we may never meet again."

Her bosom rose and fell, as if a sob was striving to break from its hold, but she stilled it and went on.

"I have refused to marry you, Obed, because I have a sick father to tend; a man full of whims and notions, who would fret and tire you and cause you to feel that I had brought you trouble. Please do not think me hard, for I have thought only of you. Forgive me, Obed, for oh, I am weary and heartsick, feeling that you are going from me."

He threw down the stick that held his coat and bundle, and the words came hotly forth, as if time was precious, and much was to be said.

"You need not be weary, for I am willing to bear your burdens; and if you are heartsick because I am going away you have it in your power to stay me with a word. Say that you will marry me in a month and I will stay here until you are willing to let me go, Phoebe Donne."

Her head was bent low now, and the tears would not be stayed.

"Obed, you know I love you, but I cannot think it is right to bring to you only fretting and toil; for the care of my father is a toil and a trouble, though I would willingly bear it all if I could keep you here near me."

"You can keep me here, and with you. Why, what were my love worth if it would not help you in your toil and be glad to share your cares? Do you think that being a man, I have no feelings but those that are selfish? I tell you, Phoebe Donne, I am willing to work for you, help you, love you, in all ways that a man can."

"I know it, but there are trials that sour love; and a man's patience fails before the many trials of another man's whims, and then there comes the feeling that love has imposed on him burdens he has no right to bear; and so he broods and grows cold, and his love dies; and I could not live if I lost your love."

The man stood silent. He was thinking of her words and of her acts. She loved him and was willing to lose that love so that she should not bring him care and toil. And he? Why, he was about leaving her simply because she would not marry him when he thought she should. Well, he was willing to take her, care and work included, if she would come, and was not that enough? No; for he forgot that he had shown only impatience when she had tried to reason with him, and was this the way to show her that he could bear the strain a sick man's fancies would entail?

She had forgotten this, but oh, he was so willing to take her with it all, and he loved her so, and to be put off when his heart was crying for her love and the power to call her wife. Then he conquered his hot words and said, more quietly:

"Phoebe, I may have been wrong and hasty in saying what I have, and in starting away from Hardstone, but the place is one to kill a man with work, for which he gets no pay; and then to have to put his love back, how far in the future he knows not, is very hard. See, I am willing to stay here, knowing, too, that in the west I can have a home and comforts I cannot get here for twice the toil. If you will marry me I am willing to take all it will bring, of sorrow and ill, so that you are my wife. Is there more that a man can do?"

"There is no more, and I do not ask you to do more; but will your love be so strong that it can see me bestow care and attention on another, when you may desire my services? That is the point, Obed, regarding which I have hesitated. Oh, if I only knew?" A smile, calm and restful, stole over her face.

As she paused, a breath of sea air came wandering up from the low lying beach and seemed to linger about the solitary tree. Then the bird that had sought refuge in its branches broke forth in a low song, that sounded like a voice of hope and promise.

"Would you be willing to stay here, to put away the golden promise of the west, and bide the fancies of an invalid, for this?" And she held out her toil-marked hand.

He looked at her, and then his eyes went wandering over the red hills to where, afar off, mountains covered with green rose like a wall against the sky. And he thought: "Is the smile and love of this woman, with toil and poverty, worth the promise of peace and rest, without it, in the distance hid by those mountains?"

Then his soul called his eyes back to her face, and he knew her love was better, even with poverty to share it, than the richest promise that lay beyond the mountains. So he took her hand and said:

"This is all to me, and, unless it can go with me freely, I will stay with it here."

Was it fancy? It seemed that to both of them a low voice whispered: "It is well." But around them was the glare of the sun, and the red, glaring land, and even the bird was still; yet the word had been spoken, and, though it was only a whisper, it gave them strength.

He stooped and picked up his stick and bundle, and together they walked on toward her home. It was a small cot standing in the shadow of a hill. A few vines and bushes grew about it, and, with a sickly green, strove to relieve the sameness of the scene.

In the doorway, reclining in a rough-built easychair, sat an old and feeble man. As he saw them approach he uttered a peevish wish for them to hurry.

She turned and looked at her lover. He took her hand and, standing before the sick man, said:

"Mr. Donne, I have asked your daughter to be my wife. I think that it is in my power to help you both to rest and comfort. Are you willing to let me try?"

A strange look came to the old man's worn and care-lined face—a look of trust and hope.

"Bless you," he said, feebly, extending his hands. They took them in theirs. A smile stole over the aged face, the eyes closed, the head sank on the breast.

Obed stooped to lift him, and started back. The weary sickness had ended forever and the trial of life had given place to the peace of heaven.

A large farmhouse stands near the still flow of a western river. Trees and vines cluster round it and well-tilled acres, rich with the golden shimmer of ripening grain, stretch off from it. Children's voices in laughter ring among the trees, and the sunshine comes and goes, between the passing of the summer clouds.

And here the promise has come to Obed Strong; and the love of a true woman has made beautiful a life that had he not waited, might have been so dark that none would care to know its end.—Elliott's Magazine.

AMERICAN RAILWAYS

As Related to Commercial, Industrial and Agricultural Interests.

Present Period Styled the Age of Transportation—Foreign Countries Buying Our Locomotives—Development of the West.

"One of our great writers has said of this closing period of the nineteenth century that it is an age of transportation. Transportation underlies material prosperity in every department of commerce. Without transportation commerce would be impossible. Those states and nations are rich, powerful and enlightened whose transportation facilities are best and most extended. The dying nations are those with little or no transportation facilities."

These were a part of the opening words of an address delivered before the International Commercial congress, recently held in Philadelphia, by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent of the New York Central & Hudson River railroad, and president of the American Association of General Passenger Agents.

He then went on to quote Mr. Mulhall, the British statistician, who in his work on "The Wealth of Nations" said of the United States in 1895: "If we take a survey of mankind in anoient or modern times, as regards the physical, mechanical and intellectual force of nations, we find nothing to compare with the United States."

Mr. Mulhall proved by his statistics that the working power of a single person in the United States was twice that of a German or Frenchman, more than three times that of an Austrian and five times that of an Italian. He said the United States was then the richest country in the world, its wealth exceeding that of Great Britain by 35 per cent., and added that the history of the human race no nation ever before possessed 41,000,000 of instructed citizens. Should Mr. Mulhall revise his figures to-day, the differences would all be in favor of the United States, for in the past 18 months we have demonstrated the superiority of our manufactures in every direction, and our ability to cope successfully with questions which have heretofore been handled exclusively by the older nations is now recognized by all the world.

Mr. Daniels told of a letter he had received from a friend in Tokio, written only a short time ago, in which was this significant sentence: "You will be interested in knowing that I have hanging on the wall of my office a framed picture of your 'Empire State Express,' and we expect in the near future to be hauling a Japanese 'Empire Express' with an American locomotive." They have now in Japan more than 100 locomotives that were built in the United States. In Russia they have nearly 1,000 American locomotives, and practically every railway in Great Britain has ordered locomotives from this country since the beginning of the war with Spain.

But it is not alone our locomotives that have attracted the attention of foreigners who have visited our shores; our railway equipment generally has commanded admiration and is now receiving the highest compliment, namely, imitation by many sister nations.

The demand for American locomotives from all parts of the world Mr. Daniels attributed, in the first place, to the superior quality of our machinery, and, in the second, to the fact that the general passenger agents of the American railways have, through their advertising, made the marvelous results accomplished by our locomotives household words in every country on the globe.

The emperor of Germany in his speech to the Prussian diet in January last, said Mr. Daniels, did not lay the greatest stress upon the necessity for increasing the army or for the construction of additional ships for the navy, but he did impress upon his hearers the great importance of extending the railroads and the navigable canals. In order that the German nation might have knowledge of the most advanced theories and practice in the construction and operation of railways an imperial German commission was sent to the United States a short time ago for the purpose of examining American railways and making such recommendations as their investigation should suggest. In the report of this commission, which was recently published, one of the first sentences is as follows: "Lack of speed, lack of comfort, lack of cheap rates, are the charges brought against the German empire's railways, as compared with those of the United States." They recommended the adoption of many of our methods, explaining in their report that they were far superior, not only to those in vogue in Germany, but also superior to those of any other country.

One of the claims made by Mr. Daniels is that railroads supersede the canals, and he gives as one reason the general demand of the American public for quick time. A shipper having a hundred thousand barrels of flour or a million bushels of grain for export must move it from Buffalo to New York within a specified time, and he cannot risk the slow process of the canal.

What Railroads Have Accomplished.

A few examples of the achievements of American railroads in a little more than half a century, and many of them within the last 25 years, were then given. Before the railroads were built it took a week to go from New York to Buffalo, nearly three weeks from New York to Chicago; and at that time no man would have thought of making a trip from New York to the Pacific coast, except a few of the hardiest pioneers, and when on such an occasion the goodbyes were said, it was expected on both sides that it would be forever. If tomorrow night you should place a letter on the Pacific and Oriental mail train, which leaves New York at 9:15, you may be sure that your correspondent in San Francisco will be reading it next Monday night—four days from New York. The framers of our constitution would have considered a man entirely beside himself who would have suggested such a possibility.

In 1875 the states east of the Missouri river were sending food and clothing to the starving people of Kansas. Thanks to the facilities afforded by the railroads the corn crop of Kansas this year is 340,000,000 bushels.

It seems but a very few years, said the speaker, since I made my first trip to Colorado, and stopped on my way at the home of Buffalo Bill, at North Platte, Neb., on the Union Pacific. At Ogalalla, 51 miles west of North Platte, the Sioux Indians were roaming over the prairies and making more or less trouble for the early settlers who ventured so far out of the beaten paths of civilization. The Nebraska corn crop this year covers 8,000,000 acres, and the yield is 290,000,000 bushels.

Previous to the construction of the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, Northwestern, St. Paul, Burlington, and other railways that traverse that wonderful region known as the "wheat belt," there was nothing to be seen but prairie grass and an occasional band of untamed savages.

Development of Pacific Coast.

In 1849 there came across the continent reports of the discovery of gold in California, but the only means of reaching its Golden Gate was by sea around Cape Horn, or the long and perilous journey, with ox teams, across the plains, including what was then styled in our geographies the American desert, and through the hazardous mountain passes of the western part of the continent. The completion of the Pacific railroads changed all this, and opened new fields for all kinds of enterprises, in an unexplored territory stretching over more than 2,000 miles to the west, northwest and southwest of the Mississippi river, the products of which region were practically valueless until the means of transporting them were provided by the railroads. The wheat crop of California this year is 37,000,000 bushels. The largest crop ever produced in California was in 1880, when owing to exceptionally favorable weather conditions that state produced 60,000,000 bushels. The gold output of California for the year 1899 is estimated at $16,000,000. The vineyards and orange groves of California would be of practically little value were it not for the fact that the railroads, by their trains of refrigerator and ventilated cars, make it possible to transport the products of her fertile valleys to all sections of the country.

It seems but yesterday that the railroads were completed into Portland, Ore., Tacoma and Seattle, Wash., and it is marvelous that for the year ended June 30, 1899, there was exported from the Columbia River valley 16,000,000 bushels of wheat and from the Puget sound region 10,000,000 bushels. Oregon and Washington form the northwest corner of the territory of the United States south of the line of British Columbia and are directly on the route to our extreme northwest possession, Alaska. The wheat crop of the states of Oregon and Washington for the year 1899 is 48,600,000 bushels. There was exported during the year ended June 30, 1899, from the Columbia river direct to foreign ports 1,100,000 barrels of flour, and from Puget sound points 800,000 barrels.

Colorado, which, with its inexhaustible mines of gold, silver, lead, iron and coal, forms almost an empire in itself will produce this year of 1899 of gold $24,000,000; of silver, $14,200,000; of lead, $4,400,000, in addition to a magnificent crop of wheat, fruit and vegetables. Thanks to her railroad facilities, Montana is to-day the richest mineral region of its size in the world. The latest published statistics—those of 1897—give the mineral output of Montana as $54,000,000.

Without railroads, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana, Colorado, California, Oregon and Washington would still be the home of savages.

Service of American Railroads.

It is beyond question that American railroads to-day furnish the best service in the world, at the lowest rates of fare, at the same time paying their employes very much higher wages than are paid for similar service in any other country on the globe. In the United States the first-class passenger fares last year averaged 2.98 cents per mile, although on some large railways the average was several mills less than two cents per mile; in England the first-class fare is four cents per mile; third-class fare, for vastly inferior service, is two cents per mile, but only on certain parliamentary trains. In Prussia the fare is three cents per mile; in Austria, 3.05 cents per mile, and in France, 3.30 cents per mile.

Our passenger cars excel those of foreign countries in all that goes to make up the comfort and convenience of a journey. Our sleeping and parlor car system is vastly superior to theirs; our luggage system is infinitely better than theirs and arranged upon a much more liberal basis. American railroads carry 150 pounds of baggage free, while the German railroads carry only 55 pounds free. The lighting of our trains is superb, while the lighting of trains on most foreign lines is wretched.

These are some of the achievements of American railways in passenger service that have not been approached in any other country on the globe, and in my opinion it is achievements of this character that have made it possible for the United States to expand its commerce with such astounding rapidity.

The fact that American passenger service attracts the attention of people of every other country who visit our shores is demonstrated by the desire of all foreigners to ride on the Empire State express—the fastest long-distance train in the world—and the further desire to examine the magnificent machines that haul our great trains.

PROTEST BY SHERMAN.

McKinley's Former Secretary of State Condemns President's Philippine Policy.

Hon. John Sherman, although politically "as one dead, yet speaketh." He has broken silence to say that he has not changed his views concerning the Philippines.

He does not want to be considered unfriendly to the administration, that not being his sentiment, but he is still opposed to the idea of this country holding the Philippines and subjugating the natives. He is firmly of the belief that we have no business in the islands.

When the expansion idea fired the country Mr. Sherman was criticised for his stand against a policy of conquest in the Philippines, and was called unpatriotic because he refused to see the wisdom or justice of taking possession of territory to which we were not rightly entitled. Now, he thinks, there has been a revulsion of feeling, and in evidence of this he mentions the receipt of a number of letters from men of high standing in public life who were at first disposed to criticise him for his Philippine views, but who now cheerfully acknowledge that through moral conviction they are forced to agree with him.

It can hardly be said that Mr. Sherman is in President McKinley's confidence. The circumstances under which the venerable Ohio statesman entered and left the president's cabinet tend to prevent any confidential, or even cordial relations between the two. When Mr. Sherman says he thinks the president has come to the sober second thought and "is now disposed to avoid further bloodshed in the islands and will readily submit to any honorable arrangement to the end of reestablishing peace," it should be taken as what Mr. Sherman thinks the president ought to do rather than what President McKinley thinks about it himself.

Mr. Sherman says we have no moral right to cede the islands to another power, because they do not belong to us. We have not even the right to claim the islands by conquest, because we have not conquered them. We have no more moral right to claim the Philippines than we have to claim Cuba. We cannot govern the Filipinos according to our standards, because they have their own customs, habits and laws and have no sympathies in common with the Anglo-Saxon. It will be impossible for us to hold them in subjection without large armies there, entailing an enormous expenditure of money.

But what would Mr. Sherman have us do under present conditions? His idea is that we should withdraw our troops, gradually or at once, and turn the islands over to the natives. "Instead of sending soldiers, let us send statesmen to the Philippines, men who can assist the islanders to establish a substantial republican government, with which we can easily secure trade treaties that will give us all the privileges and profits of possession without the responsibilities thereof. It might be well for this country to hold a naval station in the island of Luzon, but Aguinaldo is willing to give us that. He would very willingly form a close, friendly alliance with this country and concede every reasonable privilege we might ask for."

When President McKinley reads this opinion of his former secretary of state he will undoubtedly congratulate himself that the venerable statesman is neither in the cabinet nor in the senate. Were he still chairman of the senate committee on foreign affairs, the proposed joint resolution declaring the purpose of the United States to hold the Philippines would strike a snag in the committee room.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ELECTION RESULTS.

A Terribly Emphatic Rebuke to the Administration for Criminal Aggression.

That the recent election carried with it a severe condemnation of imperialism is clear to all intelligent people, and claims to the contrary on the part of administration organs are simply buncombe and nothing more.

That this fact is apparent to those who allow themselves to reason is made evident by the editorial comment in the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, a newspaper true to the grand old party, but opposed to imperialism.

Discussing the results of the recent election, the Republican says:

"The election carries to the administration a terribly emphatic rebuke for its war of criminal aggression. Maryland has swung back to its democratic moorings. Nebraska shows large gains for democrats. As to Ohio, the issue on imperialism was clearly drawn."

The Republican continues: "The great lurch which sends the president's party in Ohio from large and apparently unassailable majorities in years past into a striking minority has been brought about by the presidential policy of criminal aggression."

Nash was elected governor of Ohio by the republicans, it is true, but with a plurality of 50,000 there was a popular majority of 60,000 against the policy of imperialism.

Jones received 110,000 votes, every one of which was a protest against McKinley.

There can be no doubt that the Jones vote was against imperialism, and this is the view taken of it by Candidate Jones.

In concluding its comments the Republican says:

"The verdict of the election raises at once the question of the expediency of Mr. McKinley's renomination. It points to the impossibility of electing him in 1900 on the platform he has made for himself, and by which he must now apparently stand or fall."

Coming from a republican newspaper, this is rather cold comfort for Emperor William McKinley. — Chicago Democrat.

WHAT BRYAN SAYS.

The Democratic Leader Takes a Hopeful View of the Situation.

W. J. Bryan gave to the press an extended statement, summing up the results of the elections in different states. In Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, where the democrats reaffirmed the Chicago platform, he finds that they have made gains, while in New York and New Jersey the republican vote shows a falling off.

Ohio is summed up as follows:

"What consolation can republicans draw from the Ohio election? Mr. Hanna secured the nomination of his candidate for governor upon a platform indorsing the republican administration, and while the returns indicate that Nash has a plurality of about 50,000 over McLean, McLean and Jones together have a majority of something like 50,000 over the republican candidate. McLean ran upon a platform emphatically indorsing the Chicago platform and condemning trusts, militarism and imperialism, and he made a gallant fight against great odds. Ohio is the home of the president. It is the home of Mr. Hanna, chairman of the republican national committee. Postmasters all over the United States were urged to contribute money to save Ohio. Mr. Hanna took the stump himself and called upon the republicans to support the ticket and indorse the policies of the administration. And yet in spite of all that could be done Mr. Hanna's own county was carried by Mr. Jones, and the republican party which had a majority of nearly 50,000 in 1896 is now overwhelmed by a majority approximating 50,000. The Jones vote is anti-republican. Mr. Jones himself has made an open fight against Mr. Hanna and his methods, and the republican party has turned its batteries against Mr. Jones and his followers."

Iowa, South Dakota and Kansas results are passed over with brief paragraphs as not of leading importance. On Nebraska he says:

"The Nebraska campaign was fought on national issues and the fusion candidate for judge received about 14,000 this year, as against 3,000 last year for the fusion candidate for governor and 12,000 for the fusion electors in 1896 and the fusion candidate for judge in 1897. Assistant Secretary of War Meiklejohn came from Washington to plead with the voters to uphold the president's policies. Senators Thurston and Hayward were on the stump warning the people not to repudiate the president. Senator Fairbanks and other prominent republicans from outside the state lent their influence, but notwithstanding the efforts put forth by the republicans the fusion forces gained a signal victory. Their candidate, Judge Holcomb, carried five of the congressional districts out of the six and lost the remaining district (the First) by only 1,000. The fusionists made a net gain of three district judges and a large gain in county officers."

Mr. Bryan continues.

"Taken as a whole, the election returns from all the states give encouragement to those who hope for the overthrow of the republican party in 1900. It is evident that those who believed in the Chicago platform in 1896 still believe in it. It is also evident that the hostility to that Chicago platform among those who opposed it is not as pronounced as it was in 1896. It is apparent also that there is a growing hostility to the monopolies which have grown up under a republican administration. It is safe to say that the American people would by a large majority pronounce against an attempt to raise the standing army to 100,000 men, and it is equally certain that upon a direct vote upon the issue a large majority of the people would pronounce against an imperialistic policy which would develop here a colonial system after the pattern of European governments.

"If the rebuke administered to the republicans had been more severe the prospect of remedial legislation at the hands of republicans would be brighter. While it was sufficient to indicate that the people are not satisfied with the republican policies, it may not have been sufficient to stay the course of the republican party toward plutocracy and toward European idea of a government built upon force rather than upon the consent of the governed—a government relying for its safety upon a large standing army rather than upon a citizen soldiery."

NOT YET TESTED.

The People Have Not Yet Passed Upon the Administration's Policy of Expansion.

That the administration should not have been able to make a better showing than that of the elections in 12 states is a fact full of significance as bearing upon the presidential contest of 1900.

It is cinimed by the administration party and by administration organs that a majority of the people of this country are in favor of the president's policy of American expansion into the eastern hemisphere. Where do they find an expression of this sentiment in the recent elections?

In Massachusetts, where the fight was made almost exclusively on the expansion issue, the democratic party made surprising gains. Ohio was held for the president only by the exertion of all the administration influence. In no state of the 12 did the vote show that the president's Philippine policy strengthened the republican party.

The issue of imperialism, of expansion by the conquest of foreign territory, will come clearly before the people of all the states in 1900. There is reason to believe that the popular vote will pronounce unqualified public condemnation of this un-American policy. The democratic party has cause for greater confidence than ever that the people of this country are not yet ready to repudiate American principles for the gain of foreign territory or the government by force of weaker peoples.—St. Louis Republic.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

—Naturally, Hanna will say that a prophet is not without honor except in his own city.—Pittsburgh Post.

—Hon. Marcus Moneybags Hanna has nothing to crow over in the result in Ohio. He has received his warning.—Illinois State Register.

—McKinleyism was indorsed by the minority and repudiated by the majority vote of Ohio. That is a "pointer" for 1900.—Kansas City Times.

—If the president is really so delighted at the result of the recent elections the fact cannot be denied that it takes very little to please him.—St. Louis Republic.

—The anti-administration vote in Ohio is about 50,000 greater than the administration vote. McKinley and Hanna are entitled to all the comfort they can get from this fact.—Columbus Post.

feet of matched hemlock flooring at $15 per 1,000 feet. For a partition, in place of netting I used straight poles from the forest, for cheapness. I had the sash, and battened my roof with slabs, but still was very careful to make it warm, and it cost me only about four dollars. I performed the work myself, which any handy man can do with the aid of the illustrations.

Below is an itemized list of lumber and other supplies: Two hundred and sixty feet of ten-foot inch boards for siding (must not be cut to waste); 231 feet of 14-foot inch boards for roof and nests; 100 feet battens 3 inches by 10 feet; two pieces 2 inches by 6 inches by 14 feet, and two pieces 2 inches by 6 inches by 12 feet for sills; eight pieces 2 inches by four inches by 14 feet for plates and cross beams; four pieces 1 inch by 6 inches by 12 feet for window casing; two squares of felt roofing at $1.50 per square, including nails for same; one roll building paper 500 square feet, 60 cents; netting 6x16 feet, 70 cents; 10 pounds nails, 30 cents; two pairs strap hinges, 30 cents; four half sash, $2.50. Total cost of lumber and supplies, $14.45 at market price. Waste material can be used where there is some on hand. The labor would occupy a carpenter with one man to help about two days.—G. R. MILK FOR POULTRY.

At One Cent a Gallon It Is the Cheapest Food That the Farmer Can Secure.

Milk is an excellent poultry food, fed in any way. It is the cheapest animal food that you can buy if you can get it for one cent a gallon, says Farm Poultry. Recent experiments have proved it to be one of the best hot-weather animal foods for chicks or laying fowls. It is, however, considered necessary to supply some additional meat food to get the best results in eggs. The milk could be fed daily and the meat twice a week, and good results follow. Beef plucks are an exceptionally good and cheap meat food. They are much cheaper than bone. We should feed milk and beef pluck, and would consider that we were getting our animal food very cheap.

You can feed the plucks to best advantage by varying the manner of preparing. Probably they will be best when cooked. The best way to prepare plucks to have them keep sweet will be to run them through a meat cutter or sausage machine and then boil the minced meat. Skim off all the fat and strain the soup after cooking meat thoroughly. Use the liquor for mixing mash. The cooked meat, after being well drained, should be well dried in a moderate oven. If properly prepared it will keep some time. It should be kept in a cool, dry place and out of the way of insects. We would not prepare a very large quantity, as it is liable to "heat." We have had no trouble keeping meat so prepared for a month, even in hot weather. It must be thoroughly dried or it will spoil.

SELL MATURED STOCK.

There's No Profit in Keeping Cattle or Hogs After They Have Been Fattened Fairly Well.

There is no profit in keeping any kind of stock when they have been fattened for the market; the retention of cattle or hogs that have reached a point where every ear of corn serves only to maintain their present condition is unwise and unprofitable. When they are fat sell them; you cannot afford to continue feeding them in anticipation of higher prices, regardless of the cheapness of the feed. If a hog is fat and ready for market at 200 pounds sell him, as no appreciable gain can be made after this period has been reached, and on the other hand there is some danger of the animal going back, or losing fat; so it is best to place the stock on the market after the finishing touches have been put on, and yield not to the temptation, which is a strong one, to hold on for better prices, which may and may not be received.

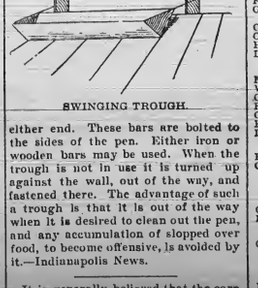
If cattle and hogs have been judiciously fed and are of good breeding they will nearly always bring a remunerative price and pay handsomely for the labor and expense involved in their preparation for the market.

Another thing—the local buyers who visit you every week or two to get stuff to send to Chicago, St. Louis or Kansas City and who of course make considerable profit thereby, should be sent to "the other fellow," as any farmer can ship his own stock, cattle, hogs and sheep, just as cheaply as the local buyer can, and thus secure the profit which the latter usually receives. He may not have a load, but the buyer may be confronted with the same difficulty; then the thing to do is to see a neighbor or two who may have stock to ship and thus make out the car load. It pays to save money wherever possible; this is one of the places where it is possible. The reason many farmers do not act in this regard as advised is that the little trouble of getting a car, loading the stock and caring for it during shipment frightens them and they are content to sell to the local buyer at less money than undergo the trouble and receive higher prices.—Farmers' Voice.

FUTURE OF FARMING.

The Bugaboo of Overproduction Exists Only in the Minds of Unthinking Pessimists.

An extensive agricultural area, cheap lands and improved machinery have enabled us to increase the agricultural products of the country, until, in view of low prices, filled cribs and groaning granaries, we have sometimes concluded that there was a permanent condition of over-production. But population, as well as production, is increasing. Careful computation of the probable additions to our population makes it certain that with our present methods, and with all our land that now seems available for tillage, this country cannot produce enough to feed its people 25 or 30 years hence.



The statistician of the department of agriculture estimates that in 1931 the population of the United States will be 130,000,000; and it is a conservative estimate. To supply the requirements of this number of people will necessitate the production of 700,000,000 bushels of wheat, 1,250,000,000 bushels of oats, 3,450,000,000 bushels of corn and 100,000,000 tons of hay. If we produce this immense quantity of food products for man and beast, under our present system, we must bring under cultivation 150,000,000 acres more land than we now cultivate; and it is estimated that we have only 108,000,000 acres of new land that is available for farming purposes.

There is no doubt, however, that under pressure of necessity, millions of acres which are now deemed worthless, or comparatively so, would be tilled, with reasonable profit; and there is no doubt that under such conditions our farming would be much more intensive. So while there will be no danger of a scarcity of food, agriculture will be one of the most profitable of industries.—Agricultural Epitomist.

A SWINGING TROUGH.

Its Chief Advantage Is That It Is Out of the Way When the Pen Needs a Cleaning.

The trough or feed box shown in the illustration is suitable for either fowls or swine. It is the ordinary, V-shape, and is held in place by a stout bar at either end. These bars are bolted to the sides of the pen. Either iron or wooden bars may be used. When the trough is not in use it is turned up against the wall, out of the way, and fastened there. The advantage of such a trough is that it is out of the way when it is desired to clean out the pen, and any accumulation of slopped over food, to become offensive, is avoided by the way of insects. We would not prepare a very large quantity, as it is liable to "heat." We have had no trouble keeping meat so prepared for a month, even in hot weather. It must be thoroughly dried or it will spoil.

CARRIES HIS OWN TELEPHONE

An Eccentric Wanderer from the State of Montana Exhibits the Plant at Evanston.

A walking telephone caused considerable merriment in the business houses of Evanston, Ill., the other afternoon. J. C. Chester, of Glendive, Mont., was the curiosity and he carried speaking tubes and 400 yards of insulated wire wound about his person and threaded in and out through his clothing. A sign upon his breast which read: "Tell 'hello' and place the receiver at your ear," made him additionally conspicuous as he walked from store to store.

Chester is an inventor, and is deaf and dumb. He said he was on his way to Washington to secure a patent on his contrivances, which "assist deaf persons to hear and dumb persons to talk." He needed money to get there and asked for assistance by means of a little tin whistle which was connected by wire to the receiver and through which he lisped the words and breathed at the same time. The sound thus produced was very faint, but the electric current, which was supplied by a battery carried in the hip pocket, added to its volume and through the receiver resembled a Punch and Judy dialect. Chester is a graduate of the Columbus (O.) deaf mute institute, he said, and carried credentials purporting to be signed by Prof. C. M. Fulton, of that institution.

Prof. Alexis Everett Frye, who has been appointed by Gen. Brooke to supervise the new educational system of Havana, is a graduate of the Chicago normal school and of Harvard university, with the grade of master of arts. He is also a graduate of the Harvard law school and a member of the Massachusetts bar. He has taught every grade, from the primary through the high school, has been a teacher of methods in the Chicago normal school, city superintendent of schools in Colorado, and has delivered more than 1,500 lectures on educational topics in almost every state of the union. He is the author of several text books, one of which has been translated into Spanish and has been authorized for use in the schools of Porto Rico.

HUGE SWARM OF FLIES.

Residents of Sheboygan, Wis., Treated to a Singular Visitation—Swept Along Like a Cloud.

For a short time the other afternoon the air in the western part of Sheboygan was filled with a peculiar small fly. It appeared in one large swarm, covering several city squares, and swept along like a cloud. Persons caught in the midst of the flies were covered with them, as they would have been with snow in a snowstorm. The huge swarm of flies was viewed with astonishment and the streets were lined with those viewing the dark mass as it swept along. No one could be found who had witnessed a similar phenomenon prior to this time.

Bishop Welldon's Linguistic Feat.

Dr. Welldon, the new bishop of Calcutta, has accomplished a linguistic feat. Six months after his arrival in India he took a full confirmation service in the Bengali dialect at Ranaghat, in the diocese of Calcutta. There are many in the episcopacy who take up the study of the Indian tongues, but throw them up in despair. Bishop Welldon, however, persevered and got on so well that, besides the service named, he has already given a sermon in the Bengali vernacular, which is the one mostly spoken in the Calcutta diocese.

Still More Counterfeiting

The Secret Service has just unearthed another band of counterfeiters and secured a large quantity of bogus bills, which are so cleverly executed that the average person would never suspect them of being spurious. Things of great value are always selected for imitation, notably Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators but no equals for disorders like indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and general debility. A Little Too Soon.

A professor was going to experiment with laughing gas when he overheard a student say that if he were selected for a subject he would take advantage of his supposed coma to tell the professor what he thought of him. When the class met the professor announced that he would like, for the purposes of illustration, to administer the gas to some member of the class. Forthwith this student volunteered.

The gas bulb was connected with his mouth. He pretended to be very much excited and began to abuse the professor roundly. The old man let him go on for awhile; but the class roared when the professor said he needn't be so irresponsible—the gas had not been turned on yet.—Collier's Weekly.

Cat Story.

"Cats," said the gaunt man with the grizzled whiskers, "can comprehend human speech."

"Got a cat story?" asked the irreverent person with the button nose.

"I have. My daughter was doing a bit of Wagner night before last, and I called through the door to ask whether it were she or the cat making the noise."

"Well?"

"The cat got up, swore vehemently, walked out and hasn't been seen since."—Indianapolis Journals.

Palace on Wheels

is a somewhat hackneyed term as applied to railroad trains, but it accurately describes the Alton Limited, the newly equipped day trains of the Chicago & Alton R. R. Co. which were placed in daily service between Chicago and St. Louis, November 16, 1899. The equipment consists of standard Chicago & Alton passenger locomotives, United States postal car, sixty-six feet in length; combination passenger and baggage car, combination parlor chair car and coach, Chicago & Alton parlor chair car, cafe and buffet smoking car and Pullman parlor observation car, each of which is seventy-two feet six inches in length. Running of all these cars is Pullman standard with Empire decks, wide vestibules, standard steel platforms and anti-telescoping device. All of the cars are lighted with electric lights except the mail car and combination passenger coach and baggage car, which are lighted with Pintsch gas. The windows throughout the entire train are of uniform width, the Gothic lights above being of the new Pullman standard. The ornamentation is of special design, the color scheme being maroon. Great care has been used in the selection of plushes and woods for the interior, and the lamps, metal furnishings, etc., are of special design. It is claimed that there has never been built in America a train which has received as much attention as to constructive details as has The Alton Limited. An examination of this superb train certainly bears out this claim.

STATE NEWS.

About 800,000 turkeys will be slaughtered by Central Kentucky people for the eastern market.

There have been five deaths of meningitis at Worthington, four in one family. Eight other cases reported.

Guthrie Chilton, of Louisville, while operating a steam press at his father's trunk factory, had his hands crushed off at the wrists.

John D. Gardner, a wealthy citizen of Christian county, died from the effects of a splinter that was stuck in his hand last week.

The Spencer county grand jury has returned an indictment against F. L. Page, charging him with arson. Taylorsville suffered four destructive fires in less than 7 months and Page was arrested. In the last fire Page lost his own store, it being covered with $4,000 insurance.

News of the death of General Clarence Greathouse, formerly of Versailles, at Seoul, Korea, caused much regret. Greathouse established the Versailles Sun, and was very popular. His mother, who was with him in Korea, is 80 years old. The remains will probably be brought to San Francisco, where his father and sister are buried.

A panic of considerable proportion was created at Pleasant Hill church Friday night during worship by one Lee Humphry, a strolling desperado from Garrard county, who entered the church near the close of the services and walked directly up in front of the minister, drew a long old fashioned navy revolver from his side and flourished it around in a threatening manner. He didn't attempt to shoot but turned and walked back and calmly took a seat as if that was the proper caper to cut in church in a civilized community. In the intense excitement that followed this strange action women and children screamed and men lost their heads. In the stampede some were badly bruised and one child was considerably hurt, it is said. No attempt was made, it seems, to apprehend this war-like individual in his mad course. It is said that he has been in an asylum for the insane, but crazy or sane he should certainly not be permitted to roam at will armed to the teeth endangering the lives of people.—Nicholasville Democrat.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The New crop of tobacco, though only sparingly offered as yet, seems to receive better attention than the old, or at least as good, for, when the low grades in their present state bring 6 cents, that certainly would make them worth 8 cents in dry condition. Of course it is by no means certain that these goods will command the some prices when liberal offerings take place, and we think that the present figures should encourage early shipments. We believe that a considerable part of them will be marketed before the first of the year, if the weather permits. If what has been on the brakes so far can serve as a criterion for the crop in general, then it seems to have plenty of body and color, and will, on the whole, probably equal in merit the old crop. We also think that yield will be about as large.

In old stock we have to report light sales and lighter receipts. The bidding on everything that is offered is quick and active, but no change in prices is noticeable, low grades selling at full quotations and the medium and fine goods frequently below the expectations of shippers.

Only four or five weeks remain for sales in the present year and it appears that there can not be much change in the stocks in market. Receipts will certainly be light and sales also are not apt to be large.

CROP AND STOCK.

W. B. Kidd bought of James Thompson 68 head of 1,325-pound export cattle at $5.10 per hundred. —Kentuckian Citizen.

Bonta Brothers, of Mercer county, have lost 600 acres of wheat by fly. They sowed early and until a few days ago the prospects were fine.

It is reported that quite recently one of the large sheep owners of Central Wyoming was offered $4 per head for the top of his ewe lambs, which is said to be the highest price offered for range lambs during the past twenty years.

D. Hanz, a Warren county farmer, has made a fine quality of syrup, from watermelon and expects to produce sugar in paying quantities the same way. He figures a large profit out of such an industry, with but little expense and less trouble.

The market for old burley showed very little change from the last week or two. No grade offered was hardly as strong, excepting strictly sweet and particularly any crops of freshly packed sweet tobaccos, which sold better than any other at good averages and very satisfactory to sellers. In new burley there is no change really, only that good mediums sold up to 12½c, the highest this season, but even these, as well as all offered, were more or less mixed, nearly all the crops sold being small farmers. — Louisville Ween.

The Pantagraph has made inquiries of turkey dealers and they declare that on account of the large crop prices will be low this season. It will be recalled prices ranged as high as 9½ cents in some places last year. The price will not exceed 6c delivered, this season it is thought. Turkey meat is very good, but there never was a time when in reality it was worth 9½ cents. Turkey producers might as well prepare to take a reasonable price for their fowls this season or they will have to hold them. This seems to be the opinion everywhere.—Richmond Pantagraph.

Mr. H. E. Rockwood, of Illinois, who recently sold a car load of cattle on the Chicago market for $7 per hundred, writes to the Breeder's Gazette the following particulars about the feeding, etc., of these cattle: "The cattle sold by me recently in Chicago at 7 cents per pound were the heavy steers out of a bunch of 90 head, which I bought in Chicago on the 23d of last February. They were grade Shorthorns, two and three years old and showed some corn feeding. They were put onto ear corn first and when on full feed worked gradually to shelled corn, giving them all they wanted till shipped. For roughness they were given clover hay until May 1, and after that timothy. They were turned on grass May 25 and given a little hay all summer. The last eight weeks about two pounds of oilmeal per head was mixed in the shelled corn each day. These fourteen cattle were not weighed separately from the others, but as near as I can judge weighed 1,150 lbs. when I got them. The ninety head averaged 1,025 lbs. and as they averaged 1,646 lbs. when sold they made about 500 lbs. gain per head. They made me plenty of money."

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1899. NO. 6

WILL Governor Bradley call out the troops tomorrow to enforce an observance of his thanksgiving proclamation?

How to dispose of Congressman-elect Roberts, of Utah, is a question that will bring out numerous learned speeches in Congress.

THE Mikado, of Japan, wants an earthquake proof palace, and has called on Chicago engineers to design one to be constructed for him at a cost of $3,000,000.

IN the opinion of Democrats the Courier-Journal at one time in the past deserted them at a critical point, but they can not say that at that or anyother time the C.-J. ever advised the burning of private property and the murdering of its owners. As much cannot be said for some of its near neighbors.

SMALL POX prevails to an alarming extent in many localities in the State, and, if it is, as claimed, a winter disease, it has got such a start as will make it difficult for the physicians to control it. According to reports about one-third of the population of Union county is afflicted with small pox.

THE Commercial Tribune is in bad repute with the machine Republicans in Cincinnati, Cox and his follows, who constitute about all the Republican party there is in Hamilton county. They charge that the C. T. was the cause of the slaughter of the Republican candidates for city offices at the last election.

ABOUT the latest news in regard to the election is that the Goebel men have armed the convicts in the penitentiary at Frankfort with Winchester rifles for the purpose of assisting to seat Goebel by force as Governor. This is on a par with many other things that have been told in the last few months, and some will be found who will repeat the falsehood for the truth.

ONE reason why the Republican party keeps so thoroughly organized is because a very large per cent. of its members not now in office hope to be at an early date, while a large majority of the remainder has friends they want to get into government positions, and are patiently awaiting their turn. On the other hand the Democrats find their pleasure, although demoralizing it is, in fighting and scratching among themselves.

THOSE papers that are trying to incite people to acts of violence on account of the recent election are a menace to the welfare of the public. This little breeze is nothing when compared with the storm of 1876, and it caused no blood letting, and there is no reason why the present Kentucky contention should not be adjusted without the resort to arms, as was the affair that involved three States, Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida in 1876.

CONGRESSMAN BERRY has made a tour of the lower end of this Congressional District since the election, looking to his political fences, which his action in the recent campaign left in very bad condition; but he is an astute politician and it remains to be seen to what extent he can overcome the ill feeling engendered by him in the last few months. His record for securing appropriations for this district and offices for his constituents will go a long way in extenuation of objections to him.

THE Democratic Congressional Committee in the Seventh District called primary meetings for yesterday throughout the district for the purpose of arranging for delegates to attend the district convention to be held at Frankfort on the 30th inst. to nominate a Democratic candidate for Congress, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. E. E. Settle. Following is the rule by which the District Committee says it shall be determined whether or not a voter is entitled to participate in the primaries:

"All Democrats who supported the Democratic ticket at the last election and who will support the nominee of this convention may vote in said precinct meetings."

Editorial Paragraphs.

The taking of the Cuban census is looked upon as a step preparatory to annexation; that is, if the Cubans show a disposition to come into the United States, as the administration leaders assert they will do, a proposition will be made to Congress to make the island at once a part of the territory of this country. Although the war resolutions stated that the island would be independent, there is a general belief that it will be annexed.

Following closely upon Mr. Hanna's declaration that the trusts aid the laboring man, the Governor of Massachusetts takes the same position. Before long, these eminent gentlemen will be declaring that there is nothing so good for the working man as giving up his wages to enrich the monopolist.

For a man who was not looking for trouble, it seems as though Mark Hanna has found his share between his rheumatism, the setback in his home city of Cleveland, and the growing demand among Republicans for his retirement from the chairmanship of the National Committee.

Among the latest recruits for the Quay seating campaign, is Senator Wolcott of Colorado, who declares that he will vote to seat Mr. Quay because the country needs him. It might be well to consult Brother Wanamaker before accepting Mr. Wolcott's view of the case.

With Chauncey M. Depew in the United States Senate as Thomas C. Platt's colleague, there seems no reason to doubt that the interest of the New York Central Railway and the United States Express Company will be well protected.

It will be agreed by all that if Sam Weller's advice had been taken to "beware of the vidders," Admiral Dewey would be in a better position today than he has been placed by recent developments.

It is said that Mrs. Kruger is so old fashioned that she will not permit her husband to wear American made pajamas, all of which demonstrates that greatness has its tribulations as well as its compensations.

The latest news from Otis, is that he has rounded up several barrels of Mrs. Aguinaldo's clothes. We are prepared to lay a wager that he has not been able to find the pockets in the dresses.

If Otis really desires to terminate the war in the Philippines, why not send him a few plum puddings Great Britain is sending to Africa. They would soon fix the Tagalogs.

Philadelphia, it is said, is to expend $12,000,000 in purifying her water supply. A much smaller sum could be invested satisfactorily in the purification of her polling lists.

General Eagan should secure a commission in the British Army now that a canned beef scandal has appeared. Bad beef without Eagan would be (bad) egg without salt.

This government has not yet sent any plum puddings to its soldiers in the Philippines. Possibly, they think that they have a pudding in the person of General Otis.

It is hoped that the next time the American people make a donation to a hero, they will take the precaution to learn his matrimonial intentions in advance.

Congress has become so accustomed to have all its thinking done in the Speaker's chair, that it will require some little thinking of its own.

If the British really desire to force Oom Paul to capitulate, they had best cut off the six-inch main that supplies him with beer.

It will be amusing to see the members of the G. O. P. tumble over each other, in the grab for Vice-President Hobart's shoes.

MISSOURI LETTER.

Springfield, Mo., Nov. 17, '99.

To the Edstor of the Recorder:

It has been a long time since a copy of your excellent paper reached the writer, until recently, and a much longer time since having met its publisher—some thirty years I should say.

I see you are still faithful to your first love, literature and law. I hope the profession and occupation has been both pleasant and profitable, and that Father Time has dealt leniently with you. He has hit me several hard jolts, bleached my hair, dimmed my eyes and made me a bachelor the second time in my life. Still, I have much to be thankful for as my health nor memory are not impaired, nor is my overwhelming conviction of justice, equality, right and wrong. Yet, I have long since been forced to the conclusion, that the word justice has been terribly abused. It is forcibly illustrated to the world in general—in politics and law, especially in a thousand different ways.

I saw the names of so many Boone, Kenton, Grant and Gallatin county people, I had formerly known, years ago, in a late issue of RECORDER that to read its well filled, newsy pages is like receiving a letter from home. I say home, while a Hawk-eye by birth, reared as a Corn cracker and a Missourian by adoption, mother, sisters and brothers all live in old Kentucky, and I still regard it as home. I will further say, I am proud of the privilege of calling the grand old State my home.

I see you have had "a hot time in the old town," and State, recently, in electing a Governor and other State officers. Politicians are some times "warm members" and not only have the two political factions become superheated over the offices and perquisits, in your State, but even the potatoes go off with a glunch, bursting hills, stoves and frightening the cooks almost out of their wits. Possibly the potatoes are "loaded for bear" as the old adage goes and are cannonading over a Democratic victory and the vanquished foe. Still, if that was the case they were a little premature on the face of the returns. At anyrate, it would seem that it takes a long time for one party to count the other out. In case Mr. Goebel did get it in his solar plexus, I hope the rest of the ticket is safe, especially Boone county's candidate for Senator, Dr. Furnish. I hope he was elected by a big majority.

Kentucky soil seems to be noted for its freaks in nature. I have always known it was a great State, remarkable for fast horses and handsome women, but it would seem this year she is bidding for a record breaker, not only from a political and potatoe stand point, but by tobacco freaks also. Not satisfied with producing an enviable crop of tobacco, stalk spring up from roots of parent stalk, blooming and blossoming like the rose. Chickens are not given credit for being very sensible. Animal trainers say sheep and chickens haven't any memory. Evidently they never tried to break a hen from setting when she takes a notion to set. They are a good deal like the feminine sex, when she will she will, and when she wont she wont. But that Waverly-Morganfield hen-story takes the cake. If I could lie like the Sun man I'd start a funny paper.

I suppose the Riddells are all Democrats, but the way Cal is distributing silverspoons and throwing double eagles to the wind, it is a puzzle to decide as to whether he is a silver-Republican, gold-Democrat or a monometalist. Which is it Cal?

Springfield was honored by a visit a few days ago, by the most distinguished and most talked of man in the U. S., especially since Dewey married and settled in the neighborhood of Hanna and Mack. I refer to W. J. Bryan. He past through this city on his way to Tany county, where the time is spent in hunting and fishing. Col. Wetmore, of Saint Louis, a retired tobacconist, and Geo. H. McCann, one of the owners of the Old Coon Tobacco Works of this place, own a 10,000 acre game reserve, in the Ozark Hills of Tany county. and every fall they invite Col. Bryan, ex-Gov. Stone, of this place, and Jones, of Arkansas, to join them there in a week or ten days recreation and sport, but this year only Mr. Bryan responded. The reserve is stocked with deer, elk, bear, turkey, pheasant, quail, etc. The streams are well stocked with fish. The lodge is spacious, well built, and has all the modern conveniences, such as water, sewer, plumbing, etc., and the sport is highly enjoyed by the owners and distinguished visitors.

Times are quiet here in spite of boasted prosperity. Lots of men out of employment, no matter what the Republican press say.

Our citizens are now agitating a railroad 90 miles long from this city north to the Missouri river at Jefferson City, and there to connect with the main line of the Missouri Pacific. It is a good enterprise and many think it will be built. But, pshaw, Springfield has built from it (on paper) two or three railroads every year for 18 years, so when work begins I'll only be too glad to inform your readers. Still, the surveyors are in the field and the bonus is all made up but $20,000 of the total amount asked by the company, $250,000. Springfield subscribed $100,000, right of way through the county and depot facilities. Dallas county subscribed $100,000, whereby she compromises 85 per cent. of an old bonded debt of a million dollars that has been standing for the last 20 years, without any of the principal or interest being paid. The condition is that the county vote $250,000 twenty-year bonds, $100,000 to be applied to building the road through the county, the remainder to go to the bondholders. In the first place the old bonds are unjust, as they were issued for a railroad that was never built; but they fell into the hands of innocent purchasers, who have never been able to collect them.

The weather is fine here, mild and balmy. The crops were fine.

Some good buildings are going up still not enough employment to keep the laboring class busy, consequently they have to hustle, even the festive Plumber has to keep twisting and screwing to make ends meet, both in pipe fitting and living. You know the loudest feature about the Plumber, like the musquito, is his bill. Well, since Mark Hanna became President, that protuberance on the insect as well as the bill of the aforenamed genius homo (whatever that is) has been curtailed somewhat. He is living now by the sweat of his brow more than by his pen, as formerly.

So mote it be.

CONCLUSIONS FROM EXPERIENCE.

The worst remedy for an evil is to complain about it.

For every foolish thing in law there is a wise reason.

Make useful sacrifices enough to dispense with useless ones.

Put your strength in your fight instead of in your challenge.

Some men are ever ready to do an injury and apologize for it.

When one builds castles in the air, he leaves out the troubles.

Take care of your health while you have it, not after it is gone.

A delicate man at work accomplishes more than a giant in idleness.

It is much harder to get a dollar into one's pocket than to take it out.

The next best thing after not being pretty is not to know that you are ugly.

Most men give up what they like to do in order to get what they like to have.

One who spends money imprudently is not apt to have money to spend prudently.

Politicians are given appointments, not for favors received but for favors expected.

Many waste their powers in getting wealth and then waste their wealth in getting power.

The politicians have a greater desire to rule badly than the people have to be ruled well.

It is strange how often some people prove themselves fools, and yet have no knowledge of it.

Those who feel better on drinking, first disqualify themselves by drink for feeling good.

THE RECORDER knows no more about who will be the next Governor of Kentucky than it knew last week. The State Board of Election Commissioners meet next Saturday to begin the canvass of the vote, and both sides claim to be confident of success.

IT is more than likely that in the Sevenih Congressional District the Republicans will take up a Brown man as their candidate for Congress, which will not be entirely satisfactory to Denny and some of the old line Republicans.

GOV. MOUNT, of Indiana, has the Vice-Presidential bee buzzing in his hat. He is good enough timber for the place.

An Egg Instead of a Pill.

A Philadelphia physician advances a theory which, while given in a spirit of jest, nevertheless is based upon authentic scientific experiment. "It looks," says the jocular medicine man, "as though we doctors would be driven to the wall and by that humble but useful fowl, the hen. You see, it's this way: A French chemist has discovered that certain drugs, notably those containing iron, are best assimilated by the human stomach albumen of eggs. He has accordingly mixed his medicines with cracked wheat and corn and in this form has fed it to hens.

"The eggs laid by these hens have been found to be impregnated with the medicinal qualities of the drugs and are said to have been very beneficial to patients. The Frenchman has experimented with pepsia and camomile, and says he will try other drugs. This is a matter of medical record. But the point I want to make is this, and it haunts my dreams: Is the time coming when a man can dispense with a doctor and keep a hen? When he has a bad cold instead of sending for me he will get his hen to lay him a quinine egg? If he has indigestion will he take a pepsin egg instead of seeking my advice? When the waiter of the future asks you how you will have your eggs the question will possess an entirely new significance. I tell you the thing is appalling."—Philadelphia Press.

What Texas Does.

[Texas Exchange.]

Here is an item that will astonish our eastern and northern readers. A member of our Board who is one of the prominent lumber men of Texas, writes us, "One of our mill men secured an order a few days ago from England for 500,000,000 feet of yellow pine lumber to be exported to Europe. It is estimated that it will take all the saw mills in Texas twelve months to cut it, fifty thousand acres of good timber land to furnish the timber and five hundred vessels to carry it across the water. This is the largest single order for lumber in the history of the world." To the above we may add the following facts: Texas is the largest State in the union, has the largest capitol building, is the third in the number of miles of railroad it contains, the seventh in population and produces one-third of all the cotton raised in the United States and one-fourth of all the cotton raised in the world.

I Have Observed.

That politics makes strange bed fellows:

That the man who is bought once must be bought always.

That the man who doesnt talk at all is the fellow who does the business with the stencil.

That the politicians are given appointments, not for favors received but for favors expected.

That it is easier to collect money for political purposes than it is to raise a fund for the building of a church.

That when the people make up their minds to do a thing, the campaign orators doesn't begin to earn their wages.

That some men work harder getting offices for other people than they do earning bread for their wives and children.

That the successful candidate is often bothered most by the explanations of some of those who were for the other fellow.

That the fellow who makes the most noise during a campaign gets the smallest returns by horse-power or any man in the push.

That men watch each other more in counting two hundred votes than they do in business transactions affecting thousands of dollars.

That the campaign orator who talks the most about saving his country is seldom willing to fight with anything but his mouth.

That some how or other it is mighty hard to keep up enthusiasm for our man after he has been wiped from the face of the earth.

That political managers have more trouble with some fellows who are for them than they do with multitudes who are against them.

That some of the wisest politicians are among those who patch the seats of their trousers twenty times a year and have to buy shoes only when they outgrow the old ones.—Penciller in Danville Advocate.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING DAY.

IN PURITAN New England a year had passed away,
Since first beside the Plymouth coast the English Mayflower lay,
When Bradford, the good governor, sent rowiers forth to snare
The turkey and the wild fowl, to increase the scanty fare:

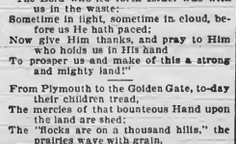
"Our husbandry hath prospered, there is corn enough for food,
Though the pease be parched in blossom, and the grain indifferent good.'
Who blessed the loaves and fishes for the feast miraculous,
And filled with oil the widow's cruse, He hath remembered us!

"Give thanks unto the Lord of Hosts, by whom we all are fed,
Who granted us our daily prayer: 'Give us our daily bread!'
By us and by our children let this day be kept for aye,
In memory of His bounty, as the land's Thanksgiving day."

Each brought his share of Indian meal the pious feast to make,
With the fat deer from the forest and the wild-fowl from the brake.
And chanted hymn and prayer were raised —though eyes with tears were dim—
"The Lord He hath remembered us, let us remember Him!"

Then Bradford stood up at their head and lifted up his voice:
"The corn is gathered from the field, I call you to rejoice!
Thank God for all His mercies, from the greatest to the least;
Together have we fasted, friends, together let us feast.

"The Lord who led forth Israel was with us in the waste:
Sometime in light, sometime in cloud, before us He hath paced;
Now give Him thanks, and pray to Him who holds us in His hand
To prosper us and make of this a strong and mighty land!"



From Plymouth to the Golden Gate, to-day their children tread,
The mercies of that bounteous Hand upon the land are shed;
The "flocks are on a thousand hills," the prairies wave with grain,
The cities spring like mushrooms now where once was desert-plain.

Heap high the board with plenteous cheer and gather to the feast,
And toast that sturdy Pilgrim band whose courage never ceased.
Give praise to that All-Gracious One by whom their steps were led,
And thanks unto the harvest's Lord who sends our "daily bread."

—Alice Williams Brotherton, in Home Queen.

AUNT SARAH'S THANKSGIVING DINNER.

"AUNT SARIE! Aunt Sarie! do come quick, the mince pies are burning!"

And a small head with two tight flaxen braids was thrust hastily out of the kitchen window and as precipitately withdrawn.

Aunt Sarah, who was evidently lost in deep thought, gave such a sudden start that the great yellow pumpkin she was lovingly caressing fell from her arm.

"Well, I do declare!" she exclaimed reproachfully, as she hastened to recover her treasure and turn her steps towards the farm house. "If things haven't come to a pretty pass, Sarah Jane Smithers. You a woman of 60, and standing out here dreaming like some young girl, and leaving your mince pies to the mercy of a child. But I guess I ought to be excused this once, things have come so terrible sudden like. This time yesterday I was living my old humdrum life, and not thinking about making a Thanksgiving dinner. I always said I'd have a big one when I got the mortgage paid and not before. But I haven't seen one of my own flesh and blood for 20 years. And to think that Cousin Jim is coming and bringing his wife and children."

By this time she had reached the kitchen; and breathlessly depositing her burden upon the spotless table she proceeded to open the oven door, whence issued a savory odor.

"Just one minute more, Susie Belle, and these mince pies would have been burnt to a crisp."

"Yes'm," replied Susie Belle, respectfully, and with a shade of awe in her tone. "That was the reason why I called you. I thought you had forgotten."

It was such an uncommon event for thorough-going Aunt Sarah to forget anything that the rather timid child felt some hesitancy in alluding to so flagrant a breach of the good woman's strong point. Aunt Sarah colored slightly, but made no reply.

"Now, child, you fall to work on this pumpkin while I dress the turkey. I want to get everything pretty well done up to-morrow so there won't be much on hand when Jim's folks get here."

Aunt Sarah was the last surviving member of a large and prosperous family. She lived alone with the exception of an orphan child of 12 years. As one by one those whom she loved, and for whom she had cheerfully sacrificed her life, passed away, and she had no animate object upon which to lavish her affection, she turned it all to the old house where her family had lived for two generations. Cousin Jim had spent many years in Missouri, and his wife and children she had never seen.

The one great shadow that darkened Aunt Sarah's life was a mortgage for $1,000 upon the place, the time for the payment of which was rapidly approaching. Her usually cheerful disposition was so clouded by this trial that for several years she had not been able to find heart for the celebration of any festivities. However, since "Jim's folks," those that really cared for her and were her own, were coming, she must make suitable preparations for their entertainment.

So the morning before Thanksgiving found her up by four o'clock, and bustling about with a brighter face and a brighter step than she had known in years. All day she mixed and stirred and baked and tasted, regardless of the lowering clouds and steady rain without. By three o'clock in the afternoon the last pie, steaming hot, was placed beside many others in neat rows on the pantry shelves, the enormous turkey, brown and crisp, lay in regal state beside a spiced ham. Cakes, snowy loaves of home made bread, jars of preserved fruits, jellies and marmalades and pots of golden butter were arranged in tempting array. Aunt Sarah gave a sigh of satisfaction as she surveyed the goodly store.

"Here, Susie Belle," she said, filling the child's hands with some of the choicest cookies. "Take these and eat them. We've got enough for to-morrow. Let me see, Jim has five children. Well, I want those little ones to have a real, old-fashioned dinner for once in their lives. I don't believe they ever had one out there in Missouri. Dear me! how it does rain!" she ejaculated; "but I'm not a mite afraid of its keeping Jim's folks at home. Once Jim sets his head to do a thing, he always would have his way or die."

And she settled back in her armchair by the cozy sitting-room fire "to rest a bit" after her hard day's work.

Just as she was dreaming of a Thanksgiving long ago when she and Jim and her brothers and sisters popped corn and roasted apples before the great open fire, a loud knock caused her to jump to her feet in alarm.

"Who on earth can be coming on such an evening?" she muttered drowsily, as she groped her way through the hall to the door.

"Why, Mr. Stanton! what has brought you up here in such a rain as this!" she exclaimed in surprise. "Come right in."

The cashier of the Newton bank glanced down at his dripping mackintosh and muddy boots, then at the immaculate oilcloth on the hall floor.

"No, thank you, Miss Sarah," he answered. "I am in a great hurry. Haven't you heard the news? The dam at Wartown has broken; nearly all the place is submerged, especially the poorest quarters near the factories. The people are flocking to Newton in droves. Every hotel, private house and public building is full and yet more are coming. It is pitiable to see them drenched and shivering after walking four miles in this dreadful rain. Many of them have had nothing to eat since early morning. We are trying to find shelter for them in the nearest farm houses, and thought, as you haven't much family and considerable room, you might accommodate a good number."

Aunt Sarah's eyes grew round and her jaw dropped in dismay. At any other time she would have made the poor wanderers welcome enough. But now—and, in imagination, she beheld the groaning pantry shelves, the shining floors and the beds with their fresh lavender-scented sheets.

"Mr. Stanton," she began, faintly, "I never hated so much to refuse anything in all my life. It doesn't hardly look Christian, and under ordinary circumstances I wouldn't think of refusing; but my cousin, that I haven't seen for years, is coming to-morrow. His children never have had a real good Thanksgiving, and I can't think of having everything torn up before they get here. I am dreadful sorry."

Mr. Stanton was disappointed, yet he went away glad that such an unexpected pleasure was coming into Aunt Sarah's life. He quite understood her feelings, though when he thought of the miserable unsheltered creatures in the town, he wished it might have been otherwise.

Aunt Sarah turned from the door with a heavy heart. The brightness and warmth of the sitting-room smote her with a deep sense of guilt. She tried to put the matter from her mind; but every time she looked into the glowing flames she saw a host of cold, haggard faces. Unable to bear it longer, she left the room on the pretext of seeing that all was well upstairs. She passed from one to another of the neat bedrooms. Never before had the old-fashioned, high-posted beds looked so inviting. She paused in deep thought. Suddenly her eyes rested upon a faded sampler she had worked when a child. The long, uneven letters in red, green and purple silk danced before her eyes. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, My brethren, ye have done it uato Me."

"Done it unto Me," the words echoed in her ears. What if He were out in the rain hungry and cold, would she have treated Him thus?

She sank beside the bed and buried her face in her hands.

"Dear Lord," she sobbed, "it is so hard, when it is the only pleasure I've had since mother died, five long years ago. I wasn't expecting it, and it all came so sudden like, and now to have it spoiled. But for Thy sake, Lord, accept the sacrifice!"

"Susie Belle," said Aunt Sarah a few minutes later as she appeared muffled from head to foot, "I'm going down to the village. I hate to leave you, though there isn't anything to hurt you. I will hurry back as quick as I can, and you kindle a fire in the kitchen stove."

The child, dumb with astonishment, could only gasp: "Yes'm." She stood watching the resolute figure until it was lost to view, and turned away with a shiver as she thought of the distance to the village. She knew nothing of the interview with Mr. Stanton. She understood, however, that only some stern duty or pressing necessity could take Aunt Sarah from home so late and on such a stormy evening.

Notwithstanding her promise to return promptly, it was nearly two hours before Aunt Sarah threw the doors of her sitting-room invitingly open.

"Come right in," she said, cheerily, "every one of you, just as fast as you can."

Susie Belle, who had fallen asleep after a weary watch, started at the sound of Aunt Sarah's voice. She fell back a few steps and began to rub her eyes. What could it mean? She was surely dreaming. Pouring into the room were rough men and miserable, drenched women, many of whom were carrying small children.

"Here, child! These poor people have had their homes washed away. Show the men into the kitchen while I get dry clothes for the women and children."

And Aunt Sarah fell to emptying chests, drawers and wardrobes, utterly regardless of her usually orderly habits. By ten o'clock that night, 20 men, women and children had been warmed, bountifully fed and comfortably bedded.

Aunt Sarah felt a strange lightness of heart as she and Susie Belle sought a hard bed in the attic. True, she was at first unmindful of His command; but had she not made generous atonement? Even the garments of her beloved dead, which she had aired and treasured year after year, were put into use that night. A dry sob arose in her throat as she thought of "Jim's folks." "Never mind," she said to herself. "Perhaps they will stay over Sunday, and I can cook them another Thanksgiving dinner."

Morning dawned clear. Aunt Sarah and her willing little helper were up betimes preparing breakfast for their numerous visitors, and a right comfortable one it was. Many of the wayfarers set out early to return to the doomed town or to seek friends or relatives in the country. Others lingered as though they were too weary and frightened from that terrible day's experience to think of aught else. Most of them were of the poorer class. One among them, however, was a man of kind and gentle manners, who somehow won Aunt Sarah's confidence at once. He did not ask many questions; but before she realized what she was doing, she had told him of the expected guests, the disappointment and even the mortgage.

A little later Aunt Sarah was hovering about her relatives, explaining and apologizing with tears in her eyes.

"Wasn't it grand of her to do that?" said Jim's wife, who proved to be a plump, kind little woman. "Don't you mind a bit, dear Aunt Susan. Of course we'll stay over Sunday, and I will help you cook to-morrow; and Saturday we'll have a big dinner. I am not at all afraid of starving in the meantime."

Although the dinner was two days late, never was a more tempting one placed upon a board nor ever did happier people gather around it. Just as Cousin Jim had finished asking a blessing, his eldest son returned from the village, where he had gone upon an errand.

"Here is a letter for you, Cousin Sarah," he said, handing her a large envelope.

"A letter?" she echoed. "Who can be writing to me?"

She broke the seal and a crisp bank-note fell upon her plate.

She read aloud:

"Dear Madam:

"I beg that you will pardon the liberty I take in sending this amount. I shall never miss it, as I am a wealthy man and have no family. One who knows how to make much good use of a home should certainly not lose it. Yours truly,

"ROBERT UPTON."

"Oh, I don't deserve it! I don't deserve to be paid in this way!" and Aunt Sarah buried her face in her apron.—Eleanor Norton Parker, in N. Y. Independent.

ABOUT THANKSGIVING.

How the Proclamation Is Issued by the President—A Boy's Composition.

After Hallowe'en is over, the next thing to look forward to in the way of a fete day is Thanksgiving. A few days before Thanksgiving the president issues his annual proclamation. There is a little form to be observed about this.

It is composed by the president himself, which, you know, is not true of all state papers, and in most instances written out in his own hand. When this is done, the document goes to the state department, where it is carefully copied in ornamental writing that is almost like engraving, on the official blue paper of that department. The next thing needed on the document is the great seal of the government. This seal is kept by the clerk of pardons and commissions, and it is very carefully guarded under lock and key. Its keeper will not get it out without a special warrant signed by the president, and an impression of the seal is quite a ceremony in itself. When the proclamation has been thus duly signed and sealed, many copies are made of it by clerks, and one is sent to the governor of every state in the union. It is also given out then to the press agents, who telegraph it all over the United States, and in this way the day is announced. The governors, as they receive it, issue one themselves for their state.

The first proclamation, issued by President Washington in 1789, was dated early in October. News could not be telegraphed everywhere in an hour then, and the word from the executive mansion had to travel slowly, so it was got out in plenty of time. Washington's example in the way of issuing a proclamation was not followed by all his successors. The practice stopped with him, and was not revived until Lincoln became president. Since then, however, every succeeding president has issued a proclamation.

Here is that funny composition which a boy wrote about Thanksgiving, which is worth repeating, now that it is timely:

"Thanksgiving was brought over from England by the Puritan Fathers in the year 1620. It has staid here ever since. On Thanksgiving everybody goes to church in the morning, so as to have everything out of the way before dinner. Then you come home and hang around a little while and get awful hungry smelling the turkey. After dinner Thanksgiving is over."—N. Y. Times.

VERIFIED.

When we've passed beyond the soup,
That a bird upon the table
Is worth two out in the coop.

A Welcome Day.

The setting aside of a day of national thanksgiving is one of the finest customs that could grace the record of a prosperous nation, and no time in the year offers more graceful opportunity for living out the spirit of the day to its most practical extent. All expect a good dinner on Thanksgiving. They don't always get it, to be sure, but the day has so long been associated with the thoughts of an exceptionally good meal that the very name of Thanksgiving day almost smells like turkey and cranberry sauce.—Detroit Free Press.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

044 Items of Domestic Information for the Young Housewife.

In planning refreshments for the Hallowe'en party, nuts, apples, crullers and sweet cider are considered the appropriate concomitants of the fateful night, while their service should be as simple and informal as possible. If the kitchen table serves as a buffet, its centerpiece may be a yellow pumpkin or pale green cabbage, hollowed out and filled with ruddy cheeked apples. The dishes used may be of the copper or tin kitchen utensils, scoured to their brightest.

Measles are most infectious in the early stages, scarlet fever and scarletina during the peeling of the skin. Typhoid is usually conveyed by germs from the excretions of the patient. No member of a family with an infectious disease should go to church or any other place where persons are congregated, should not borrow books from a library nor mix with other people more than can possibly be helped, as one person may be the means of spreading disease to numbers.

Holland shades may be washed and laundered so as to look nearly as well as new. Remove the fringe, cord and tassels and loosen from the roller. Wash in lukewarm suds, rubbing as little as possible, to prevent splitting. Rinse in cold water and starch in boiled starch. Iron with a cloth over it until nearly dry; then polish. Great care must be taken to iron always with the selvedge to stretch straight and to iron no creases in.

Steel firearms that are kept in good order should not require cleaning oftener than once a week, but they should be rubbed daily with a dry cloth. In the weekly cleaning they may be polished with bath brick scraped fine and mixed with oil, or rubbed with fine emery paper, then polish with the finest sand paper.

"Don't sprinkle your maiden-hair ferns on their foliage," say the florists to the women who are eagerly buying the dainty greening for dining table decoration. "Keep the earth moist all the time; but pour the water around the roots, not on the top."

In screwing a glass globe on to the gas fixture care should be taken not to screw it too tight, as when the gas is lighted the glass will expand, and if space is not allowed the globe will crack. Many mysterious breakages may be traced to this lack of foresight.

An easy way to steam house plants in winter is to set a large vessel of hot water under the plant stand and then drop into it a hot brick or iron.

The cheering teapot has lately found its way into Italy, and Italian signoras now chat over the tea cups and delight in all the dainty accessories of the tea table.

A paroxysm of coughing may often be arrested by a tablespoonful of glycerine in a glass of hot milk.

Stale crackers are improved by placing in a hot oven a few minutes before serving.—Washington Star.

DECORATION NOTES.

Points on Pretty Furnishings Suitable for the Parlor and Hallway.

Pillows add greatly to the decorative effect, as well as to the comfort of a divan, lounge, settee or sofa. The new canvas covers, which come in rich red for braiding or rich blue or black, and the black for braiding in red or orange, are very inexpensive and durable for pillow or cushion covers.

Coronation braid is very prettily applied to designs stamped on pillow covers; it shows with fine effect on bright red, blue or yellow canvas or linen cushion covers, but is especially pleasing on silver-green linen in association with flat braids.

A pretty border for an orange silk curtain for a hall window is made by turning up an inch-wide hem and heading it with herring-boning in heavy orange silk threaded with turquoise-blue beads. Larger beads of the same color sewed along the bottom of the hem add a very charming finish. Such a curtain illuminates a dark place like sudden sunshine.

No tea table or luncheon table is absolutely pretty that fails in flowers for decorative purposes. A few perfect flowers set in the filmy greenery of maiden hair ferns or in sprays of the soft asparagus vine, which veil the gay colors as gently as the mist.

The embroidered silk screen panels, sold in Japanese stores, make lovely hangings to place in the opening between parlors. A lovely pair made of slaty-gray silk, wrought with a design of airy bamboo trees in soft greens, with here and there a gay bird, was tastefully mounted on amber-colored momie cloth and finished at the bottom by a heavy fringe, showing subdued shades of the embroidery colors. This pair of hangings looked very artistic mounted on an ebonized pole by means of heavy brass rings.—Ladies' World.

Little Civilities.

If, as the old saying has it, civility costs nothing, it certainly gains much, both in the way of liking and of kindness; therefore it seems a great pity that so many people dispense with it in small matters of daily life. There are no doubt very few people who are actually and actively rude and uncivil, but there are, on the other hand, many who are, if we may use the term, passively impolite. They do not—that is, commit a downright rudeness, but they omit a vast number of little civilities.

If it is manners that "maketh man," it is most certainly woman who both makes and mars men's manners, for there is no man, however rough and uncouth in manner, who is not influenced and to some degree softened by contact with a courteous and graciously-mannered woman.—Detroit Free Press.

Peruna as a Nerve and Catarrh Tonic the Talk of the World.

Hon. W. V. Sullivan, U. S. Senator from Mississippi.

Hon. W. V. Sullivan, United States Senator from Mississippi, in a letter recently written to Dr. Hartman from Oxford, Miss., says the following:

"For some time I have been a sufferer from catarrh in its most incipient stage, so much so that I became alarmed as to my general health. But, hearing of Peruna as a good remedy, I gave it a fair trial and soon began to improve. Its effects were distinctly beneficial, removing the annoying symptoms, and was particularly good as a tonic.

"I take pleasure in recommending your great national catarrh cure, Peruna, as the best I have ever tried."

GUIDED BY INTUITION.

Woman Jumps at Conclusions Without Resorting to Logic and Wins.

"I begin to think there is no limit to woman's intuition. It frequently enables her to read character on sight, but what gets me and strikes me as uncanny is the fact that this same intuition projects her knowledge into the future and makes her about as conversant with things to come as with things past.

"Let me illustrate. When the copper market was so active I put in hours every day studying quotations, fluctuations, and the outlook. As the result of a conclusion reached by this careful method I invested $200, made good margins, and was finally glad to let go with a loss considerably larger than my original investment.

"During a period of confidence and in the enjoyment of prospective riches I had told my wife of my investment and of the good things she might expect, when the deal was closed. It gave her the speculative fever and she was bound to make a plunge. She doesn't know what the word stocks means. A market report is Greek to her. She couldn't figure on the outlook if she had all the data and a slate and pencil. Yet she came to me with $100 she had saved in old teapots and stockings and told me to buy P. Q. M. shares. I sneeringly told her that they were dead and buried; that she might as well invest in a dry oil well or a sunken ship. But her mind was made up. I thought the lesson would be a cheap one for her and I obeyed.

"Those shares took a sudden jump to the surprise of everyone and she cleared $2,000. 'Men don't seem to have any business sense,' she said, when we compared notes. 'P. Q. M. stands for pretty quick money, but a stupid man would never see it.'

"Heavens!" Then the Detroit broker who had been talking dashed to the floor a 15-cent cigar he had just lit.—Detroit Tribune.

PLANTING ROAD TREES.

Timely Suggestions Offered by Prof. F. A. Waugh, of the Vermont Experiment Station.

The distance between trees in the row will be influenced somewhat by the width of the street. In a wide street, where there is room enough for the full development of each tree, they will be planted further apart. If the street is wide enough, the trees should always stand between the walk and the curb. It is wide enough if, from curb to curb, the width is one and a half times the distance recommended for the trees in the rows. On a narrower street, trees should stand between the walk and the buildings or should be dispensed with. There are many beautiful streets in this country which support four rows of trees. Such streets should have the central avenue twice as wide as the distance between trees in the row; and the distance between the two rows on either side should be somewhat less than that between trees.

The American elm is doubtless the commonest street tree in America. It has many undeniably good qualities to recommend it. And yet there are serious objections to the elm as a street tree, besides the fact that it is often defoliated by caterpillars of various species, as, indeed, are many other trees. The elm varies greatly in size and form, and it is almost impossible to find a long street of old elms which does not suffer from the sad neglect of uniformity which this variability introduces. The elm is also one of the least formal of our trees, and so detracts from the unity of the geometrical idea in street planting. It would be silly to advise planters to discard the elm altogether; but it will not be too much to suggest that some other species should always be duly considered.

The maples are excellent street trees, especially the sugar maple, and many admirable examples of their effectiveness are to be found in the northern states. The sugar maple is a strong, healthy grower, with a regular, clear-cut outline, and has the advantage of a very tidy appearance through the winter months. In southwestern states the soft maple, or silver maple (Acer dasycarpum), takes the place of the sugar maple, but is not so good a tree.

The American sycamore is one of our finest street trees in many situations. Anyone who does not know how beautiful this species is should study the effects produced by it in Washington, especially in the magnificent avenue just west of the capitol. The sycamore does not succeed north of Massachusetts and central New York, but for the greater part of the United States it is worth careful consideration.

Other species which are sometimes used with happy results are honey locust, Kentucky coffee tree, pines and spruces. There is a most striking and beautiful avenue leading to the department of agriculture; and there are some pretty rows of ailanthus about the Temple square in Salt Lake City. Occasionally one will find an avenue of oaks, and if it is a good one there are few trees more satisfactory. Poplars, especially the cottonwood, are used in the trans-Mississippi states, but they are usually a poor makeshift. It is always very gratifying to find a good street of trees of an unusual species, and this is a thing which the street makers might well hold in remembrance.

In tropical and subtropical countries some species of palms are unexcelled as street trees. Our engraving presents a view of one of the grandest avenues of this kind in the world, the royal palm avenue near Havana, Cuba.—Orange Judd Farmer.

DAIRY SUGGESTIONS.

He who puts up fine butter in ways not neat, deserves a lower price than the tasteful neighbor gets.

The large, rich milkers need the most watchful care on account of their highly organized sensitive make-up.

Settle the dairy problem with a carefully balanced ration. Carbohydrates alone will almost starve a cow.

The intelligent, care-taking dairyman will keep at it and make a profit. More winter work must be done by the cows.

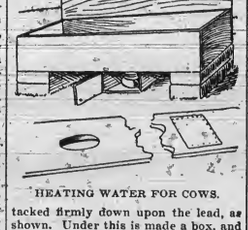
There is no danger of dairying being overdone. Slip-shod people will slip out of it if they cannot make a living at it.

About two ounces of salt given every day to each cow will increase the yield of butter. As salt aids digestion, and consequently turns more of the food into milk, keep rock salt within easy reach of the cows.—Farm Journal.

COOLING THE MILK.

Lessens the Capacity of Taking Up Odors and Arrests the Process of Fermentation.

Clean milking by clean hands, in as pure a stable atmosphere as is obtainable, must be supplemented by a rapid and thorough cooling of the milk. Cooling at once lessens the capacity of the milk to take up odors, arrests the process of fermentation, and, if well stirred during the cooling, the cream is kept from rising to the surface and will afterward more surely remain mixed with the milk while being distributed from the wagon. These are valuable considerations for a milkman who desires to give his customers a good service.



For us the simplest and best way to accomplish all these good results is to have a tank of ice water in a room near or adjoining the milking-room. As fast as the pails are filled take immediately to the tank and pour the milk into tin cans which are suspended in ice water. Have an agitator in the can while being filled. The simplest and best form for this is not unlike an old-fashioned churn dasher. only make the dasher of a piece of tin six or seven inches in diameter, soldered firmly onto the end of a wire handle, which had better be galvanized and have a loop in the end to hang it up by. Two or three plunges with this implement in a can of milk each time that a pail is emptied will be found to be very effective in agitating, and consequently in cooling the milk.

We much prefer this simple and effective method to any of the more elaborate and expensive ones, and it is our experience that milk so treated will keep longer than as though exposed to the atmosphere in a fine spray or a thin sheet, in neither of which cases are any germs removed, but it is reasonably certain that even under very favorable conditions a few are added to the milk. Milk or any other fluid will cool much more readily when brought in close contact with water than in air, even though the air is considerably colder than the water. This is especially true of milk in tin cans or glass jars. If one must have an aerator, he should choose one through which water is run for cooling purposes. — F. W. Mossman, in Farmers' Advocate.

FOR HEATING WATER.

The Illustration Shows a Contrivance of Particular Interest to Bright Dairymen.

There is no question about the advisability of taking the chill off the water that is given to cattle in the winter. The problem is to secure a practical, cheap way of warming the water. The illustration shows how this may be done. The trough is raised as shown and a circular opening cut in the bottom. A thick body of white lead is spread about this opening and a sheet of galvanized iron is then tacked firmly down upon the lead, as shown. Under this is made a box, and in it is placed a small oil stove. Have two small holes in the door and in the rear wall of the box near the top. With the cover down, a whole troughful of ice-cold water can soon be brought to a temperature where it will be safe for stock to drink it, and that, too, at almost no trouble at all, and at hardly more than a cent's expense.—Orange Judd Farmer.

HEATING WATER FOR COWS.

A Crime Against America.

The scientific attache of the United States embassy at Berlin, Germany, Prof. Stiles, recently discovered evidence that several prominent Antwerp firms were doing an immense business in inferior or diseased beef and pork, putting the same in American packages and giving them an American brand. He is now traveling through Germany, Denmark and Switzerland in order to gather evidence to enable him to prosecute these firms. This is an old trick practiced by certain firms who take advantage of the reputation established by American goods and sell inferior articles under American brands, thus destroying the reputation of our exports and causing much damage to our trade.—Farmers' Review.

Fight on San Jose Scale.

The final report of the commission appointed by the Ontario government to investigate the San Jose scale question has made its appearance. The greatest infestation is in a corner of Niagara township, with more limited cases at five other points. In 91 other cases trees planted within two years past were found infested. These were all destroyed, and this year scale was found in only 13 places out of the 91. It will be necessary to destroy 156,200 trees to make sure of exterminating the scale. The commissioners doubt the possibility of doing this. They advise immediate destruction of badly infested trees, and careful judgment of all others, giving inspectors large discretionary powers.

What does quantity of milk signify to the butter maker? Nothing, if he has no knowledge of its quality.

Electricity for Brain.

A European scientist claims to have discovered an apparatus which will stimulate the brain. It has been tried on school boys, and consists of an electric band. While scientists have been busy inventing unnatural ways of making the brain work, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has for fifty years been doing it naturally. It cures dyspepsia and all stomach troubles and builds up and invigorates the entire system. There is nothing "just as good."

Protection at Both Ends.

A nervous drummer, who carries with him wherever he travels a coil of rope, was asked by the landlord of a small hotel up in Shasta county what the rope was for. "That's a fire escape," explained the drummer, "and I always have it with me so in case of fire I can let myself down from the window." "Seems like a pretty good idea," said the landlord, "but guests with fire escapes pay in advance at this hotel."—San Francisco Wave.

The east wind Sunday was cold and like all east winds, cut to the bone. Sunday school and church services were well attended however. Rev. Luce has preached to people of all denominations since the meeting began, and we have heard only words of praise for the candid, careful and logical manner in which he preached.

The R. R. editor of the Union Blade says a man may be able to quote Shakespear by the 10 pages; know the Latin verbs by note; read Greek and Hebrew like any ordinary man can the sign boards on a country road, and yet, when he puts silk stockings and $2.00 shoes on a saloon keepers children and lets his own go barefooted, he is a living evidence that the world do move and fools do move and have their being in it."

We heard this kind of language used by one of our citizens, Saturday: "The late campaign was hotter than hades and produced enough bad blood among the citizens of the State to last forty years under the most favorable conditions of peace and good will, but any effort to carry with military or other methods the seating of a Democratic Governor (if he is elected) would throw Kentucky into a condition that hades would be a cold storage emporium compared with it."

At a meeting of the Blade Club, Thursday night, Thos. Sommers made the bold statement that no such thing existed as a ghost. He was asked to name a white object 9 feet high with arms 10 feet long carrying a torch in one hand and a sword 12 feet long in the other that could be shot into ribbons with a gatling gun and grow into an object 18 feet high with arms 20 feet long two minutes after, and keep coming right toward you on a dark night? Tom said it would be Hamlet's ghost, oh! no, I mean Hamlet's grounds for divorce. Come very near catching himself first time, you see.

In our work for the RECORDER we have said many things that would have sounded much better unsaid. We have also left unsaid many things that some persons would have said, if they had not been afraid to say them (same here if you please) without first getting in close touch with an undertaker and police headquarters. We know that the people of Union and vicinity are anxious to hear the news as it relates to weddings, dinners, luncheons, parties, &c., in fact, all news that usually goes into a live, up-to-date paper, but they do not like to hear unpleasant news. We are not the person to bring sad tidings, and we wont do it. We say this much though, as a kind of foreshadowing to what may be said in the dim recesses of our expected future, (and it is no more nor less the truth either) that Union's public school is in a peculiar condition or state of trouble, and every man and woman in this school district, who loves the cause of education, should assist the trustees (by sound, logical advice procured from careful investigation) in restoring order.

Rice-Snethen.—In Newport on Wednesday the 22d, at the residence of Rev. Bro. Sizemore of the Christian church, Miss Pearl Snethen to Mr. William Rice of this place.

The most instructive, entertainment and beautiful exhibition ever given in Walton was the "Grecian Art" one given by Mrs. A. D. Reid at the Christian church on Friday, 24th inst. Mainly the representations were taken from the sculpture and paintings of the old masters for which the Greek's were the most celebrated of all the nations of antiquity. The march of the 16 young ladies was beautiful and worthy of the great commendation which greeted it. The dude drill was incomparable; the working song of the 22 little children was the most popular feature of the evening.

Mr. Alex C. Hopkins, who is giving exhibitions throughout the country for the benefit of the Christians' Orphans' Home at Louisville, introduced a novel entertainment at his last exhibition. Giving stereoptican views of twelve principal cities of the world with verbal description of the same, telling for what they were famed, he gave premiums for what they were most noted to all those guessing three or more, and those guessing six an additional prize of one of the "In God we trust dollars" which Senator John Sherman so earnestly insisted on having mottoed on the dollar piece; and by the way, it is generally thought that he received enough of them to make him rich when that coin was demonetized and was only making a by play of piety as a salve to his wounded conscience for being the main instrument in that confounded rascally betrayal of the people's rights. But to resume the account of the exhibition. Eddie Kipp guessed five of the cities and Charlie Ransler guessed three.

An Indiana Sheriff cannot legally serve a summons on a person who is aboard a steamboat in the Ohio river if the steamboat is south of the low water mark on the Indiana shore. As H. G. Blanton and Ome Rogers, of Erlanger, were coming over to Burlington, Friday night, their horse fell down and broke both shafts off of their buggy. The antics of a vicious cow that was weighed here at noon, yesterday, created considerable fun for quite a crowd of men, some of whom had narrow escapes from coming in contact with her hornless head. FROM LEBANON, OHIO.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Lebanon is located in the Miami valley, Warren county, Ohio, thirty miles from Cincinnati, on the C. L. & N. R. R., and about the same distance from Dayton. Hills and valleys surround it on every side, while 170 species of the lower Silurian fossils are found in the immediate vicinity. Lebanon has a population of 3,000 inhabitants, who, for sociability, can not be excelled. Many handsome houses adorn the nicely shaded streets. The court-house is in the center of the town, and the County Infirmary and Sanitarium are on the outskirts. Several churches grace the town with their presence and godly influence. An old cemetery long since out of use, and a very new one with its dead resting on the hill side, make up the sleeping places for the dead who die in the Lord. One place, especially interesting and at the same time historic, is the old homestead of the late Thos. Corwin, a native of Kentucky, but one of Ohio's greatest orators, or, perhaps, the greatest. Great writes, the head of buffalo and several scalps. Virginia had her Patrick Henry, Kentucky, her Henry Clay, but Ohio had her Thos. Corwin. Three miles west of Lebanon is the home of a society of Shakers, and six miles east is the noted mound, Ft. Ancient, left us by the Mound Builders as the only means of finding out who and what they were.

Standing in a quiet, secluded spot, north of Lebanon, is the public school. It is a fine piece of architecture, built in 1892. It has ten rooms, and requires ten regular teachers. Besides these there are three others:—Art, Music and Kindergarten teachers. One room is for the high school and the remaining ones for the lower grades. It is amusing, indeed, to visit the Kindergarten room, and witness the little children's work. One can not imagine how these little minds can be trained to think and work for themselves. Four hundred and eighty pupils are enrolled. But the school in which my whole soul is, is in the heart of the town. Over twenty different departments are taught, including Preparatory, Teachers' Business, Scientific, Classical, Law and Medical. This institution is now in its 45th year and continues to grow; 25 teachers are employed and about 700 pupils are in attendance. To know the teachers here is to love them. Chapel exercises are held each day from 8:30 to 9. They consist of a chapter read from the Bible, two songs, prayer and a talk by some one of the teachers. From 1 to 1:30, prayer meeting is conducted by students, who take active part for the upbuildiug of God's cause, and the uplifting of humanity. From the history of music to the Bible class, the outline system is practiced. This system originated in this institution, when Holbrook was its president. It is noted for its neatness and simplicity and is the best learned by any student whoever he may be, I trust that in time to come no teacher will be without the knowledge of this system. I am taking the Preparatory Scientific, namely, Arithmetic, Algebra, Letter Writing, Spelling, Rhetoric, Civics, Debating and Drawing. Words cannot express my admiration and praise for Pres. Withers, who is a friend to every student and to the other teachers. I contemplate taking both the Scientific and Classical courses in the N. N. U. in the next few years. May God help me in my enterprise and give me health and strength to accomplish the work that I have to do. This letter is not only one to the RECORDER, but was my Rhetoric lesson on Saturday last. With best wishes for future success.

I am your friend, CARRIE CLORE.

Clark, the well known business man of Rising Sun, Indiana, and Mr. Ottys McMackiu, of Covington, Ky., were quietly married, Saturday moruing, by Rev. J. W. Mitchell, pastor of Eleventh Street M. E. Mr. and Mrs. McMackin will start Wednesday for St. Louis and remain there for several days, after which they will leave for Kansas City, their future home.

The nicest dancing party given in Burlington in a long time was that at the Boone House, last Friday night. The young people who were at the head of the affair had absolute control of everything pertaining thereto, and nothing that was calculated to contribute to the comfort and pleasure of their guests was omitted. The music which was excellent was made by a harpist and violinist from Cincinnati. The large dining room, cleared of every vestige of furniture and tastefully festooned with evergreen made an ideal hall in which to chase glowing hours with flying feet. At midnight all were invited to the dining room at Mrs. Cowen's, where a bountiful lunch was enjoyed, after which dancing was resumed and continued until the morning dawned. Those present from a distance were Misses Flora Arnold, Pearl Crisler, Faunie Willis, Gertrude Steweart, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Pearson, Mrs. Fanuie Riley, Messrs. Wallace Grant, Marshall Terrill, Prof. Chas. Gardner, Hugh Arnold, Felix Gaines, Hubert Walton, Lewis Gaines, W. D. Cropper, Elmo Gaines, Morgan Mitchell, [illegible] Blantou, Ome Rogers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

WHALES are thick on the Scottish coast this year. At Sand, in the Shetlands, a shoal of 71 bottle-nosed whales was driven ashore and captured in one day. It was the first time in 44 years that whales had appeared there, though in former times they stranded frequently.

THE largest city in the world is London, which has a population equaling the combined population of Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg and Rome. Its streets, placed in a row, would reach round the world, leaving a bit over long enough to reach from London to San Francisco.

ALTHOUGH adders are comparatively rare in most parts of England, there are people hardly past middle age, who remember when they were so common on the south side of Clapham common, London, that it was necessary to put up a warning to children that it was not safe to play on that spot.

IT has been found that the pain caused by the sting of nettles is due partly to formic acid and partly to a chemical resembling snake poison. Our nettles are comparatively harmless; but in India, Java and elsewhere there are varieties the painful effects of which last weeks, and in some cases months, like snake bites.

MAITRE LABORI is still at Semais near Fountainebleau. The bullet in his back causes him considerable suffering and prevents him standing upright. The bullet will only be removed when it leaves the muscle to which it at present adheres. In this way it is hoped that a simple incision in the skin will suffice to bring about its extraction.

IN 1889 a law was passed in Germany that every German with an income of $750 and over must insure his life against sickness and old age. In 1898 there were 11,200,000 persons in Germany thus insured, and so many of these had pulmonary consumption that 37 of the insurance companies erected at their own expense a sanitarium for the care of these persons.

IN an official report of a government inspector of factories for Coburg-Gotha some interesting figures are given as to the labor of children under 14 years, who make buttons, toys, etc., at their homes. They work from four and one-quarter to six hours a day, and earn in button making from 16 of a cent to 7 cents; in doll making, from 3½ cents to 18½ cents; from work on toys, 1½ cents to 14 cents.

NEXT year it is expected that Rome will draw as many visitors as the Paris exposition. According to calculations which have been made by the Vatican secretary of state, at least 1,200,000 pilgrims will visit Rome—an average of 3,000 a day. The amount of Peter's pence they will bring is expected to reach $10,000,000, while the amount of money they will spend in Italy is reckoned at $300,000,000.

WU TING FANG, the first Chinese minister to America able to converse in English, has already begun to pay the penalty for such knowledge. He has been interviewed by a reporter concerning his opinion of American women, and, being as yet a stranger to the particular brand of diplomacy needed in such cases, he said that "gentleness is not American quality," and that he prefers the women of China to those of this country.

IT is proposed, owing to the number of accidents which occur each year, that the Main legislature pass a law prohibiting the wearing by hunters of buff-colored clothes, which may be mistaken at a distance for a deer. Ordinary hunting clothes are the worst possible thing for a man to wear in the northern woods. Accidents have been most frequent, and each year several hunters are killed, often being shot by their friends, who think they see a deer.

GREAT SALT lake is receding on account of the excessive drains made upon it by irrigation enterprises. This lake is not fed by underground streams, but by the Jordan and other rivers, and when the waters of these streams are intercepted for irrigation purposes the water supply of Salt lake is, of course diminished, so that the evaporation, which is constantly going on, is not made by a new supply. In time it looks as if the lake would only be a bed of dry salt.

THE German emperors possess a family charm, which, of course, they prefer to call a talisman. It is a black stone, which is said to be handed down by each dying emperor from his deathbed to his successor and has a putative origin curious even among charms. According to a legend, the stone was dropped by a huge, black toad on the bed coverlet of a princess of the family, who had just given birth to a son. The father of Frederick the Great had the stone mounted as a ring. There are documents relating to it in the archives and the present kaiser always wears it on all great occasions.

A FIRE in Japan is exciting. The Japanese seem to lose their heads completely in the presence of the fire demon. The people move from the houses where the fire breaks out into the next, then to another, and so on until the fire is over, the united families moving from house to house with great nonchalance. A man dancing on his roof with a paper fire god is supposed to avert the danger and no man is more surprised than he, when, in spite of the fire god, the house ignites and in a moment roof and man fall together. In three days the houses are rebuilt and all traces of fire removed.

TWO BIG BATTLES

One Was Fought Between the Boers and British at Belmont.

Gen. Lord Methuen Engaged the Enemy Again on Saturday Near Gras Pan—The Boers Showed Great Stubbornness, and Must Have Lost Heavily.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—There is much anxiety now as to the fate of Mafeking, in view of the latest and somewhat despondent advices. It was rumored in the Glasgow stock exchange Saturday that Mafeking had been surrounded, but the war office officials declare they have nothing confimatory or otherwise.

MODDER RIVER, Natal, Nov. 24.—A reconnaisance in force in the direction of Highlands station has discovered a big force of Boers with guns. The Boers shelled and the British guns replied. The scouts also reported another strong force to the northeast of the camp. The British guns have returned to camp and the infantry has fallen back. The mounted infantry is still out.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Thus far the special dispatches describing the battle of Belmont bear a stereotyped character, proving that the hand of the censor had been at work upon them. They are too incoherent to enable the reader to form an accurate idea of the event or to place a proper estimate upon the value of the victory.

All the accounts agree respecting the splendid fighting qualities exhibited on both sides. Nothing could have exceeded the steady courage and pluck of the British infantry in the face of terrific fire, while the Boers' guns were splendidly served, the gunners standing by them with dogged determination, exposing themselves until the very last moment, and only becoming wild and inaccurate in their aim during the final deadly charge of the British infantry.

All admit however, that the victory could not be properly followed up and utilized, owing to the want of sufficient cavalry. The pursuit of the defeated enemy by the Fifth lancers was evidently not very effective and curiously enough while the correspondents report the capture of Boer guns, Lord Methuen's own report omits any mention of such achievement.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Sunday afternoon the war office posted the following dispatch, dated Cape Town, 12:20 p. m. Sunday, from Gen-Forestier-Walker:

"Lord Methuen reports that he moved yesterday (Saturday) at 3:30 a. m, with the 9th brigade, the mounted corps, the naval brigade and two batteries, the guards following with the baggage. Near Gras Pan (about ten miles north of Belmont, on the railway line to Kimberley) and 2,500 Boers with six guns and two machine guns opposed him. The action began at 6 a. m. Our batteries fired shrapnel very accurately till the heights seemed clear. Then the naval brigade and infantry advanced to the assault. The fighting was desperate until 10 a. m., when the heights were carried. The Boers retreated on the line where the 9th lancers were placed to intercept them. The result was not known at the time of telegraphing. The artillery took immediate advantage of the enemy's retirement.

"Early in the action 500 Boers attacked our rear guard. The brigade met this and also protected the flanks. The naval brigade acted with the greatest gallantry and suffered heavily, but no particulars are yet known.

"The enemy showed the greatest stubbornness and must have suffered greatly. Twenty were buried. It is known that 31 were killed and 48 wounded. More than 50 horses were found dead in one place. One battery fired 500 rounds.

"Our force must halt one day at Gras Pan to rest and replenish ammunition. The force worked splendidly and is prepared to overcome many difficulties."

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 27.—The Boers occupied Stormberg, Cape Colony, Sunday morning.

A Strike Probable.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 27.—The ontlook Sunday night is excellent for a strike of union printers, pressmen, pressfeeders and bookbinders employed in job offices Monday. The nine-hour day goes into effect here Monday and the men want nine and a half hours wages along with it. This the typothetae refuses to grant.

Died at Sea.

GIBRALTAR, Nov. 27.—On the arrival here Sunday of the Hamburg-American steamer Fuerst Bismarck, from New York, November 18, for Genoa and other Mediterranean ports, it was announced that George Clark, a saloon passenger, had died of heart disease.

Winston Churchill's Wound is Slight.

PRETORIA, Nov. 26.—Through the courtesy of the Transvaal authorities, a press correspondent here in the company of Mr. P. G. Grobler, under secretary for foreign affairs, and Mr. De Souze, secretary of the war department, was enabled to visit Winston Churchill Friday at the Model school, where he is confined with the captured officers. Beyond a slight bullet wound in the right hand he seemed well and looked hearty, although naturally chafing under enforced idleness.

POLITICAL SITUATION.

It is Believed Some Important Move is to Be Made by the Goebel Side Early This Week.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 27.—A quiet Sunday brought a lull in the political situation to all outward appearances. There were no significant developments from Goebel headquarters though Goebel and his managers remained in conference during the day. There is a general impression outside that some important move is to be made by the Goebel side early this week and it is generally supposed that a mandatory injunction suit to prevent the state election board from counting the vote of Jefferson, Knox and Johnson county will be part of it, though this is not confirmed by any one in authority. It is doubtful if Gov. Bradley would recognize Goebel as governor if given a certificate of election by the state election board unless their action was in obedience to a ruling of the court. In that event it is believed he would resist no further, but advise Taylor to contest before the legislature. Neither Bradley, Taylor nor any other republican leaders believe the court of appeals, in the face of its decision in the Nelson county case Saturday, will grant an injunction and were Sunday more confident than ever that the state election board will give Taylor a certificate of election. In Taylor circles it is claimed that two of the three state commissioners, Ellis and Pryor, will vote to stand by the vote in every county as it appears on the face of the returns.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 26.—The court of appeals Saturday clinched Taylor's right to 1,197 Nelson county votes. The court, all the judges concurring, refused to dissolve the injunction as asked by Goebel's attorneys. The votes in controversy were certified for W. P. Taylor instead of W. S. Taylor. Judge Jones, of Nelson county, ordered these votes counted for W. S. Taylor, and this order is affirmed.

MAJ. HOWARD'S REMAINS.

They Arrived in Omaha Monday and Were Met at the Station by a Delegation From Army Headquarters.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 27.—The remains of Maj. Guy Howard, son of Gen. O. O. Howard, who was killed recently in the Philippines, arrived in this city Monday over the Union Pacific from San Francisco. They were met at the station by a delegation from army headquarters and escorted to the home of the father-in-law of the deceased officer, Judge J. M. Woolworth, where later in the day funeral services were held.

The services were private. Maj. Howard was well known in Omaha, having spent some time here while his father was in command of the department of the Platte. His marriage occurred here and was a prominent society event.

TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

Unknown Persons Placed Dynamite Beneath an Undertaking Establishment Near Terre Haute, Ind.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Nov. 27.—Farmerburg, just across the county line, was the scene of a terrific explosion Sunday night about 9 o'clock. Some unknown persons placed dynamite beneath the undertaking establishment of W. J. Wood, of that place, and the explosion wrecked the building and broke window glass throughout the town. Wood promptly applied to police headquarters in this city for a detective and it is thought the perpetrators of the deed will be run down. The building and its contents are a complete wreck and the loss will be heavy.

TWO SERVICES.

Clay of the Late Vice President Hobart Consigned to Mother Earth.

Rev. Dr. Magie, Pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Delivers a Short Funeral Sermon—Interment in Cedar Lawn Cemetery.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 28.—Vice President Hobart died at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday. The family and physicians were at Mr. Hobart's bedside when he expired.

The vice president had been failing since late Monday afternoon, although the reports given out at the house were that he was holding his own.

At midnight he became unconscious and at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning he had an attack of angina pectoris, from which he never rallied.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 26.—The clay of the late Vice President Hobart was consigned to mother earth Saturday.

The services at the house were brief and simple. It was held in the library, which was banked with flowers sent by friends of the dead vice president. Mrs. Hobart, with her son, Garret A. Hobart, jr., sat near the head of the casket, while near her were grouped the president and his cabinet, judges of the supreme court, the honorary pallbearers and the immediate friends of the family and the family servants. The Rev. David D. Magie offered the prayer and read a passage of Scripture. The president, cabinet and supreme court judges, and those present took a last look at the face of the dead, the casket was closed and all that was mortal of Vice President Hobart was carried out to the hearse by members of the senate police.

The public funeral ceremonies, which preceded the interment in Cedar Lawn cemetery, took place in the Church of the Redeemer.

The services at the church were of entirely a religious nature, no military or fraternal body taking part. President McKinley and all the members of his cabinet occupied the front pews on the right side of the aisle. Opposite and filling a large part of the church were ranged the scores of members of congress, some of whom had journeyed many hundreds of miles in order to pay their respect to the memory of Mr. Hobart.

The choir of the Church of the Redeemer, of which Mr. Hobart was a life-long member, sung "Lead, Kindly Light," and the Rev. Dr. Magie, pastor of the church, read scripture selections appropriate to the occasion. Another hymn was sung by the choir and then the Rev. Dr. Magie delivered a short funeral sermon, in which he did honor to "the power, the grandeur, the sublimity and the sweetness of the noble life" of the dead vice president. At the close of the services the sergeant-at-arms of the senate escorted the president, the members of the cabinet and the justices of the supreme court out of the church. The senators and representatives followed. Many spectators gathered about the coffin before it was closed to be removed to its last resting place beside the grave of Miss Hobart in Cedar Lawn cemetary.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—Official Washington is in mourning Saturday for the dead vice president. Business in all the executive branches of the government is suspended and the departmenta are closed. Nearly all of the prominent officials of the government have gone to Paterson to attend the funeral of Vice President Hobart, and flags throughout the city are at half staff. As an evidence of the popularity of the late vice president, hundreds of private residences Saturday displayed mourning emblems.

Safe Wrecked by Dynamite.

BLUFF CITY, Kan., Nov. 27.—Robbers Saturday night touched off a quantity of dynamite that wrecked the safe and the front end of the state bank here and escaped with $1,000 in gold, besides some silver and bills. The safe of the state bank of Clearwater, Kan., was blown open Friday night and $200 in cash and a number of notes taken.

A RIVAL BODY.

A Split Takes Place in the Organization of the Spanish War Veterans—A New One Formed With Dewey at the Head.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A split has occurred in the organization of the Spanish war veterans, and a rival body was formed Friday, to be known as the Spanish-American War Veterans.

Last week the original organization held a protracted meeting in this city, and perfected its constitution and bylaws, and at that time there were rumors of an impending split, but nothing was made public officially about it. Friday's meeting was held in response to an urgent call of Adjt. Gen. Liller, who gives the following as the reason for the split:

"General dissatisfaction—and an attempt to place the organization in the hands of the Ohio representatives, making it appear as a move for political purposes, and the recent action of the committee who were in the minority assuming the privilege of eliminating and vacating offices created by the national convention; making several appointive officers, and a move to control the association generally, and remove the headquarters to Ohio. Those who were present Friday are men who have made national reputations and are here to make the association a success and not use it for selfish motives."

The officers chosen are as follows:

Commander-in-Chief—Adm. George Dewey.

Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, New York.

Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief—Brig. Gen. Irving Hale, Colorado.

Adjutant General—Wm. Christopher Liller, Pennsylvania.

Surgeon General—Maj. Edward C. Davis, Georgia.

Commissary General—Col. James B. Coryell, Pennsylvania.

Inspector General—Col. Geo. W. Taylor, Virginia.

Judge Advocate General—Col. Jas. P. Tillman, South Carolina.

Chief Signal Officer—Col. James P. Fyffe, Tennessee.

Chaplain General—Capt. Charles H. Jones, New Jersey.

Sponsor—Miss Helen M. Gould.

COALING A SHIP AT SEA.

The Second Trial Of the Lightship Friday Was Successful—Fifteen Tons Delivered in Forty-One Minutes.

SANDY HOOK, N. J., Nov. 25.—The second trial of coaling a ship at sea by the U. S. S. Massachusetts and the collier Marcellus was executed Friday off the lightship. It was more of a success than the first one. A continuous test of 41 minutes resulted in the transportation of nearly 15 tons from the collier to the battle ship. Two bags of coal each weighing 400 pounds were sent by wire, each trip across the 300 feet of space between the vessels taking just one minute for the round trip. The trials will be continued Saturday when the inventor hopes to make a continuous test of one hour as called for by the government.

Heavy Sentence for Attempting to Bribe.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—Ellery P. Ingham, ex-United States district attorney, and his law partner and former assistant, Harvey K. OZARK AGRICULTURE.

How Farmers Practice Rotation of Crops in That Prolific Region.

Ozark humor appreciates the story that a scientist was quite amazed the other day at observing a farmer, after killing a nest of snakes turned up by the plow, arrange the dead snakes in the furrow before he went back to the plow.

"Why do you do that, my good man?" the scientist asked.

The farmer looked curiously at the scientist, and, seeing that he was really in search of information, replied:

"I do that so the plow will cover the snakes on the next round."

Seeing that the scientist was still mystified, the farmer continued:

"If I cover the snakes so that they will decompose. That is what you call it, isn't it?"

"Yes," said the scientist, with a rising inflection.

"Well," continued the farmer, "the decomposition of animal matter furnishes nourishment for the plant life, I believe?"

"Yes," again said the scientist.

"Then snakes will make corn grow, won't they?" triumphantly asked the farmer.

"Yes," said the scientist.

"And whisky will make more snakes, won't it, mister; that is what we call rotation in the agriculture of this region."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Its Glory Gone.

In one of the finest cities of our west there lives a certain man who has been prominent all his life in the work of building and managing theaters. He has been too busy at this to have much time for reading. When his pile was made he started for Europe and visited the various countries. Among other cities he took in Rome. It chanced that he drove out in the country and was shown the Coliseum. The guide told him it was a theater. The old man was surprised. When he came back he was asked about his trip; he mentioned Rome. Naturally he was asked if he had seen the Coliseum. He had. He didn't think much of it. To quote his own words: "It was a blamed good house once, but it's in ruins now."—Detroit Free Press.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 94,398]

"I am so grateful to you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me that I feel as though I must tell about it. A year ago I was taken very sick. Doctors could do me no good only to deaden the pain which I had almost constantly. I got some of your Compound and took one bottle and received benefit from it at once. I have taken it ever since and now have no backache, no pain in my side and my stomach and bowels are perfectly well. I can honestly say that there is nothing like it. If I could only tell every woman how much good your medicine has done me, they would surely try it."—MARTHA M. KING, NORTH ATTLEBORO, MASS.

Women Would Surely Try Mrs. Pinkham's Medicine if They Only Knew, Says Mrs. King

The way women trifle with health shows a degree of indifference that is past understanding. Happiness and usefulness depend on physical health; so does a good disposition. Disease makes women nervous, irritable and snappish. The very effort of ailing women to be good-natured makes them nervous. Write to Mrs. Pinkham, she will help you to health and happiness.

It costs nothing to get Mrs. Pinkham's advice. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

GOD SENT THE WHEEL

The Theme for Dr. Talmage's Thanksgiving Sermon.

The Wheel as a Symbol of Prosperity —Some Reasons for National Gratitude—Benefits of Inventive Genius.

[Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.]

This discourse of Dr. Talmage is a sermon of preparation for the national observance of this week and is an unusual way calls for the gratitude of the people; the text, Ezekiah 10:13: "As for the wheels, it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel!"

Next Thursday will, by proclamation of president and governors, be observed in thanksgiving for temporal mercies. With what spirit shall we enter upon it? For nearly a year and a half this nation has been celebrating the triumph of sword and gun and battery. We have sung martial airs and cheered returning heroes and sounded the requiem for the slain in battle. Methinks it will be a healthful change if this Thanksgiving week, in church and homestead, we celebrate the victories of peace, for nothing was done at Santiago or Manila that was of more importance than that which in the last year has been done in farmer's field and mechanic's shop and author's study by those who never wore an epaulet or shot a Spaniard or went a hundred miles from their own doorsill. And now I call your attention to the wheel of the text.

Man, a small speck in the universe, was set down in a big world, high mountains rising before him, deep seas arresting his pathway and wild beasts capable of his destruction, yet he was to conquer. It could not be by physical force, for compare his arm with the ox's horn and the elephant's tusk, and how weak he is! It could not be by physical speed, for compare him to the antelope's foot and ptarmigan's wing, and how slow he is! It could not be by physical capacity to soar or plunge, for the condor beats him in one direction and the porpoise in the other. Yet he was to conquer the world. Two eyes, two hands, and two feet were insufficient. He must be reenforced, so God sent the wheel.

Twenty-two times is the wheel mentioned in the Bible, sometimes, as in Ezekiel, illustrating providential movement; sometimes, as in the Psalms, crushing the bad; sometimes, as in Judges, representing God's charioted progress. The wheel that started in Exodus rolls on through Proverbs, through Isaiah, through Jeremiah, through Daniel, through Nahum, through the centuries, all the time gathering momentum and splendor, until, seeing what it has done for the world's progress and happiness, we clap our hands in thanksgiving and employ the apostrophe of the text, crying: "O, wheel!"

I call on you in this Thanksgiving week to praise God for the triumphs of machinery, which have revolutionized the world and multiplied its attractions. Even Pnradise, though very picturesque, must have been comparatively dull, hardly anything going on, no agriculture needed, for the harvest was spontaneous; no architecture required, for they slept under the trees; no manufacturer's loom necessary for the weaving of apparel, for the fashions were exceedingly simple. To dress the garden would not have required ten minutes a day.

Having nothing to do, they got into mischief and ruined themselves and the race. It was a and thing to be turned ont of Parndise, but, once turned out, a beneficent thing to be compelled to work. To help man up and on God sent the wheel. It turned ahead, the race advances; if turned back, the race retrents. To rouse your gratitude and exalt your praise I would show you what the wheel has done for the domestic world, for the agricultural world, for the traveling world, for the literary world. "As for the wheels, it was cried unto them in my hearing: O wheel!"

In domestic life the wheel has wrought revolution. Behold the sewing machine. It has shattered the housewife's bondage and prolonged woman's life and added immeasurnble advantages. The needle for ages had punctured the eyes and pierced the side and made terrible massacre. To prepare the garments of a whole household in the spring for summer and in the autumn for winter was an exhausting process. "Stitch, stitch, stitch!" Thomas Hood set it to poetry, but millions of persons have found it agonizing prose.

Slain by the sword, we buried the hero with "Dead March" in "Saul" and flags at half mast. Slain by the needle, no one knew it but the household that watched her health giving way. The winter after that the children were ragged and cold and hungry or in the almshouse. The hand that wielded the needle had forgotten its cunning. Soul and body had parted at the seam. The thimble had dropped from the palsied finger. The thread of life had snapped and let a suffering human drop into the grave. The spool wns all unwound. Her sepulcher was digged not with sexton's spade, but with a sharper and shorter implement—a needle. Federal and confederate dead have ornamented graves at Arlington Heights and Richmond and Gettysburg, thousands by thousands, but it will take the archangel's trumpet to find the million graves of the vaster army of women needle slain.

Besides all the sewing done for the household at home, there are hundreds of thousands of sewing women. The tragedy of the needle is the tragedy of hunger and cold and insult and homesickness and suicide—five acts.

But hear the rush of a wheel. Woman puts on the band and adjusts the instrumeat, puts her foot on the treadle and begins. Before the whir and rattle pleurisies, consumptions, headaches, backaches, heartaches, are routed. The needle, once an oppressive tyrant, becomes a cheerful slave—roll and rumble and roar until the family wardrobe is gathered, and winter is defied, and summer is welcomed, and the orders and severities of the season are overcome; winding the bobbin, threading the shuttle, tucking, quilting, ruffling, cording, embroidering, underbraiding, set to music; lock stitch, twisted loop stitch, crochet stitch, a fascinating ingenuity. All honor to the memory of Alsop and Duncan and Greenough and Singer and Wilson and Grover and Wilcox for their efforts to emancipate woman from the slavery of toil! But, more than that, let there be monumental commemoration of Elias Howe, the inventor of the first complete sewing machine. What it has saved of sweat and tears God only can estimate. In the making of men's and boys' clothing in New York city in one year it saved $7,500,000, and in Massachusetts, in the making of boots and shoes, in one year it saved $7,000,000.

Secondly, I look into the agricultural world to see what the wheel has accomplished. Look at the stalks of wheat and oats, the one bread for man, the other bread for horses. Cont off and with a cradle made out of five or six fingers of wood and one of sharp steel, the harvester went across the field, stroke after stroke, perspiration rolling down forehead and cheek and chest, head blistered by the consuming sun and lip parched by the merciless August air, at noon the workmen lying half dead under the trees. One of my most painful boyhood memories is that of my father in harvest time reeling from exhaustion over the doorstep, too tired to eat, pale and fainting as he sat down. The grain brought to the barn, the sheaves were unbonnd and spread on a thrashing floor, and two men with flails stood opposite each other, hour after hour and day after day, pounding the wheat out of the stalk. Two strokes, and then a cessation of sound. Thump, thump, thump, thump, thump, thump! Pounded once, and then turned over to be pounded again, slow, very slow. The hens cackled and crowed by the door and picked up the loose grains and the horses half asleep and dozing over the mangers where the hay had been.

But hark to the buzz of wheels in the distance. The farmer has taken his throne on a reaper. He once walked; now he rides; once worked with arm of flesh, now with arm of iron. He starts at the end of the wheatfield, heads his horses to the opposite end of the field, rides on. At the stroke of his iron chariot the gold of the grain is surrendered, the machine rolling this way and rolling that, this way and that, until the work which would have been accomplished in many days is accomplished in a few hours, the grainfield prostrate before the harvesters.

Thirdly, I look to see what the wheel has done for the traveling world. No one can tell how many noble and self-sacrificing inventors have been crushed between the coach wheel and the modern locomotive, between the puddle and the ocean steamer.

I will not enter into the controversy as to whether John Fitch or Robert Fulton or Thomas Somerset was the inventor of the steamboat. They all suffered nnd were martyrs of the wheel, nnd they shall be honored. John Fitch wrote:

The 21st of January, 1743, was the fatal time of bringing me into existence. I know of nothing so perplexing and vexatious to a man of feeling as a turnient wife and steamboat building. I experienced the former and quit in season, and had I been in my right senses I should undoubtedly have treated the latter in the same manner; but for one man to be teased with both, he must be looked upon as the most unfortunate man in the world.

Surely, John Fitch was in a bad predicament. If the steamboat boiler did not blow him up, his wife would. In all ages there are those to prophesy the failure of any useful invention. You do not know what the inventors of the day suffer. When it was proposed to light London with gas, Sir Humphry Davy, the great philosopher, said that he should as soon think of cutting a slice from the moon and setting it upon a pole to light the city. Through all abuse nnd caricature Fitch and Fulton went until yonder the wheel is in motion, and the Clermont, the first steamboat, is going up the North river, running the distance—hold your breath while I tell you—from New York to Albany in 32 hours. But the steamboat wheel multiplied its velocities until the Lucania, of the Cunnrd, and the Majestic, of the White Star line, nnd the New York, of the American line, and the Kaiser Wilhelm, of the North German Lloyd line, cross the Atlantic ocean in six days or less, communication between the two countries so rapid and so constant that wherens once those who lnd been to Europe took on airs for the rest of their mortal lives—and to me for many years the most disagreeable man I could meet was the man who had been to Europe, despising all American pictures and American music and American society because they had seen European pictures and heard European music nnd mingled in European society—now a trans-Atlantic voyage is so common thnt a sensible man would no more boast of it thnn if he lnd been to New York or Boston.

All the rivers and lakes and seas have turned white with rage under the smiting of the steamboat wheel. In the phosphorescent wake of it sail the world's commercial prosperities. Through the axle of that wheel nations join hnnds, and America says to Venice: "Give me your pictures," and to France: "Give me your grneeful apparel," and to England: "Give me your Sheffield knives and Nottingham laces and Manchester goods, and I will give you breadstuffs, corn and rye and rice. I will give you cotton for your mills. I will give you cattle for your slaughter houses. Give me all you have to spare, and I will give you all I have to spare." And trans-Atlantic and cis-Atlantic nations grasp each other's hands in brotherhood.

While this has been doing on the water James Watt's wheel has done as much on the land. How well I remember Sanderson's stagecoach, running from New Brunswick to Easton, as he drove through Somerville, N. J., turning up to the post office and dropping the mail bags with ten letters and two or three newspapers, Sanderson himself on the box, six feet two inches and well proportioned, long lash whip in his hand, the reins of six horses in the other, the "leaders" lathered along the line of the traces, foam dripping from the bits!

It was the event of the day when the stage came. It was our highest ambition to become a stage driver. Some of the boys climbed on the great leathern boot of the stage, and those of us who could not get on shouted: "Out behind!" I saw the old stage driver not long ago, and I expressed to him my surprise that one around whose head I had seen a halo of glory in my boyhood time was only a man like the rest of us. Between Saaderson's stagecoach and a Chicago express train what a difference, all the great cities of the nation strung on an iron thread of railways!

At Doncaster, England, I saw George Stephenson's first locomotive. If in good repair it could run yet, but because of its make and size it would be the burlesque of all railroaders. Between that rude machine, crawling down the iron track, followed by a clumsy and bouncing train, and one of our Rocky mountain locomotives, with a village of palace cars, becoming drawing rooms by day and princely dormitories by night, what bewitching progress!

See the train move out of one of our great depots for a thousand-mile journey! All aboard! Tickets clipped and baggage checked and porters attentive to every want, under tunnels dripping with dampness that never saw the light, along ledges where an inch off the track would be the difference between a hundred men living and a hundred dead, full head of steam and two men in the locomotive charged with all the responsibility of whistle and Westinghouse brake. Clank! clank! go the wheels. Clunk! clank! echo the rocks. Small villages only hear the thunder and see the whirlwind as the train shoots past, a city on the wing. Thrilling, startling, sublime, magnificent spectacle—a rail train in lightning procession.

When years ago the railroad men struck for wages, our country was threatened with annihilation, and we realized what the railroad wheel had done for this country — over 180,000 miles of railroad in the United States; in one year over $1,000,000,000 received from passengers and freight; White mountains, Alleghany mountains, Rocky mountains, Sierra Nevadas, bowing to the iron yoke; all the rolling stock of New York Central, Erie, Pennsylvania, Michigan Central, Georgia, Great Southern, Union Pacific and all the other wheels of the tens of thousands of freight cars, wrecking cars, cabooses, drawing room cars, sleeping cars, passenger cars, of all the accommodation, express and special trains, started by the wheel of the grotesque locomotive that I saw at Doncaster. For what it has done for all Christendom I ejaculate in the language of the text, "O wheel!"

While the world has been rolling on the eight wheels of the rail car or the four wheels of the carriage or the two wheels of the gig—it was not until 1876, at the Centennial exposition at Philadelphia, that the miracle of the nineteenth century rolled in—the bicycle. The world could not believe its own eyes, and not until quite far on in the eighties were the continents enchanted with the whirling, flashing, dominating spectacle of a machine that was to do so much for the pleasure, the business, the health and the profit of nations. The world had needed it for 6,000 years. Man's slowness of locomotion was a mystery. Was it of more importance that the reindeer or the eagle rapidly exchanged jungles or crags than that man should get swiftly from place to place? Was the business of the bird or the roebuck more urgent than that of the incarnated immortal? No. At last we have the obliteration of distances by pneumatic tire. At last we have wings. And what has this invention done for woman? The cynics and constitutional growlers would deny her this emancipation and say: "What better exercise can she have than a broom or a duster or a churn or rocking a cradle or running up and downstairs or a walk to church with a prayer book under her arm?" And they rather rejoice to find her disabled with broken pedal or punctured tire half way out to Chevy Chase or Coney Island. But all sensible people who know the tonic of fresh air and the health in deep respiration and the awakening of diiused muscles and the exhilaration of velocity will rejoice that wife and mother and daughter may have this new recreation. Indeed life to so many is so hard a grind that I am glad at the nrrival of any new mode of healthful recreation. We need have no anxiety about this invasion of the world's stupidity by the vivacious and laughing and jubilant wheel, except that we always want it to roll in the right direction, toward place of business, toward good recreation, toward philanthropy, toward usefulness, toward places of divine worship, and never toward immorality or Sabbath desecration. My friend, Will Carleton, the poet, said what I like when he wrote:

We claim a great utility that daily must increase;
We claim from inactivity a sensible release:
A constant mental, physical and moral help we feel,
That bids us turn enthusiasts and cry:
— God bless the wheel!

Never yet having mounted one of those rolling wonders, I stand by the wayside, far enough off to avoid being run over, and in amazement and congratulation cry out, in Ezekiel's phraseology of the text: "O wheel!"

MORE LOSS THAN PROFIT.

What Imperialism Is Costing the People of the United States.

The treasury statement of receipts and expenditures of the government for the month of October, 1899, and the four months of the current fiscal year, shows that the people of the United States, at present, are paying at the rate of $123,000,000 a year for keeping up a foreign establishment. In other words, we are throwing away on sentiment to save the individual William McKinley the pain and mortification of having to acknowledge mistakes dangerous to the nation, made by him as president. Mr. McKinley has personally thanked the soldiers, and the widows and orphans of an unnecessary war, for their sacrifices to the grand old flag, all of which is fudge and bumcombe, and he has even declared it an act of heroism for one or any number of men to lay down their lives upon the altar of their country for the benefit of others, the survivors. But Mr. McKinley has not made any sacrifices, is not willing to make the slightest sacrifice, he even demands that American citizens fall down and worship his policy; he insists upon his personality being the test of patriotism, and wrapped in the flag which is not his property, but the emblem of the nation, poses as a man who is leading the nation to greatness and prosperity.

Mr. McKinley, as a man, an individual, is not entitled to any more respect or consideration than the humblest American citizen. The high office he fills merits both. As an individual and as an official, the servant of the people, what has he done, what is he doing that he is bound to do under the constitution which he accepted and ratified when he took upon himself the office of chief executive? When he shall give information of the state of the union to congress in his annual message, as he must do, how can he limit himself to the state of the union? His whole message beyond numerous platitudes concerning prosperity, which he has repeated so often that he actually believes them, must specify matters not of, or concerning the union; matters not in any manner connected with the union, but entirely foreign to the union. He will say that he has wrung from the pockets of the people of the union the gigantic sum of $123,000,000 per annum, which will be doubled if his policy is pursued. For the first time in the history of the nation, its president will be compelled to travel outside of the nation and place before the congress of the people a foreign policy which has increased the burdens of the people in the direction of an extravagance not contemplated by the instrument which made him president. Perhaps he will call his policy "business enterprise," if so, whose is the profit, whose the loss? Upon whom does the loss fall when millions of cheap, crass laborers are added to our already few opportunities for American citizens to gain their daily bread? Who gains in sugar, tobacco, rice, fruits and other products when competition is on with millions of cheap products? Who pays the taxes on all this stupendous departure from our national existence? How shall we be rewarded for our sacrifices, our blood, our treasure poured out to rectify the mistakes Mr. McKinley is too shamefaced to rectify himself? The only answer is: A second term of McKinley. Is the game worth the candle?

COMBINATION IN RAILROADS.

How the Republicans Control the Vast Political Power in Them.

Nearly every week some new combination is reported. It does not seem an exaggeration to say that we may soon see all the railronds of the country controlled by five men, and these agreed that there shall be no competition between them. Practically a universal railroad trust or monopoly. The railroad freight bills of the country will this year exceed $1,000,000,000, over $13 for every man, woman and child, or an average of $65 for each family. The passenger travel will amount to one-third as much.

There are over 900,000 men employed by the railroad companies, or about one-fourteenth of the total voting population, all more or less dependent upon the officers of these railronds for their daily bread. These officers are controlled by the five finnnciers who form the governing power of the railroad trust or combination. What a vast political power they enjoy, and they did use it in the last national election, and will again use it in the next one. All this great political power was used for the republicans, and in addition a vast sum subscribed to the Hanna-McKinley campaign fund.

Why were these railroad all in favor of the republicans? And why are the republican leaders favorable to the railroads? And why do they set their faces like a stone wall against enforcing the anti-trust laws and giving the interstate commerce commission the power they have asked for? The answer to these questions is self-evident.

To pass resolutions against trusts, as Mr. Hanna did in the platform of the Ohio republican convention, or to repeat these or stronger ones in the next republican national platform will not blind the eyes of the voters of the United States, unless they are participating in the boodle provided by the trusts and railroad combinations, and disbursed with lavish hand by the Hanna-McKinley political strikers.—Jeffersonian Democrat.

——The funniest thing out is this report from Ohio that Hanna has helped himself and his party by going on the stump and showing himself to the people.—Boston Herald.

MR. BRYAN'S ANSWERS.

The Democratic Leader Is Ready and to the Point with a Republican Interrogator.

The following incidents occurred during Mr. Bryan's tour of Nebraska, and are good examples of his keen wit, quick repartee and scathing invective:

Near the close of his speech at Falls City, a republican in the audience arose and denied that President McKinley desires to retain the Philippines, whereupon, without a moment's hesitation or the least show of embarrasament, Mr. Bryan quoted this sentence from one of McKinley's speeches: "I cannot permit myself to douht that these islands will be retained under the benign sovereignty of the United States."

The republican next declared that most of the Filipinos were in revolt against Aguinaldo.

"Are you not flattering Aguinaldo too much," asked Mr. Bryan, "when you assert that with a handful of men he can not only subjugate his own race, but hold in check and frustrate a great American army?" (Cheers).

A third time the man broke in to declare that the trade of the Philippines is valuable. Bryan rose to his full height and his eyes flashed as he thundered:

"I dare you to measure the lives of American boys and the heartaches of American mothers by the paltry dollars and cents of commerce; I dare you to do it!"

And the crowd went into a veritable paroxysm of applause. Then the man declared that Providence was leading the United States to the Philippine islands. He had not long to await his answer:

"Ah, my friend," came the reply, "I never yet cornered an imperialist who did not finally lay the blame on the Almighty." (Laughter and cheers).

"If you, my friend, were half as anxious to be on the Lord's side as you are to bring Jehovah down from Heaven to bolster up the republican party, you wouldn't be here advocating an abandonment of the declaration of independence. You are not preaching the gospel of the Prince of Peace. You're preaching the infernal gospel of conquest and murder and death!"

The orator's last words were drowned in a tempest of cheers. The imperialist disappeared. And so will the doctrine of imperialism when measured by the enlightened intelligence of American citizenship.—Mississippi Valley Democrat.

RELIGION ENTERS INTO IT.

McKinley's Policy of Imperialism Will Interfere with Religious Liberty.

Every man who has read history must believe that the only safety for religious liberty is in a people's government. A liberty of right, and not by toleration. It is in America that the persecuted sects of the centralized governments of the world have found freedom of worship and liberty of conscience. If anywhere in the world there is religious tolerance to be found it is done entirely to the example of the United States in giving all a shelter free from persecution. Do the good people who are charged with fulsome praise anent Mr. McKinley's Philippine policy fully understand the gravity of the outcome of that policy? Admitting that his policy will carry the Bible with the flag to the uttermost parts of the earth and transform a civil government into an apostolate, which one of the numerous sects will that apostolic Caesar accept as his own? When the limits of constitutional power have been transcended, a new Caesar will have been created, a Caesar that will not stop at crumbs, but will demand mouthfuls. With the least decline in the principle of popular sovereignty will commence an independent sovereignty not bound by any restrictions upon its own conduct. What then will become of religious liberty, a liberty so dearly bought? Is not the suggestion of the idea sufficient to put religious thinkers upon the alert? To which one of the sects, as a future state establishment, are the others prepared to surrender their freedom?

A GUERRILA WARFARE.

The Futility of Resisting the Americans Recognized at the Last Filipino Council.

INSURGENT TROOPS WILL SCATTER.

Reports of Skirmishes Come From Every Section of the Island of Luzon Along Railroads.

Province of Zamboanga, Island of Mindanao, Surrenders to Commander Very, of the Castine, Unconditionally—Local Chiefs Declare Their Loyalty.

MANILA, Nov. 26.—Buencamino, the brains of the Filipino insurrection, is locked up here in charge of Brig. Gen. Edward B. Williston, the provost marshal. When Tarlac fell, Buencamino fled northward with Aguinaldo's three-year-old son and an old lady supposed to be the mother of Aguinaldo.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Secretary Long received a cable from Adm. Watson stating that the entire province of Zamboanga, Island of Mindanoa, surrendered to Commander Very, of Castine, unconditionally, November 18. Delivery of all guns promised. Local chiefs declared themselves loyal.

MANILA, Nov. 27.—The last Filipino council of war was held by the retreating leaders at Bayambang on November 13, in the house now occupied by Gen. MacArthur. It was attended by Aguinaldo, Pio Del Pilar, Garcia, Alejandrino and some members of the so called cabinet. Information has reached Gen. MacArthur from several sources to the effect that the council recognized the futility of attempting further resistance to the Americans with united forces, and agreed that the Filipino troops should scatter and should hereafter follow guerrila methods.

Reports of ambuscades and skirmishes come from every section of the country along the railroads. Those districts seem to be filled with small bands. Saturday four men of Company D, 9th infantry, were foraging beyond Bayamban when 20 Filipinos took them in ambush, killing one and capturing the other three. The Americans resisted for half an hour.

The firing being at Bayabam, Lieut. Frazer, with a squad, followed the retreating Filipinos several miles. The Americans found the body of the soldier boloed. They burned the hamlet where the fight took place. Three Filipino riflemen ambushed an American surgeon near Capas. He shot one and the others fled. Between Bamban and Angeles a mule train was fired upon by the insurgents and a Spaniard, a former prisoner of the Filipinos who was with the train was shot.

At Malasiqui the officials who welcomed the Americans were murdered. This was the only railroad town which the Americans did not garrison and on the night the troops withdrew a band of insurgents entered, dragged Antonio Mejia, president of the town into the street and cut his throat. The murderers then assassinated the vice president and five members of the town council in the same manner and told the frightened natives who witnessed the slaughter to spread the news that a similiar fate awaited all friends of Americans.

Military activity continues in every section. Col. Bell's regiment has advanced from Bayambang upon Mangatarem where it is supposed there is a large insurgent force. Two battalions of the newly arrived 28th infantry have been sent by Cascoes to Bacoor to reinforce the south line.

Maj. Spence, with 50 men of the 33d regiment, surrounded a village near Bautiston during the night and attacked the place at daybreak, captnring a Filipino captain and 15 men with seven rifles.

The latest news from Gen. Young is that there are ten cavalry men and 300 Macabbees with him, most of the horsemen who started having been compelled to drop out because their horses failed them.

MANILA, Nov. 27.—Aguinaldo is still a fugitive, but the American cavalry, now much exhausted, are in hot pursuit. The cavalry horses are much in need of new shoes and good fodder. The hard work has told on them greatly.

Aguinaldo's mother, in her flight, got lost in the woods and was seized by natives who were unfriendly to Aguinaldo. Gen. Wheaton reports that his men surprised the woman's captors and rescued her from them. Her young grandson was also taken, but the exposure, lack of food and fatigue consequent upon the flight of the fugitives caused the death of Aguinaldo's baby. It died at Bayamban.

Tommy West Got the Decision.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Tommy West was given the decision over Frank Craig, known as the Harlem Coffee Cooler, at the end of the fourteenth round of what was to have been a 25 round bout at catch weights before the Broadway athletic club Friday night.

Opposed to the Seating of Roberts.

LACROSSE, Wis., Nov. 26.—Congressman J. J. Esch, of this city, has declared himself opposed to seating Congressman Roberts, of Utah.

Woolums was a clerk in precinct No. 1. at Midway during the recent election, and it was claimed that his slowness in giving the ballots shut out about 140 voters, nearly all of them colored Republicans. The suit grew out of charges made by Waits and Ellis that Woolums had sold out his party to the Democrats. Woolums was postmaster at Midway under the Harrison Administration, and formerly held the office of Police Judge. He is one of the oldest Republicans in Woodford county, Ellis is a leader of the colored Republicans, and is the wealthiest negro in the county."

General Discussion.

T. Z. Roberts,
Mrs. F. E. Kitley,
Maria L. Koru.

According to recent estimates the 1899 crop of potatoes will go down on record as the largest in the history of the country. Figures based on a careful review of the various producing sections place the total yield at 250,0000,000 bushels against 244,000,000 bushels in 1898 and 174,000,000 bushels in 1897. The highest price in 1898 caused the farmers to increase potato area about 3,000,000 acres and though the yield per acre is smaller than last year, the total results show a tremendous increase.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1899. NO. 7

THE race for Congress in the Seventh District is under headway.

THERE seems to be considerable suddenness about the weather again this winter.

WITH Owens and Breckinridge both in the coop, trouble is liable to be sprung at any time.

AN advance of 25 per cent. in the price of all kinds of paper it is predicted will be made before January 1.

NEW JERSEY has $100,000 in her treasury, and a move is on foot to have it used for the benefit of the schools.

Mark Hanna has not been heard from since the election. Evidently he has taken those Cuyahoga county returns very much to heart.

CONGRESS will begin the consideration of the currency question at an early day, and the wrangle it will occassion will just about consume the entire session.

THE A. P. A.'s are sending to Senators and Congressmen circulars in which President McKinley is vigorously attacked because as is claimed he is influenced by Archbishop Ireland.

THE Utah Congressman was not sworn in along with the other members Monday. The speaker requested him to stand aside, and he complied, but first having it understood that by so doing he waived none of his rights.

THE Brown Democrats who bossed the Seventh District Congressional convention held at Lexington, Friday, refused to endorse the Brown Lexington State convention platform and the nominee will go under the Log Cabin. They got there soon.

IN his race for Congress in the Seventh District, Gayle, the Democratic nominee is handicapped by the support of a Louisville paper that but recently suggested for political reasons, the assassination of a business rival and the burning of his property.

A DESERTING Democrat in the Seventh Congressional District is soon taken to the bossom of the Republican party, while those who have grown old in the service of that party are compelled to occupy a back seat. Breckinridge and Owens are shining examples.

THE corporations and trusts have concluded that Illinois is not a healthy State for them to do business in, and corporations with an aggregate capital of millions of dollars are preparing to move their places of business from that State to New York.

IT appears that many Cubans are intensely displeased because a native of the island has not been appointed Bishop of the Catholic Church. The Cuban priests, according to reports, are resolved not to meet the Italian Bishop selected, and a solemn delegation of the Cubans has gone to Washington to protest against such an appointment.

ANOTHER scandal has come to light, this time in the Navy Department. It appears that books purchased for the libraries on the warships at $4 03 per copy were charged up to the Government at $18 50 per copy. Secretary Long has instituted an investigation, and those who were authorized to purchase the books will be called upon for an explanation.

LOCAL interest in Porto Rico is now entered on the elections, in which the Spaniards and Federals are striving for supremacy. The fight is an even one. The result will go a great way toward determining how soon Porto Rico will be given civil government. Elections are to be held in the towns. So far, nine towns have had their elections. The Federals were victorious in five of these. Up to date elections have been held in but one town at a time. The votes have been cast and the election decided before proceedings have been begun in the next town. As a consequeuce, much time has been lost, and it is not at all unlikely that orders will shortly be issued allowing the elections to be held in several towns at the same time.

Editorial Paragraphs.

The trusts are an issue that the Republicans do not care to have brought prominently to the front in next year's campaign. To show the extent to which these monopolies created to enrich the stockholders at the expense of the people at large, have been nourished under that great humbug, the Protective tariff, should be the aim of every Democratic editor and speaker in next year's struggle. Mark Hanna to the contrary notwithstanding, there are trusts and very big ones at that.

Mr. Bryan's marvelous work in Nebraska caused that State to remain in the Democratic column. Now that the silver leader is about to visit the east, there is a small sized panic among the members of the G. O. P., and well they may be frightened. The personal magnetism of the man and his undisputed sincerity have won thousands of votes for him in the west. May it not be possible that the same elements of popularity will do as well for him in the east?

Our royally inclined President has become so sensitive relative to his doings that any criticism on the part of a poor government clerk brings down the Administration wrath to the point of dismissal: Noble E. Dawson, a clerk in the War Department, has been removed for critcising the President. Evidently free speech is restricted not only in Russia and in China, but in the United States as well.

That is all unseemly controversy which has arisen between the Navy and the War Departments relative to the removal of the wreck of the Maine from the harbor of Havana. It would seem that so long as it is known that the brave sailors of the Maine are lying at the bottom of that foul harbor, department friction for the time being, could be subordinated to practical patriotism.

Elihu Root for Vice President seems to be the choice of the New York State Republican boss, Tom Platt. Mr. Root, however, should be very weary. It will be well for him to keep in mind the fate that overtook Morton in 1896. Tom is a very sleek trickster. Woodruff is a man after his own heart and would have the nomination if the wily Thomas dared to urge him for the place.

John R. McLean is prominently mentioned as Mr. Bryan's running mate next year. Mr. McLean's experience in the recent Ohio campaign has probably furnished him with some large sized ideas relative to the practical side of politics, and he would make a competent colleague for the silver advocate.

No less a competent legal authority than a former Republican Senator of the United States, Hon. George F. Edmonds of Vermont, declares that Representative-elect Roberts should be protected in his constitutional rights and if elected properly, be sworn in as a member of the House.

After wobbling on the currency question for years, it is at last announced that McKinley has sufficiently stiffened his dorsal vertebrae to urge that some step be taken toward enacting a gold standard. It would be well for the majority to hurry up, as he may change his mind.

Senator Daniel has been advanced to Presidential proportions through the efforts of an energetic and able Richmond Journal. The party might go farther and fare worse, but indications now point to the renomination of Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Bailey, of Texas, has declared that Mr. Bankhead is his choice for minority leader of the House of Representatives. Mr. Bailey has been there himself and ought to know the kind of man needed to tackle the rampant majority.

Former Senator Call, of Florida, declares that his defeat was brought about by the money of the Standard Oil Co. Trusts in Florida, he says, are flourishing finely.

ETIQUETTE OF CONVERSATION.

Do not talk loudly or fast. A clear, distinct voice has great power.

Do not always begin a conversation by remarking on the weather.

Do not argue or appear to notice other people's inaccuracies in speech.

Do not, when narrating an incident, keep on saying "You see," "You know," etc.

Do not speak mockingly of personal defects. Somebody present may have the same.

Do not talk of your private and family affairs except to intimate friends, and then be careful not to do so often.

Do not cross question people. It is bad form to force a confidence, but if one is made to you you are bound to respect it.

Do not find fault needlessly even with the weather. The habit of grumbling at either people or things is most disagreeable.

Do not talk of things which the company present cannot be interested in. By so doing you may show yourself a clever and superior person, but you will be voted a bore.

Do not whisper. If you have anything to say that the general company may not hear, reserve it until you and the person to whom you desire to impart it are alone.

Do not interrupt others while speaking, but listen patiently until they have finished. Remember that the good listener is generally more appreciated than the clever talker.

Pith of the Press.

It is said that General Funston finds the water hotter here than in the Philippines.—Balitimore American.

Aguinaldo seems to have reached that part in the play where if he is discovered he will be lost.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

It appears that transports can leak and meat can spoil while the Hon. Russell A. Alger is enjoying private citizenship.—Washington Post.

General Funston will probably have a witness corps detailed to take observations and make affidavits next time he swims a river.—Baltimore American.

President Cleveland complained that he had "Congress on his hands." The coming Congress will find that it has the President "on its hand."—New York World.

Besides Gen. Otis's optimistic reports there is other evidence to show that the Phillippine insurrection is on its ultimate legs and that the legs are tired.—Chicago Tribune.

Sending American soldiers to the Philippines in rotten transports is not calculated to stimulate other Americads to embark on the sea of imperial conquest.—St. Louis Republic.

Mr. McKinley is President, the head of the Republican party and a candidate for renomination. Therefore, his views do constitute a national issue.—Anaconda (Mont.) Standard.

The Ohio campaign appears to have cost Mark Hanna about five times as much as it cost McLean and Jones together, and then he did not get a majority of the votes.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

It may be that Uncle Charley Grosvenor's vociferous silence is due to the fact that he has been commissioned to think equally as good as the front porch reception for 1900.—Omaha World-Herald.

Roberts will have the same kind of a certificate of election other members have. That majority of 13 will carry responsibilities in trying to hold on to Utah's electoral vote for McKinley.—Kansas City Times.

Admiral Dewey's expressed wish that Aguinaldo may escape, as "our easiest way out of the difficulty of dealing with him," recalls Lincoln's remarks about Jefferson Davis when the Confederate Government dispersed. "If Jeff can get away unbeknownst to us I shall be glad," he said.—N. Y. World.

SOME of those who are now pronouncing W. C. Owens a good man did not speak so kindly of him when a few years ago Judge Denny, of Lexington, was contesting his election to Congress, and some registration books that Denny very much desired to look over were suddenly spirited away. Billy was not so near an angel then, but he is for honest elections now.

Newsy Notes and Personal Gossip.---A Little Politics and Some Crop Items.

SOME MOVING ABOUT.

Thinking probably that your regular correspondent from this place was suffering from a serious illness, contracted by his long "siesta" on election day, and that the readers of your valuable paper of this place are always anxious to see news from here, thought we would, in a feeble way, try and fill his place for a while.

There is some talk of the Hon. W. H. Leathers being Col. Berry's successor.

Capt. James K. Pope has returned to our place after short stay in Tennessee.

If a certain young lady don't return from Franktort ere long, Frank will colapse.

Killing hogs is now delightful past time for the farmers in this community.

Several from this place took stock in the new bank to be started at Rising Sun.

There is some talk of building a telephone line from here to Bellevue next spring.

Henry North, of Dearborn county, Ind., was the guest of friends here, last week.

A letter from Dr. Cowen, who is in New York City, says he is improving slowly.

Dr. Alford, of Rising Sun, is attending to Dr. Cowen's practice while he is gone.

Joe H. Walton and bride, nee Miss Maud Ryle, are now at home at Mr. Walton's mother's. Mrs. Harriet Walton.

Mrs. E. L. Clements and daughter, Lizzie, who have been sick all fall with malarial fever, are so they can be up and about again.

B. H. Stephens, of Big Bone, was in town, last week. "The "Maj." was explaining to Cal Riddell the workings of wireless telegraphy.

What has become of our friend Mart Staley, since the election? We are wondering if he remembers the prophecy he made that day.

There never was a better fall prospect for wheat in this neighborhood, so say the oldest farmers. It has a good color and fine growth.

It seems that the river will not rise enough to let out coal, consequently fuel is getting to be a scarce article in this neighborhood and Rising Sun.

John M. Hodges is quite a success as a book canvasser, and we are glad to hear it, as he has but one arm and there is very little work he can do in the laboring line.

The electric railroad will be finished down to Rising Sun next spring, so we have been reliably informed. It will be a great benefit to the people living on this side of the river.

The "old Bachelors" convention will meet at Rabbit Hash, Dec. 10th. We have been invited, through the kindness of C. G. Riddell and John Calvert, to report the proceedings, which we will do in our next. Look out for it. It will be a hummer.

We would sugest to the various correspondents of the Recorder to have the holiday issue, the week before Christmas a hummer in the way of ever corre-pondent in the county trying how much news he or she can send in and how well they can do it. Let the readers judge which does the best. What say you brother quill drivers?

Last Sunday, while Mr. Theodore Ludwig and two friends, of Lawrenceburg, were driving down the bank to the McVille ferry, their horse scared at some logs and ran into the river, where the water was about 15 feet deep. They all went clear under the water and with great difficulty men in skiffs got them out. The buggy was a total wreck. The men, after procuring dry clothes, proceeded on their way home. It was a very narrow escape.

Last Friday, Nov. 24th, being the Hon. Jas. A. Wilson's 85th birthday, he was surprised by his relatives and friends, who brought in a bountiful dinner, which eclipsed anything we ever saw in the way of eatables. Among those present were F. M. Stephens and wife, R. H. Stephens and wife, Z. T. Kelly and wife, Richard Stephens and wife, Mrs. Lucy Scott, Mrs. J. R. Stephens, Mrs. Harriet Walton, Miss Pamelia Stephens, Mrs. Ernest Stephens and her children.

RULES FOR HUNTERS.

Always keep your gun loaded.

Always keep your gun cocked.

If you are with others be sure that the muzzle points toward one of them.

In gitting over a fence climb over first and pull your gun after you muzzle foremost.

When you see a conspicious movement in the brush, fire at once. It may be one of your comrades, but you may not hit him, and you can't afford to lose any chance of bagging game.

If a shell should miss fire get one of your friends to look down the muzzle of the gun while you try again. He may be able to see what is the matter and will give you the needed information if the top of his head isn't blown off entirely.

Brave Men Fall.

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in a loss of appetite, poison in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. J. W. Gardner, of Idaville, Ind., says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he don't care whether he lives or dies. It gave me new strength and good appetite. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50cts, at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, J. G. Oelsner's, Florence, and M. J. Crouch's, Union. Every bottle guaranteed.

The original copy of the Declaration of Independence is no longer to be seen by the public, because exposure to the air and light has made the text and signatures almost illegible. The document is now kept in a large safe in the library of the State Department, and it is believed that the faded lines are recovering some of their color.

Farmers who are in the habit of burning off their stubble fields after harvest may be interested to learn that the United States experiment station authorities have ascertained that an average stubble fire will remove more nitrogen from the soil than five ordinary crops of wheat.

CROP AND STOCK.

Col. May Overton, of Nashville, sold to the Fasig-Tipton Co., of New York, the celebrated stallion Bow Bells, 2:19½, and Rosy Morn, dam of Boreal, for $15,000.

Col. John T. Hughes, of Bourbon county, sold to M. Osborne, of Louisville, a pair of bay coach horses for $1,200. They took first premium at the St. Louis Fair.

There were exactly 17 horse and mule buyers in town Monday. Very few good horses were on sale, but lots of plugs were to be had at prices ranging from $1.50 to $7.50.—Owen News.

It is well known that this year's crop of Burley is a decidedly colory one, and to judge from what has been marketed, lacking in body. But this week brought out some red tobaccos, and some think more of this class of tobacco will come to market than at first supposed. A nice red bogshead brought $13 75, the highest price of the year, on Thursday.—The Weed.

About 40 Mormon elders have gathered at London, where they will hold a series of meetings. Laurel county is the stronghold of Mormonism in this State, although they have met with considerable opposition. Only a few days ago William McMorter, a newly-made convert, lost his mind, and was sent to the asylum. There is but one hotel in London where the elders can secure lodging.

A Mercer county farmer stated to the Harrodsburg Democrat that he had made a thorough examination of his wheat and had discovered it to be greatly damaged by fly. On each of the principal stalks, he said there were from four to seven fly eggs, and in most cases the main stalk was dead, but branches were coming out from the roots, which would, no doubt, produce a fair yield, provided the warm weather does not continue, until they, too, are injured by fly.

Some people wonder why English farmers are all the time complaining of their hard lot, while other farmers in far distant Australia, the Argentine Republic, Canada, the United States, Denmark, Sweden and other countries are shipping butter and cheese right over the heads of those English farmers into their home market of London. It does look queer. If farmers here or in South America can make and ship butter at a profit, 6,000 miles, why cannot the Englishman do it when having the market right under his nose?

The L. & N. ran a special turkey train from Paris to New York Friday to carry the shipments made from Paris, Flemingsburg, Carlisle and Millersburg by C. S. Brent & Bro., of this city. The three express cars each carried 16,000 pounds of dressed turkeys slaughtered for the Eastern markets. Every afternoon for the past ten days the regular train has carried two car loads of turkeys shipped to New York and Boston. The C. and O. hauled a special turkey train from Lexington to Boston one day last week.

The farmers of Harrison county have prepared and a good many of them have signed the following petition: "We, the undersigned farmers, and sheep and stock raisers, in order to protect our flocks from the ravages of dogs, and in order to keep our fences up and gates closed, agree together and with one another, not to permit any fox hunting upon our farms or premises, and we further agree that if any person or persons persist in fox hunting, we will pay a reasonable amount to a lawyer to prosecute parties so offending."

John McCormick, a farmer who resides across the river from Clinton, Ia., in Illinois, is the owner of a turkey gobbler which is probably the largest that has ever been raised in the United States. This monster towers into the air five feet, and weighs sixty five pounds. It looks more like an ostrich than a turkey. Its legs at the feet are an inch and a half in diameter, while close to the body they are the size of an ordinary man's arm at the elbow. The bird's wings are seven feet from tip to tip. The turkey is two years old, and never wanders away from home, as is usually the habits of turkeys. The bird is of the bronze breed, and Mr. McCormick says he has been offered large sums for the monster fowl, but has no desire to sell it.

THE RETURN TO THE OLD TOWN.

O the little old town that I left one day,
Because it was quiet, still
Has the name that it had when I went away,
And stands on the same old hill;
But the ones that were dear in the little old town,
With its one wide street running up and down,
Have ceased to sit on the porches where
The roses were trained to climb;
They have ceased to sew and to whittle there,
As they did in the dear old time.

The little old church with its wooden sheds
Still stands as it stood of yore;
But the ones who knelt and who bowed their heads
Are worshiping there no more!
And the little old school where I carved my name
On the homemade desk stands just the same—
But the boys who are batting the ball today
And the little maids, fair and free,
Are not the children who used to play
On the common there with me!

The little old house, so dear, so dear,
Stands just where it used to stand;
But not for many and many a year
Has the latch obeyed her hand—
The hand in which my hand was laid
When my first few faltering steps were made—
And in the little old parlor there,
O'erlooking the little lawn,
Another sits in her easy chair,
And hears the clock tick on.

O the little old town that I left one day,
Because it was quiet and still
Has the name that it had when I went away,
And stands on the same old hill:
But the friends that I've traveled "back home" to see
Are gone, or else are but strangers to me,
And over the doors of the little old stores
Are names that I never knew,
And the dream that was dear of the "old home" here
Can never, alas, come true!

A Little and a Big Hero

By Ino Strannik

MY TWO cousins and I had come from school to my uncle's estate, pale and overworked. Now, brown as berries, we felt strong and mischievous.

The day was hot and suffocating. The air seemed to be laden with something more than the scent of new-mown hay and pine—a flavor so common on a July day in northern Russia.

The grown people said: "The atmosphere is impregnated with electricity," and although we boys of 12 and 13 years did not know what that really meant, we were sure that, sooner or later, a storm would come, for the old shepherd had said so, and he always told the truth.

In the afternoon a black cloud rose over the horizon in the northeast. An hour later a dark bank covered half the sky and we heard the far away rumbling of thunder.

Rain began to fall in large drops and we, standing on the grass-covered porch amused ourselves in watching the chickens run, the ducks dive in the pond, the workmen hurry home and the cattle rush for the stables.

An unexpected clap of thunder made us jump, and we quickly obeyed the call of my aunt to come into the house, as we had no desire to stay outside any longer.

It grew darker and darker. The fiery zigzags of the lightning threw a yellow tint upon the people and furniture in the room, and the thunder following quickly on the flashes made the old mansion quiver to its foundations.

A blinding flash, with a deafening crash almost at the same instant, seemed to make the old castle sway.

"Surely that struck somewhere near," said my uncle, jumping to his feet and stepping to the window. "Yes, it is Michael Kubarkin's hut just across the river," he exclaimed. "I must go at once and see that the fire is put out." He turned to us: "Boys, you had better come along. I may need you."

No need to ask us twice. We felt over-honored to be allowed to be of use at such an important moment. In an instant we were in our high boots and rubber coats, and started for the fire.

About 20 peasants stood around the burning house, lamenting and praying, but not one offering to lend a helping hand.

"Quick," called my uncle. "Take some buckets; form a chain; try to put out the fire."

"Your lordship," said one of the men, "lightning struck this house. Only milk will put out the flame."

"Obey me," thundered my uncle, "and get to work or I'll put you on bread and water until you forget how milk tastes."

Reluctantly the man started. My younger cousin, Alexey, was stationed to watch the superstitious crowd, with orders to report at once if any one refused to work or tried to steal away.

"Now, boys," shouted my uncle, "let us see if there are any people in the house."

Bravely we followed him into the smoke and heat of the slowly burning hut. We soon discovered the dead body of Michael Kubarkin and carried it out. Again and again we faced the danger. We rescued two women and a baby. They had been merely stunned by the shock. While bringing the child out I had noticed a form lying near the door. In the darkness and smoke I could not distinguish whether it was a human being or a dog.

I hurried back. My uncle called me, but I rushed in, dropped on my knees and crawled toward the spot where I had seen the form lying. It was a boy. He had been on his way home in the next village and had sought shelter in the house from the storm.

I dragged him out, and was about 15 yards from the house when there was an explosion. Kubarkin had bought ten pounds of powder at the last fair and had kept it in the large brick stove.

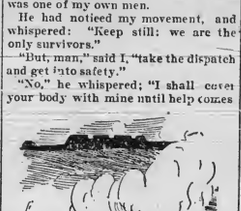
The hut collapsed. Some of the bricks whizzed by my head, uncomfortably close, but the boy was saved, and with aid of fresh air and a little brandy he soon came out of his stupor.

Ten years had passed. I was lieutenant in the body-guard of the czar. Before Plevna we were forced into active service.

One morning I was ordered to take a private dispatch from the emperor to Gen. Todleben. A guard of 12 men escorted me when I started from head quarters. It was a bright morning after several days of drizzling rain. The road through the forest was very soft and we could make but very slow progress. At about ten o'clock we reached an open valley. I ordered a halt to decide if I should cross the open space or turn to the left and keep in the woods until I had got out of sight and reach of the enemy. It would have been just 20 miles more of muddy road. The dispatch was important and haste necessary, so I decided to move straight on.

We had hardly reached the open valley when a small cloud of smoke from the northern part of Plevna told me that we had been seen and were now a target for the Turkish guns.

A short command from me brought my men into a line, so that the enemy had only one man to aim at. We were moving at full speed toward the protecting timber on the other side.



The first shell fell short; the second burst fully a thousand yards behind us; the third was "dead," and passed 50 feet in front of us.

We were almost in the shade of the tall pines when I heard a terrific crash and lost my senses. I awoke very soon, with a stinging pain in my head. A man lay right over me. He was unbuttoning my uniform. The thought of a "war-hyena" flashed through my mind. Cautiously I opened one eye—just enough to see who my assailant was. To my astonishment I saw that it was one of my own men.

He had noticed my movement, and whispered: "Keep still; we are the only survivors."

"But, man," said I, "take the dispatch and get into safety."

"No," he whispered; "I shall cover your body with mine until help comes

A MAN LEANED OVER ME.

The Turks will fire again as soon as they see one of us move. You remember the time you saved me from the burning house of Michael Kubarkin? Now is my time to show that I have not forgotten that I owe my life to you."

A few minutes later came a little troop from the timber, wearing the rag of the Red Cross. Eleven men were buried on the spot, and I was taken back on a stretcher, having lost one eye and suffering from a broken jaw.

While the dead were being buried and the first bandages being put on me my brave soldier had disappeared, and one of the horses of the Red Cross command was missing.

When I was discharged from the hospital I recognized in the sergeant of my regiment, who was the first to congratulate me on my recovery, the soldier who had covered me with his body in the hour of danger. It was the boy I had dragged from the burning hut on my uncle's estate.—N. Y. Independent.

POSTAGE ON MANILA MAIL.

Department Preparing an Order Reducing the Rate on Letters to Philippines.

Third Assistant Postmaster General Madden is preparing an order reducing the rate of postage between the Philippine islands and the United States. Domestic postal rates will prevail between the two countries. The cost of sending a letter to or from either country will be two cents an ounce instead of five cents for each half ounce, the present rate. The new order will repeal previous postal orders in all the West India islands now controlled by the United States.

The director of the post for the Philippines and other islands will be allowed to fix the rate of postage for all local matter. Domestic postal rate will also prevail between the United States and Porto Rico and Guam. The postal union rates will prevail between the United States and Hawaii and Cuba.

Progress and civilization are identical, says the Conservative. Progress is the improvement in methods of self-preservation of one period and people over and against another period and people.

THE MORALITY PARTY.

Tricks and Schemes of the Republican Method of Financiering.

It has come to light that the God and morality party is not in perfect accord with itself on a question of high financial morality. There is agreement upon the general proposition that there can be no real financial morality without the gold standard, but after that there is divergence. The nature of the difference can best be understood from a statement of facts.

In accordance with the general principle that the honor of the nation, its credit and its financial well being demand that all obligations of the United States shall be paid in gold unless otherwise expressly stipulated in the contract, and that all possible doubt upon that point shall be removed, the house caucus committee has framed a bill declaring plainly that gold is the sole standard of value in this country and that all bonds and other pecuniary obligations, except as above stated, are payable in gold.

All that looks very direct and straightforward. Upon the general principle laid down there should be no objection to it. But we hear that the thrifty republicans of the senate do object very strenuously. They say that if they should concur in the passage of a house bill containing a radical gold standard provision "they would destroy one of the best means of refunding the debt at lower rates." Therefore they "propose to apply the gold standard to future issues and provide at once for new gold bonds at a low interest rate which could readily be exchanged for the present high-rate, short-time coin bonds." So the house will virtually pass the radical gold standard bill, but the senate will prudently modify it in such wise that the holder of existing bonds will think it prudent to exchange them for new ones expressly payable in gold.

That is to say, it is very immoral and dishonorable to pretend that existing bonds may be paid in silver, and in order to establish the national credit and remove all suspicion of a disposition to repudiate the just obligations of the nation it is necessary to pass a bill declaring that all the bonds are payable in gold. At the same time it is entirely moral so to frame the bill as to make holders of those bonds think they are liable to be paid in silver, and therefore that the best thing they can do is to exchange them for new ones which are expressly payable in gold.

In other words, the republican position is that the existing bonds were intended to be payable in gold, and that this is so certain that it is grossly immoral so much as to suggest that they can be paid in silver without dishonor; yet it is entirely moral to scare holders into surrendering them in exchange for others bearing a lower rate of interest but expressly payable in gold by playing on their fears that the old ones will be paid in silver.

It would seem that in taking this position the republicans give away their case as a matter of morals altogether and take their stand on the lower level of policy. If existing bonds are unquestionably payable in gold it is morally wrong to pretend that they are not in order to frighten holders into giving them up for less than bonds so payable are worth, and if they are not so payable all the republican outcry against those who have proposed to pay them in silver has been mere hypocrisy. If the senate scheme is to be adopted it will be in order for the republicans to descend from their high moral horse.—Chicago Chronicle.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

—Judging from what Senator Hanna said in the Ohio campaign the republican party intends to deal very tenderly with trusts in the campaign next year. The democratic party can do no wiser thing than to take its stand against trusts. It can afford to rest its chances of winning the election on that one issue.—Savannah News.

—Secretary Gage condemned as "sentimental agitation" on Monday the demand he yielded to on Wednesday. Result: Speculators were enabled to clean up, by a rise in stocks in Wall street, just $48,021,340. While this action, which necessitated a sudden change of front, has been severely criticised, Secretary Gage accepts the full responsibility.—Toledo Commercial.

—"Hanna must go!" is the watchword. It was uttered in whispers at first, but now it is shouted through megaphones. But Mr. Hanna has a deaf ear for such voices and President McKinley keeps his mouth shut and looks wise. It is not forgotten that the president acted like a rock for Alger up to a certain time and then turned him down because the pressure to dismiss him "for the good of the party" became too strong.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

—If hostile politicians in Hanna's party attempt too persistently to drive him from the helm McKinley's sense of obligation may be appealed to by the man who, more than anyone else, brought him out as a candidate for president and secured his nomination and election. An appeal on this ground made to the president cannot go unheeded without laying "the chosen instrument of destiny and duty" open to a charge of unrequited affection and base ingratitude.—St. Louis Republic.

—It will be remarkable, now that the people have given the republican leaders a free hand in congress, if they shall not proceed to hang themselves. The Nicaragua canal project, the shipping subsidy speculation, the temptation to loot our new island possessions and the danger always incident in a full treasury and a practiced and hungry army of schemers who have fattened upon government largesses and discriminations will make the coming session of congress perilous for the country. Who, now that Tom Reed has retired, can hold back the plunderers?—Philadelphia Record.

BOND MANIPULATION.

How the Administration Shapes Things to Help Out Speculators.

For the first time in ten years the government is about to reduce its bonded debt. That is gratifying, of course, but the circumstances under which the operation is to be performed do not speak very forcibly for the intelligence of our financial policy, however eloquently they may tell of the astuteness of the individuals who profit by it.

The secretary of the treasury has offered to buy bonds to the amount of $25,000,000 to ease the money market. He proposes to pay 112⅞ for four per cents. of 1907, or 111 for five per cents. of 1904. That would release from $27,750,000 to $28,187,500, if the bondholders should avail themselves of the offer to its fullest extent.

Looking at the matter merely with reference to the present point of time, the secretary's proposition is advantageous to the government. The money is lying idle in the treasury, and by using it in this way we shall save about $1,000,000 a year in interest.

But how does that money happen to be in the treasury. It is there because this administration and its predecessors issued bonds for it. The four per cents. for which Secretary Gage is now offering 112⅞ were originally issued at par. That is to say, the government proposes to pay back $1,128,750 for every $1,000,000 it received, after having already paid $880,000 in interest.

On some of the other loans the showing is even worse. Four years ago President Cleveland sold $62,315,400 of four per cents. of 1925 to the Morgan-Belmont syndicate at a fraction over 104. If the government should try to buy back any of those bonds to-day it would have to pay 130½. It is not enough for the government to buy or sell bonds whenever it suits the convenience of Mr. Morgan and the interests he represents—it must also buy dear and sell cheap.

Suppose instead of this clumsy bond arrangement we had a postal savings bank with $1,000,000,000 of deposits. Then, if the government had more money on hand than it needed, and wanted to get some of it into circulation, all it would have to do would be to reduce the rate of interest. As the interest went down the deposits would flow out. When the process had gone on long enough it could be checked by simply fixing the rate of interest at the point at which deposits equaled withdrawals.

Or suppose we had the interconvertible bond system. There would be no premiums then and no losses to the government on purchases and sales of bonds. When money became so scarce that it was worth more than the two per cent. paid by the government the holders of bonds would simply take them to the treasury and receive notes at par. When they had no further use for the notes they would take them to the treasury and get bonds. Thus the money market would always be easy, and the government would never be forced to chaffer for its own securities.

The $1,046,048,850 of bonds we had outstanding when Secretary Gage made his offer cost us $40,347,876.80 a year in interest. Under the other arrangement the annual interest charge would be less than $21,000,000 at the outside, and might run down to nothing, if the demand for currency were sufficient.

What does the democratic party think of currency reform as one of the issues of next year's campaign?—N. Y. Journal.

FRIGHTENED REPUBLICANS.

Results of the Late Elections Creating Much Uneasiness in Their Ranks.

Evidently the republicans, no matter how much they may whistle to keep their courage up, are pretty thoroughly frightened over the results of the recent elections.

Realizing the fact that Bryan has gained ground rapidly and that even McKinley's home state is in danger, the republicans are now talking about an early convention.

Recalling the history of the last presidential election and the amount of time, money and printing it took to stem the tide of Bryan's eloquence, the republican national committee is said to be unanimously in favor of calling the national convention together early in June.

Another "campaign of education" must be fought, the trusts must be got in line and "milked" to the last drop in the way of contributions to the corruption fund and documents "explaining" the policy of imperialism must be prepared, and it takes time to do all this.

Of course, a long campaign will disturb business, but the republicans will have all the business they can take care of in an endeavor to make the people believe that there are no trusts in this country, and that trusts are a good thing, anyhow.

Time will also be required to demonstrate that the declaration of independence is an antiquated document not worth regarding by advanced thinkers and ardent imperialists such as make up the firm of Hanna, McKinley & Co.

Therefore an early meeting of the national republican convention is to be called by the frightened members of the McKinley cabal.—Chicago Democrat.

—The men with dinner buckets, who are the professed objects of Mr. McKinley's tender solicitude and in whose behalf he advocates the policy of protection, help to pay the enormous profits enjoyed by the producers of tin plate, amounting in some instances, to 100 per cent. Thus the contributions to the republican campaign fund are swelled by the wage earners, who are compelled to pay more than is just for everything they use for the benefit, as Mr. McKinley puts it, of American labor.—Kansas City Star.

FEMININE FRILLS.

The Latest Notions in Ladies' Costumes for the Current Season.

The high stocks that are worn are very becoming or ugly as the case may be. They should make every woman who hasn't a short neck look her best, but they must be cut to suit her. It makes all the difference in the world to the effect whether the curve up or down is just in the right place. If the collar goes down in the wrong place it gives the neck a bare uncovered look, and if it is too high at the wrong place it looks as if the woman was smothering. Collars must be cut, too, with regard to the good and bad points of the neck. There was a pretty young girl at the theater the other evening who was well dressed as to everything but her collar, which fitted atrociously. It may have been a home-made addition. It was of some white material, with a band of velvet of the color of the dress around the lower part. The velvet was snug, but the white collar was too high and not properly stiffened. The consequence was that as the girl turned her head the collar was pushed down and bulged out above the velvet, giving the wearer the effect of having goitre.

A handsome gown worn recently to the theater was a perfectly simple princesse, not a fold or a wrinkle on the bodice, around the hips, or on the back, until about a foot or more above the lower edge, where it flared out with the proper degree of fluffiness, ruchings and ruffles. The gown was of silk, just the glimmer of which could be seen through the solid lace which covered it. The figure of the woman wearer was, of course, perfect.

Some women and girls are wearing around their necks a bit of white illusion high up, just inside the stock, so that it gives a line of white around the neck and ties in a jaunty little bow at the back.

Sequins are to be seen on many things this winter, particularly on thin goods with lace effects. Whole gowns of net are covered with them, but they must be sewed on carefully, and home sewing is usually better than that of the shops. It is better to have no sequins at all than a sequin off here and there. It is a degree worse than a missing boot button.

There is fringe, fringe everywhere found, so much of it that it will be fringe, fringe nowhere, except on cheap garments. This is particularly the case with the fringed trimmings on the hats. It has been so easy to put a bit of fringe on a hat and give it style, that everyone has been able to do it, and it is seen commonly in the street cars already, which usually settles the fate of anything for people who like individuality. In some of the most beautiful gowns fringes are woven on to the garment. This cannot be duplicated in cheap effects.

Among the prettiest separate blouses are those made of one material opening over a contrasting shade in a vest of some soft silk, the body of the blouse being cut low around the neck to show a little of the silk below the collar. The blouse is finished at the waist with a narrow band of the waist material.

With the heavy boots and gloves that women are wearing come the woolen gloves for country wear that are as stylish and expensive as the other kinds, but soft and comfortable.—N. Y. Times.

AUTUMN SOUP.

A Dish That Reflects the Richness of the Market in This Season.

The autumn is the season when meats of all kinds reach their highest point of excellence. The feast of Martinmas, in honor of that saint who presided over a full larder, fell on November 11. Game of all kinds now crowds the markets. Beef, mutton and poultry are never fatter and better.

Autumn soup reflects the richness of the market. There are some game soups that are good. A soup, as a rule, however, should be made of fresh killed meats. Game always hangs a considerable time to put it into the proper condition for food, and is for that reason too old to be made into a soup. Sometimes game quenelles, or forcemeat balls of game, are used as a garnish to clear soup of beef.

There are also certain soups that are peculiarly characteristic of autumn, because they are especially associated with poultry or game dinners. A cream of celery or cream of rice soup is a most excellent introduction to a dinner of roast poultry.

Then are certain November days when nothing is so acceptable as an old-fashioned oxtail soup, rich and gelatinous, thickened and seasoned as only a Huguenot cook of old knew how to season and thicken it. This soup should be well flavored with mushrooms, as other beef soups should that are used in autumn, when the meadow mushroom, the chief variety of our market, is cheap and abundant enough to be used on poor men's tables.—N. Y. Tribune.

Brown some sliced onions in a little fat, with a couple of tablespoonfuls of flour; season well and put in the requisite amount of water. Put into a well-heated tureen some fried dice of bread (or some very thin chips of homemade bread about two days old); sprinkle over these a small handful of grated cheese, and pour the boiling liquor over them. Serve at once.—Boston Globe.

MYSTERY OF THE OMO.

Geographers and Explorers Are Puzzled at the Course of an African Stream.

A river rising among the mountains of Abyssinia and flowing about 600 miles to the southwest and south has been the subject of more speculation and contradictory evidence for 12 years than any other stream in Africa. The Omo river was known at its sources and at a few points along its course, but the explorers who visited it and the geographers who reviewed their work could not agree as to its destination. It was a geographical conundrum, as the Congo and the Niger were in the years when the hypothesis was advanced that the Congo was probably the lower part of the Niger. The truth about the Omo river was discovered two years ago by one of the most unfortunate expeditions that ever entered Africa, and the two white survivors of the ill-fated party, who said their leader and comrades had fallen under the fire of a savage foe and who were held captive until King Menelek secured their release, have been able this fall, with the aid of the records that were recovered, to publish in Italy the story of the second Bottego expedition and a map of the Omo river.

Eleven years ago most mapmakers believed that the problem of the Omo river had been solved, though the views of the explorers were still widely divergent. Count Teleki, Capt. Hohnel and Mr. Borelli maintained that the river flowed far to the southwest and emptied into Lake Rudolf. Other explorers headed by D'Abbadie, all of whom had visited the river, thought it was the upper course of the Sobat, which flows into the Nile. It was evident that Lake Rudolf, which is subject to great evaporation, received a large water supply from some source, and this consideration led most cartographers to represent the Omo as a tributary of that lake at its northern end.

This hypothesis was in great favor at the time when Dr. Donaldson Smith, the American explorer, came home with information and opinions that again unsettled the question. He had ascended the Nianam river, which empties into the northern end of Lake Rudolf, for 120 miles. He said it was a small stream and he thought it most unlikely that it was the lower part of the large Omo river. Twenty miles away he saw the mountains where he believed the Nianam headed, and in his opinion the Omo turned to the southeast somewhere and became the Jub river, which empties into the Indian ocean. Dr. Donaldson Smith did much excellent geographical work on this journey and some of the best mapmakers accepted the new hypothesis and showed the Omo as the upper part of the Jub.

It was left to the second Bottego expedition to trace the Omo from its middle course to Lake Rudolf and prove that Donaldson Smith was mistaken, and that the Nianam was really the lower course of the Omo. The incorrect impression of the American explorer was doubtless due chiefly to the fact that he saw the Nianam in the dry season at a low stage of water. No phase of African exploration has given rise to so many perplexing questions as the rivers, many of which were known in part many years before their entire courses were revealed. But the hydrography of the continent in all its more important features is determined at last satisfactorily.—N. Y. Sun.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS

LOCATING THE WELL.

Upon It Very Often Depend the Lives and Happiness of the Farmer and His Family.

A very large proportion of our diseases come from the water we drink. The farm well, in which all repose so much confidence, is frequently the cause of much evil that might be avoided by close attention to its proper location and construction. Usually our wells are too near barns and water closets, to say nothing of sink spouts. People forget that below the ground lies a water level, that is, a level to which body water comes. The barnyards and closets drain down to this water level and the impurities are carried laterally sometimes for a great distance.

The process, is shown in our illustration (taken from a government bulletin). The water level is seen near the bottom of the cut. The water naturally flows toward the point where the water is taken out, which of course is the well. Thus the water surrounding the well perhaps for hundreds of feet moves toward the well. In wet times the danger is not so great as in dry times, for when the well and ground are full of water the drainings from the sources mentioned are carried beyond the well. But in a droughty time the water from a great distance is drawn towards the well. This is especially the case where the well is used to its full capacity for the watering of stock. It has been therefore found that the month of October is generaly the worst month for the prevalence of typhoid fever, because in October the supply of moisture in the ground is small, and great areas are drawn upon to supply the well. This applies to what we term the shallow wells. No such well should be located within 100 fet of any privy vault or barnyard.

The deeper the well, says the Farmers' Review, the safer it is as a general thing, especially if the well is so constructed that water can come in only at the bottom. The organic matter in passing through the soil is oxidized and converted into nitrates. The danger in that case is that the soil may become overcharged with filth, and that oxidation cannot be as complete as is necessary. So that even with the deep well the location should be as far as practicable from all sources of contamination. Most of our wells are faulty in construction. They are of loose material to the top and permit the entrance of water at any point. In time of freshet the water runs in near the top carrying with it any filth that may be on the surface of the ground or harmful substances near the surface of the ground. For this reason the wells should be cemented with hydraulic cement to a point near the bottom. This will prevent water getting in that has not been exposed to the oxidizing influences and will also keep out frogs, toads, rats, squirrels and the like. The decay of animal flesh is very dangerous and should always be avoided.

Among the diseases that are carried by impure water are dysentery, diarrhoeu, dyspepsia, cholera, typhoid fever, scarlet fever, malarious fever and ague. The great epidemics of typhoid fever and malarious fever that swept over the country last year were directly due to the bad water that the soldiers had to drink. The sick soldiers when taken to their homes spread the disease through the sources that contaminated the home wells. More than 56,000 people in the United States last year died from typhoid fever alone. We quote from the official report as to why typhoid and malarious fever became so prevalent at Camp Thomas at Chickamauga and why that camp had to be abandoned:

"It appears that the whole camp is located above a magnesian limestone. The surface water passes directly through sink holes and fissures into water pockets struck by the so-called artesian wells." The report concludes by saying that "the terrible increase of sickness, which has caused the camp to be abandoned, has had the water supply for the main if not the exclusive cause. The July rains washed the microbe-laden atmosphere and the polluted soil, and carried the morbid material into the pockets of water struck by the pumps."

Carrots as a Stock Food.

Carrots can be sliced with a root cutter and be made serviceable for all kinds of stock. Horses can eat them without preparation of the food, but cattle are liable to be choked by any kind of roots unless the food is cut or sliced. With the root cutter carrots may be sliced and chopped at one operation into very small pieces, so as to render them serviceable for poultry of all kinds. Turnips, beets, potatoes and parsnips may be sliced in the same manner.

EGGS FOR MARKET.

Excellent Goods Must Be Furnished Invariably to Hold First-Class Customers.

For most of us it pays better to raise eggs for market than to raise fowls or broilers. In raising eggs one has a long, steady market, but for fowls and spring chickens the same is not always true. Besides, after we have raised a chicken for eggs, and she has done the best she can in laying eggs, we can kill her and find a market at some price for her. The question of profits then is merely a relative matter of cost of feed and price for eggs. If good prices can be obtained for the eggs large profits are realized, but low prices probably mean loss. Consequently we must figure out how to get good prices. One located a long distance from a good market, where land is cheap and plenty, would find egg raising as profitable as breeding fancy fowls or spring chickens. The eggs that come from a great distance are generally marked seconds or culls, and they sell at such low prices that the producers cannot receive much for them. Only bakers and confectioners will buy these poor eggs, and they are sold by the case, and not even by the dozen.

Fresh eggs are just as knotty a problem with the consumers as with the producers. In the first case it is how to get absolutely fresh and reliable eggs, and for the latter it is a matter of how to reach the consumers directly. The middleman usually comes in and spoils the efforts of both sides. He mixes the absolutely fresh eggs of one shipper with those of another, and supplies his customers with the mixed product. The consumer in time begins to distrust everyone, and when a dealer tells him that his eggs are absolutely fresh he takes it with a grain of salt. The only way for the producer is to market his own eggs or cooperate with others, so that a representative can go to the market every day and sell the eggs directly to the different purchasers. Of course this class of customers will be found only among the wealthy, who can afford to pay fancy prices. The fancy eggs in large cities sell as high as 40 and 50 cents per dozen among choice customers, and if farmers could receive this they could well afford to peddle them. Ten or 20 producers in one locality could afford to send one of their number twice a week to market with the fresh eggs from their farms, and they would make more profits in this way than if they shipped them in the ordinary way. It would not be difficult to increase the list of first-class customers year by year if excellent goods were always supplied. In order to retain as well as secure this trade the very best of eggs and service must be ungrudgingly given.—Anne C. Webster, in American Cultivator.

DESTROYING MINKS.

A Simple Method Which Has Been Used with Success for a Number of Years.

To destroy minks, get wide boards and place them all around the inside of your yard (or on the side the minks enter), leaning against the fence and about six inches out from the bottom, so as to leave a "run" behind. Place the boards butt to butt, making loose joints, and at intervals of two or three boards make a small hole opening into the yard under the edges above. Directly behind these holes place your trap, using a steel trap and covering it well, as covering a trap carefully is very important. Make a hole just deep enough to leave the trap level with the surface of the ground, then cover the jaws and springs with sawdust or light earth, making everything look natural, and drop carelessly a dead leaf on the "pan" so as to cover it well. Care should be taken not to get lumps of earth under the "pan." See that your chain is fastened firmly, or you may lose your trap. Be careful not to make the holes under the boards too large, as some inquisitive bird will get his neck squeezed. The trap can remain set both day and night without danger to the fowls. A mink or weasel will not climb over the boards when they can travel on the ground or under. A plan that can be tried in an open yard is the following:

Around the fowl-house make piles of roots, sticks, rubbish, etc., say three or four, and so arrange them as to leave a small hole in each. Set your trap, well covered, just in the entrance of the holes, and the mink will be caught.—Farm and Fireside.

WARM ROOSTING PLACE.

Handy Thing to Have Where Winter Eggs Happen to Be Looked For by the Farmer's Wife.

Where a small flock of Leghorns is kept it is important to provide a very warm roosting place for them if winter eggs are to be looked for. The cut shows a simple way to make such a warm roosting place. The barrels shut up close together in use, and the fowls enter and leave by the opening that is shown. The barrels can be removed as warm weather approaches, and the usual roosts substituted.—Orange Judd Farmer.

A BARREL ROOST.

When on full feed grown wethers will eat from 1½ to 2½ pounds of grain a day; lambs somewhat less. If it is posible, a mixture of oats, shelled corn, bran and oil makes a splendid ration.

Clean up the orchard thoroughly and burn all the rubbish. In doing so you will destroy lots of insects.

THE EYES AT SCHOOL.

Defective Sight in Children Often Due to Straining the Eyes at Study.

Much attention has been given during the past few years to the eyesight of school children. Tests of vision have been made in schools all over the world, and the results have been astonishing, if not alarming. It has been proved that short-sightedness exists among pupils in schools and colleges to a much greater extent than was supposed, and what is more disquieting, the number of pupils who have defective vision seems to be steadily growing larger.

Another fact brought out by such tests is that the proportion of those suffering from imperfect eyesight increases with the advance in studies, being least in the lowest classes and greatest in the highest.

A German investigator discovered this 30 years ago as the result of an examination of the eyes of 10,000 students in the schools at and near Breslau. In the primary schools he found about six in every 100 children suffering from poor eyesight; in the intermediate schools the number of nearsighted pupils had increased to more than ten per cent., in the high schools to 25 per cent., while in the university 60 students out of every 100 were myopic, or short-sighted.

A similar ascending scale of defective vision has been noted among school children in other countries, although the proportions are not so high anywhere else as in Germany and Russia, a fact explained by the excessive strain put upon the eyes in reading German and Russian characters.

That the prevalence of defective eyesight among children is in great part due to the overstraining of a weak organ is not open to question. Unskilled laborers, and others who have not been obliged to strain their eyes in early life, have usually good eyesight, but skilled workmen, typesetters, and so on, who use their eyes for close work and begin to learn their trade young, are often near-sighted.

Dr. Casey A. Wood, of Chicago, has recently drawn attention to the dangerous strain put upon the eyes of very young children by certain of the kindergarten tasks; but this subject is too important and too large to be compressed into a single article, and we must consider the means of protecting the eyes in another article.—Youth's Companion.

MERE COINCIDENCE.

Four Men Who Found That on One Day Each Year They Lied by Instinct.

"Speaking of strange coincidences," said the talkative man, "I ran across one this afternoon that I do not think has ever been duplicated. I was taking lunch in a down-town cafe to-day, and at the table next to me were seated four men. They were strangers to one another, but under the spell of what the waiter had set before them were talking like old friends.

"'By Jove!' said one of them, suddenly, 'this is my birthday!'

"'Why,' exclaimed another, 'so is it mine!'

"'Mine, too, said the third.

"'And mine, too,' added the fourth man.

"They stared at one another for a moment, and then the first man said:

"'I am 53 to-day.'

"'Why, that is my age!' exclaimed another.

"'Mine, too,' said the third man.

"'Gentlemen,' exclaimed the fourth man, 'that is my age, too.'

"'A strange thing about my birthday,' said the first speaker, 'is that I once broke my arm upon that day, and once then my arm always pains me upon that day.'

"'What birthday was it?' asked the second man, in a strange voice.

"'My seventh,' answered the first man.

"'Gentlemen,' shouted the second man, 'I broke my arm on my seventh birthday, and ever since upon that day my arm has pained me!'

"'I have had the same experience,' returned the third man.

"'And I also,' said the fourth man.

"'I fell from a hay mow,' said the first man.

"'So did I,' came from the three in one voice.

"'Gentlemen,' said the first speaker, 'it lacks but one thing to complete this strange coincidence. Upon my birthday I always find myself unable to speak the truth.'

"'It is the same way with me,' promptly returned the second man.

"'Here, too,' said the third.

"'And the fourth man broke the spell by asking what it would be."—N. Y. Sun.

Brushes.

An adept in dressing gives the following advice: Choose clothes that suit you from the best makers, in the best materials and style, then take care of them, your figure and your hair. To follow these dictates it is absolutely necessary to have the best of brushes. First, for the hair, long, soft brushes that permeate the tresses without either splitting or breaking them, while cleansing the scalp. A variety of clothes brushes are needed, soft for velvet, long haired dusting brushes for millinery, and good hard brushes for mud.—Detroit Free Press.

Cucumber and Onion Salad.

Cucumbers and onions, especially Bermuda onions, make a delicious salad. Slice the cucumbers and onions and lay them in separate bowls of ice water for one hour. Never salt cucumbers if you wish them to be crisp. Drain carefully, arrange in a salad bowl, and at the last moment mix with a French dressing, or with pepper, salt and vinegar. There should be three large cucumbers to one onion.—N. Y. Tribune.

Higher Criticism.

The savage held his temper admirably. "Nature," he replied, with a comprehensive gesture, "is our Bible!"

"Then of course you have no higher criticism!" exclaimed the enlightened man, shuddering.

"Oh, but we have!" protested the savage, vehemently. "Why, there are among us any number of advanced thinkers who wonder for instance, if there isn't too much salaratus in the bread fruit! Yes, sir!"

Here we see that the mind is alike impatient of fetters, no matter what man's corporeal condition be.—Detroit Journal.

Non-Sinkable Boats.

The latest invention for saving life comes from London, and is a non-sinkable boat. If people would pay as much attention to the preservation of life in other ways, there would be a great improvement. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a life preserver, discovered 50 years ago. It cures dyspepsia, indigestion and all forms of stomach trouble. It is an excellent tonic for the whole system and may be had from any druggist.

Everything a Disease.

"Oh, my dear madam, there is a fleshproducing microbe, you know."—Indianapolis Journal.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Our friend "Jonas" paints for future reference, when he paints. He uses 14 or 20 gallons of varnish and 400 pounds of lead, when he might use less if he wanted to. He puts on seven coats and then looks for favorable winter weather to put on another. We never heard of wood having a coat of hair on it until he told about the new growth.

The Gunpowder Cor. is a genial, good fellow and we tip our hat to him in rememberanoe of his pleasant "comp." in last week's, but never dreamed he would tell Busby that Will Garnett told Lute Aylor how Robt. Houston expected to tell Ben Riley that John Surface saw Spencer Smith looking for eleven gobblers that failed to gobble at gobbling time at their usual gobbling place.

A comedy of three acts and a calf was played Saturday evening by the "Platt Hill Comedy Co," one "Beauf" was the star actor, and the calf acted as "killermeter," the "butter from Butterville" and played his part well. In the second act "Beauf" exclaims in a loud voice, "Say Joseph, what for you run from cat caf like dot, you jest spile dot caf?" Next minute the calf makes a drive for "Beauf" who takes to his heels, falls down, tears up a chicken coop, &c., and so on, thereby proving that he would not run to spoil a "caf," but might run to "save his bacon."

Esq J. L. Frazier marred his "pulchritudinosity," one day last week. He very carefully pushed a plank back into place on a fence that had become warped and was admiring the graceful curve it had on it, when suddenly it flew out, hit him a 3-bagger on the nose and now he could stand on Fifth St., Cincinnati, and say with Mr. Isaacs, "Coom ein min frent and py soom clodthings to tay," for it's a graceful curve he wears on that nose, and moreover the 'squire Kunse more hereafter than he did previously—so to speak.

The autics a lot of town hunters cut in this vicinity, Thanksgiving Day, was a source of amusement to our sportsmen. They made a landing on the hunting ground about daylight and began operations by spreading out. It is a fact, that when a man of German extraction, wearing a bay-window in front, spreads out, it means something; so it was in this case, for they meant to kill everything in sight, but did they do it? We say no, because reliable witnesses say as much as 15 shots were fired at one rabbit and not a "hare" was touched; one witness told how a big fellow let loose with both barrels at a "bobnnie," but in place of holding up the rabbit he held up his bay-window with one hand, his gun with the other and run after him at break-neck speed

Mr. Editor, talking about dreams, calls to mind how Richwood folks dream, and it goes something after this fashion: A citizen of the Richwood country, who makes his daily walk in and about the beautiful home of Mr. D——, dreamed that a "lightning express" train came dashing through that country at midnight with fire flying from every window and hissing steam from every valve, making a most terrible sight; on it came with thunderous noise and great rapidity, yet, the engineer was in full control of Mr. H.'s home; two men stepped off the train and began to examine people they found about the neighborhood as to the "good or bad place." As a test they put a bell shaped iron cap over the head and pushed it down with a thud, finally the cap was placed on Mr. H.'s head, pushed down to his shoulders, when a dreadful explosion followed, blowing everything into atoms (Mr. H. included) and awakened the dreamer.

Hebron.

On Thanksgiving morning about 3 o'clock. five Nimrods left Hebron with their guns, dogs, and baskets well filled with everything that was good. These hunters were James and Wilford Bullock, Norris Riddell, Frank Jackson and Add Batterson. They did not stop until they reached the home of Mr. Jas. Rogers in the Bellevue neighborhood, where they were joined by Wilber Scott and Vernard and William Rogers, who pilotted them over their father's large farm on which game in abundance was found. One red tail fox the temerity to show himself, but was smart enough to keep beyond the reach of our guns, and become not one of the day's trophies. At noon we partook of a most excellent dinner prepared by our hostess, and shortly thereafter we visited the hills for an afternoon hunt, where the sport though laborous, was enjoyed very much. In our pack of dogs every specie of canine from the blood hound to the pug was represented, but of all William Batterson's Beagles were of the most assistance. Our day's pleasure will not soon be forgotten.

He has one daughter and one son, Mrs. Marshall Hill, of Covingtou, and R. O. Hughes, surviving him.

Erlanger people are very much elated over the statement of J. P. Ernst, President of the C., N. & C. Street Car Co., that, "Unless something happens we will carry you to Erlanger on the electric cars next fourth of July." It is not certain by what route Erlanger will be reached, but the prospects for the much needed road are a great deal brighter than they have ever been, and it is sincerely hoped that nothing will intervene to prevent President Ernst making his promise good. With electric road connection with Covington and Cincinnati, there is no reason why Erlanger should not soon take rank as one of their most popular suburbs. There is not a more healthy location in any reasonable distance of these cities, which fact combined with the reasonable price at which property sells can not fail to attract the city people who desire to go away from the many dis advantages they encounter in their domestic career. Here's to Erlanger, and may her future continue to grow brighter.

Joseph C. Wright, so far, has the contract for the erection of the buildings that have been let by the club. The club inteuds to have one of the most commodious and pleasant summer resorts anywhere within 50 miles of Cincinnati and if the club carries out its designs we have no doubt its wishes will be fully verified. It is backed by sufficient wealth to make good all that they have in contemplation.—[Aurora Cor. Lawrenceburg Register.

A couple of Bullittsville nimrods went down on the waters of Woolper, last week, to spend a few days hunting rabbits and quails, and at the same time to enjoy the unbounded hospitality that is always dispensed by Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lillard. The morning of the first day of the hunt Mr. Lillard had some business to look after that made it impossible for him to start with them, but expected to overtake them in a few hours at most. The two hunters started, as they thought, to make a circle on the premises of their host, but it was not long until they discovered that they were as completely lost as if they had been suddenly transferred to South Africa. They climbed hills and feuces and lacerated their limbs trampling throug briar patches until they were nearly exhausted, when they arrived at the residence of a farmer upon whom they called for information as to their whereabouts, and for a public highway by which they could return to Mr. L.'s. The desired information was obtained, and they finally reached their morning's starting place, weary and worn. After recovering from their fatigue Mr. L. took charge of the hunters and acted as guide for them during the remainder of their stay, and when they were preparing to leave for home, he lingered near to see that one of them did not make a mistake and take the wrong horse as he did on a previous occasion. That these Bullittsvillers had lots of fun there is no doubt, but if you want more particulars in regard thereto you are referred to Col. E. H. Howard and O. W. Gaines, who will, no doubt, tell you that the fog that sometimes envelops the Woolper hills doubly discounts any fog that ever prevailed in London.

The sheriff and his deputy are hustling to have everything ready for Circuit court, next Monday.

Teachers' Association.

The last Teachers' Association for the present year, convened at Walton in the school building, Saturday, December 2d. Supt. Voshell called to order at 11:20, and announced the work of the day.

After prayer, and remarks by the Superintendent, Primary work was discussed by Lillie Rouse, S. H. Myers, Lizzie Kipp and Mrs. Neander Stephens.

An elegantly prepared dinner was then partaken of, after which handled the subject of Written Analysis in Arithmetic.

After song, Mrs. Alice Coffman, followed by others, showed plainly that no teacher with a school of 45 pupils and all grades to teach, could afford to handle any subjects outside of the common school branches.

The subject of Spelling was then introduced, followed by a general discussion.

After song by the pupils, Miss Roberts took up the subject of Grammar and gave an interesting talk on the different divisions of the subject. Discussion of the same by Prof. S. H. Myers and wife. Miss Anna Wolfe introduced School Management.

After taking the vote for the place of holding the next Institue, and when the Superintendent had thanked the teachers for making the Associations of the year more successful than those of former years, "God be with you till we meet again," was joined in by all, and the meeting adjourned sine die.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That our sincere thanks be teudered to the citizens of Walton for the bounteous hospitality exteuded us at this, our last meeting.

That, We heartily approve of the method by which our Superiuteudent has conducted the Associations of the county, and extend him our sincere thanks for his untiring energy in our behalf.

The recitations by Misses Ella Haley and Anna Baker were well received; these with the assistance of other pupils in singing, added much to the enjoyment of all present.

The place for holding next Institute will be announced in a short time.

Several patrons and visitors were present, but there were enough left of the good things to eat for a hundred more.

ACCORDING to the latest report of H Clay Evans, commissioner of pensions, there is now only one survivor of the war of 1812—Hiram Cronk, of northwestern New York. He is 99 years of age.

IT is estimated that the earth receives not more than one thousandmillionth part of the total radiation of the sun's rays. If any considerable portion of this heat was concentrated upon the earth it would not only become uninhabitable but become speedily consumed.

THE biggest egg in the world is for sale in London. It was found buried in sand in Madagascar by natives. This egg, known to naturalists as the Aepyronis Maximus, measures nearly a yard in circumference and over a foot in length. Its cubical capacity is equal to 150 hens' eggs.

SILAS A. HOLCOMB, who has just been elected on the fusion ticket to the Nebraska supreme court, is physically the biggest man who figured in the recent election. With the face of a placid boy, he yet towers head and shoulders above all his colleagues who might walk under his outstretched arm without its brushing their hats.

THERE is at present under construction an electric machine which will be used on the elevated stations for selling tickets. The machine referred to is to be constructed in such a way that when you drop your nickel in the slot you will receive a ticket in exchange. There will be four of these on each of the larger stations. The reason why this system has been adopted by the railroad trustees is to do away with the expense of having an agent on each station.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, has an electric tramway, the power for which is derived from a hydraulic plant operated by two horizontal turbines, directly connected to two three-phase alternators of 300 horse-power each, generating current at 550 volts. This pressure, by means of transformers, is stepped up to 14,000 volts and the current thus transmitted to a substation 21 miles distant. Here it is transformed down to 350 volts and converted into continuous current by two synchronous converters.

GRANITE is not considered to be an insulator, but one of the electrical journals reports that insulators are made as follows: Maine granite is crushed and molded into form and fused at 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit. It resists all but hydrofluoric acid, and does not crush at a lower pressure than 14,500 pounds per square inch and gives a tensile strength of 480 pounds per square inch; 56,000 volts were required to pierce one-quarter of an inch of this material in the shape of cup insulators.

ERNEST BAUER, an extensive poultry raiser of Coffeyville, Kan., having read in an agricultural journal that boracic acid would preserve chicken meat almost indefinitely, assumed that the chemical should be mixed with the feed of the fowls and given to them to eat. He tried the experiment, with the result that 763 of his 800 chickens died within 24 hours. He sued the editor of the paper, but the court held that any man of ordinary intelligence should have known better than to try to preserve the flesh of living fowls by means of chemicals.

JOHN H. PAGE, JR., who was recently commissioned as a second lieutenant in the 3d infantry, is the third of the name to serve in the army of the United States. His father, John H. Page, is colonel of the 3d infantry and served in Cuba during the war, taking part in the fighting about Santiago. He was the last of the regular army colonels to leave Cuba. His grandfather, John H. Page, was killed at the battle of Palo Alto during the Mexican war. For more than 50 years there has always been a John H. Page among the officers of the army.

A CURIOUS accident happened to Queens Wilhelmina and Emma of the Netherlands at Potsdam the other evening. After the musical recital given in their honor at the Neues palais, which finished late, they drove home to the stadtschloss. The coachman lost the way and the carriage got into the marshes and could not move one way or the other, the horses sinking up to the body. Policemen and others hastened to fetch another carriage, and happily a general, also coming from the concert, drove past the spot in a cab, which he of course placed at their majesties' disposal.

INSULAR POLICY.

The Annual Report of Secretary Root Deals With the Question.

High Tribute Paid to the Courage of Our Troops in the Face of Great Hardships—The Situation in Much Improved in Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Dealing as it does with large questions of insular policy; of army re-organization; of the future of Cuba and of the campaign in the Philippines, the first annual report of Secretary Root, just made public, is of exceptional interest. The report begins with the recital of the policy followed in re-organizing the army in accordance with the necessities arising from the discharge of the state volunteers and of the men enlisted for the Spanish-American war and gives statistics of the past and present strength of the organization, covering in that respect matters dealt with in the reports of the major general commanding and of the adjutant general. It is stated that at present all of the new regiments of volunteers are in the Philippines or on their way there.

The operations in those islands are next taken up and the report again points out that the outbreak of last February was provoked by the insurgents themselves and was, from our standpoint, unavoidable. Frequent reference is made to the report of Gen. Otis to show the magnitude of the task set for him with the inadequate forces at his command when the outbreak came, and a high tribute is paid to the courage of the troops, who, in the face of great hardships, voluntarily consented to forego an immediate return to their homes upon the expiration of their terms of service.

The history of the operations of the past season is recounted and the secretary outlines the plan of the present campaign which began in October. This involved the movement of three separate forces. One was to proceed up the Rio Grande along the northeastern borders of the plains and strike across to the Gulf of Lingayen. Another was to land on the gulf shores by transports and proceed along the coast road to unite with the first force.

A third column was to strike straight along the railroad to Dagupan. The secretary says these movements were executed with energy, rapidity and success, notwithstanding deluges of rain. It is said that wherever the permanent occupation of our troops has extended in the Philippines, civil law has been put in operation, courts have been established and education introduced until at present in Manila there are now better facilities for primary education than ever before.

A chapter tells of what has been done in Cuba by the army during the past year. Order has been maintained, social distress has been alleviated, sanitation has been instituted, and in all respects satisfactory progress has been made, and the part played by our troops now is but the restraining influence of their presence. The revival of industry has been slow, but has also made gratifying progress, and the reconcentrados have returned to the cultivation of their lands, though the complete restoration of the sugar industry has been seriously hampered by the lack of capital. As order has been restored, the force has been reduced and orders have recently been given for the withdrawal of eight companies of infantry and eight troops of cavalry. In Porto Rico the year has been devoted to administering and improving the civil government of the island and instructing the people in the rudiments of self government at every step in conference with the leading citizens. This work has been retarded by the unfortunate industrial conditions, owing to lack of markets for the island products and to the distress caused by the great hurricane. Nevertheless much has been done to correct abuses, the courts have been reorganized, the writ of habeas corpus has been restored and arrangements have been made for taking the census.

Booth Tucker in the South.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 2.—Commander Booth Tucker, of the Salvation army, passed through this city Friday night en route direct to New Orleans. After which he will go to Mobile, Montgomery, Nashville and Atlanta for the purpose of inaugurating his plan of mission work among the southern Negroes.

Murder in a Dormitory.

KANKAKEE, Ill., Dec. 3.—William Wiley, colored, a patient in the Kankakee hospital, was found in bed in the dormitory Friday morning, stabbed to the heart. There was no sign of a struggle. Fifteen other patients sleep in the dormitory. It is believed one of them did the murder.

Another Trust Forming.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 2.—An attempt is being made to consolidate all of the iron and enamelling manufacturing companies of the manufacturing belt known as the middle west, which reached from the Allegheny mountains to the Mississippi river. It is proposed to effect a consolidation of the leading companies that make enamelled ware, such as bath tubs, wash stands, and general laundry and bath room equipments, and then buy out the smaller concerns. The capital stock will be about $10,000,000.

MARITIME CANAL.

Secretary Hitchcock Makes Public an Advanced Report of the Nicaragua Company—Stock Being Subscribed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock, in his annual report, makes public an advance report of the Maritime Canal Co., of Nicaragua, dated December 4 next, setting forth that since the organization of the company 10,145 shares of the capital stock have been subscribed for at par, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $1,014,500, of which amount $1,008,850 has been paid into the treasury in cash; that there has been paid into the treasury from other sources $135,776.51, making the total amount of cash received $1,164,606.51. The company has paid for property, work and labor done, and materials furnished in the execution of work of construction of the canal, and in administration expenses the sum of $1,161,771.70 in cash, 31,990 shares of the full paid capital of the company of the par value of $3,199,000; $150,000 of its first mortgage bonds and its obligations for $6,705,000 of the said first mortgage bonds. It has also issued 180,000 shares of its capital stock of the par value of $18,000,000 in payment for concessionary rights, privileges, franchises, etc.

The liabilities of the company consist of amounts still due under the concessions granted to the company, of the $6,705,000 of bonds before mentioned, the said bonds being due to the assignees of the Nicaragua Canal Construction Co. for work and labor done and materials furnished in the execution of the work of constructing the inter-oceanic canal, and of cash liabilities outstanding unpaid to an amount not exceeding $200,000.

The assets of the company consist of its unused capital stock, of the $518,500 first mortgage bonds and the 2,420 shares of capital stock received in liquidation as aforesaid, the concessions, right, privileges and franchises which it now owns, and of the plant, equipments and other property in Central America.

The congressional assertion of its right to determine the line of canal through Nicaragua and Costa Rica under the concession of the company, according to the company, caused uncertainty as to final location of the route and with other causes, has made the resumption of the work of construction impossible. The company incloses two formal protests, one dated December 2, 1898, and the other September 8, 1899, to Secretary Hay against the agreement by the Nicaraguan government for another canal concession in violation of the rights not only of the company, but of the United States and Costa Rica.

The report estimates the irrigable area of the arid region of the United States at 74,000,000 acres, capable of comfortably supporting, under a proper irrigation system, 50,000,000 people.

Reasonable expenditures both by the federal and state governments looking to a well defined irrigation system, are urged.

Nearly 50 proposed new forest reserves or additions to those already established are under consideration. The Dawes commission reports the time has not yet arrived for the installation of a territorial or state government in Indian territory, owing mainly to lack of uniform land tenures.

Attention is called to the phenomenal increase in railway traffic in the last two years, amounting approximately in increased earnings in 1899 over 1898 to $9,000,000, and the previous year to $23,000,000, the increase being only limited by the lack of cars to carry products.

CANCELLATION OF STAMPS.

In Addition to Writing Initials, Stamps Should Be Mutilated By Cutting Three Parallel Incisions.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The commissioner of internal revenue Friday issued a circular amending regulations as to cancellation of documentary and proprietary stamps, providing that:

"In all cases where a documentary stamp of the denomination of ten cents or any larger denomination shall be used for any tax imposed by the act of June 13, 1898, the person using or affixing the same shall, in addition to writing or stamping thereon with ink, the initials of his name and the date when affixed, mutilate said stamp by cutting three parallel incisions lengthwise through the stamp, beginning not more than one-fourth of an inch from one end thereof and extending to within one-fourth of an inch of the other end.

"Where such stamp is cancelled by cutting or perforating in any manner authorized by existing regulations, as aforesaid, the mutilation herein provided will not be required."

This provision shall take effect and be in force on and after December 15.

Cripple Creek Gold Report For November.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Col., Dec. 2.—The total gold production of the Cripple Creek district in November was $2,515,500, an increase of more than 25 per cent over the largest previous monthly record.

Business Portion of Town Destroyed.

CAPE CHARLES, Va., Dec. 2.—The entire business portion of Onancocoke, Accomac county, Va., was destroyed by fire at an early hour Friday morning. The loss is estimated at $100,000, with $25,000 insurance.

AMERICAN NAVY

Annual Report of Secretary Long a Document of Unusual Interest.

He Recommends Three Armored Cruisers of 13,000 Tons; Twelve Gunboats of 900 Tons, and Three Protected Cruisers of 8,000 Tons.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The annual report of the secretary of the navy just made public is a document of unusual interest, dealing not only with the work of the navy during the past year, and important recommendations for future, but also discussing important questions relating to the navy, including the authorization of 18 new war ships, the imperative need of special legislation in the early days of congress for armor of the best quality that can be obtained, and the proposition that the thanks of congress be given to the commander-in-chief of the North Atlantic squadron and to the officers and men under his command for the part they took in the naval operations at Santiago.

These larger items of the report receive extended attention at the hands of Secretary Long. As to the increase of the navy he says:

"The number of large, swift and powerful armored cruisers of great coal endurance in our navy is largely disproportionate to the rest of the naval establishment. The experience of the last year has also shown the need of several smaller vessels, usually classed as gunboats. It is therefore recommended that congress be required to authorize the construction of the following vessels:

"First—Three armored cruisers of about 13,000 tons trial displacement, of a maximum draft at deep load not to exceed 26 feet, carrying the heaviest armor and most powerful ordnance for vessels of their class, to be so sheathed and to have the highest practicable speed and great radius of action.

"Second—Twelve gunboats of about 900 tons trial displacement, to be sheathed and coppered.

"And third, as recommended a year ago, three protected cruisers of about 8,000 tons trial displacement, carrying the most powerful ordnance for vessels of this class, to be sheathed and coppered and to have the highest practical speed and great radius of action."

The secretary adds in this communication that the 8,000 ton protected cruisers are considered better adapted to the present needs of the navy than the 16,000 ton ships required last year. He also asks that if satisfactory bids can not be obtained for the new ships authority be given to build them at the United States navy yards.

Concerning more war ships, the secretary says:

"The most important question pertaining to naval construction at the present time, and one that demands prompt attention, is that of the armor for vessels now building and for others authorized but not yet contracted for, on account of the provision in the act of March 3, 1899, prohibiting the department from contracting for the vessels therein authorized until contract has been made for the armor therefore within $300 a ton. The price fixed is one for which even inferior armor can not be obtained and the department therefore has been unable to invite proposals for the three battleships and the three armored cruisers authorized by the act of March 3, 1899.

"It is urgently recommended that in the early days of its next session congress enact such special legislation, by joint resolution or otherwise, as may be necessary to enable the department to make contracts early in the coming year for 7,358 tons of armor of the best quality that can be obtained in this country for the Maine, Ohio and Missouri, and that the provision of the act of March 3, 1899, limiting the price of armor to $300 per ton, and the restriction preventing the armored vessels therein authorized from being contracted for until the armor therefor is contracted for, be removed.

"Whatever may be the future action of congress regarding the establishment of a government armor factory, it can hardly affect the supply of armor for the Maine, Ohio and Missouri, as it will under any circumstances be impracticable to obtain it from such a source in reasonable time to complete the vessels above referred to."

An Orphan Asylum for Cuban Children.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—A movement for the raising of funds for a memorial orphan asylum for Cuban children, which shall bear the name of Mrs. Thurston, the first wife of Senator John M. Thurston, and who died shortly after a visit she made to Cuba, was started Sunday night in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church under the auspices of the Thurston Memorial association.

Mgr. Chappelle in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 4.—Monsignor Chappelle, archbishop of New Orleans and apostolic delegate to Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, arrived here Sunday en route to Manila, where he goes to arrange church affairs to conform with the change of government in the Philippines.

The Samoan Treaty Signed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The treaty for the partition of the Samoan islands was signed at the state department at 3:20 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

MODDER RIVER CASUALTIES.

Details of the Killed and Wounded of Gen. Methuen's Forces are Leaking Out—The Loss Frightful.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The war office has received the following from Gen. Forestier-Walker:

"CAPE TOWN, Friday, Dec. 1.—Gen. Gatacre reports no change in the situation.

"Gen. French has made a reconnoissance from Naauwpoort to Rosmead. The troops returned to-day.

"Gen. Methuen's flesh wound is slight. He is remaining at Modder river for the reconstruction of the bridge. Am reinforcing him with Highlanders and a cavalry corps. Horse artillery, the Canadian regiment, Australian contingents and three battalions of infantry moved up to the De Aar and Belmont line."

As surmised the British dead and wounded at the hard-fought battle of Modder river number hundreds. Up to two o'clock Saturday afternoon only the bare total 488, of which number 75 were killed, had been given out.

The revised list of Modder river casualties, non-commissioned officers and men, is divided as follows: 9th lancers, 1 wounded; engineers, 2 wounded; artillery, 3 killed, 25 wounded; 2d Coldstreams, 10 killed, 56 wounded; 3d grenadiers, 9 killed, 38 wounded, 4 missing; Scots guards, 10 killed, 37 wounded, 1 missing; Northumberland fusiliers, 11 killed, 31 wounded; 1st Northumberlands, 3 wounded; 2d Yorkshire, 9 killed, 44 wounded; 1st North Lancashire, 3 killed, 14 wounded; Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, 15 killed, 95 wounded, 2 missing; 1st Coldstreams, 20 wounded; South African Reserve, 1 wounded; medical corps, 1 wounded.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The president has designated Adelbert F. Hay to proceed at once to South Africa as the representative of the state department, and take the place of Mr. Macrum, the present United States consul at Pretoria. The state department has yielded to Mr. Macrum's repeated appeals to be relieved and he will not await the arrival of Mr. Hay before quitting his post. Mr. Hay is the son of the secretary of state.

THE BAYOMBONG CAPTURE.

Gen. Conon Surrendered 350 Officers and Men With Rifles and Several American and Spanish Prisoners.

MANILA, Dec. 3.—Gen. Conon surrendered 800 officers and men with rifles, several American and 70 Spanish prisoners and the garrison at Bayombong, province of Nueva Vizcaya, to Lieut. Monroe, with 50 men of the 4th cavalry.

The capture of Bayambong was a successful bluff. Lieut. Monroe tapped the rebel wire, telegraphed to Conon that he was advancing with a large force, and demanded his surrender. After negotiations, Conon consented to capitulate to a "superior force," whereupon Lieut. Monroe telegraphed that he would enter the town with a small guard and receive the garrison's surrender. He captured the whole Filipino force and secured their arms, the rebels supposing that Monroe had an army behind him.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Considerable interest is felt here in the news that the insurgents at Bayombong have surrendered, particularly as the number is said to exceed that captured by the United States troops at any one time. Bayombong is the city to which Aguinaldo at one time contemplated retreating for the purpose of locating the rebel capital, after he was forced to flee from Tarlac, but the American troops pressed him so hard that he was unable to carry out his intention.

HOBART'S WILL.

The Bulk of His Estate is Left to His Widow and Son—Charitable Institutions and Friends Remembered.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 1.—The will of the late Vice President Garret A. Hobart was filed in the Passaic county surrogate's office Friday. The value of the estate is not given, but it is understood to be about $2,500,000. Of the estate Mrs. Jennie Hobart, the widow, receives $1,000,000 and one-half of the remainder after a number of bequests are made, and the son, Garret X. Hobart, jr., inheriting the other half when he attains his majority.

St. Joseph's hospital, the general hospital, the Children's day nursery, St. Joseph's orphan asylum and Paterson orphan asylum, all of Paterson, receive $5,000 each.

Hobart Tuttle, private secretary to Gov. Voorhees and a brother-in-law of the vice president, receives $20,000. A. A. Wilcox, a close friend of Mr. Hobart, receives $10,000.

David Hobart, a brother of the late vice president, receives $20,000 and to each of his children is bequeathed $10,000.

Their Demands Refused.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—About 800 union upholstery weavers went on strike Friday, closing 26 mills and throwing out of employment nearly 3,000 hands engaged in various departments of the factories. The strikers demanded a working week of 55 hours and ten cents an hour for overtime and an increased wage scale. The advance asked is a general increase of about 25 per cent. Many of the manufacturers had made an advance of 15 per cent. and when the new demand was made they refused to consider it.

THE CONGRESS.

Contest Over the Admission of Representative-Elect Roberts.

A Protracted Debate On the Financial Bill Prepared by the Republicans—The Election of a Speaker in the House—Seat-Drawing.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The opening week of the session in the house promises to be crowded with stirring events. There is always a great deal of glamour on account of the new congress which is a social as well as a political event. The galleries are always crowded and there is intense interest in the election of the speaker, the swearing in of members at the bar of the house, the reading of the president's message, the biennial seat-drawing, the introducing of bills and resolutions into the legislative hopper and the general clearing of desks for action later on.

But, as the committees are not appointed until just before the holiday recess, no actual business is transacted usually until after the recess. This year it will be different. At the very threshold of the session will come the contest over the admission of Representative-elect Roberts, of Utah, and later in the week the house will plunge into an important and possibly a protracted debate upon the financial bill, which was prepared by the republican leaders last spring at Atlantic City.

The Roberts case has attracted the attention of the whole country.

The republican leaders have adopted a plan of proceedure which is designed to prevent Mr. Roberts from taking the oath of office until after the charges in connection with his alleged polygamous practices have been investigated by a special committee. Mr. Taylor, of Ohio, will make the objection to the administration of the oath to Mr. Roberts and will offer a resolution of his case to a special committee.

The announcement of Vice President Hobart's death will be made probably immediately after the Roberts case is disposed of, and the house will adjourn out of respect to his memory.

The drawing of seats and the reading of the president's message will occupy Tuesday. Tuesday night the republicans will caucus on the financial bill. It is the intention of the republican leaders to make this a caucus measure and proceed to pass it before the holiday recess. The caucus will decide, if the present intention is followed, not to wait for the appointment of the committees on banking and currency, but to bring the bill into the house forthwith, probably under a special order from the committee on rules. The debate may begin on Wednesday.

While the session promises to be upon the whole a busy one in the senate, the first week will be marked by considerable lethargy. Indeed, it would be exceptional if any actual work would be done. On Monday the new senators will be sworn in, but beyond this nothing will be done. Ordinarily the president's message is received on the first day of the session, but its receipt will be postponed for a day this session out of respect to the memory of the late Vice President Hobart, whose death Senator Sewall will announce.

Tuesday little will be done beyond the receipts of the annual message, the present purpose being to adjourn immediately after the reading of the message to give the republican senators an opportunity to hold a caucus over the reorganization of the committees. Wednesday and Thursday will be devoted largely to the introduction of bills. There probably will be no session either Friday or Saturday.

Among the first bills to be introduced will be the financial measure proposed by the republican members of the finance committee. It will be offered by Senator Aldrich, and will be referred to the whole finance committee, including the democratic members.

A NOVEL BOYCOTT.

An Effort Will Be Made to Induce Renters of Pianos to Shun Products of Factories Involved in Labor Trouble.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—A novel boycott of the wares of the piano manufacturers who have locked out their employes was decided upon by the Chicago Federation of Labor Sunday. The plan is to induce the renters of pianos to shun the product of the factories involved in the labor trouble.

Wherever the tabooed instruments are found on rent, the users are to be asked by a committee of the federation to return them to the warerooms where they were obtained and to replace them at once with instruments made in factories that have refused to join the lockout.

Prominent Inventor Dead.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Charles Potter, jr., the printing press inventor, died at his home in Plainfield, N. J., Saturday. He had been sick for some time with a complication of diseases. Mr. Potter was born in Madison county, N. Y., in 1824. Early in life he went to Westerly, R. I., and engaged in the printing press business. Later he became associated with several printing press companies. While in their employ Mr. Potter made several improvements on printing presses, then entered the business for himself.

LIEUT. GILLMORE.

An Escaped Prisoner Tells of the Imprisonment of Him and His Men.

Gen. Luna Sentenced Them to Be Shot, But Gen. Aguinaldo Interfered and Prevented the Execution—They Were Removed to Alba.

MANILA, Dec. 1.—Gen. Lawton is at Bambong, 20 miles south of Bayombong, in the Cagayan valley. He is in telegraphic communication with the insurgents over the wire in their possession, and the commanders of the opposing forces are considering propositions made by telegraph looking to the surrender of the rebels to the Americans.

MANILA, Dec. 1.—When the landing party from the United States battle ship Oregon, under Lieut. Commander McCrackin, took the town of Vigan, province of South Ilocos last Sunday they found an escaped prisoner, A. L. Sonnenshein, who furnished the first authentic account of the experience of Lieut. James C. Gillmore, of the United States gunboat Yorktown, who with a party of the Yorktown, was captured by the insurgents near Baler, on the east coast of Luzon last April, while making an examination of the mouth of the river in an armored boat.

Mr. Sonnenshein was imprisoned at Abra for a long time with Lieut. Gillmore and seven sailors, but contrived to escape, carrying a concealed note written in naval cipher, dated Abra, November 19, addressed to "Any Naval Officer," and saying: "You may have perfect confidence in anything the bearer says." The note was signed "Gillmore."

According to Mr. Sonnenshein, when Lieut Gillmore's launch entered the river from Baler harbor under cover of Ensign W. H. Standley's gun, the landing was received with three volleys. Two of the Americans were killed and two mortally wounded. Every man was hit, Lieut. Gillmore receiving a flesh wound in the leg and his foot stuck fast in the mud. It was a choice between surrender and being slaughtered.

Lieut. Gillmore asked the terms of release. The insurgents proposed that he should procure the delivery to them of the arms and munitions of the Spanish garrison—undertaking, if this were accomplished, to send the Spaniards and Americans to the Yorktown.

A sailor of Lieut. Gillmore's party carried this proposition to the garrison. The Spanish commandant replied that it was an insult to the Spanish arms and expelled the sailor. A Spanish soldier firing upon him as he went. The Americans then were bound hand and foot and taken to San Isidor, when Gen. Luna ordered their execution. They were marched to the plaza, and in the presence of a great crowd, were aligned to be executed.

Lieut. Gillmore said: "As an American officer and gentleman I protest against being shot with my hands tied."

Aguinaldo interferred and prevented the execution. When Gen. Lawton approached San Isidro last June, the Americans were removed to Abra, where they were kept confined in cells for two months.

Subsequently they were allowed greater liberty, but the report that Lieut. Gillmore was given a house and servant is untrue. He had the same quarters as the men, and the Americans were given the same allowance as the Spanish prisoners—five cents a day with which to buy rice and bananas, virtually the only rations.

The cordon from San Fabian to San Isidro covers all the roads and occupies all the towns on the line. The American policy is to prevent any more insurgents escaping to the north and to force them toward the country west of the railroad.

Aguinaldo's Mother in Manila.

MANILA, Dec. 1.—Aguinaldo's mother has arrived here and has been given shelter by Senor Legarde, a prominent Amigo, who was secretary of the treasury before the outbreak and who resigned when it came. It seems that Buencamino's party took refuge in a bandit village which had offered Aguinaldo an asylum, intending to sell him to the Americans. The bandits assassinated half of Buencamino's guard and proposed to keep Aguinaldo's mother for a ransom.

A Fight on the Island of Panay.

MANILA, Dec. 1.—Dispatches just received from Iloilo, Island of Panay, say that at 1 o'clock on the evening of Sunday, November 26, the 18th regiment encountered an entrenched force of the enemy at Pavia, who opened a heavy fire. The leading battalion replied, and after several volleys the 18th flanked the Filipinos, driving them out of their trenches. The enemy retreated to the mountains. At the beginning of the fight one captain and one private of the 18th were killed.

Ballplayers Hurt.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Dec. 1.—Charles Crabtree, of the Waukegan high school, in the game with Kenosha high school, fractured his ankle in two places. Abel, of the Kenosha team, was knocked insensible from injuries to head and stomach.

The Ministry Defeated.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 1.—After an all night session of the legislative assembly of Victoria, the ministry of Sir George Turner was defeated by 11 votes on a resolution of want of confidence.

THE WEATHER BUREAU.

The Work of the Department During the Past Year Outlined in Prof. Willis L. Moore's Annual Report.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The annual report of Prof. Willis L. Moore, chief of the United States weather bureau, deals largely with the work of the bureau announcing the tempestuous weather of the closing months of 1896, and in the exploration of the upper air by means of kites and clouds observations.

No destructive marine storm occurred without the danger warnings of the bureau preceding the storm. Probably the most severe storm within the memory of those living along the Massachusetts coast was on November 26-27, 1898, entailing a loss of at least 200 lives and many vessels. Hundreds of craft sought a safe anchorage on the advices of the weather bureau.

An important change in the forecast work was the extension of the usual time limits of the night forecast from 36 to 48 hours.

The only hurricane in the West Indies during the season of 1899 followed closely the establishment of stations in that region. Hurricane warnings were cabled to weather bureau stations in the lesser Antilles on September 10, in advance of the storm. At Barbadoes 83 persons were killed, 150 injured, and property to the value of $2,500,000 destroyed.

In the West Indies the work of establishing a storm warning service was prosecuted under very great difficulties.

The West Indian service was instrumental in giving advance warnings of a hurrican that struck our South Atlantic coast on October 2. The coming of this storm was successfully announced and sailing vessels valued at $380,000 were held in port until the danger had passed.

Climate and crop services have been established in both Cuba and Porto Rico and the organization is far enough advanced on both islands to issue weekly and monthly bulletins giving the condition of the crops as affected by the weather.

NEGRO WAIFS.

The Dedication of the South Carolina Industrial Home for Negro Boys and Girls Near Columbia.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 1.—A great work for the uplifting of Negro children was inaugurated Thursday when the South Carolina Industrial home, for Negro boys and girls, was dedicated.

This undertaking was started last April by Rev. Richard Carroll, a Negro Baptist preacher, late chaplain of the 10th immunes.

The home is designed to give Negro waifs rudimentary and Christian education; to teach them habits of tidiness in household work and of thrift in iron work or at the lathe or bench. Tuskogee, Booker T. Washington's school, does for the grown Negro what Carroll proposes to do for children.

Carroll last spring received a donation from Judge E. P. Little, of Bloomfield, Pa. With this he bought Carpenter Heights, the former homestead of Judge D. A. Carpenter, near this city. In August, while at Northfield summer school, Carroll received a donation from Mrs. J. Lewis Crozier, of Upland, Pa. With this he bought Albermarle, a tract of 226 acres adjoining Carpenter Heights.

But 25 children can be accommodated now. There will be four teachers, two of these trained nurses, one sustained by the Woman's Baptist Home Mission society of Chicago. Several waifs are maintained by southern friends. The rooms were furnished by white friends, and wagons, horses, etc., have been donated. Mr. Julius H. Walker, vice president of the Central bank of this city, is treasurer. Carroll hopes in the next few months to establish a training school for colored nurses and to build a home for superannuated colored ministers.

Government Exhibit at the Paris Exposition.

Fire at St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 1.—The big wholesale grocery establishment of Griggs, Cooper & Co., on East Third street, in the heart of the wholesale district, took fire Thursday night. The flames were confined to the one building, which covers a half square adjoining the union depot. The damage to building and stock is estimated at $150,000.

Record Price on Range Beef Cattle.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 1.—The record price on range beef cattle for the present year probably and for the past 15 years was made in Denver Thursday, when a bunch of Hereford steers, born and raised in North Park, Col., was sold by Clay, Robinson & Co. to the Colorado Packing Co. for $5.75 per 100 lbs. The steers averaged a weight of 1,552 pounds each and brought the owner: $89.25 each. They were bred from range cows and registered Hereford bulls, and were three and four years old.

A RIGHTEOUS EARTH.

Dr. Talmage Discourses on the World as It Will Be.

Improvement in Human Conditions After It Has Been Revolutionized for Good—Glories of the Coming Century.

By a novel mode Dr. Talmage in this discourse shows how the world will look after it has been revolutionized for good; text, 2 Peter 3:13: "A new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

Down in the struggle to make the world better and happier we sometimes get depressed with the obstacles to be overcome and the work to be accomplished. Will it not be a tonic and an inspiration to look at the world as it will be when it has been brought back to paradisaical condition? So let us for a few moments transport ourselves into the future and put ourselves forward in the centuries and see the world in its rescued and perfected state, as we will see it if in those times we are permitted to revisit this planet, as I am sure we will. We all want to see the world after it has been thoroughly Gospelized and all wrongs have been righted. We will want to come back, and we will come back to look upon the refulgent consummation toward which we have been on larger or smaller scale toiling. Having heard the opening of the orchestra on whose strings some discords traveled, we will want to hear the last triumphant bar of the perfect oratorio. Having seen the picture as the painter drew its first outlines upon canvas, we will want to see it when it is as complete as Reuben's "Descent from the Cross" or Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment." Having seen the world under the gleam of the star of Bethlehem, we will want to see it when, under the full shining of the sun of righteousness, the towers shall strike 12 at noon.

All hted on the redeemed earth, we are first accosted by the spirit of the twenty-first century, who proposes to guide and show us all that we desire to see. Without his guidance we would lose our way, for the world is so much changed from the time when we lived in it. First of all, he points out to us a group of abandoned buildings. We ask this spirit of the twenty-first century: "What are those structures whose walls are falling down and whose gates are rusted on the hinges?" Our escort tells us: "Those were once penitentiaries filled with offenders, but the crime of the world has died out. Theft and arson and fraud and violence have quitted the earth. People have all they want, and why should they appropriate the property of others even if they had the desire? The marauders, the assassins, the buccaneers, the Herods, the Nana Sahibs, the ruffians, the bandits, are dead or, transformed by the power of the Christian religion, are now upright and beneficent and useful.

After passing on amid columns and statues erected in memory of those who have been mighty for goodness in the world's history, the highest and the most exquisitely sculptured those in honor of such as have been most effectual in saving life or improving life rather than those renowned for destroying life, we come upon another group of buildings that must have been transformed from their original shape and adapted to other uses. "What is all this?" we ask our escort. He answers: "Those were almshouses and hospitals, but accuracy in making and prudence in running machinery of all sorts have almost abolished the list of casualties, and sobriety and industry have nearly abolished pauperism, so that those buildings which once were hospitals and almshouses have been turned into beautiful homes for the less prospered, and if you will look in you will see the poorest table has abundance, and the smallest wardrobe luxury, and the harp, waiting to have its strings thrummed leaning against the piano, waiting for its keys to be fingered.

"Hospitals and almshouses must have been a necessity once, but they would be useless now. And you see all the swamps have been drained, the sewerage of the great towns has been perfected, and the world's climate is so improved that there are no pneumonias to come out of the cold, or rheumatisms out of the dampness, or fevers out of the heat. Consumptions banished, pneumonias banished, diphtheria banished, ophthalmia banished, neuralgia banished. As near as I can tell from what I have read, our atmosphere of this century is a mingling of the two months of May and October of the nineteenth century."

And we believe what our escort says, for as we pass on we find health glowing in every cheek and beaming in every eye and springing in every step and articulating in every utterance, and you and I whisper to each other as our escort has his attention drawn to some new sunrise upon the morning sky, and we say, each to the other: "Who would believe that this is the world we lived in over 100 years ago? Look at those men and women we pass on the road! How improved the human race! Such beauty, such strength, such gracefulness, such geniality! Faces without the mark of one sorrow! Cheeks that seem never to have been wet by one tear! A race sublimated! A new world born!"

But I say to our escort: "Did all this merely happen so? Are all the good here spontaneously good? How did you get the old shipwrecked world afloat again, out of the breakers into the smooth seas?" "No, no!" responds our twenty-first century escort. "Do you see those towers? Those are the towers of churches, towers of reformatory institutions, towers of Christian schools. Walk with me, and let us enter some of these temples." We enter, and I find that the music is in the major key and none of it in the minor. "Gloria In Excelsis" rising above "Gloria In Excelsis." Tremolo stop in the organ not so much used as the trumpet stop. More of Ariel than of Naomi. More chants than dirges. Not a thin song, the words of which no one understands on the lip of a soloist, but mighty harmonies that roll from ontside door to chancel and from floor to grained rafter as though Handel had come out of the eighteenth century into the twenty-first and had his foot on the organ pedal, and Thomas Hastings had come out of the early part of the nineteenth century into the twenty-first and were leading the voices. Music that moves the earth and makes Heaven listen.

But I say to our twenty-first century escort: "I cannot understand this. Have these worshipers no sorrows, or have they forgotten their sorrows?" Our escort responds: "Sorrows! Why, they had sorrows more than you could count, but by a divine illumination that the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries never enjoyed they understand the uses of sorrow and are comforted with a supernatural condolence such as previous centuries never experienced."

I ask again of the interpreter: "Has death been banished from the world?" The answer is: "No, but people die now only when the physical machinery is worn out, and they realize it is time to go and that they are certainly and without doubt going into a world where they will be infinitely better off and are to live in a mansion that awaits their immediate occupancy." "But how was all this effected?" I ask our escort. Answer: "By floods of Gospel power. You who lived in the nineteenth century never saw a revival of religion to be compared with what occurred in the latter part of the twentieth and the early part of the twenty-first century. The prophecy has been fulfilled that 'a nation shall be born in a day'—that is, ten or twenty or forty million people converted in 24 hours. In our church history we read of the great awakening of 1857, when 500,000 souls were saved. But that was only a drop of the coming showers that since then took into the kingdom of God everything between the Atlantic and the Pacific, between the Pyrenees and the Himalayas." The evils that good people were in the nineteenth century trying to destroy have been overcome by celestial forces. What human weaponry failed to accomplish has been done by omnipotent thunderbolts.

As you and I see in this terrestrial visitation of the coming centuries that the church has under God accomplished so much, we ask our escort, the spirit of the twenty-first century, to show us the different kinds of churches. So we are taken in and out of the churches of different denominations, and we find that they are just as different in the twenty-first century as they were different in the nineteenth when we worshiped in them. There is unity in them as to the great essentials of salvation. But we enter the Baptist church, and it is baptismal day, and we see the candidates for membership immersed. And we go into a Presbyterian church and see a group of parents around the baptismal font holding up their children for the christening. And we enter the Episcopal church and hear the solemn roll of her liturgies, and her ministers are gowned and surpliced. And we enter the Lutheran church, and we hear in the sermon preached the doctrines of the greatest of German reformers. And we go into the Methodist church just in time to sit down at a love feast and give audible "Amen" when the service stirs us. At least 50 kinds of churches in the twenty-first century, as there were 150 different kinds of churches in the nineteenth century.

"But what is yonder row of buildings, majestic for architecture?" The spirit of the twenty-first century says: "Those are our legislative halls and places of public trust, and if you would like it I will show you the political circles, the modes of preferment, the styles of election, the character of public men in this century." "Thank you," I reply. "I can easily understand how Gospelization would improve individual life and social life and commercial life, but I would like to see what it can do for political life." "Let me tell you," says the spirit of the twenty-first century, "that I have read about political chicanery and corruption of more than 100 years ago—the nineteenth century, in which you lived here—but the low political caucus has gone from the face of the earth, and the stuffed ballot box, and the bribery by money and by promise of office, and the jobs got through legislatures and congresses by lobbyists. We have nothing like a Credit Mobilier scandal, or those harbor and river appropriations, the most of which never improved the harbors or rivers, or speeches to kill time and prevent a vote, or promotion to high place of political accidents, and the only bosses we have now boss because they have more brain and purity than those who are bossed. The money barrel to buy votes and to decide who shall be elected did not roll into this century. All those in high office in township, state and nation are men superior for intelligence and sagacity and moral equipment and fitness for the posts they occupy. All intrigue and Machiavelism and temporization are gone.

"The last corrupt judge of election was buried 50 years ago, the preacher officiating at the obsequies taking for his text Proverbs 10:7: 'The name of the wicked shall rot,' or Jeremiah 19:22: 'He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem.' Our laws are good and well executed. Men do not in our century have to wade chin deep through moral slush in order to gain office. The word 'politics,' which in your century, the nineteenth, often stood for chicanery and falsehood and billingsgate and moral turpitude and filth, now stands for honor and justice and truth and righteousness. Such men as were in your congresses and parliaments and reichstags pointed out as exceptions of statesmanship and patriotism and public spiritedness and eloquence and moral power would not be pointed out now, for all our public men are thus characterized. Politics has been swept, garnished, glorified, ennobled, until nothing more is to be desired. Walk through all aldermanic councils and sheriffalities and gubernatorial rooms and presidential mansions and find the truth of what I, the spirit of the twenty-first century, tell you, who were of the nineteenth century and now come down on terrestrial visitation."

But we cannot stay long here, for it is almost time for us to retrace our way heavenward. This voluntary exile must soon end. And, passing out, we go through a national museum, where we are shown among the curiosities an enfield rifle, a howitzer, a hotchkiss shell, an ambulance—curiosities of that age, but, alas! no curiosity to us of the nineteenth century, for some of our own kindred went down under their stroke or were carried off the field by those wheels.

"But," I say to our escort, the spirit of the twenty-first century, and you and I say to each other, "we must go home now, back again to Heaven. We have staid long enough on this terrestrial visitation to see that all the best things foretold in the Scriptures and which we read during our earthly residence have come to pass, and all the Davidic, Solomonic and Paulinian and Johannean prophecies have been fulfilled, and that the earth, instead of being a ghastly failure, is the mightiest success in the universe. A star redeemed. A planet rescued! A world saved! It started with a garden, and it is going to close with a garden. What a happiness that we could have seen this old world after it was righted and before it burned, for its internal fires have nearly burned out to the crust, according to the geologist, making it easy for the theologian to believe in the conflagration that the Bible predicts. One element taken from the water and that will burn, and another element taken from the air and that will burn, and surrounding planets will watch this old ship of a world on fire and wonder if all its passengers got safely off. Before that planetary catastrophe, hie us back to Heaven. Farewell, spirit of the twenty-first century! Thanks for your guidance! We can stay no longer away from doxologies that never end, in temples never closed, in a day that has no sundown. We must report to the throne this ground the throne the transformations we have seen, the victories of truth on land and sea, the hemispheres irradiated, and Christ on the throne of earth, as He is on the throne of Heaven."

And now you and I have left our escort as we ascend, for the law of gravitation has no power to detain ascending spirits. Up through immensities and by stellar and lunar and solar splendors, which cannot be described by mortal tongue, we rise righer and higher, till we reach the shining gate as it opens for our return, and the questions greet us from all sides: "What is the news? What did you find in that earthly tower? What have you to report in this city of the sun?" Prophetic, apostolic, saintly inquiry. And, standing on the steps of the house of many mansions, we cry aloud the news: "Hear it, all ye glorified Christian workers of all the past centuries! We found your work was successful, whether on earth you toiled with knitting needle, or rung a trowel on a rising wall, or shaote a shoe last, or endowed a university, or swayed a scepter; whether on earth you gave a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple, or at some Pentecost preached 3,000 souls into the kingdom.

"In that world we have just visited the deserts are all abloom, and the wildernesses are bright with fountains. Sin is extirpated. Crime is reformed. Disease is cured. The race is emancipated. 'The earth is full of the knowledge of God, as the waters cover the sea.' The redeemed of the Lord have come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads." "The Lord God Omnipotent reigneth, and the kingdoms of the world have become the kingdoms of our Lord Jesus Christ." Let the harpers of Heaven strike the glad tidings from the strings of their harps, and the trumpeters put them in the mouth of their trumpets, and the orchestra roll them into the grand march of the eternities, and all the cathedral towers of the great capital of the universe chime them all over Heaven."

And now I look up and see the casting down at the bejeweled and radiant crowns at the sacred feet of the enthroned Jesus. Missionary Carey is casting down before those feet the crown of India saved. Missionary Judson is casting down the crown of Burma saved. Missionary Abeel casting down the crown of China saved. David Livingston casting down at those feet the crown of Africa saved. Missionary Brainerd casting down the crown of this country's aborigines saved. Souls that went up from all the denominations in America in holy rivalry, seeking which could soonest cast down the crown of this continent at the Saviour's feet, and America saved.

But often you and I, who were companions in that expedition from Heaven to earth, seated on the green bank of the river that rolls through the paradise of God, will talk over the scenes we witnessed in that parenthesis of heavenly bliss, in that vacation from the skies, in our terrestrial visitation—we who were early residents in the nineteenth century, escorted by the spirit of the twenty-first century, when we saw what my text describes as "a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." "Glory be to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Ghost, as it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be, world without end. Amen."

Fourteen white and 23 colored boys were transferred from the Frankfort Penitentiary to the new House of Reform at Greendale Station last week. They will be put to building roadways and doing farm-work.

Senator Joe Blackburn appeared on Main street, Versailles, the other day, in a very nobby and stylish suit of home-spun gray jeans. "The cloth in this suit," said the Senator, "was spun and woven by hand in the mountains of North Carolina, and was a present to me from Senator Marion Butler, of that State, who had enough of it woven to make each of us a suit. Butler used to say in Washington that the only serviceable clothes were the jeans he wore when a boy, which had plenty of "Spanish needles" and burrs woven in the wool."—Woodford Sun.

A very small incident is sometimes the turning point in a man's career. We have in mind a Hancock county farmer, who was regarded by his neighbors until a few years ago as being indolent and worthless. He made no effort to accumulate. In some way he accidently slipped up on a good yield of wheat, and sold at a good price, getting $600 out of it. This was his turning point. He liked the idea of having some money ahead, and today he is one of the best hustlers in the county, making money out of everything he turns his hands to.—Hawesville Clarion.

Although the week was curtailed by Thanksgiving day making only two sale days, Tuesday and Wednesday, the market made up in price what it lost in time. Certainly the sales were more satisfactory than they have been for quite a while and the improvement in prices was shared principally by that grade of tobacco which needed it the most, namely, the goods selling at 10 cents and above. We think there was an advance of from 1 to 2 cents. The light offerings may have had something to do with it, but it seems that these best grades are always subject to most variations and it almost appears that, whatever may be the case with other kinds, these goods are taken only to supply immediate needs.—Cincinnati Tobacco Journal.

On Thursday afternoon Charles Graham, who lived on Little Kentucky, about two miles from Prestonville, was hauling fence posts, using a team of horses and sled. After unloading on a hillside where he was building fence, he started down hill, standing on the sled. The horses shied and went down a steep place or embankment. This caused Mr. Graham to lose his balance and fall between the horses. One of them, being skittish anyway, began kicking him. One hoof struck his neck and broke it, and after that the sled passed over him Two little children saw the accident, but can hardly tell how it happened. They gave the alarm to Wm. Mulikin and wife, who are relatives, and they were soon by him as was his wife. He was not dead, however, and did not die until after he had been carried into the house.—Carrollton Democrat.

Mr. G A. Craig, who resides in the vicinity of Smith's Grove, and who is now on the Circuit Court jury to-day showed a Journal man a madstone that is known to have been in use for 112 years. This stone was found by Mr. George Forsee, of Owen county, when he was a boy, then residing in Culpepper county, Va. The stone was at once thought to be a madstone, and has been in use for more than a century. More than 500 cases have had this stone applied, and in not one has hydrophobia or death resulted. Mr. Craig, who owns this stone, has been living in this county for about fifteen years, but the stone has been owned by him for twenty or twenty-five years. Since he has owned it he knows of more than one hundred cases of maddog bites that have been treated with it, and it has never yet failed to extract the poison. The madstone very greatly resembles an ordinary negro head and it is hard and flinty.—Bowling Green Journal.

Just Saved His Life.

It was a thrilling escape that Charles Davis, of Bowerstown, Ohio, lately had from a frightful death. For two years a severe lung trouble constantly grew worse until it seemed he must die of consumption. Then he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and late wrote: "It gave instant relief and effected a permanent cure." Such wonderful cures have for 25 years, proven it's power to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, M. J. Crouch's, Union, and J. G. Oelsner's, Florence.

Regular Term Boone County Court December 4th, 1899.

Hon. C. C. Roberts, Judge presiding.

On written application by petition presented to the Judge of the county court of this county on November 6th, 1899, filed and made part of the county court records, which petition was signed by a number of legal voters in the Burlington voting precinct, Boone county, Kentucky, equal to and greater than twenty five per cent. of the votes cast in said precinct at the last preceding general election, which petition asks the County Court to open a poll in said Burlington voting precinct, on Saturday, January 20th, 1900, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in said Burlington voting precinct, upon the proposition as to whether or not the prohibition law now in force in said precinct commonly called and known as the local option law which prohibits the sale, barter or loan of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in said Burlington voting precinct shall become inoperative. The petitioners having deposited with the County Judge money sufficient to pay for printing, etc., as the law requires, and the court being advised, It is therefore ordered by the court that the Sheriff of this county open a poll in the Burlington voting precinct in Boone County, Ky., on Saturday, January 20th, 1900, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in said district upon the proposition as to whether or not the prohibition law now in force in the Burlington voting precinct shall become inoperative.

STATE OF KENTUCKY, } Sct.
County of Boone. }

I, B. W. Adams, Clerk of the County Court, in and for the county aforesaid, do certify that the foregoing one and one-fourth pages is a true copy of the Order for holding an election for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in the Burlington Voting Precinct, as to whether or not the Local Option Law shall remain in force, as appears of record in my office.

Given under my hand, this 6th day of December, 1899.

B. W. Adams, County Clerk.
Elmer Beall, S. B. C.

The State Election Commissioners are canvassing the returns from the State election, and are today, Wednesday, hearing arguments on the challenged returns for several counties. Things are getting pretty warm at Frankfort but cool and wise heads are expected to be able to keep down trouble. The cetificates of election be issued now shortly.

If no trouble comes from the election it will be because of the lack of influence on the part of a few incendiary sheets published in this State.

The election to be held in the Seventh District on the 18th inst. will show to what extent the disaffection was attributable to the Louisville convention.

So far as Kentucky is concerned the suspense since her election has been more trying than that of 1876, when the vote of Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina were involved.

COUNTY COURT,

J. M. Finch was granted a licence to keep hotel in Florence.

The lost will of Sidney Brooks, deceased was admitted to probate. The substance of the missing instrument was proved by F. E. Curley and A. M. Edwards.

S. L. Pope resigned as guardian for Maud L. Rouse and Geo. W. Glore was appointed in his stead

Vote on proposition "as to whether or not the prohibition law now in force in Burlington precinct, commonly called and known as the Local Option Law, which prohibits the sale, barter or loan of spirituous vinous or malt liquors in said Burlington voting precinct, shall become inoperative," was ordered taken on January 20, 1900.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1899. NO. 8

COVINGTON is to have a Mayoralty contest.

YESTERDAY was a very unfavorable day for an inauguration.

THE German-Americans in Illinois are booming Carter Harrison for Governor.

IF you fail to read the inside pages this week, you will miss considerable.

A NATIONAL REPUBLICAN campaign without Hanna directing it would be minus the principal part of the contest.

TARVIN and Bradley have been engaged in a desperate battle with their pens. T. and B. are quite alike in some respects—a doubtful compliment to either.

THE alert Congressman will once more resume his wonted vocation of soliciting seeds for distribution among his thrifty and admiring constituents.

THE Cubans of all classes are very much pleased with the President's message, and a much better feeling towards this country now prevails throughout the island.

INDIANA editors, it seems, are going into winter under discouraging conditions. One of their number is reported to have died of starvation this early in the season.

THE burning of the negro Coleman at Maysville, last week, was horrible, but the crime of which he was guilty, and to which he had confessed, was worse than fiendish.

GOV. JONES, of Arkansas, who is a candidate to succeed Senator Berry has come out in favor of expansion. Heretofore he has been considered an opponent to that policy.

NEW YORK CITY has begun work to secure the National Democratic Convention which meets next year. St. Louis, Chicago and Cincinnati will each try to secure the convention.

TRUSTS will be doomed as soon as Congress will lower the duties on the products that they control. The high tariff has shut out foreign competition, and the wealthy men of the country have been wise enough to take advantage of the opportunities thus afforded, and as a result of their business tact trusts have about secured control of every branch of industry.

THE State Canvassing Board gave the Republican candidates for State offices certificates of election, and Taylor was inaugurated Tuesday, and gattling guns and bayonets were not ordered to the front for purely political purposes by the State's late military Governor. The action of the State Canvassing Board was a surprise to the Republicans, who knew what they would have done had the shoe been on the other foot.

MILTON STEWART, of New Haven, Conn., believes that the Almighty is on the point of wreaking vengeance upon the ungodly of this land. He is building an ark on the top of West rock, a big hill near that city, five miles from water, and he says he is willing to take aboard all who have faith when the Almighty floods the land, which, he predicts, will be in the form of devastation which will visit the United States. He says the waters of the Atlantic Ocean will be let loose upon the land by the powerful hand of the Deity and the earth drowned out as it was in the early ages.

IT has turned out just as the RECORDER predicted last week, viz: That Owens and Breckinridge would not agree under the log cabin, and Col. Breckinridge has already said of Owens in an editorial in the Lexington Herald that his (Owen's) nomination for Congress on an anti-Goebel platform isfarcical, "his only success in politics has been through fraud and theft." Why, Colonel, Owens was one of the several who but recently made a tour of the State inveighing against corruption in politics, and people who did not know him thought his political career pure and spotless, and now here you come saying he is guilty of dirty politics.

Editorial Paragraphs.

It is said that the President's message contained 30,000 words. We will believe the statement, as it is too much trouble to count them. But if there is anything in which McKinley excels it is in words. He has what a bright editorial writer once described as a fluency of words and a paucity of ideas.

The South and the West are all right on the question of expansion, but they do not like McKinley's blundering conduct of the war, and the voters of these two sections may be depended upon to express their dissatisfaction in the most practical manner next year.

Secretary Hay's son goes to Pretoria as Consul, at one of the most critical periods in the relations between this country and the South African Dutch Republic. Inasmuch as the young man is twenty-four years of age, he may have been expected to have acquired a large amount of diplomatic experience which will stand him well in hand in his new job. Being a son of his father, however, he may be expected to dodge all the rough places and hang on the soft snaps.

Chauncey M. Depew consumed a half-page of double column leaded matter in the New York World to let the public know his fellings upon being sworn in as a member of the Senate. Chauncey should restrain his feelings; they may overcome him in time, and then, too, there are many deserving young men in Washington, who, can do it just as well as Depew and they need the compensating collateral.

General Clarkson, of Iowa and New York, seems to be too heavy a load for Tommy Platt. New England's Senators are protesting against Clarkson as a candidate for Secretary of the Senate. Evidently the genial general has made some powerful enemies, who are accepting this chance to get even.

Admiral Dewey has a seat in an Episcopal Church and Mrs. Dewey has one in a Roman Catholic Church. There will be fun in that famous house about churchtime some Sunday morning when the question of which edifice shall be honored comes up. We see the Admiral's finish already.

Senator Mason has introduced a resolution providing for the expression of the Senate's sympathy with the Boers. Evidently the Hon. Billy has turned from blushing for his own country to blushing for Great Britian.

If Mr. Bryan should accept the appointment as Senator to succeed Senator Hayward, his many friends would be heartily glad. There is need for Mr. Bryan's sturdy patriotism in the Senate just at this time.

Teddy Roosevelt is about to tackle the trusts. He should hurl one of the copies of his narrative of "How I Captured Cuba by the Way of San Juan" at the Octopus. Surrender would surely follow.

Someone ought to forward to Joe Chamberlain a marked copy of Secretary Hay's letter to the Hon. Chas. F. Dick, prepared before the Ohio election.

The immaculate indignation of some of the Republicans of the House over the Roberts case, has the appearance of the pot calling the kettle black.

Notwithstanding that the official oath was not administered to Roberts, it will not prevent him from uttering a few private objurgations.

Cecil Rhodes, who is cooped up in Kimberly, is depending on an old fashioned balloon to make his escape in case the siege is successful.

Apparently a great many Representatives are conniving to get back into the House on their record in keeping Roberts out.

Roberts having faced three mothers-in-law, the ordeal in Washington was nothing to his past experience.

The Message.

It is a good common-sense message.—Nashville American.

It is a characteristic McKinley document.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It is well expressed, clear and admirable in tone.—Baltimore American, Rep.

In two words, the President's programme is extravagance and empire.—New York Post, Ind.

It is weak in construction, illogical in argument and deceitful in its purpose.—Kansas City Times.

It is entirely worthy of a place among the best State papers that have come from our Presidents.—Pittsburg Dispatch, Rep.

More like a Republican campaign document than the message of a statesman to the highest legislative body of a great nation.—Atlanta Journal.

Taken as a whole, the message is as dry as it is long. It contains much that is good, and not a little that we can not approve.—Chattanooga Times.

The message is American through and through, and it will have the hearty indorsement of the great majority of the people.—Iowa State Register, Rep.

It is astonishing that a man who had so little to say that was new, could not have said what he had to say in less than 25,000 words.—Chicago Journal, Rep.

It is full of courage, and will rank with the great papers that have gone before it. It leaves nothing for Congress to conjecture, and the affairs of the nation are up to that body plainly and unmistakably.—Evansville Journal, Rep.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The offerings this week were larger and the bidding more animated. There was some vacillation in the market, which is shown by the fact that while some of the shippers were exceedingly well pleased with their sales others thought the market not quite so strong. This applies to old stock as well as to new. The latter sold up to 15 cents at the Morris Warehouse. Quite a number of hogsheads sold at from 10 to 14 cents, and in several cases the marks of the owners were overreached. The low grades in these goods are selling for much more money than the same grades did in the crop of 1898 at this time of the year, but the fine tobacco is not selling as high. It is true, however, that so far nothing in the new crop has been offered that would in quality reach the fine tobacco of the previous crop. The average is considerably higher than last December. There was a fair bidding on old stock, though the market was not always as strong as last week.

Receipts during the last two or three weeks just about equaled the sales, and there is hardly any difference in the stocks in market, which are comparatively light. The new crop will find but little old stock in competition.

IN the count made by the State Board of Commissioners at Frankfort, last week, Goebel was credited with 191,331; Brown, 14,050; Taylor 193,714. Taylor's plurality, 2,383. Goebel received 28,807 more votes than Hardin got in 1895, and Taylor, 21,278 more votes than Bradley.

THE State Board of Election Commissioners decided, with one member, Points, dissenting, that as a canvassing Board they had no right to go behind the returns of the vote of the last election as certified to them, which is, no doubt, a proper construction of the law under which they acted; but, according to their version of the law when they are acting as a Board hearing contests, something may yet drop with a dull thud if the Democratic candidates below Lieutenant-Governor see proper to contest the election of their opponents. Governor and Lieutenant-Governor contest before the Legislature.

THE Democratic candidates for State offices below that of Lieutenant Governor, have notified their Republican opponents that they will contest their election.

Education.

The public schools throughout the country are nearing a close, some having already closed. The teachers, whether male or female, have been the subject of more or less favorable or unfavorable comment among the patrons of the various schools. The teacher, as a rule, is the most unjustly criticised person in the country, for if he try ever so hard to please each patron of his or her school, he will find the chronic kicker in every community ready to censure him for this or that act done in the school room, which, nine times in ten, is a case of duty performed.

The education of our youth is the only hope for an enlightened future, and, if the premeditated efforts of parents and teachers were universally indulged, who would undertake to define the realms of learning to which we might soar?

I do not doubt for a moment, that every teacher who has had the care over a school where immature minds have looked to him or her for guidance has faithfully tried to do his or her duty toward imparting knowledge to the young idea. The chronic kickers in a school community, are generally those who have failed to get "my teacher" for this term, and who impute dishonest or selfish motives to those who are satisfied with the trustees' selection.

Teaching is a noble profession, and it is not right that the chronic kicker should hamper the efforts of the teacher, by saying that he or she is drawing a salary for doing nothing, and the teacher need not feel astonished nor indignant when people say you are teaching school for what there is in it. Each school selected its trustees, they in turn selected a teacher, and if the trustees failed to select a teacher of your choice, remember they were selecting a teacher for the people, collectively, of the district, and every patron of the school ought to have encouraged him or her who had charge of the public school.

If your child has not learned as readily as some other child, do not blame the teacher, it probably is not the teacher's fault, for, different children are differently constituted and can not grasp or retain instruction alike.

Many a builder is blamed for an unsightly structure when the fault lies in the building material. In conclusion I will say, parents see that your children do not lay aside their books when the school term is over. Be on your guard, the environments of the quarry, that produces the material of which the formative mind is required to build is generally hindred by the neglect of parents during vacation, and the poorly paid teachers bear the blame. Look well to the foundation of your child's education, build it solid, and remember that while others may help to hinder you, with them, or in spite of them, you can build a foundation on which the teacher can rear a structure.—Knowledge.—Valley View Argent.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Some men have been lost in the unenviable forests of public disfavor while following Adonis like, the bewitching smiles of some fair Venus; others for many causes have been lost in the jungles of obscurity, but we w re lost in the political fog that darkens the once fair name of Kentucky. We were indeed searching for that which was lost; we were searching for the manhood that existed in our State during the days of our fathers, when Kentucky boasted of her Ben Hardin, her Breckinridge and her Clay, when the name Kentuckian was a synonym of honesty and fair dealing; when right doing was not at a discount and we had not been cursed by the modern practical politician. We were indeed searching for that ignus fat-u-us, that optical illusion, that "maid of the mist," that honest-non-disfranchising election law, which we have heard so much about recently; we were making a strict and diligent search for an original Goebel man who did not want Goebel to get the Governorship "in any way" he could get it; we were searching for that grand old party which proclaimed in and out of season that it was not one of the red-hot-stove variety; we were in search of the partisan, who declared before the election that Bradley's troops were tin soldiers and harmless, and would be taken care of by the police of Covington and Louisville, and who has not since the election, changed his views and proclaims to the public that they were men of the strength of Sampson, as bloodthirsty as the wild Turk, and as daring and intrepid as a Comanche Indian. We were also searching for the man who will not say, If I bolt, 'tis right, no wrong can mortal tell, if you bolt, there's a demon loose whose proper place is h–ll; go forth my braves, bring on the sword, also bring gun and rope, and with patriotic hands, we'll start that demon down the slope.

BURNED AT THE STAKE

Dick Coleman, the Murderer of Mrs. Lashbrook, Meets a Horrible Death.

He is Taken From the Custody of the Sheriff and His Deputies by an Infuriated Mob.

A Rope is Thrown Over His Head and While Pleading for Mercy Brushwood and Timber is Piled About Him and Lighted by Many Willing Hands.

Maysville, Ky., Dec. 7.—Negro murderer Dick Coleman arrived at 10:30 Wednesday morning under a special guard of deputies sworn in by the sheriff, including Detective Fitzgerald. Constable Dawson, Chief of Police Donovan, all of the police force and two deputy sheriffs. When they arrived at the court house they were met by a mob of fully 1,000 people, headed by James Lashbrook, the husband of the murdered woman, and went immediately up Second street through the central portion of the city to the hill, followed by fully five thousand of the citizens of this city and county. This is the first time anything of this kind ever happened in this city, and the excitement is intense. All was done that was possible by the sheriff and his guard to prevent a lynching, but in the face of such a mob of people, irrespective of color, it was useless to attempt to do anything save deliver him up, which was done. They grabbed him and threw a rope over his head, and took him up above the city and strung him up. The poor wretch could be heard above the cries of the mob, pleading for his life, but the mob only heard the cries of Mr. Lashbrook, and the vengeance they meted out to him was just the thing.

About 250 were at the C. & O. train Tuesday night expecting him, but as he failed to come they waited for him Wednesday morning. There is no telling what would have been done had they succeeded in getting him in jail, as there would have undoubtedly been several killed in the attempt to storm the jail doors.

The mob carried Coleman to a small hollow near the railroad tracks, where they bound him tightly to a young sapling. Then they heaped a huge pile of brush wood and timber around him and fired the stack, while his eyes rolled horribly. Some one cut out his eyes, and in a moment his head rolled around and he was believed to be dead.

Colemnn said 15 minutes before he was set afire that he had nothing to say. His death was slow, and, writhing in terrible agony, he was hooted and glared at by the people standing on the edge of the pit. Many women were present. He died at 10:50 a. m.

The scene was an awful one, and around the funeral pyre were 10,000 maddened people, headed by the husband of the dead woman. A dozen torches were applied simultaneously, and huge tongues of fire swept up and around the agonized wretch.

Coleman's Crime.

Coleman's crime was a most revolting one. He enticed Mrs. Mary Lashbrook into a shed on the pretense of looking at some work, and knocked her senseless with a club. He then assulted her. She showed signs of returning consciousness, and he ran to his room, got a razor and cut her throat. Again she revived, and he ended her misery with a blow from an ax. He jumped on a horse, and rioing to a field calmly told his victim's husband that some one had killed her.

He was arrested later, and before Lashbrook suspected that he was the murderer, he was put on a train and taken to the Covington jail. He made a complete confession of the fiendish crime to a Post reporter on his arrival. He is only 20 years old, and has a pleasant face. Mrs. Lashbrook was beautiful, and a society favorite in Maysville.

DEATH OF SENATOR HAYWARD

He Was Elected to the Senate After a Bitter Contest, but Passed Away Before Taking His Seat.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Dec. 8.—United States Senator Hayward died at 6:20 Tuesday morning.

He was 59 years old and lived in Nebraska City for 33 years. Although a lawyer by profession, he made his wealth largely through investments in lands in Nebraska and Kansas. His election to the United States senate was his first appearance in national politics. He was defeated for governor by Poynter two years ago, reducing the fusion majority from 18,000 to 3,000. When the last legislature was found to be republican, Mr. Hayward announced his candidacy for the United States senate, and the fight which followed was one of the bitterest in the history of the state. The long drawn out caucus dead lock finally resulted in his election.

PITTSBURG'S BASEBALL DEAL.

Louisville Reported to Have Sold the Pick of Their Best Players for Next Season.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 9.—The Pittsburg baseball club bought the pick of the Louisville team Friday for a sum said to be $25,000 cash. After the Pittsburg club is satisfied, the players remaining will go to Louisville. It is understood that Dreyfuss will have an interest in the Pittsburg club. Fred Clarke, of Louisville, will manage the Pittsburg team.

Under the terms Mr. Dreyfus gives up all connection with the Louisville club and becomes president of the Pittsburg club. Mr. Pulliam will remain with the Louisville club, and has been awarded the following players: Gould, Dowling, Wilhelm, Chesebro, Magee, Fox, Deal, Wills, O'Brien, Madison, Clingmnn, Ketcham, Hoy and Dexter. Pullinm will go to the league meeting with this team. If there is a reduction in the circuit decided on then he will sell the players to the highest bidder. If the 12-club league remains intact then the Louisville club will continue as a member with Pulliam as president and possibly manager.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 9.—The announcement that President Dreyfuss and made some sort of a deal with the Pittsburg manngement caused no surprise in local baseball circles. It is not believed here, however, that he has sold the best players of the team for $25,000, or any other sum.

THE APPROPRIATIONS.

Total Estimates for the Year Was $738,855,248, Against $694,006,489 the Preceding Year.

Washington, Dec. 9.—An analytical comparison of the estimates for this year, the appropriations of last year and the various increases was issued Friday by Messrs. Cleaves and Courts, the clerks of the senate and house appropriation committees, respectively. It shows total estimates this year, $738,855,248, against $694,006,489 last year. The estimates this year are $114,298,578 more than the amount actually appropriated last year. The chief increases are, army $47,281,929; fortifications $6,819,036; navy $26,145,539; post office $5,143,661; sundry civil $21,686,777. The total estimates for this year exceed the total estimated revenue for 1901 by $71,081,994, but counting the sinking fund this excess is reduced to $18,081,994.

PRODUCTION OF SUGAR.

The Entire Crop of Sugar Cane and Beets This Season Amounts to About 8,000,000 Tons.

Washington, Dec. 9.—The entire crop of sugar cane and beats for 1899-1900 will amount to about 8,000,000 tons, about the same amount as last year, according to carefully prepared statistics submitted to the state department by United States Consul Diedrich, of Madgeburg, Germany. Of this amount the United States uses about one-fourth. The consuls figures show that so far as beet sugar is concerned, while the best product in Europe this year is larger than last, perhaps by 250,000 tons, the sugar extracted amounts to about the same, owing to defective sweetness. The total product of beet sugar is placed at 5,300,000 tons against 4,947,080 for last year.

THE PLAGUE SHIP.

A barge load of coal is alongside, and will be stowed in her bunkers as soon as the gear is ready. The Lassel is in very bad shape. Several ribs are cracked, and the sides of the ship are bulging. The discharge of the cargo continues, and the wrecking boats are pumping out the water. ner stern stands well out of water, and the vessel is in danger of breaking in two amidships. The plague patients are doing well, and there are no new cases.

BRITISH DEFEAT.

They Found the Boers' Position Near Stormberg Impregnable.

In the Battle a Sharp Artillery Duel Took Place—It Was Impossible for the British Infantry to Get At the Boers.

Molteno, Cape Colony, Dec. 11.—Gen. Gatacre left Putter Kraal by train for Molteno, and then proceeded by forced march 12 miles toward Stormberg. He had 2,000 men, including the Northumberland Fusileers, the Royal Irish Rifles and two batteries of field artillery.

The British were unmolested by the Boers until the Boer position was reached, when a hot fire was unexpectedly opened upon the advancing column.

The engagement began at 4:15 a. m. At 7 a. m., after a sharp artillery duel, the British retired. They are now marching toward Molteno. Gen. Gatacre found the enemy's position impregnable. It was impossible for the British infantry to get at the Boers.

Frere Camp, Natal, Dec. 11.—Heliographic communication with Ladysmith continues daily. Gen. Schalk-Burger and commandant Louis Botha are in command of the Boer forces investing Ladysmith. Their horses are said to be in poor condition. A heavy report was heard in the direction of Colenso Sunday. The sound was followed by a big cloud of smoke. The supposition is that the enemy had blown up the highway bridge.

The Transvaal government has decided to consider Mr. Winston Churchill, who was captured November 15, between Estcourt and Chively, a combatant officer and to retain him as a prisoner. Mr. Churchill has applied to Gen. Buller with a view of getting an exchange.

This has been a quiet day here. The health of the troops is excellent.

Molteno, Cape Colony, Sunday, Dec. 10.—Gen. Gatacre's movements may be termed a reconnoisance in force. Its object was to ascertain the strength of the position of the Boers who were strongly entrenched along the Stormberg range. He left Putters kranl shortly after noon Saturday with a fighting force slightly over 4,000 men.

Leaving Molteno at 9 last evening he made a memorable all night march over the rocks and veldt. There was no sound except a steady tramp, and there were no distinguishing lights, the bright moon having gone down about half past eleven.

London, Dec. 11.—It is hardly too much to regard Gen. Gatacre's repulse near Stormberg as the most serious defeat British arms have yet sustained in the whole campaign. Already the official advices show that two men were killed, nine officers and 17 men were wounded, nine officers and 596 men missing. But it is evident that the worst is not yet known. The proportion of wounded and killed is so small, when compared with the missing—who are undoubtedly prisoners in the hands of the Boers—that the supplementary list of casualities is awaited with serious misgivings.

It is also feared that there were serious losses of guns and equipment.

The British troops who recently occupied Arundel are advancing. They have had several skirmishes but no casualties. Three miles north of Arundel they found the Boers 2,000 strong.

The Pretoria reports of renewed fighting at Modder river originated from the fact that the British, with a team of 32 oxen hauled a naval gun to the top of a high ridge north of Modder river town, whence they fired lyddite shells.

CATTLE QUARANTINE.

The Annual Order Against Texas Fever About to Be Issued—More Territory Included.

The boundary lines may be modified slightly later where the co-operation of state authorities may justify it.

Senator Hayward's Successor.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 11.—The fight for the senatorship left vacant by the death of Senator Hayward grows hotter every hour. That either Senator William V. Allen or G. M. Hitchcock, editor of the Omaha World-Herald, will be the successful competitor is now generally accepted, as the candidacy of W. H. Thompson, of Grand Island, was announced too late to be of any moment.

Gunboats For South Africa.

London, Dec. 11.—Two shallow draught river gunboats are being prepared at Chatham for service in South Africa. Each will carry two six pounders, quick firers and four Maxims.

A FORGIVING SPIRIT.

Dr. Talmage Placates the World's Revenges.

He Recommends More of the Saccharine and Less of the Sour in Human Dispositions—Forgiveness Before Sundown.

[Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage placates the world's revenges and recommends more of the saccharine and less of the sour in human dispositions; text, Ephesians, 4:26: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

What a pillow, embroidered of all colors, hath the dying day! The cradle of clouds from which the sun rises is beautiful enough, but it is surpassed by the many colored mausoleum in which at evening it is buried.

Sunset among the mountains! It almost takes one's breath away to recall the scene. The long shadows stretching over the plain make the glory of the departing light on the tiptop crags and struck asiant through the foliage the more conspicuous. Saffron and gold, purple and crimson commingled. All the castles of cloud in conflagration. Burning Moseows on the sky. Hanging gardens of roses at their deepest blush. Banners of vapor, red as if from carnage, in the battle of the elements. The hunter among the Adirondacks and the Swiss villager among the Alps know what is a sunset among the mountains. After a storm at sea the rolling grandeur into which the sun goes down to bathe at nightfall is something to make weird and splendid dreams out of for a lifetime. Alexander Smith in his poem compares the sunset to "the barren beach of hell," but this wonderful spectacle of nature makes me think of the burnished wall of Heaven. Paul in his prison, writing my text, remembers some of the gorgeous sunsets among the mountains of Asia Minor and how he had often seen the towers of Damnseus blaze at the close of the oriental days, and he flashes out that memory in the text when he says: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

Sublime, all suggestive duty for people then and people now! Forgiveness before sundown! He who never feels the throb of indignation is imbecile. He who can walk among the injustices of the world inflicted upon himself and others without flush of cheek, or flash of eye, or agitation of nature, is either in sympathy with wrong or semi-idiotic. When Ananias, the high priest, ordered the constables of the courtroom to smite Paul on the mouth, Paul fired up and said: "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall!" In the sentence before my text Paul commands the Ephesians: "Be ye angry and sin not." It all depends on what you are mad at and how long the feeling lasts whether anger is right or wrong. Life is full of exasperations. Saul after David, Sueeoth after Gideon, Kornh after Moses, the Pasquins after Augustus, the Pharisees after Christ, and everyone has had his pursuers, and we are swindled or belied or misrepresented or persecuted or in some way wronged, and the danger is that healthful indignation shall become baleful spite and that our feelings settle down into a prolonged outpouring of temper displeasing to God and ruinous to ourselves, and hence the important injunction of the text: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

Why that limitation to one's anger? Why that period of flaming vapor set to punctuate a flaming disposition? What has the sunset to do with one's resentful emotions? Was it a haphazard sentiment written by Paul without special significance? No, no; I think of five reasons why we should not let the sun set before our temper.

First, because 12 hours is long enough to be cross about any wrong inflicted upon us. Nothing is so exhausting to physical health or mental faculty as a protracted indulgence of ill humor. It racks the nervous system. It hurts the digestion. It heats the blood in brain and heart until the whole body is first overheated and then depressed. Besides that, it sours the disposition, turns one aside from his legitimate work, expends energies that ought to be better employed and does us more harm than it does our antagonist. Paul gives us a good, wide allowance of time for legitimate denunciation, from six o'clock to six o'clock, but says: "Stop there!" Watch the descending orb of day, and when it reaches the horizon take a reef in your disposition. Unloose your collar and cool off. Change the subject to something delightfully pleasant. Unroll your tight fist and slick hands with some oue. Bank up the fires at the curfew bell. Drive the growling dog of enmity back to its kennel. The hours of this morning will pass by, and the afternoon will arrive, and the sun will begin to set, and, I beg you, on its blazing hearth throw all your feuds, invectives and satires.

Other things being equal, the man who preserves good temper will come out ahead. An old writer says that the celebrated John Henderson, of Bristol, England, was at a dining party where political excitement ran high and the debate got angry, and while Henderson was speaking his opponent, unable to answer his argument, dashed a glass of wine in his face, when the speaker deliberately wiped the liquid from his face and said: "This, sir, is a digression. Now, if you please, for the main argument." While worldly philosophy could help but very few of such equipoise of spirit, the grace of God could help any man to such a triumph. "Impossible," you say. "I would have either left the table in anger or have knocked the man down." But I have come to believe that nothing is impossible if God help.

Aye, you will not postpone till sundown forgiveness of enemies if you can realize that their behavior toward you may be put in the catalogne of the "all things" that "work together for good to those that love God." I have had multitudes of friends, but I have found in my own experience that God has so arranged it that the greatest opportunities of usefulness that have been opened before me were opened by enemies. So you may harness your antagonists to your best interests and compel them to draw you on to better work and higher character. Suppose, instead of waiting until 32 minutes after four this evening, when the sun will set, you transact this glorious work of forgiveness at meridian.

Again, we ought not to let the sun go down on our wrath, because we will sleep better if we are at peace with everybody. Insomnia is getting to be one of the most prevalent of disorders. How few people retire at ten o'clock at night and sleep clear through to six in the morning! To relieve this disorder all narcotics and sedatives and morphine and choral and bromide of potassium and coenine and intoxicants are used, but nothing is more important than a quiet spirit if we would win somnolence. How is a man going to sleep when he is in mind pursuing an enemy? With what nervous twitch he will start out of a dream! That new plan of cornering his foe will keep him wide awake while the clock strikes 11, 12, 1, 2. I give you an unfailing prescription for wakefulness: Spend the evening hours rehearsing your wrongs and the best way of avenging them. Hold a convention of friends on this subject in your parlor or office at eight or nine o'clock. Close the evening by writing a bitter letter expressing your sentiments. Take from the desk or pigeonhole the papers in the case to refresh your mind with your enemy's meanness. Then lie down and wait for the coming of the day, and it will come before sleep comes, or your sleep will be worried quiescence and, if you take the precaution to lie flat on your back, a frightful nightmare.

Why not put a bound to your animosity? Why let your foes come into the sanctities of your dormitory? Why let those slanderers who have already torn your reputation to pieces or injured your business bend over your midnight pillow and drive from you one of the greatest blessings that God can offer—sweet, refreshing, all invigorating sleep? Why not fence out your enemies by the golden bars of the sunset? Why not stand behind the barricade of evening cloud and say to them: "Thus far and no farther." Many a man and many a woman is having the health of body as well as the health of soul eaten away by the malevolent spirit. I have in time of religious awakening had persons night after night come into the inquiry room and get no peace of soul. Afterwhile I have bluntly asked them: "Is there not some one against whom you have a hatred you are not willing to give up?" After a little confusion, they have slightly whispered: "Yes." Then I have said: "You will never find peace with God as long as you retain that virulence."

Again, we ought not to allow the sun to set before forgiveness takes place, because we might not live to see another day. And what if we should be ushered into the presence of our Maker with a grudge upon our soul? The majority of people depart this life in the night. Between 11 o'clock p. m. and three o'clock a. m. there is something in the atmosphere which relaxes the grip which the body has on the soul, and most people die the next world through the shadows of this world. Perhaps God may have arranged it that way so as to make the contrast the more glorious. I have seen sunshiny days in this world that must have been almost like the radiance of Heaven. But as most people leave the earth between sundown and sunrise they quit this world at its darkest, and Heaven, always bright, will be the brighter for that contrast. Out of darkness into irradiation.

Shall we then leap over the roseate bank of sunset into the favorite hunting ground of disease and death, carrying our animosities with us? Who would want to confront his God, against whom we have all done meaner things than anybody has ever done against us, carrying old grudges? How can we expect His forgiveness for the greater when we are not willing to forgive others for the less? Napoicon was encouraged to undertake the crossing of the Alps because Charlemagne had previously crossed them. And all this rugged path of forgiveness bears the bleeding footsteps of Him who conquered through suffering, and we ought to be willing to follow. On the night of our departure from this life into the next our one plea will have to be for mercy, and it will have to be offered in the presence of Him who has said: "If you forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Heavenly Father forgive your trespasses."

What a sorry plight if we stand there hating this one and hating that one and wishing that one a damage and wishing some one else a calamity, and we ourselves needing forgiveness for 10,000 obliquities of heart and life. When our last hour comes, we want it to find us all right.

Hardly anything affects me so much in the uncovering of Pompeii as the account of the soldier who, after the city had for many centuries been covered with the ashes and scoriae of Vesuvius, was found standing in his place on guard, hand on spear and helmet on head. Others fled at the awful submergement, but the explorer, 1,700 years after, found the body of that brave fellow in right position. And it will be a grand thing if, when our last moment comes, we are found in right position toward God, on gunrd and unaffrighted by the descending ashes from the mountains of death. I do not suppose that I am any more of a coward than most people, but I declare to you that I would not dare to sleep tonight if there were any being in all the earth with whom I would not gladly shake hands, lest during the night hours my spirit dismissed to other realms, I should, because of my unforgiving spirit, be denied Divine forgiveness.

"But," says one man, "that fellow who cheated me out of those goods or damaged my business credit or started that lie about me in the newspapers by his perfidy broke up my domestic happiness, forgive him I cannot, forgive him I will not." Well, brother, take your choice. You will never be at peace with God till you are at peace with man. Feeling as you now do, you would not get so near the harbor of Heaven as to see the lighthsip. Better leave that man with the God who said: "Vengeance is mine, I will repay." You . . . [illegible] will make him sweat for that yet; I will make him squirm; I mean to pursue him to the death," but you are damaging yourself more than you damage him, and you are making Heaven for your soul an impossibility. If he will not be reconciled to you, be reconciled to him. In five or six hours it will be sundown. The dahlias will bloom against the western sky. Somewhere between this and that take a shovel and bury the old quarrel at least six feet deep. "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

Oh, it makes one feel splendid to be able by God's help to practice unlimited forgiveness. It improves one's body and soul. My brother, it will make you measure three or four more inches around the chest and improve your respiration so that you can take a deeper and longer breath. It improves the countenance by scattering the gloom and makes you somewhat like God himself. He is omnipotent, and we cannot copy that. He is independent of all the universe, and we cannot copy that. He is creative, and we cannot copy that. He is omnipresent, and we cannot copy that. But He forgives with a brond sweep all faults, and all neglects, and all insults, and all wrongdoings, and in that way we may copy Him with mighty success. Go harness that subime action of your soul to the sunset—the hour when the gate of Heaven opens to let the day pass into the eternities, and some of the glories escape this way through the brief opening. We talk about the Italian sunsets and sunset amid the Appennines and sunset amid the cordilleras, but I will tell you how you may see a grander sunset than any mere lover of nature ever beheld; that is, by flinging into it all your hatreds and animosities, and let the horses of fire trample them, and the chariots of fire roll over them, and the spearmen of fire stab them, and the beach of fire consume them, and the billows of fire overwhelm them.

Again, we should not let the sun go down on our wrath, because it is of little importance what the world says of you or does to you when you have the affluent God of the sunset as your provider and defender. People talk as though it were a fixed spectacle of nature and always the same. But no one ever saw two sunsets alike, and if the world has existed 6,000 years there have been about 2,190,000 sunsets, each of them as distinct from all the other pictures in the gallery of the sky as Titian's "Last Supper," Rubens' "Descent From the Cross," Raphael's "Transfiguratiou" and Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment" are distinct from eachother. If that God is of such infinite resources that he can put on the wall of the sky each evening more than the Louvre and Luxembourg galleries all in one is my God and your God, our provider and protector, what is the use of our worrying about any human antagonism? If we are misinterpreted, the God of the many-colored sunset can put the right color on our action. If all the garniture of the western heavens at eventide is but the upholstery of one of the windows of our future home, what small business for us to be chasing enemies! Let not this Sabbath sun go down upon your wrath.

Mohammed said: "The sword is the key of Heaven and hell." But, my hearers, in the first day we will find just the opposite of that to be true, and that the sword never unlocks Heaven, and that he who heals wounds is greater than he who makes them, and that on the same riug are two keys—God's forgiveness of us and our forgiveness of enemies—and these two keys unlock paradise.

And now I wish for all of you a beautiful sunset to your earthly existence. With some of you it has been a long day of trouble, and with others of you it will be far from calm. When the sun rose at six o'clock, it was the morning of youth, and a fair day was prophesied, but by the time the noonday or middle life had come and the clock of your earthly existence had struck 12, cloud rocks gathered, and tempest bellowed in the track of tempest. But as the evening of old nge approaches, I pray God the skies may brighten and the clouds be piled up into pillars as of celestial temples to which you go, or move as with mounted cohorts come to take you home. And as you sink out of sight below the horizon, may there be a radiance of Christian example lingering long after you have gone, and on the heavens be written in letters of sapphire and on the waters in letters of opal and on the hills in letters of emerald: "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall the moon withdraw itself, for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended." So shall the sunset of earth become the sunrise of Heaven.

Flasherly—You bet! He's tied to his wife's apron strings.—Kansas City Independent.

A BRAVE COWARD

By H. I. Cleveland.

John Sloan was trembling. His face was white, his eyes wandering, while over his skin ran cold and hot flushes. His mother sat by the big window at the west end of the dining room. Mary Carr was at the door, her hand upon the knob. She was speaking to John:

"Of course, if you have got to be made to go, there's no heroism in it. The Tenth Pennsylvania don't want that class of men. But if you love me—if you think anything of the old flag—if you go because you ought to go—why, you can come and say good-by to me to-night."

The latch clicked and she was gone. Sloan took a t at the troubled face of his mother an' left the house. Mechanically he wandered to the great red barn and the stalls where sleek horses stamped. There he battled with himself.

The Sloan farm in Pennsylvania, on the banks of the Juanita river, has been worked for a hundred years by men of the same blood. I think the Irvings, the McClellands, the Curtins, and last the Sloans—all intermarried—have been the possessors of the acres since the battle of Brandywine. Each generation of this family down to the Sloans had a fighting man in the nation's service.

It is not to be wondered then that the Sloans suffered in their pride to find that they were the first of the race to be without a military representative. John Sloan, their only son, heir to their goodly estates, was a physical coward. He knew it, and so did his gray-haired father and kindly-faced mother.

Morally, he was a clean, wholesome boy. Physically, he was tall, ruddy-faced, well-muscled and more than good-looking. Yet it was a matter of horror and shame to him that he feared firearms, dreaded the blow given in friendly contest with other boys, and was in a tremble if bodily harm seemed imminent.

But if the suffering had been a sore trial to him in his earlier days, John Sloan never realized its full agony until following the operations of the American army in Cuba and the war with Spain there came the call for troops to serve in the Philippines, and the Tenth Pennsylvania regiment was ordered to prepare for service in the field. The destination of the regiment was Manila. Word had gone out from Pittsburgh that recruits would be accepted by the regiment. This message reached the settlement about the Sloan farm in the Juanita country. Several young men promptly came forward and declared they would enlist. The girl that John Sloan loved and wished to be his betrothed—Mary Carr—asked him if he did not intend to join. His answers were evasive. Then she called at the Sloan home and asked him directly to enlist. And it was after this scene that John Sloan fled to the red barn to hide his misery.

A woman's will is stronger than a man's when that man loves the woman. John Sloan won a partial victory over his fears and decided that he would join the regiment. At evening time the young man crossed the fields to the Carr homestead. He expected that Mary would be watching for him, but she was not at the gate nor on the front porch. Her mother greeted him with the words:

"We had a sudden telegram from Iowa, John, that Mary's sister was ill, very ill. Pa hitched up at once and Mary left on the afternoon train. She's gone to Cedar Rapids, 'cause none of the rest of us could go. She left this note for you."

The lines within ran like this:

"John, mother will tell you about my hurried going. I have prayed every minute since I left your house that you would see your duty clearly. If when you receive this you have decided to enlist you will know that you have given your best friends very happy and done your duty to your country and the flag. Mary."

It is making a long story rightfully short to say that the next day he left for Pittsburgh, passed through the test of enlistment, was accepted and assigned to company A, of the Tenth Pennsylvania. A letter which his father had written to Col. Hawkins, commander of the regiment, secured him some courtesies he otherwise would not have received.

He wrote to Mary Carr, at Cedar Rapids, the date his regiment would leave Pittsburgh and its route to San Francisco, and it was after this letter was gone that he was seized with an inspiration. He made his way to his captain and told him frankly that he would like to leave Pittsburgh several days ahead of the regiment and meet it at Cedar Rapids as it traveled west. He said frankly, also, that the reason for his going to Cedar Rapids was a woman. Ten hours later he was on his way to Chicago, dressed in his regimentals, and marked by all who observed him as a recruit for the Philippines.

His peace of mind did not increase as the North Western carried him from Chicago to Cedar Rapids, across the Mississippi into the fertile fields of Iowa.

It is not necessary to go into the details of Sloan's meeting with Mary Carr, nor the inevitable pleading on his part that before he left she would give him her plighted word. When the moment of final separation was at hand, she said to him:

"You know, and I know, that I care for you—how much it is not necessary to tell. Let the way you do your duty at the front prove to me how much of that love is left to care for you in the future. I am not sending you to greatness, but, oh, John, I want you to come back a proven man, and—and—the day you do I will give you my final answer. Go, now, and God be with you, till we meet again."

Sloan joined his regiment, crossed with them the historic Union Pacific and Central Pacific railroads, and came at last to the Presidio at San Francisco, where the regiment was stationed for a short time.

The sailing was on June 15, and as the transport passed out of the Golden Gate on her long journey to the orient, he leaned over the rail of the troop deck until the land had entirely faded from sight, sick at heart, unmanned, a pitiable object to himself if not to his companions. One of them threw his arms about the neck of Sloan and sang out in gleeful tone:

"Then stand to your glasses steady
And drink to your comrade's eyes,
Here's a cup for the dead and the dying,
Hurrah for the next one that dies."

Sloan shuddered, broke away, and hid in his bunk. Overhead was Col. Hawkins, Barnett, Maj. Cuthbertson, the gentle chaplain, Hunter, and other heroic leaders. And although Sloan did not know it then, there was one captain above whose thought was upon him, and whom he was to learn to call "My Captain" to the end of his days.

This captain carried in his effects a letter from John Sloan's father in which were the lines:

"My boy is going to battle in your command. Years ago your father and my brother went to battle as comrades, and in the heat of conflict your father fell, wounded. My brother carried him to a place of safety, and in the end nursed him back to strength. I ask you to care for my boy as one of mine once did for yours. He is a good lad, but he needs a friend now as he never did before."

And this was the reason why, after the transport had cleared Honolulu and was on the last tack for Manila, that John Sloan found himself detached from his company and on duty in the officers' quarters, where, much to his surprise, a certain captain often spoke kindly to him and gave him encouragement.

"I have watched you enough, Sloan, to know that you are mortally afraid of what we are going into. You are a bundle of nonsensical nerves; but whatever is going to happen when we are on shore, remember this, Sloan, don't run."

Men pray even in these hard days, and John Sloan prayed that night for strength, prayed as only a man can who knows that he is a coward, yet is determined to fight to be no coward, yet is determined to fight to the end. In the morning, while looking over his kit, he came across a North-Western railroad folder, which was the only one remaining of several he had provided himself with when starting from home, and something of the old familiar names in the states, and to know that back there many were thinking and living for him.

The landing was rough. Their transport had passed up the harbor by the Olympia, the Raleigh, the Boston, flags flying, bands playing, and the great admiral on his bridge bowing and raising his hat as the troops cheered, which had come to his aid. Even Sloan forgot his fidgets, and waved his cap high in the air, and yelled:

"Hurrah, Dewey!"

Manila was still in the hands of the Spanish. Aguinaldo was seeking to secure recognition from the United States, and at the same time to capture Manila and loot the city. Dewey was holding the insurgents in check and preparing to take the city. The Tenth Pennsylvania was landed at Cavite, and then marched to the trenches at Malate in front of the Spanish outposts. Active service was commenced at once. The first duty that came to Sloan after the regiment was in the trenches was that of picket. His post was on the edge of a thicket, scarce a mile from the Spanish line. The tropical rains had commenced, and the fever was already upon some of the men. He was given particular instructions to watch out for a surprise, the Spaniards having displayed great activity during the day along the front of their line.

Wrapped in his rough weather coat, holding his gun underneath it to keep it dry, Sloan paced up and down his post; splashing in the water, wondering at the brilliancy of the lightning, and shivering in dread anticipation of hearing a flash of lightning showed him figures on the plain, in front of him, moving toward him.

Only the enemy could come from that direction. Sloan stood still as if welded to the ground. His hair rose on end. He yelled and fired in the direction of the advancing foe.

Strange, is it not, that that shot—fired by John Sloan, coward—gave to the American army its notice of the advance of the Spaniards at Malate, defeated the enemy, and made a hero of a trembling, frightened, half-boy, half man!

Sloan, after firing, ran back towards his own lines and stumbled or fell at the feet of that captain who had first encouraged him to do his duty. He jumped up out of the slush, saturated, and was ordered to take position with his company. Twice during the battle did Sloan have the wildest desire to run. But, as it has done many times before in the world's history, that name "Mary" held him to his place and duty. When morning came and it was realized that American pluck and valor had won the day, it was Sloan's captain, who, sending for him, said:

"You knew your duty last night. You have placed yourself in line for promotion. The colonel knows of your service as picket."

Then, out of the boy's heart rushed all those years of misery and doubt, all those unmanned fears that held manhood back and kept him the child. There came messages from far-away home. At the end of his mother's letter there was a penciled line:

"The Dodd boys have written home of your bravery at Malate. We hear you may be promoted. Keep on, John. Mary is here."

That kind of a love letter would not satisfy all men, but it did satisfy John Sloan, who tucked it away in his blouse and read it many times in the days to come. He would sit in the shade of his tent, read the short lines from Mary Carr over, draw out his North-Western railroad folder, and on the ground work out the topographical map of the long range of country from the Golden Gate to the Juanita region.

Other soldiers came to watch his self-appointed task. Some suggested the outlines of the Missouri valley, others the location of Ames and Clinton, still others the topographical building of that beautiful sweep of Illinois from Clinton to Chicago. The little time table and folder from which they drew their general plan was preserved as though priceless in intrinsic value. Nostalgia, that dread disease of all armies called in the German "Heimweh," in English "Home-sickness" was fought off with this strip of printed paper and these rough tracings on the face of the earth, time and time again.

There was not much soldiering to be done after the duly fight until late in December. Hostilities with the insurgents commenced shortly afterwards, and by February real war was again raging on the island of Luzon. The day and the night of February 4 will be remembered by Sloan so long as he lives.

During the day of February 4 insurgents kept creeping up on the American outposts, and there was desultory firing. That night Sloan was stationed on picket duty, perhaps 200 yards from a Chinese hospital in which were several hundred Filipinos. The oppressive darkness of an oriental evening had already settled down when a number of these insurgents attacked the American lines or outposts at the point where Sloan was placed. At the first scattering volley that apprised him he was under fire, he ran like a madman toward his own lines. There was a ditch to cross, and in the brush of its bottom was a barbed wire. Becoming entangled in this he fell and stunned himself, while his regiment, coming to the front, passed over him, and men of the hospital corps picking him up for wounded sent him to the rear. There it was quickly discovered that with the exception of a cut on his head from the fall, Sloan was uninjured, and he was ordered back to the front.

At daybreak word came to the Tenth that a charge was soon to be ordered. The captain, of whom Sloan was so proud, was near him and quietly taking note of his wretched countenance. Of a sudden he ordered Sloan to come to him, and when the latter approached, said:

"Someone on the picket line ran last night. Was it you?"

"Yes," said Sloan, feeling a strange relief come over him at getting the truth out.

"Well," said the captain, speaking very slowly, "you ought to be shot. As it is, fight to-day, for God's sake fight."

Sloan went back to the ranks all in a flame, the blood coming hot and then cold in his veins. The bugles rang, officers shouted, and the line of American boys swept forward, first very slowly, then, gaining momentum, increasing the speed until it was a mad rush, and every man on his metal to reach the hospital first. Shots were popping from it, men were falling, Landis went down and others, but the rush never stopped.

But the maddest of all sights was John Sloan, hatless, far beyond his own line, running like a hare for the hospital, gun well up but never firing a shot. Officers yelled in astonishment as he ran by them, privates envying him his gait, shouted in encouragement. He was a stimulant to the entire line—the coward from the Juanita country.

He was in front of the walled church now, eager to fight his way in. Men were yelling on all sides of him, and there was the snap of flames in the thatch. Suddenly the earth seemed to slip away from him, his head whirled, he threw up his arms, and went down, wounded. Sloan had given his blood in atonement for his cowardice, and no man can do more than that. When his senses returned to him he was in the field hospital, and his left shoulder done up in bandages. There he remained until March, receiving from home many kind letters, but none so dear as the one which ran like this:

"I know all about what you did; everybody is talking of your bravery; if you were here I would tell you, John, what I think of you; do, do come home. MARY CARR."

But John Sloan was yet to fight at Malolos, to cross a Filipino river under fire with Funston, the men swimming side by side, to be with the Utah battery, the Thirteenth Minnesota, the men from Oregon and Nebraska, and when Malolos was taken he was to fall in the middle of its main street, shot again as he held the colors high for the cheer of his comrades. It was then he was taken back to Manila as Sergt. Sloan, of the Tenth, and nursed until such strength came back as enabled him to turn to the dear old railroad folder and with pencil and paper this time map out the long journey home from the Golden Gate over the Union Pacific and the North-Western to the Juanita country.

The Tenth came into Manila to relieve the Fifty first Iowa at Cavite, and there to it came the glad news that it was ordered home and would go as soon as the transport was ready. The gallant regiment had been 66 days on the firing line, and made a wonderful record for bravery. The latter part of June the men went on board ship, and late in July reached San Francisco, bringing into the Golden Gate the body of Col. Hawkins, who had died en route.

The Union Pacific and North-Western brought them over the Sierras, through the Rockies, across the plains of the Platte and safely to Chicago. A little later they were in Pittsburgh, where royal greeting awaited them. But Sloan could not wait for this, and hastened to the home of Mary Carr.

John was at the foot of a small hill, when, looking up the path to the summit, he saw her coming. At moments she did not see him, but paused to gather a flower by the way. Then he walked up toward her, one hand outstretched. Now she recognized him, and there was a flame in the hazel eyes, and flame on the soft cheeks, and the quick, heart-giving cry:

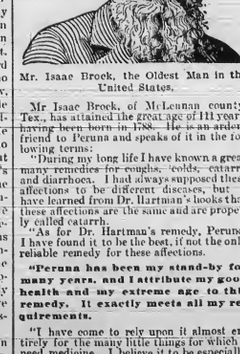
"John!"

He was by her side now, the white hand of the maiden caught in the brown of the soldier.

"I have come," he said, all the old fears gone, "a long way—to tell you that I am no longer afraid—I have done my duty." This with a touch of pride. "I was often troubled; I did many things I ought not to have done, but I have conquered myself. Mary, Mary, I want you!"

For no hero of war or of peace can there be greater reward than the love of a pure woman. The emoluments of governments or the rewards bestowed by patriotic citizens sink into significance beside the giving to a man of a good woman's heart. There came nestling into the hand of John Sloan not one white hand but two, and the face of Mary Carr was lifted to his and her lips given to him.

Then she turned back with him, and the two, thus united after sore trial, walked their happy way up to the old farm and the old folks waiting there. Much had Sloan to tell, much to pour over and over again—his fighting, his wounds, his myriad experiences in Malayland—but when he had told all he would that night, he brought out the faded North-Western folder, and he tossed it into the lap of Mary Carr, with the words:



"That was a living link with home to us in the field and at Manila—keep it forever; it did much to save me for you."

And, being a woman, she asked him why, and in time he told her this story.

STORY OF QUEEN LIL.

A Moment of Embarrassment at a Reception After She Lost Her Crown.

Mr. Isaac Brock, the Oldest Man in the United States.

Young Al Berry, son of Congressman Al Berry, of Kentucky, said a naval officer who was in Honolulu when the Hawaiian flag was replaced by the stars and stripes, was in Honolulu in some kind of official capacity when I was there once, and was on particularly good terms with Queen Liliuokalani and her entire court. And I may say that in this regard he was about the only American who was. How he got there I don't know, but he was one of your irresistible kind of Kentuckians who conquer admiration in spite of all obstacles. He could say anything he pleased and do all manner of startling things, but that only seemed to make the queen's people fonder of him, and when he offered to take me to call on her majesty, at a little reception she gave in the afternoon after the flag ceremonies were over, I felt that I was safe in accepting. It was a very informal affair and we were soon in the royal presence and I was duly introduced. Then the young man suddenly upset me in 14 places at once and gave me a fit of the nervous embarrassments.

"Well, your majesty," he said in that boyish and breezy manner of his, not less at home in a queen's palace than on a blue grass farm, "how does it feel to be out of a job?"

I felt like going through the floor, but Berry never turned a hair, and the crownless queen in quite the same spirit greatly relieved my embarrassment by responding:

"Oh, Mr. Berry, you are such a jollier."

It was slightly slangy, perhaps, for royalty, but it was the right thing to say, and I read the riot act to Berry on my own behalf when I got home.—N. Y. Sun.

OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Tells How He Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters by Using Peruna.

Mr Isaac Brock, of McLennan county, Tex., has attained the great age of 111 years, having been born in 1788. He is an ardent friend to Peruna and speaks of it in the following terms:

"During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds, catarrh and diarrhoea. I had always supposed these affections to be different diseases, but I have learned from Dr. Hartman's books that these affections are the same and are properly called catarrh.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only reliable remedy for these affections.

"Peruna has been my stand-by for many years, and I attribute my good health and my extreme age to this remedy. It exactly meets all my requirements.

"I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine. I believe it to be especially valuable to old people."

Isaac Brock.

Catarrh is the greatest enemy of old age. A person entirely free from catarrh is sure to live to a hale and hearty old age. A free book on catarrh sent by the Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

At the hog killiug at Rev. J. A. Kirtley's, during a great many interesting rat stories were told. Erastus Randall had caught 13 at once in his father's trap. Mr. Kirtley had caught a rat and sluged the hair off him and let him go to scare the rest away and the next night caught the same rat which he then killed. Another tale was told of a man in Lawrenceburg, who had a new trap, and set it in his cellar, but failing to catch any rats, hung the trap up on a nail and on going to the cellar again found that the rats had climbed up the wall and the trap was full of them. Still another was told of Mr. James Grant, who caught some rats in his trap and took it and threw it in his pond to drown them, aud on recovering found it full of fish. Erastus said, if ever you caught just one or two rats in a trap never kill them, but keep feeding and catering them in the trap until you have caught all the rats on the place; that it was not necessary to give them any nick-nacks, bnt just plain substantials. Another party had set a joiut of tiling on a flat rock in his cellar and put tempting bait in it and provided a way for the rats to get in and expected to catch it full up to the point from which they could jump out.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The December term of the Boone Circuit Court convened Monday, Judge Greene presiding. The sheriff and his deputy were sworn in regard to summoning grand and petit jurors at this term, and the sheriff filed his list of jurors.

Monday evening one of the county officials was talking about how he melted apart the seems in the McIntosh coat he used while making his canvass, when R. J. Madden, the Sudlick grand juror, remarked, "you must have been a hot number," and the officers responded, "I expect I was, as the mercury was about 100 much of the time."

The crowd in town, Monday, was very small, the grand jurors being about the only persons in attendance.

Atty. Tomlin, of Walton, was the first lawyer to put in his appearance.

No cases were set for trial on the first day.

When court convened Tuesday morning the following additional attorneys were present: W. H. McCoy, of Covington; Jno. S Gaunt, of Carrollton; C. Y. Dyas, of Walton; B. F. Menifee, of Crittenden, S. W. Adams, of Erlanger; T. E. Curley, of Walton.

The petit jurors were orgauized as follows:

The following persons having been summoned as petit jurors, and failing to answer, a rule returuable to the first day of next term was issued against them, requiring them to show cause if any they can, why they should not be fined for disobeying the summons: T. Baker, J. W. Couly, J. B. Eldred.

Several persons who had been summoned as petit jurors were excused.

One case was tried by jury yesterday. That was an indictment against a colored man for fast driving on a public highway. The jury found for the defendant on peremptory instructions.

M. D. Gray and C. C. Crawford, Williamstown, arrived at noon, Tuesday.

Prosecutions were disposed of as follows yesterday: Commonwealth vs William Warner, Martin Bailey, Jas. W. Aylor, each filed away.

Commonwealth vs The Atlantic Tea Company, continued.

Prosecutions against each of the following persons were contiuued, and an alias process ordered issued therein: Sherman Reeves, &c; John Hilker; Jacob Cohen; Ed Clore, &c.; Claud McGuire; Bob White and Al Cleek; Albert Cleek and Albert Hughes.

Fritz Murray, charged with fast driving on highway, was tried by jury and acquitted.

Mike Holtzworth was indicted, charged with obstructiug highway. A special demurrer to the jurisdictiou of the court was sustained.

The Covington and Lexington Turnpike Company was indicted twice at the last term of the court for charging toll on vehicles in a funeral procession. The defendant's demurrer to the indictment was argued at length by W. H. McCoy for the Turnpike Co., and J. M. Lassing for the Commonwealth. The demurrer was overruled and a fine of $50 was adjudged against the Company in each case. An appeal was taken.

When the petit jurors were excused Tuesday they were requested to return Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock, and they commenced showing up that morning about 7, some of them coming 8 or 9 miles.

When court convened Wednesday morning among the attorneys were noticed, Col. W. S. O'Neal and Harvey Myers, of Covington, and John Vest, of Walton.

The boys who violated the fishing law by seining were fined $50, making it cost them about $3 each.

Harry Hunter, who has been in jail here several months, pleaded guilty to the indictment for stealing a horse and buggy of Bruce Roberts, of Walton, last August, and was given the lowest penalty, two years in the penitentiary. D. E. Castleman represented Hunter, and made the only plea, that of mercy, for the defendant. Atty. Gray made no speech to the jury.

To-day was Walton day, and that city is represented by a large delegation of her citizens.

The suit of Clara L. Myers against Dr. B. A. Dulaney for rents on land of hers which Dulaney bought at Commissioner's sale and which was afterward released to her by the court, was on trial when we went to press.

So far the crowd attening court is the smallest for years. There is very little new business, but considerable old business incumbers the docket and will be attended to at this term.

The force in the office of the Owenton Herald has, heretofore, borne an excellent reputation for politeness, but the following, copied from the Herald of last week, excites some suspicion: "A live suake about an inch loug was found in one of the 'boxes' in this office a few days ago. Where it came from is a mystery."

Thos. Castlemau, of Florence, prepared as a rat trap a barrel with tilting head, and then filled the barrel half full of water, for the purpose of catching and drowning all the rats in the town. Mr. C. baited his rat destroyer and placed it in a secluded spot where he was satisfied the rats held high carnival every night. The practical jokers about town heard of how Tom expected to annihilate the rodent tribe, and concluded to take a hand in the fun, and to that end every rat and mouse trap in town was baited and set, and, as a strange coincidence, every trap was packed full of rats and mice next morning. Those on to the fun then called a meeting as soou as it was learned that a large number of rats were held in captivity, and a committee was appointed to entertain Tom, while the contents of the several traps were emptied into his rat exterminator. Sometime in the afternoon Castleman visited his combination exterminator, and to his surprise it was packed so full of dead rats that the water had risen and was running out over the top of the barrel. He rushed out into town and reported his tremendous catch, and a large crowd congregated to view the destruction wrought in the rat tribe. Those acquainted with the joke kept it as long as possible to allow Mr. Castleman to expatiate on the merits of his trap, but they finally broke down and exposed the trick, and now when you say rats to Mr. C. he immediately asks, "What'll you take?"

SOLON BORGIUM, a Parisian sculptor, has been in South Dakota for the last three months making models in clay of Indians for the Paris exposition. He found some fine specimens of the American aborigines among the Sionx at the Crow Creek agency, South Dakota, and succeeded in working up a half dozen models.

SPEAKING of big salaries, the biggest on record was paid to George Gould. For ten years' work his father gave him $5,000,000. The account went down as "for services rendered." That was at the rate of $500,000 a year. The highest salary ever paid a railroad president was $75,000 a year that went to Sir William C. Van Horn when he was president of the Canadian Pacific.

THE "Kreuz Zeitung" asserts that the Boers are using English cartridges from Kynochs, where Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's brother is a large shareholder. When war was seen to be inevitable, Kynochs underbid the German dealers and secured a big contract for cartridges which they shipped as hardware, thus escaping seizure, though they were landed just before the outbreak of the war.

THE word "God" never appeared in any government act until the year 1864 when, at the suggestion of the director of the mint, ex-Gov. Pollock, of Pennsylvania, "In God We Trust" was stamped on the copper two-cent pieces. Before that time, "E Pluribus Unum" had been the motto. Strange to relate, "E Pluribus Unum" on coins never was authorized by law. Like Topsy, it just grew. Nearly all the constitutions mention God.

As the result of investigation by a South Carolina lawyer, Gov. McSweeney has called on the governors of the southern states to join him in getting all southern congressmen to support a bill for refunding to rightful owners $11,000,000 now in the United States treasury as the proceeds of cotton seized during and immediately after the civil war and sold by treasury officials. The governor is assured that action on this line will be unanimous.

SYSTEMS of electrically lighting railroad cars, particularly dining cars, sleepers and parlor cars, in which the current is generated by a dynamo geared to the car axle, are in use on a number of railroad lines in this country. The high speed at which these cars travel makes such an arrangement quite satisfactory and easy to work out, current being supplied during stoppages of the train from storage batteries charged when the train is running.

CONTRARY to the general opinion, more people go mad during the summer months than in the usually gloomy and dull months of November, December and January, when times are bad and the general conditions appear more conducive to insanity. Not only in this country but also in many others, it is found that more people go mad during May, June and July than during any other portion of the year, and that suicide—which is due to some form of insanity—is also more prevalent during the summer.

INASMUCH as the electroiysis, which, according to experts, is causing rapid deterioration of the New York elevated railroad structures, comes supposedly from a current carried over the Brooklyn bridge, it is feared the bridge itself may be undergoing damage from the same cause. The places where electrolysis would be the most dangerous to the structure are at the anchors of the cables, which, being covered with masonry, can not be inspected. If, however, the moisture has been excluded there is no danger of electrolysis.

GASTON TISSANDIER, the French aeronaut, is dead. Originally a chemist, he devoted himself to the problem of directing balloons, and rendered important services during the siege of Paris. His most memorable ascent was made in the balloon Zenith, in 1875, with Sivel and Croce-Spinelli, when, after reaching a height of over 26,000 feet, the balloonists became unconscious, and on reaching the ground again, it was found that Tissandier's two companions were dead. He was 46 years of age.

ADVICES received from Sardinia report a most deplorable state of poverty and famine among the peasantry owing to the almost total failure of this year's grain and olive crops. The meager pasturage is almost entirely exhausted and the cattle are rapidly being decimated. The shepherds and cattle drivers of the country live on wild figs and in many parts of the country the peasantry live on bread made of ground acorns and barley. Expulsions and expropriations have attained an unprecedented figure and those who were able to pay their rent and taxes are now destitute.

SHORT SESSIONS.

This Week in the Senate Will Not Be a Very Busy One.

The House Will Devote the Week to the Financial Debate On the Currency Bill—Republicans For the Measure.

Washington, Dec. 11.—The week does not promise to be a busy one in the senate, the indication being for routine business and short sessions inside the chamber, with much preparation for future work in the committee rooms. Senator Mason will open the week with a speech on his resolution declaring the sympathy of the country with the Boers in their war with Great Britain. There may be other brief speeches upon this and other questions, though there is a general disposition on the part of senators to postpone speechmaking until after the holidays.

The republican senators generally feel that the most important work for the present is to secure the reorganization of the committees, especially the finance committee, as preliminary to other work.

The finance committee may meet on Tuesday for preliminary consideration of the finance bill, but this is not yet decided upon. The expectation now is that the bill will not be taken up in the senate until after the Christmas holidays. The committee on foreign relations will take up the reciprocity treaties on Wednesday. The committee on privileges and elections will consider the contests over senatorial seats in a desultory way, but the real work on these will not begin until Saturday, when opposing counsel will be heard in the Quay case.

The house will devote the week entirely to the financial debate on the currency bill. Under the terms of the special order adopted on Friday the general debate will open on Monday immediately after the reading of the journal and continue daily from noon until 5 o'clock Friday. On Saturday the bill will be read paragraph by paragraph for amendment under the five minute rule. The vote will not be taken until the following Monday. The debate will probably cover a wide range, including a general refreshing of the campaign issue of 1896 and there may be some stormy incidents. The republicans are arrayed solidly for the bill, but many of them who have never before advocated the gold standard doubtless will have to take the floor to explain their change of position. On the democratic side some of the members are reported as favoring the bill, but there has been no canvass made as yet, and it remains to be seen how many of them will join the republicans upon the measure. Representative Overstreet (Ind.), who will have charge of the bill on the floor, will make the opening argument in its support Monday.

TERRIFIC EXPOSION.

A Nitro-Glycerine Magazine Blows Up—The Report Heard For Thirty Miles.

Bradford, Pa., Dec. 11.—The nitro-glycerin magazine of the Pensylvania Torpedo Co., located in Bolivar hollow, one and one-half miles from this city, blew up Sunday with a report that was heard for 30 miles. The shock was felt at Olean, Salamanica, Ellinocottville and other surrounding towns. The magazine was blown to atoms and a hole was made in the earth 15 feet deep by 30 feet in circumference. Trees were torn into splinters at the scene of the explosion and the brick of which the magazine walls were constructed was reduced to reddish powder which covered the snow over a wide area. Much damage was done in this city and vicinity by the breaking of glass, overturning of chimneys, etc. It is not believed any one was killed. An oil stove, fed automatically, is believed to have caused the explosion.

Want Women Sent to Paris.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 10.—The officers of the National Suffrage association, in a business session in this city Friday, forwarded to President McKinley a request to appoint women or a woman on the board of commissioners to the Paris exposition. The request says: 'Since Mrs. Bertha H. Palmer discharged her duties as president of the board of lady managers of the world's fair faithfully and with great credit to all women, the officers of this association ask that she be one of these appointees."

Higher Lake Levels.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 11.—George Y. Wisner, chairman of the Deep Water Ways Commission, said Sunday night that the commission's preliminary recommendations in reference to sustaining higher lake levels will be forwarded to the secretary of war Monday. In general terms the commissioners favor, it is understood, a system of dams in the Upper Niagara river.

GEN. ALEJANDRINO.

He With His Staff, It Is Reported, Has Surrendered—Insurgent Camp Captured.

Manila, Dec. 11.—An expedition, headed by the battleship Oregon, left Manila for Subig Saturday night. It is reported that the Filipino commander, Gen. Alejandrino, with his staff, has surrendered to Gen. McArthur, and there is also a rumor that Alejandrino is at Aguilar, suffering from a wound received in a fight between insurgents and bandits, and that he will be given an opportunity to surrender, and will be properly cared for.

Maj. Spence, with a column of the 32d regiment, captured a new insurgent camp, an uncompleted stronghold in the Tassan district. He left Dinalupan at daybreak Saturday morning, and marched 10 miles along mountain trails, finally encountering a large band of insurgents, who retreated after a brief skirmish. The Americans had no losses.

The records of the treasury of the so-called Filipino government, together with a quantity of paper money and another Nordenfeldt, have been found at Mangatarem.

Three Americans, who, with a commissary sergeant of the 12th infantry, were traveling from San Fernando to Angeles, left their escort for a moment and went into the bush. As they did not return speedily, a search was made for them but they could not be found. They were probably captured by the rebels.

A mail orderly disappeared between Angeles and Bamban. He also is supposed to have been captured.

A force of 100 insurgents Saturday attacked, near Baliuag, a wagon train escorted by 30 men of the 16th infantry. A sharp engagement followed. The insurgents lost 18 killed and nine captured. During the recent attack by the insurgents upon Vigan, the Filipinos obtained possession of the plaza and of a church in the center of the town, from which the Americans dislodged them. It seems that the escaped Spaniards obtained guns and fought with the Americans against the insurgents.

DEPARTMENT STORES.

John Wannamaker testifies Before the Industrial Commission That They Are Beneficial.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Hon. John Wanamaker Saturday testified before the industrial commission on the subject of department stores. He claimed these stores were beneficial to society, having a substantial economic and moral basis for their existence.

"It is," he continued, 'a natural product evolved from conditions that exist as a result of fixed trade laws. Cheaper capital, better transportation, more rapid communication, make the modern retail store possible, natural and useful; therefore inevitable.

"Economy in the expenditure of money, time and effort measure department store success. Just in proportion as these ends are reached is it popular, powerful and prosperous."

He contended that the effect of the creation of these stores had been to reduce retail prices. In support of this statement he asserted that upon American dry goods generally the retailers' percentage of profits has been reduced one-half during the last 20 years. This was also true upon woolen, silk and cotton fabrics. The total per cent of reduction in price to the consumer could not be stated, owing to the varying standards of qualities and taste, and improvements in manufacture, but Mr. Wanamaker believed that the consumer saves the entire reduction in the retailers' profit. In some articles definite comparisons of prices were made. It could also be stated, he said, that the profits of the great retail stores vary from 3 to 6 per cent on the dollar of business done.

TAYLOR GETS IT.

His Certificate of Election Signed by Two Election Commissioners.

For the Time Being Is Ended One of the Most Bitterly Contested Gubernatorial Campaigns in the State.

Frankfort, Ky. Dec. 10.—At 9:45 Saturday morning the election certificate of William S. Taylor was signed by the election commissioners and he was declared to be the governor-elect of Kentucky.

The official figures of the vote filed with Secretary of State Finley are: Taylor, 193,714; Goebel, 191,331; Taylor's plurality, 2,383. The operation which ended, for the time being at least, the bitterly fought gubernatorial contest, was conducted in the simplest manner. The majority opinion of Commissioners Pryor and Ellis and the minority opinion of Commissioner Poyntz, which were published Saturday morning were not read, as was the original intention. The three commissioners walked first to the office of the clerk of the state supreme court, where they filed two opinions. They then passed into the office of the secretary of state. Clerk Chenault of the board of commissioners read the figures showing that the republican candidates for offices on the state ticket had received the largest number of votes and then certificates of election were signed at once, that of Mr. Taylor being first on the list. There were only 14 people in the room at the time, and of this number only two were there as idle spectators.

There was no crowd around the building and no interest manifested in the work save by those engaged in it and those who stood looking on.

The certificates as soon as signed were filed with the secretary of state and certificates will be issued to the elected men at once by Gov Bradley.

Late Friday night, when the decision had gone forth to the public, Commissioner Ellis, upon whose shoulders the greatest part of the work of preparing the opinion had fallen, discussed the matter freely.

"This has been a hard thing for me," he said, his eyes inflamed by loss of sleep and the heavy lines in his face bearing eloquent witness to the truth of his statement. 'It has been a hard thing for all of us. I wish, however, that all the people of the country knew how nobly Judge Pryor has acted in this matter, and how conscientiously he has done what he considered his duty. He is a great man, one of the greatest, in my opinion, that Kentucky has ever produced, and I am sure his conduct in this case has been another piece of his long and honorable career as a public officer. Speaking for myself," continued Mr. Ellis, "I say frankly I did not like to do this thing, but under the law and the evidence there is nothing else I can do, and be an honest man. Why, I was an original Goebel man. I was a Goebel man long before he received the nomination, and I am a Goebel man now. I can go beyond that and say I am a Goebel partisan. I have always been a partisan in politics, a rank partisan, and it would give me greater pleasure than I can express to be able to declare for the democrats in this thing, but I can't do it. The proceedings before the board were so overwhelmingly in favor of the republicans and they had so much the best of the arguments that it is almost idle to discuss the affair. There was, to the minds of Judge Pryor and myself, only one thing to do, and that we have done. I know there are plenty of men who think that, strong democratic partisan as I have always been, I should have remained a democratic partisan and voted otherwise. How can I do that? How can I commit such a rape on my reputation and conscience as that, viewed from the legal standpoint, which in things like this is the only standpoint, I have done what my conscience and my long career as a lawyer tell me is right, and I will do otherwise for no man nor upon any consideration."

The statements made by Mr. Ellis have been upheld by his conduct from first to last throughout the canvass. He did all of the questioning of the attorneys and seemed at every stage to be most anxious to obtain the truth impartial to both sides. Mr. Goebel was apparently in the best of humor after being told that Mr. Taylor's certificate had been signed.

Commissioner Poyntz declined to sign the republican certificates of election, saying that he stood by the opinion he had rendered, and could not consistently do so. He consented to sign the certificates of the railroad commissioners, however.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Bill Introduced in the House Giving a Territorial Form of Government to Hawaii.

Washington, Dec. 9.—Representative Hitt, of Illinois, Friday introduced a bill to provide a territorial form of government for Hawaii. It is similar to the measure reported to the house last year, providing a territorial governor appointed by the president and a legislature of two houses. Mr. Sherman, of New York, introduced a bill authorizing the postmaster general to contract with an American cable company to send official messages to Hawaii, the Philippines, Japan and China, for 20 years, at not to exceed $400,000 a year.

Other bills are: By Mr. Little (Ark.) to prevent monopolies and trusts and for the free coinage of gold and silver; by Mr. Kerr (O.), admitting veterans of the war with Spain to the homes for disabled soldiers; by Mr. Flynn (Okla.), for additional homestead lands to those who participated in the war with Spain or with the Philippines; by Mr. Corliss, for a bridge across the Detroit river at Detroit; by Mr. Hill, authorizing the establishment of national banks in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines; by Mr. McRae (Ark.), extending the contract labor law to Hawaii; by Mr. Rodenburg (Ill.), to create a commission to pass on claims of United States citizens.

Mr. Rodenburg (Ill.), by request, introduced bills granting right of cable connection with Cuba and Porto Rico to the United States and West India Direct Telegraph Co., and to authorize the West Indinn Development Co. to acquire franchises, etc., in Cuba and Porto Rico.

Mr. Corliss (Mich.) introduced a bill for the construction of a regulating dam at the foot of Lake Erie for controlling the level of the lake, Detroit river, Lake St. Clair and St. Clair river.

THAT "BULL PEN."

The Charges Growing Out of Presence of Federal Troops in the Idaho Mining Trouble Will Be Investigated.

Washington, Dec. 9.—Representative Lentz, of Ohio, Friday introduced a joint resolution reciting the charges growing out of the presence of United States troops, under Brig. Gen. Merriam, at the centers of mining troubles in Idaho, asking for an investigation by a special committee of nine members, to be appointed by the speaker. The resolution says that it is a matter of general information that United States troops were sent to Idaho in defiance and contrary to the federal constitution at the individual request of the governor when no riot or insurrection existed and without consulting the legislature or the local sheriff.

It is asserted that Gen. Merriam declared martial law and "arbitrarily and without warrant of law arrested hundreds of citizens," and held them under "most brutal and tyrannical conditions." The arrest, it is charged, include many members of the miners union and the local sheriff. It is asserted that many men were imprisoned in a "bull pen, a place unfit for human habitation." Allegation is made that one prisoner became insane from the treatment, and escaping, was shot as he jumped into a river. In another case, it is charged, a dying prisoner was denied spiritual consolation.

Specific acts of cruelty are given, including compulsory standing erect, for seven hours each day in the hot sun, under penalty of death, if attempt was made to move or sit down. It is also alleged that a captain under Gen. Merriam amused himself by calling prisoners "cowardly curs while these punishments were being inflicted." The resolution also recites that the wives and families of miners were insulted by soldiers, and it is alleged that responsibility for the various actions recited rests with the mining companies of the localities.

THE MESSAGE.

President McKinley Outlines Some of the Laws Which are Urgently Needed.

FILIPINOS MUST FIRST BE SUBDUED.

Does Not Deem It Advisable to Recommend a Form of Government Until That Time.

Legislation Asked for Porto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska—Development of Merchant Marine—Changes in Our Financial Laws Needed—Our Diplomatic Transactions—Against Trusts.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

At the threshold of your deliberations you are called upon to perform the solemn duty of the death of Vice President Hobart, who passed from this life on the morning of November 21 inst. His great record will rest in eternal peace. His private life was pure and elevated, while his public career was ever distinguished by large capacity, stainless fidelity and exalted motives. He has been removed from the high office which he honored and dignified, but the lofty character, his devotion to duty, his honesty of purpose and noble virtues remain with us as a priceless legacy and example.

The Fifty-sixth Congress convenes in its first regular session with the country in a condition of unusual prosperity, of universal good will among the people at home, and in relations of peace and friendship with every government of the world. Our foreign commerce has shown great increase in volume and value. The balance of trade and exports of the year are the largest ever shown in a single year in all our history. Our exports for 1899 alone exceeded by more than a billion dollars our imports and exports combined for 1878. The imports per capita are 20 per cent less than in 1870, while the exports per capita are 58 per cent more than in 1870, showing the enlarged capacity of the United States to satisfy the wants of its own increasing population as well as to contribute to those of the people of other nations.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE COUNTRY.

Government receipts from all sources for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1899, including $11,708,311.14 part payment of the Central Pacific Railroad indebtedness, aggregated $610,982,004.36. Customs receipts were $220,128,481.75, and those from internal revenue $295,327,168.62. The ordinary disbursements expenditures were $700,093,564.02, leaving a deficit of $89,111,559.67.

The Secretary of the Treasury estimates that the receipts for the current fiscal year will aggregate $640,958,112, and upon the basis of present appropriations the expenditures will aggregate $600,958,112, leaving a surplus of $40,000,000.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1899, the internal revenue receipts were increased about $100,000,000.

The present gratifying strength of the Treasury is shown by the fact that on December 1, 1899, the total cash in the Treasury was $278,001,837.72, of which $229,744,905.36 was in gold coin and bullion. The conditions of trade and the general activity throughout the country have brought gold into more general use, and customs receipts are now almost entirely paid in gold.

RECOMMENDS MAINTAINING EXISTING GOLD STANDARD.

I urgently recommend that, to support the existing gold standard and to maintain "the parity value of the coin of the two metals (gold and silver), and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the market and in the payment of debts," the Secretary of the Treasury be given additional power and authority, and that it be his duty to sell United States bonds and to employ such other effective means as may be necessary to these ends. The authority should include the power to sell bonds on long and short time, as conditions may require, and should provide for a rate of interest lower than that fixed by the act of January 14, 1875. While there is now no commercial freight which withdraws gold from the Government, but, on the contrary, such widespread confidence that gold seeks the Treasury, demanding paper currency in its place, I

RECOMMENDS DEVELOPMENT OF THE MERCHANT MARINE.

The value of an American merchant marine to the extension of our commercial trade and the strength and defense it adds upon the sea invites the immediate action of Congress. Our national development will be one-sided, and our growth impeded, as the remarkable growth of our inland industries remains unaccompanied by progress on the seas. There is no lack of legislation which shall give to the country maritime strength commensurate with its great industrial achievements and with its rank among the nations of the earth. We shall fail to realize our full opportunity in this if we conspicuously regard only matters at home, and blind ourselves to the necessity of securing our share in the valuable carrying trade of the world.

A CHAPTER ON THE TRUSTS.

Combinations of capital organized into trusts to control the conditions of trade among our citizens, to stifle competition, limit production and determine the prices of products used and consumed by the people, are justly provoking public discussion, and should early claim the attention of the Congress.

The subject is one giving rise to many divergent views as to the nature and variety of the evils and as to the best means of relief. The public which may result from large combinations concentrating under one management many plants and establishments which previously to the formation of the combination was conducted independently.

It is universally conceded that combinations which engross or control the market of any article necessary to the general use of a commodity, by suppressing natural and ordinary competition, so that prices may be unduly enhanced to the general consumer, are obnoxious not only to the common law, but also to the public welfare, and that there is a remedy for the evils involved in such organizations. If the present law can be strengthened more certainly to prevent the existence of these monopolies or trusts, it should be done without delay. Whether the power the Congress possesses over this most important subject should be promptly ascertained and asserted.

The prosecution by the United States of offenses under the act of 1890 has been frequently resorted to, and the principal and notable efforts in the restraint of interstate commerce, such as the Trans-Missouri Freight Association and the Joint Traffic Association, have been successfully opposed and suppressed.

The question is so important and far-reaching that I am sure no part of it will be lightly considered, but every phase of it will have the studied attention of the two Houses, resulting in wise and judicious action.

OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS.

A review of our relations with foreign states is presented, with such recommendations as are deemed appropriate.

The long pending boundary dispute between the Argentine Republic and Chile was settled in March last by the award of an arbitral commission, to which the United States Minister at Buenos Ayres served as umpire.

It is gratifying to be able to announce that the Belgian government has mitigated the restrictions on the transporting of rubber from the United States, to which I referred in my last annual message.

A convention of extradition with Brazil, signed May 14, 1897, has been ratified by the Brazilian Legislature.

The Nicaragua Canal Commission, which had been engaged upon the work of examination and survey for a ship canal route across Nicaragua, having completed its labors and made its report, was dissolved on May 31, and on June 10 a new commission, known as the Isthmian Canal Commission, was organized under the terms of the act approved March 3, 1899, for the purpose of examining the American Isthmus, with a view to determining the most practicable and feasible route for a ship canal across the isthmus, with its probable cost and other essential details.

The commission, under the presidency of Rear Admiral John G. Walker, U. S. N., entered promptly upon the work entrusted to it, and is now carrying on explorations in Nicaragua along the route of the Panama Canal, and in Darien from the Atlantic, in the neighborhood of the Atrato River, to the Bay of Panama, on the Pacific side. Good progress has been made, but under the law a comprehensive and complete investigation is required for, which will require much labor and considerable time for its accomplishment. The work will be prosecuted as expeditiously as practicable, and a report made at the earliest practicable date.

The great importance of this work can not be too often or too strongly pressed upon the attention of the Congress. In my message of a year ago I expressed my views of the necessity of a canal which would link the two great oceans, to which I again invite your consideration. The reasons then presented for early action are even stronger now.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

Preparations for the representation of the industries, arts and products of the United States at the World's Exposition to be held in Paris next year continue on an elaborate and comprehensive scale, thanks to the generous appropriation provided by Congress and to the friendly interest the French government has shown in furthering a typical exhibit of American progress.

Subject to the exchange of our peace treaty with Spain, Germany acquired the Caroline and Pelew islands by treaty, under for $5,000,000. Assurances have been received from the German government of the rights of American missionaries and traders there will be considerately observed.

PROGRESS IN ADJUSTING THE CANADIAN BOUNDARY DISPUTE.

In my last annual message I referred to the pending negotiations with Great Britain in respect to the Alaskan boundary, by means of an executive agreement a joint high commission has been created for the purpose of adjusting the various questions between the United States and Canada, embodying twelve subjects, among which were the definition of the rights of fur seals, fisheries of the coast and contiguous inland waters, the Alaskan boundary, the transit of merchandise in bond, the Behring Sea award, including rights, reciprocity in trade, revision of the agreement respecting naval vessels in the Great Lakes, the preservation and marking of parts of the boundary, provisions for the conveyance of criminals and for wrecking and salvage.

Much progress has been made by the commissioners in the discussion of the several of these questions. When it became apparent that an irreconcilable difference of views was developed touching the true interpretation of the Alaskan boundary, in the failure of an agreement as to the meaning of Articles I and II of the treaty of 1825 between Russia and Great Britain, an adjournment was taken until the boundary should be adjusted by the government. The subject is now under receiving the careful attention which its importance demands, with the prospect of modus vivendi for provisional demarkation in the region about the head of Lynn Canal has been agreed upon, and it is hoped that the negotiations now in progress between the two governments will end in an agreement for the final settlement and delimitation of a permanent boundary.

Apart from these questions, growing out of the negotiations, the failure to reach an agreement as to the meaning of Articles II and III of the treaty of 1871 between Russia and Great Britain, an adjournment was taken until the boundary should be adjusted by the government. The subject is now under receiving the careful attention which its importance demands, with the prospect of modus vivendi for provisional demarkation in the region about the head of Lynn Canal has been agreed upon, and it is hoped that the negotiations now in progress between the two governments will end in an agreement for the final settlement and delimitation of a permanent boundary.

Apart from these questions, growing out of the negotiations, the failure to reach an agreement as to the meaning of Articles II and III of the treaty of 1871 between the parties to the quarrel would have welcomed any kindly expression of the hope of the members of the people which it was averted, our good offices would have been gladly tendered. The United States represented at Pretoria was early instructed to see that all neutral American interests be respected by the British forces, and it has been an easy task in view of the positive declarations of both British and Boer authorities that the property and personal rights of our citizens should be observed.

The Japanese Government has shown a lively interest in the proposition of the Pacific Cable Company to lay a line of submarine cables to Hawaii, Guam and the Philippines, a branch connecting with the coast of Japan. It would be a gratifying consummation were the utility of the contemplated system promptly assured by the action of the United States into direct telegraphic relation. Without repeating the observations of my special message of January 10, 1898, concerning the necessity of a cable to Manila, I respectfully invite attention to it. The reasons which led me to favor the undertaking should not take measures to bring about this result by direction of the Government, but by private capital. I am instructed to invite competitive bids for the establishment of a cable; the company making the best responsible bid to be allowed a certain time to effect the successful compass to give ample bonds to secure the completion of the work within a reasonable time.

RUSSIA PROVES HER ADHERENCE TO ARBITRATION PRINCIPLE.

Claims growing out of the seizure of American sealing vessels during Behring Sea award, under discussion with Great Britain, by the happy result of an agreement to submit them to the decision of a single arbitrator. By this act Russia affords proof of her adherence to the principle of arbitration which her plenipotentiaries conspicuously favored at The Hague conference, and which, when it was incorporated by the representatives of the United States.

THE SETTLEMENT OF THE SAMOAN QUESTION.

A satisfactory arrangement was concluded between the governments of Germany and Great Britain, by virtue of which England retired from Samoa in view of the compensations in other directions, and both powers formally declared that they will not exercise or seek to exercise any control over the islands or their rights and claims over and in respect to that portion of the group lying to the east of the 171st degree of west longitude, embracing the islands of Tutuila, Ofuo, Olosenga and Manua.

AS TO THE INDEPENDENCE OF CUBA.

The annual message last year was necessarily devoted in great part to a consideration of the Spanish war and of the results it was hoped would flow therefrom in the future. I am gratified to announce that the treaty of peace has restored friendly relations between the two countries which has been given to its most important provisions, the evacuation of Puerto Rico having been accomplished on October 18 last.

The withdrawal from Cuba was effected by the first of January, so that the full control of the island, with the attendant responsibilities of government, since assumed by the United States, was transferred to the authorities of the republic of Cuba.

The treaty of peace with Spain was ratified by the Senate on February 6, 1899, and the insurrection in the island of Luzon, which had been precipitated by the ratification of the treaty of peace. The Cuban politician prisoners in Spanish penal establishments have been released and returned to their homes, and the Spanish government has given appropriate legislation in order to carry into execution Article 7 of the treaty of peace with Spain, by which the United States assumed the payment of certain claims for indemnity for its citizens against Spain.

In the adjustment and determination of our citizens remains unsatisfactory. One efforts during nearly forty years to bring about a final settlement of these claims have been unsuccessful, being rejected, or the awards reduced to the on the behalf of final failure through the annoyance of the Spanish Treasury. Many have been and are being released and returned to their families, encouraged by the assurance of the government of Mrs. Milton McGrew, who lives on the South Side, has a clock which has been in her possession for forty-eight years, and was never repaired but once in all that time, and is to-day an excellent timepiece. Another great curiosity in her possession is a rug which is fully half a century old, and to-day is about as good as new. —Frankfort Call.

The case of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, of Newark, N. J., against Mrs. Edmonia Tate Martin, appealed from the Franklin Circuit Court, was argued before the Court of Appeals and submitted for decision last Thursday. The case is one of considerable interest, because the appellee is a daughter of James W. Tate, Kentucky's defaulting State Treasurer, and the action was brought to recover on a policy for $5,000 on his life. The records on file in the court contain copies of all the letters that were received by the family of Tate since he left the State capital on March 16, 1884. The letters were written at Vancouver, B. C.; Tacoma, Washington Territory; San Francisco, Kobe and Hakokate, in Japan, and Shanghai, China. In nearly every one of the letters he speaks of his desire to return to his home and of his determination to do so after a certain time. The last letter received from him was written at San Francisco, on December 3, 1888. The friends of Tate paid the premiums on the policy on his life for seven years, or until 1895, when it was claimed that Tate was legally dead, and suit was brought to recover the face of the policy. Judgment for the full amount was given in the lower court. The insurance company appealed, on the ground that Section 1639 of the Kentucky Statutes, which provides the conditions upon which the death of a person will be presumed after seven successive years, does not apply in the case of a fugitive from justice.

Just Saved His Life.

It was a thrilling escape that Charles Davis, of Bowerstown, Ohio, lately had from a frightful death. For two years a severe lung trouble constantly grew worse until it seemed he must die of consumption. Then he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and late wrote: "It gave instant relief and effected a permanent cure." Such wonderful cures have for 25 years, proven it's power to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, M. J. Crouch's, Union, and J. G. Oelsner's, Florence.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier.]

Quite a sensation dropped into the town of Dry Ridge Wednesday when it became known that overdrafts to the amount of $15,000 were on the books of the local bank and more than $14,000 had been paid out to one man, when he had no money in the bank and put up no security. Mr. Clarence C. Evans, the late cashier, died a week or two ago and Mr. Leslie Gaugh, of this place, was elected in his place. An expert from Cincinnati was called in to examine the books and the overdraft of course came to light. The largest overdraft is that of Mr. A. Carter, of Dry Ridge, who was and is one of the directors of the bank. He owes the bank according to the experts figures, $14,450 without security of any kind; as his property, which is mostly of real estate, is largely encumbered, his ability to pay that kind of a debt is an impossibility and either the bank or the bondsmen of Mr. Evans will have to lose the amount.

Mr. Evans, the late young man, was a man of splendid character and there is no suspicion that he got any part of the money. He left a small personal estate and an insurance policy of $2,500, all of which will be liable for the overdrafts. His father, Joe C. Evans, is administrator and in the absence of any debts would have inherited his estate under our Kentucky laws.

The Peoples Bank was organized in 1893, and has a capital stock of $25,000 all paid in. J. B. Renaker, supposed to be the richest man in Grant county, is the bank's president. The directors at the last statement were A. Carter, J. B. Renaker J. N. Lemmon, John Conrad, C. Daly, Nick Webeter, William Conrad, Jo Carter and Joshua Grewell. The bank has been making small dividends all the time and to all appearances was getting along nicely.

The bondsmen of the late cashier are Joe C. Evans, G. Y. Evans, Jno. Layle, J. W. Chipman, P. G. Harrison and C. W. Barnes, they will be called on to pay the overdrafts as soon as the amounts are ascertained.

For Mr. Layle that is quite a hardship as it makes two cashier's bonds he has had to pay in the last few years. He paid $4,000 on the bond to the Grant County Deposit Bank some few years ago.

The men in the Peoples Bank are rich and they have the means to push the bank right along if they desire to do so and no doubt will put more capital and run the bank right along.

Regular Term Boone County Court December 4th, 1899.

Hon. C. C. Roberts, Judge presiding.

On written application by petition presented to the Judge of the county court of this county on November 6th, 1899, filed and made part of the county court records, which petition was signed by a number of legal voters in the Burlington voting precinct, Boone county, Kentucky, equal to and greater than twenty five per cent. of the votes cast in said precinct at the last preceding general election, which petition asks the County Court to open a poll in said Burlington voting precinct, on Saturday, January 20th, 1900, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in said Burlington voting precinct, upon the proposition as to whether or not the prohibition law now in force in said precinct commonly called and known as the local option law which prohibits the sale, barter or loan of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in said Burlington voting precinct shall become inoperative. The petitioners having deposited with the County Judge money sufficient to to pay for printing, etc., as the law requires, and the court being advised, It is therefore ordered by the court that the Sheriff of this county open a poll in the Burlington voting precinct in Boone County, Ky., on Saturday, January 20th, 1900, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in said district upon the proposition as to whether or not the prohibition law now in force in the Burlington voting precinct shall become inoperative.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1899. NO. 9

A MERRY Christmas to you!

THERE are said to be no fewer than 800 millionaires in New York.

OOMIE is proving a tougher proposition than John Bull anticipated.

ONLY a short time now until Kentucky will have a Legislature on her hands again.

THE new currency bill passed the Lower House of Congress, Monday, by a vote of 190 to 150.

MR. BLACKBURN says he is willing to rise or fall with his party—let the contest go on, says he.

HOPKINSVILLE is asking Congress to make her an appropriation of $50,000 for a public building.

LEGISLATION against trusts is not coming to the front in Congress. A national campaign is close at hand, eh!

CINCINNATI wants the next National Democratic Convention, and is now putting herself in shape to be a strong favorite as the location.

IT is reported from Louisville that Ex-Governor Bradley says he will not be a candidate before the General Assembly for United States Senator.

THE RECORDER will appear as usual, next week, unless something unforeseen overtakes it. Things of that kind do happen sometimes during the holidays.

WHEN a thief starts out to steal anything he does not call on the honest men of a community to assist him. He does not take any chance with that class of people.

UNDER the log cabin is a bad place for Democrats to take political refuge. They invariably get sat upon, as W. C. P. Breckinridge and W. C. Owens will each testify.

THE RECORDER hopes each and every one of its subscribers will have a fat turkey for dinner Monday, and that each one will have a genuine holiday appetite with which to enjoy it.

ON the first of next month 950 employes of the eastern division of the Pennsylvania railroad will be retired and pensioned. This is a new plan that is being inaugurated by that road.

THE Produce Exchange Trust Company, of New York, closed its doors Monday. Its $11,719,500 of assets include $4,423,500 of syndicate loans. Liabilities are stated at $11,649,000.

THE Republicans will hold their National Convention at Philadelphia on the 19th day of next June, at which time McKinley will be renominated by acclamation. Mark the prediction.

THE Boers make a specialty of killing English officers when in battle, and there success in this particular will soon have the English commanders afraid to wear any distinguishing marks.

GOV. TAYLOR has already provoked the wrath of some of the leading Republicans at Lexington by granting a pardon to which they were opposed. Gov. Bradley refused the pardon, and his Lexington friends think Taylor should have sustained his action.

FRANCE has refused to furnish England any gold, which she needs badly in the prosecution of her war in South Africa, and the action of France in this matter is interpreted by many as meaning she is only awaiting an opportunity to take sides with the Boers.

THE Boers seem to have the English going in South Africa. Germany is evidently pleased with the success of the Boers and is only awaiting an excuse for taking sides against England. The trouble that England now has on her hands is a good thing for outsiders to keep clear of.

AT a meeting of the Democratic State Central, Executive and Campaign Committees held in Frankfort, last Thursday, it was decided, unanimously, that the Democratic candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor should contest the election of their opponents before the Legislature, and a contest it will be.

HEAR that some fellow at London, Ky., has been awarded the contract for carrying the mail from Burlington to Erlanger for four years, beginning next July, at $370 per year. The mail cannot be carried for that amount. The same contractor gets the Union and Florence route for $135 per year. These bids mean poor service.

HON. TIM NEEDHAM has purchased a half interest in the Williamstown Courier, the most prosperous county paper in this part of the State. It is supposed that editor Westover has disposed of that portion of his paper in order to be able to devote his time to the race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district.

GENERAL LAWTON was killed at the head of his command in the Philippines, a few days ago. He was about ready to start in pursuit of band of insurgents, when one of their sharp-shooters picked him off. Gen. Lawton was one of the best and most fearless commanders in the service of this country. He distinguished himself for bravery in Cuba.

John Lattimer and his younger brother were hunting. They saw a squirrel in a tree, and the younger boy climbed the tree to scare the squirrel around so that the older boy could shoot it. The squirrel ran around and the older Lattimer boy shot at it. The charge struck the boy in the tree and it is believed he will die. Says a dispatch from Williamstown.

JUDGE DAUGHERTY, of Nelson county, holds that the Governor has no right to appoint a Justice of the Peace to fill a vacancy, that authority being vested in the County Judge, and he refuses to allow an appointee of Gov. Bradley to qualify, and the matter will, no doubt, be taken through the courts. The appointee will endeavor to break into the Nelson County Fiscal Court by way of the new, popular mandamus route.

JUNE GAYLE was elected, Monday, in the Seventh District to fill the vacant seat in Congress, occasioned by the death of Hon. E. E. Settle. Gayle's majority over Owens, who ran under the Log Cabin, is about 4,000. Bourbon county, where Owens was raised, and Scott county, in which he has made his home for many years, each gave an increased majority against him. Owens carried only one of the eight counties in the district, Fayette, and that by a very small majority.

ELEVEN of the Democratic members of the House voted for the gold standard currency bill which passed that body Monday. They were Represenatives B. T. Clayton, E. H. Driggs, J. J. Fitzgerald, Jefferson Levy, Jacob Ruppert, jr., Townsend Scudder, J. Q. Underhill and F. E. Wilson, of New York; William McAleer, of Pennsylvania; J. W. Denny, of Maryland, and J. R. Thayer, of Massachusetts. Governor-elect Smith, of Maryland, refused to vote either way. As an illustration of party team work every Republican in the House voted for the bill or was paired with some Democrat who would have voted against it if present.

Two classes of guesses on the recent election were eminently correct. One was those persons who said John Young Brown would not carry a precinct in the State; the other was those who said Goebel would get the largest vote ever cast for a Democratic candidate for Governor in Kentucky. Brown did not carry a precinct in the State, and here is the way Goebel's vote compares with the three preceding Democratic candidates for Governor. He received 27,807 votes more than were cast for P. Wat Hardin in 1895; 47,163 more than were cast for John Young Brown in 1891, and 46,712 more than were cast for Simon Bolivar Buckner in 1887. This does not indicate that he was such a terribly weak candidate with the masses.

Editorial Paragraphs.

For weeks the press of the McKinleyites has been filled with speculation relative to the whereabouts of Aguinaldo and descriptions of the glorious work of the Army in the northern part of Luzon. Now comes the statement that Aguinaldo is making for Cavite, in the south of the island and that the insurgent forces there are larger and stronger than ever. What a deceitful rascal somebody is.

After a careful tabulating of all the resolutions and speeches of the junior Senator from Illinois, we are compelled to acknowledge that the President and his Cabinet are about the only persons in the world who are being left to shift for themselves without the protecting sympathy and counsel of the Hon. Billy Mason.

As yet Hon. Billy Mason has refrained from expressing any sympathy with the victims of the trust octopus, and the friends of anti-monopoly legislation are holding their breath in the hope that his attention may be distracted long enough to get their plan under cover before Billy get his lachrymals directed that way.

That return of William M. Stewart to the Republican fold should be viewed with apprehension by the Republicans of the Senate. It will be remembered that Troy was captured through the wooden horse which the Greek foisted upon the Trojans. Mr. Stewart is considerable of an old horse himself.

Four days are to be required to debate the currency bill in the House which the Republican leaders have decided must pass in order that the party may win next year. Why not clip off the debate and thus omit a large part of hypocrisy that will necessarily follow the talking?

The Bank of France and the Bank of England have raised their rates of interest and Mr. McKinley advocates greater money making privileges for banks in the United States. Evidently this is not a bad year for the money power the world over.

As the struggle in South Africa continues, and the Boers keep up their annexing of territory, the fair-minded observer is compelled to admit that the struggle is nothing more or less than a contest for South Africa supremacy between Boer and Briton.

Washington will take on the hues of the rainbow about the time the Hon. Tim Woodruff, of New York, and his gorgeous associates arrive to plead with McKinley for second place at the Republican funeral next year.

Having expurgated Roberts in their mind's eye, the immaculate Republican majority might now tackle the projected Hanna-Payn ship subsidy steal.

It is to be hoped that Congress will not let its solicitude about Mr. Roberts obscure the necessity for selecting a harem keeper for the Sultan of Sulu.

No doubt Aguinaldo is filled with scorn for those ardent antis who have permitted the Roberts case to obscure his sprinting for the last few days.

Although Mr. Reed is practicing law in New York, his rules are still doing business at the old stand on Capitol Hill, Washington.

How does a Republican like the charge made by the Dispatch, that Kentucky's electoral vote was fraudulently counted for McKinley in 1896? And that was why the Dispatch demanded, and pleaded, for the passage of the Goebel election law at the session of the Legislature following the Presidential election.

THE Jefferson Democratic Club of Covington took umbrage at what Col. Berry said in Congress, a few days ago, about the Kentucky election.

Fine weather, this.

The Closing Year On the Farm.

[Home and Farm.]

In many sections of this country there have been severe local disasters; floods, drouth or other disturbances that have greatly reduced the rewards of the year's toil. But taking the South as a whole, we find that the increase in the price of cotton has far more than offset the reduction of the quantity produced, and consequently the purchasing power of the Southern farmer has greatly increased.

We have no doubt every farmer will know where to invest this additional capital to the very best advantage. The farm will always remain the chief support of the American people. American agriculture is progressive agriculture, because the American farmer is an observant, self-reliant, industrious man, who looks to himself and to his farm for the support of his family.

What vast changes have taken place in the American farmer in the closing century; what vast changes wait for the coming century.

There are times when the American farmer believes that he has not received his share of the world's increase in wealth; indeed he does not think he ever will receive all that he is entitled to. Nevertheless, it is well to compare at times his condition with the condition of his forefathers, and so measure the advance.

Invention has worked in two directions. First, labor has been scarce and land abundant; therefore the inventor has sought to make the labor of one man equal the labor of fifty.

That has been the work of the past century. It has brought us now to another chapter in American agriculture, when science and invention must co-operate in an effort to make one acre produce under a system of intensive agriculture as much as ten acres have done in the past.

Improved agriculture has increased the yield per acre of wheat, for instance. The drill and the plow and the harvester and thresher have served to increase the product per man, and also the product per acre. All wheat growers realize that the drill reduces the amount required for seed; reduces the risk of ruin from cold winds and frosts, and has also increased the yield. It is only one illustration of what the inventor has done for the farmer.

The result is, looking at the matter as a whole, that with lightened labor the farmer can secure more of the comforts of life. For illustration, the vast improvement in ready-made clothing for men and boys has done much to save the strength of the women of the household. The sewing machine and other household implements and utensils do much to lessen the heavy task that in the past overtaxed the strength of the farmer's wife.

If one be disposed to question these statements let him ask some grandmother what work her mother did on the farm and he will realize how great the change for the better.

The future will depend as the past has done—on the spirit with which a man works. Farm life forces a man on himself, and a lonely man is apt to be first a reticent man and later on a morose man. Farm life should, therefore, have a more social character. The best change the next century can bring is the breaking down of the isolation of farm life. Farmers now meet at church on Sunday and at the store sometimes on Saturday. Both are good, but they are not enough, and they do not bring enough of joyousness into farm life.

The extension of electric roads from towns and villages, the extension of the telephone from farm to farm; the free delivery of mail to farm districts, and the improvement of the country roads all serve to promote social intercourse, and this will give new charm to farm life.

Farmers must learn to take pleasure in the passing year; in the plowing and planting as well as in the harvest. He must take his pleasure as he pays off his debts—little by little—and not wait until he is worn out and free from care. The voice of the Gospel is the voice of wisdom: "Now"—now is the accepted time; now is the accepted day of salvation. It is as true of care and apprehension as it is true of salvation from sin.

All that science and invention can do to ameliorate the conditions of life on the farm will be done in vain unless a man will bring to his labor a cheerful spirit and a self-reliant character.

UNION, KY., Dec. 9th, 1899.

Reclining in the easiest, handsomest and most complete combination chair that I have ever seen, I will now christen the writing desk attachment by penning a few lines for the RECORDER; and thus publicly acknowledge the receipt of this useful and ornamental piece of furniture as a gift from a host of my Bellevue friends.

Eight years ago last month, in answer to a call from Bellevue Baptist Church, wife and I moved from Florence, and were domiciled in the "Parsonage" at Bellevue. I soon found that an invisible bond had bound me to the people of the church and community. As time rolled on, bringing varied experiences of labor and sorrow on the one hand and reaping time with joy and bliss on the other, I found that with each succeeding year that bond of love and esteem was growing stronger and stronger, until at last, the sentiment pervading my breast was like that expressed by Ruth toward Naomi.

Soon after this climax of feeling came over me, my health failed, rendering me unable to perform my regular work. My church promptly granted me an indefinite vacation in which to recuperate, and all through the past years have paid me my salary as though I was laboring regularly and efficiently for them. Month after month have I waited for a restoration of my health, but today I am no better than I was a year ago.

On account of my inability to do further service, I have tendered my resignation as Pastor of Bellevue and Sand Run churches, and have moved to the farm, still hoping to regain my health. In taking leave of these dear people I carry with me the fondest recollections and friendship for all. Do I flatter myself when I say that I also carry with me the sympathy, love and esteem of a host of brethren, sisters and friends? No. The many kindnesses which we have received in the past, not only from the church, but from a multitude of friends, who are not members of our church, convinced us of the sincerity of the friendship bestowed. This fact was further attested when, on yesterday, our dear friends, Chas. H. Acra and Tony Rue, came driving in and presented to me, in the name of about 120 donors the handsome gift mentioned above. In receiving it I will simply say that I appreciate it, not alone for its intrinsic value and usefulness, but above all as a token of confidence and esteem on the part of all its donors.

In giving up Bellevue and Sand Run churches, I do it to make room for a worthy successor. Happy is the man who succeeds me. For better christians and truer friends can be found nowhere than in the two fields; and some of the kindest and most selfsacrificing neighbors that I have ever known, we have left at Bellevue.

May the same Providence that separated us from all these we love, send to them a more worthy servant than I, and may heaven's richest blessing rest upon one and all is the prayer of their feeble servant,

T. L. UTZ.

Money would not buy this stone, which is no larger than a hen's egg and looks like alum.

KENTUCY CROP REOORT

Condition of Crops and Live Stock Dec. 1st, 1899.

Replies were received this month from 142 correspondents representing 102 counties.

WHEAT.

The favorable weather of November has advanced the condition of wheat from 97 on November 1st to 104 on December 1st. These estimates are exclusive of the counties composing the southern section where little attention is given to wheat growing. The average condition for the western section is 105, for the central 102. The improvement is most marked in those counties reporting an average or below average condition last month. Very few counties where the condition was phenomenally high in last report show an increase in condition.

The earliest wheat is generally infested with fly, the damage in some instances amounting to total loss. This, however, will have little effect on acreage, as re-sowing has been the rule. It is estimated that 13 per cent. of the acreage in the central section is damaged by fly or other insects, while in the western section but 8 per cent. of the acreage is effected.

The growth of the plant, where free from insect pests, is very rank, and grazing is being resorted to to prevent it reaching a stage where damage by freezing is likely to result.

In summing up the prospects we feel justified in saying that notwithstanding the injury from insects the State has seldom presented, in one crop, so many conditions which presage a large yield. The acreage is considerably above an average, the plant is well rooted and prepared to withstand the vicissitudes of the approaching winter; the physical condition of the soil is the best, and this, with the long drouth of the past summer, renders available those elements of plant food which are ordinarily locked up beyond its reach.

CORN.

The corn crop is housed in good condition so far as concerns damage since the crop has matured. The general tenor of reports is that the yield is disappointing, and we are of the opinion that the moderate estimate of 21.4 as the average yield, made October 1st, is to high.

Much complaint is also made on score of quality. "Light and chaffy" "loose on cob" and containing an unusual amount of small corn," being the term most frequently used in speaking of quality. The quality compared with average years is 70 per cent. The average price is 37c per bushel. On December 1st, 1898, the price was 28 cents.

LIVE STOCK.

Notwithstanding the advanced season pastures have revived wonderfully since the breaking up of the drouth. The effect is shown in an improved condition of live stock. Until at this time very nearly an average condition is presented. The average for the various classes is as follows: Horses, 96; cattle, 94; hogs, 92; sheep, 95. Both feeding and stock hogs continue scarce, except in those counties containing a large acreage of forest. Here the abundant "mast" is supplementing the corn crop to such an extent that the number is on the increase rather than otherwise, and are being subsisted on this product alone. It is also true that practically all reports of hog cholera come from these otherwise favored sections.

The very favorable season for fall plowing has been improved, and much of this work which would come next spring is being done. Farmers generally have their work well in hand, and while crops have been below rather than above the average in yield there is still, to an unusual extent, a feeling of satisfaction with past results and confidence in the agricultural prosperity of the future.

This issue concludes the monthly crop report of this year and of my term. I desire to thank correspondents not only for their faithfulness during the past year, but also during the four years of our joint labors. I bespeak for my successor the same promptness and efficiency with which you have served me.

PILLARS OF SMOKE

The Divine Symbol That Typifies God's Power and Mercy.

Dr. Talmage Speaks of the Trials Through Which Truth Has Triumphantly Struggled — Martyrs to Faith.

(Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.)

The trials through which the truth has struggled are by Dr. Talmage here set forth under a Bible symbol of great suggestiveness and power, text, Solomon's Song 3:6: "Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke?"

The architecture of the smoke is wondrous, whether God with His finger curves it into a cloud, or rounds it into a dome, or points it in a spire, or spreads it in a wing, or, as in the text, hoists it in a pillar. Watch it winding up from the country farmhouse in the early morning, showing that the pastoral industries have begun, or see it ascending from the chimneys of the city, telling of the homes fed, the factories turning out valuable fabrics, the printing presses preparing book and newspaper, and all the ten thousand wheels at work in motion. On a clear day this vapor spoken of mounts with such buoyancy and spreads such a delicate veil across the sky and traces such graceful lines of circle and semicircle and waves and tosses and sinks and soars and scatters with such affluence of shape and color and suggestiveness that if you have never noticed it you are like a man who has all his life lived in Paris and yet never seen the Luxembourg, or all his life in Rome and never seen the vatican, or all his life at Lockport and never seen Niagara. Forty-four times the Bible speaks of the smoke, and it is about time that somebody preached a sermon recognizing this strange, weird, beautiful, elastic, charming, terrific and fascinating vapor. Across the Bible sky floats the smoke of Sinai, the smoke of Sodom, the smoke of Ai, the smoke of the pit, the smoke of the volcanic hills when God touches them, and in my text the glorious church of God coming up out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke.

In the first place, these pillars of smoke in my text indicate the suffering the church of God has endured. What do I mean by the church? I mean not a building, not a sect, but those who in all ages and all lands and of all beliefs love God and are trying to do right. For many centuries the Heavens have been black with the smoke of martyrdom. If set side by side, you could girdle the earth with the fires of persecution—Rowland Taylor, burned at Hadleigh; Latimer, burned at Oxford; John Rogers, burned at Smithfield; John Hooper, burned at Gloucester; John Huss, burned at Constance; Lawrence Saunders, burned at Coventry; Joan of Arc, burned at Rouen.

Protestants have represented Catholics as having a monopoly of persecutors, but both Protestant and Catholic have practiced cruelties. The Catholics during the reign of Hunneric were by Protestants put to the worst tortures, stripped of their clothing, hoisted in the air by pulleys with weights suspended from their feet, then let down, and ears and eyes, and nose and tongue were amputated, and red hot plates of iron were put against the tenderest part of their bodies.

George Bancroft, the historian, says of the state of Maryland: "In the land which Catholics had opened to Protestants mass might not be said publicly, no Catholic priest or bishop might utter his faith in a voice of persuasion, no Catholic might teach the young. If a wayward child of a papist would but become an apostate, the law wrested for him from his parents a share of their property. Such were the methods adopted to prevent the growth of popery."

Catholicism as well as Protestantism has had its martyrs. It does seem as if when any one sect got complete dominancy in any land the devil of persecution and cruelty took possession of that sect. Then see the Catholics after the Huguenots. See the Gentiles after the Jews in Touraine, where a great pit was dug and fire lighted at the bottom of the pit, and 160 Jewish victims were consumed. See the Presbyterian parliament of England, more tyrannical in their treatment of opponents than had been the criminal courts. Persecution against the Baptists by Paedo-Baptists. Persecution of the Established church against the Methodist church. Persecution against the Presbyterians. Under Emperor Diocletian 144,000 Christians were massacred, and 700,000 more of them died from banishment and exposure.

Witness the sufferings of the Waldenses, of the Albigenses, of the Nestorians. Witness St. Bartholomew's massacre. Witness the duke of Alva driving out of life 18,000 Christians. Witness Herod and Nero and Decius and Hildebrand and Torquemada and earl of Montford and Lord Claverhouse, who, when told that he must give account for his cruelties, said: "I have no need to account to man, and, as for God, I will take Him in my own hands." A red line runs through the church history of 1,900 years, a line of blood. Not by hundreds of thousands, but by millions must we count those slain for Christ's sake. No wonder John Milton put the groans of the martyrs to an immortal tune, writing:

Avenge, O Lord, thy slaughtered saints, whose bones
Lie scattered on the Alpine mountains cold

The smoke of martyrs' homes and martyrs bodies if rolling up all at once would have eclipsed the noonday sun and turned the brightest day the world ever saw into a midnight. "Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke?"

Has persecution ceased? Ask that young man who is trying to be a Christian in a store or factory, where from morning to night he is the butt of all the mean witticisms of unbelieving employes. Ask that wife whose husband makes her fondness for the house of God and even her kneeling prayer by the bedside a derision and is no more fit for her holy companionship than a filthy crow would be a fit companion for a robin or a golden oriole. Compromise with the world and surrender to its conventionalities, and it may let you alone, but all who will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer. Be a theater-going, theater-going, card-playing, wine-drinking, round-dancing Christian, and you may escape criticism and social pressure. Be an up-and-down, out-and-out follower of Christ, and worldling will wink to worldling as he speaks your name, and you will be put in many a doggerel and snubbed by those not worthy to blacken your oldest shoes. When the bridge at Ashtabula broke and let down the most of the carload of passengers to instant death, Mr. P. P. Bliss was seated on one side of the aisle of the car writing down a Christian song which he was composing, and on the other side a group of men were playing cards. Whose landing place in eternity would you prefer—that of P. P. Bliss, the Gospel singer, or of the card players?

A great complaint comes from the theaters about the ladies' high hats, because they obstruct the view of the stage, and a lady reporter asked me what I thought about it, and I told her that if the indecent pictures of actresses in the show windows were accurate pictures of what goes on in many of the theaters night by night then it would be well if the ladies' hats were a mile high, so as to completely obstruct the vision. If professed Christians go to such places during the week, no one will ever persecute them for their religion, for they have none, and they are the joke of hell. But let them live a consecrated and Christian life, and they will soon run against sneering opposition.

Meet me at any depot the world over, and with my eyes closed take me by the hand and lead me so that my feet will not stumble, and without my once looking down or looking on the level take me to some high roof or tower and let me see the tops of the churches, and I will tell you the proportion of suicides, of arsons, of murders, of thefts. According as the churches are numerous are the crimes few. According as the churches are few the crimes are numerous. The most beautiful organization the world ever saw or ever will see is the much-maligned church, the friend of all good, the foe of all evil, "fair as the moon and clear as the sun." Beautiful in her Author, beautiful in her mission, the heroine of the centuries, the bride of Christ, the queen of the nations!

Men may desecrate it, as Cromwell when he stabled his cavalry horses in St. Paul's cathedral; or break off the image of Christ, as did the iconoclasts in York minster; or hurl against it unjust literary antipathies, as did Gibbon; or plot its overthrow, as do some in every community whose pride and hate and debauchery are reproved by the Ten Commandments which it thunders and the sermon on the mount which it breathes. But it will stand as long as the earth stands, the same unique and wonder-working and beatific and miraculous thing for which God decreed it. Small wits tax their brain to say things that will put her at disadvantage, but many of them will send for its condolence when dying, and their children will be gathered up under its benedictions after the parental curse has been removed. Through her gates will march all the influences for good that shall ever reach our world. Take her membership as a mass, not speaking of the acknowledged exceptions, they are the noblest, grandest, kindest, best men and women of the ages. But for them the earth would long ago have been a burned out volcano. They have been the salt that has kept the human race from putrefaction insufferable either to human or angelic olfactories.

The church of God will yet become the arbiter of nations. If the world would allow it, it could to-day step in between Germany and France and settle the trouble about Alsace and Lorraine, and between England and her antagonists, and between all the other nations that are flying at each other's throats and command peace and disband armies and harness for the plow the war horses now being hitched to ammunition wagons or saddled for cavalry charge. That time must come, or through the increased facility for shooting men and blowing up cities and whelming hosts to instant death, so that we can kill a regiment easier than we could once kill a company, and kill a brigade easier than we could once kill a regiment, the patent offices of the world more busy than ever in recognizing new enginery of destruction, the human race will after awhile go fighting with one arm, and hobbling with one foot, and stumbling along with one eye, and some ingenious inventor, inspired of the archangel of all mischief, will contrive a machine that will bore a hole to the earth's center, and some desperate nation will throw into that hole enough dynamite to blow this bulk of a planet into fragments, dropping the meteoric stones on surrounding stellar habitations.

But this shall not be, for whatever I let go I hang onto my Bible, which tells me that the blacksmith's shop shall yet come to its greatest use when the warrior and the husbandman shall enter it side by side, and the soldier shall throw into its bank of fires his sword, and the farmer shall pick it up a plowshare, and the straightest spear shall be bent into a crook at each end and then cut in two, and what was one spear shall be two pruning hooks. Down with Moloch and up with Christ! Let no more war horses eat out of the manger where Jesus was born.

Peace! Forever roll off the sky the black pillars of smoke from the Marengos and Salamancas and Borodinos and Sedans and Gettysburgs of earth! And right after them roll into the heavens the peaceful vapors from the chimneys of farmhouses and asylums and churches and capitals of Christian nations, and, as the sunlight strikes through these vapors, they will write in letters of jet and gold all over the sky, from horizon to zenith: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men!"

While thinking of these things I looked out from my window, and the wind was violently blowing. And I saw from many chimneys the smoke tossed in the air and whirled in great velocity, volume after volume, fold after fold, and emried on the swift wind were the great pillars of smoke. And, helped by Solomon in the text, I saw the speed of the church symbolized. Do you realize the momentum the church of God is under? Why, the smoke of a chimney on the top of Mount Washington, when the wind is blowing 60 miles the hour, is slow as compared with the celerity of good influences. For 50 centuries the devil had it his own way among the nations. Nearly all the great missionary movements have been started within the century, and see what one century has done to recover the world from 59 centuries of devastation. What great revivals! What mighty churches! What saved millions!

From the ruins of Babylon and Assyria and Nineveh and the valleys of the Nile confirmations have been exhumed proving to all fair-minded men that the Bible is the truest book ever written. The mythologies of Egypt were found to have embodied in them the knowledge of man's expulsion from paradise and the sacrifice of a great Emmeinpitor. Moses' account of the creation, corroborated by the hammer of Christian geologists; the oldest profane writers, Hiromus, Helanicus and Berosus, confirming the Bible account of ancient longevity; Tacitus and Pliny confirming the Bible accounts of destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah; Tacitus and Porphyry telling the same story of Christ as Matthew and Luke told; Macrobius telling of the massacre of children in Bethlehem, and Phlegon sketching at the crucifixion

It is demonstrated to all honest men that it is not so certain that William Cullen Bryant wrote "Thanatopsis" or Longfellow wrote "Hiawatha" as that God, by the hand of prophet and apostle, wrote the Bible. All the wise men in science and law and medicine and literature and merchandise are gradually coming to believe in Christianity, and soon there will be no people who disbelieve in it except those conspicuous for lack of brain or men with two families, who do not like the Bible because it rebukes their swinish propensities.

The time is hastening when there will be no infidels left except libertines and harlots and murderers. Millions of Christians where once there were thousands, and thousands where once there were hundreds. What a bright evening this, the evening of the nineteenth century! And the twentieth century, which is about to dawn, will, in my opinion, bring universal victory for Christ and the church that now is marching on with step double quick or, if you prefer the figure of the text, is being swept on in the mighty gales of blessing imposing and grand and majestic and swift like pillars of smoke.

Oh, come into the church through Christ the door, a door more glorious than that of the temple of Hercules, which had two pillars, and one was gold and the other emerald! Come in to-day! The world you leave behind is a poor world, and it will burn and pass off like pillars of smoke. Whether the final conflagration will start in the coal mines of Pennsylvania, which, in some places, have for many years been burning and eating into the heart of the mountains, or whether it shall begin near the California geysers or whether from out the furnaces of Cotopaxi and Vesuvius and Stromboli it shall burst forth upon the astonished nations I make no prophecy, but all geologists tell us that we stand on the lid of a world, the heart of which is a raging, roaring, awful flame, and some day God will let the red monsters out of their imprisonment of centuries, and New York, on the 1835, and Charleston on fire in 1865, and Chicago on fire in 1872, and Boston on fire in 1873 were only like one spark from a blacksmith's forge as compared with that last universal blaze which will be seen in other worlds. But gradually the flames will lessen, and the world will become a great living coal, and that will take on ashen hue, and then our ruined planet will begin to smoke, and the mountains will smoke, and the valleys will smoke, and the islands will smoke, and the seas will smoke, and the cities will smoke, and the five continents will be five pillars of smoke. But the black vapors will begin to lessen in height and density and then will become hardly visible to those who look upon it from the sky galleries, and after awhile from just one point there will curl up a thin, solitary vapor, and then even that will vanish, and there will be nothing left except the charred ruins of a burned out world, the corpse of a dead star, the ashes of an extinguished planet, a fallen pillar of smoke.

But, that will not interfere with your investments if you have taken Christ as your Saviour. Secure Heaven as your eternal home, and you can look down upon a dismantled, disrupted and demolished earth without any perturbation.

When wrapped in fire the realms of ether glow,
And Heaven's last thunders shake the earth below,
Thou, undismayed, shalt o'er the ruins smile
And light the torch at Nature's funeral pile.

WHERE IS WILLIAM?

The Administration Wizard Is Not Attending Strictly to His Business.

It behooves the big medicine man in the white house to begin hammering his gong and thus scare away the evil spirits who are playing the dickens with stocks and grain. A prosperity-maker can't afford to take even a day off. He must keep the wheels whizzing without a moment's respite or he is likely to share the fate of a Papuan idol, which is worshiped and admired during prosperous times, but which is incontinently pulled from its pedestal and kicked out of doors the moment misfortunes begin to arrive. A loss must keep up his reputation or get into trouble. The Canton wonder worker must get down to business.

Since the 4th day of March, 1897, we have been assured that good crops in Dakota and poor crops in India, rain in the United States and drought in Russia were solely attributable to the thaumaturgic powers of the inspired one in the white house. "Look at the harvests!" we were told. "Did you ever see anything like them under a democratic administration? Look at the prosperity that is fairly breaking out like a rash over all this broad land! Do you doubt any longer that William is indeed the legitimate successor of Moses—that he will lead you into land flowing with milk and honey?"

And if anyone ventured to intimate that a large proportion of the population was not enjoying milk and honey three times a day the answer always came: "Why, you ungrateful scoundrel, look at Wall street! Look at the price of stocks! Can't you get along without milk and honey so long as you see that stocks are booming? Don't talk about your pitiful necessities when you can take a look at the stock list and see that sugar trust advanced five points yesterday. Go to. Wall street is the nerve center of the country. If it is prospering you must be prospering. If you say you aren't you're a liar. At any rate, you are a democrat, which is worse!"

But here we see Wall street itself in trouble. Stocks tumble and in sympathy therewith grain tumbles likewise. In the house of representatives Hon. Jonathan Dolliver burns incense before the Canton joss—calls upon the whole world to fall down and worship him as the most marvelous wonder worker that ever came up the pike—and at that very moment the holy of holies is in a panic—Wall street is eaten up by bears as were the bad little boys who jeered at the baldheaded prophet. Stocks go off five, ten, twenty-five points and wheat comes tumbling after. Wild-eyed men run from bank to bank, only to be cast into outer darkness when they ask for loans on gilt-edged securities. London calls for gold and there is no gold. The devil is to pay and there is not even any pitch hot. Where is the joss and what is he doing at this time of stress and trial? Why is he not making medicine, beating his gong and pronouncing exorcisms against the evil genii who are puncturing prosperity's tire? Where is William the Wizard? Where is he at?

These are momentous questions. They require immediate answer. For we repeat that a joss who sleeps on duty is in imminent peril. He may be mighty in all other respects, but if he can't be relied upon to keep things booming in Wall street his tribe is accursed and his name is Mud. Let some one kick the soothsayer in the ribs and give him a tip that there is blood on the moon.—Chicago Chronicle.

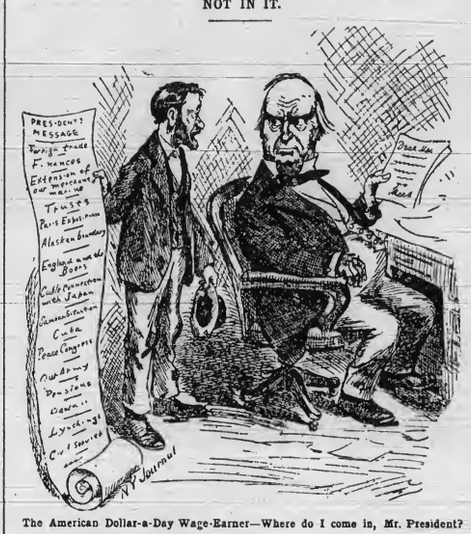
CHEAPNESS OF MONEY.

The Coxey Yell in Wall Street and Its Effect on the Administration.

A republican exchange, in dealing with future events, says that it is incumbent on gold democrats to "vote the republican ticket, so as to make more crushing the defeat of the cheap money forces."

The cheap money forces! Really, these republican editors seem to be blind to the conditions all around them. They close their eyes to all the information contained in their daily market reports. They put their fingers in their ears and refuse to listen to facts. Compared with the most important of the world's commodities, money was never cheaper in this country than it is to-day. The depreciated greenback dollars would buy in 1870 more iron than the gold dollar commands to-day. Thus, as compared with 1894, we have a 50-cent dollar with respect to cotton and with respect to cotton products, and a 30-cent dollar with respect to iron.



In the face of conditions plain to all, the republican editors go on denouncing "cheap money" in one breath and applauding its results in the next. "Cheap money is a delusion!" they cry, and then add: "Behold the prosperity of the country."

Wall street recently took up what has been called "the Coxey yell" and demanded more money because they didn't want to see the stock market collapse under the influence of low prices.

"The Coxey yell," it seems, is a horrible, an alarming affair, when heard in the south and west, or among the common people, but when the speculators, the gamblers and the traders take it up it becomes patriotic and fashionable. Not only so, the editors take it up and remark that the situation is critical, and the conservative financial writers who make it a point to denounce the demand for more money when it is uttered by the people, begin to make gloomy comments on the "monetary stringency," and say that they confidently expect the government to come to the relief of the market.

It is treason for the people to ask their own government to come to their relief, but, as we have said, the Coxey yell becomes the rallying cry of patriotism when it is uttered in the sacred domain of Wall street. And the government always responds. Recently it issued gold certificates; still more recently it announced its readiness to redeem $25,000,000 worth of bonds, paying 112⅞ for bonds that Cleveland sold for 103 and 104; and when expanding business conditions in the interior drain Wall street again, we shall hear the same Coxey yell, and see the same demonstrations of politeness and consideration on the part of the government.—Atlanta Constitution.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

There are 242 German Baptist churches in the United States.

The first college paper was published at Dartmouth, and was edited by Daniel Webster.

There are about 130,000 female teachers in Great Britain, or three times as many as men.

The library of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt contains one of the four perfect copies of "The Bay Psalm-Book."

The Universalist church reports 1,003 parishes and 47,471 families, an increase of about 1,200 families over last year.

As the result of an investigation the Orange Judd Farmer says that out of 82,000 students in 178 universities and colleges in the United States 24,000 are the sons or daughters of farmers.

Scientists have discovered that the memory is stronger in summer than in winter. Among the worst foes of the memory are too much food, too much physical exercise, and, strangely enough, too much education.

A Dartmouth catalogue of 1821 estimates the expenses of a college year for an economical student at $96.65. The corresponding estimate in the 1899 catalogue amounts to $273. The chief increase is in the cost of board and tuition, the latter having jumped from $27 a year to $100.

In Switzerland's six universities there are 937 women students, of whom 553 are matriculated regularly. The greatest number, 333, comes from Russia; 65 are Swiss, 53 Germans, 25 Bulgarians, and 3 seven from the United States. They are inscribed chiefly in the faculties of medicine and philosophy.

The Railway Mission Christian association, with headquarters at London, held last spring over a thousand weekly meetings at about 400 centers, opened 21 new branches and added 1,102 new members to its rolls. The association has missionaries in South Africa, India, Japan, Chili and other countries.

HOW MUMMIES WERE MADE.

The Three Methods of Preserving Human Bodies Practiced by the Egyptians.

There were three different ways of mummifying the body, practiced by the ancient Egyptians, the price being the chief mark of distinction, and enuse for the differences. In the first and most expensive method the brain was extracted through the nose by means of an iron probe, and the intestines were removed entirely from the body through an incision made in the side with a sharp Ethiopian stone. The intestines were cleansed and washed in palm wine, and, after being covered with powdered aromatic gums, were placed in Canopic jars. The body was then filled up with myrrh and cassia and other fragrant and astringent substances, and was laid in natron for 70 days. It was then carefully washed and wrapped up in strips of full linen smeared with gum. The cost of mummifying a body in this fashion was a talent of silver, about $1,200.

In the second method the brain was not removed at all, and the intestines were simply dissolved and removed in a fluid state. The body was also laid in salt or natron, which, it is said, dissolved everything except the skin and bones. The cost of mummifying in this manner was 22 minae, or $450. The third method was employed for the poor only. It consisted simply of cleansing the body by injecting some strong astringent, and then salting it for 70 days. The cost was very small.

If the friends of the dead were too poor to go to the expense of even the cheapest of these methods, the body was soaked in salt and hot bitumen, or in salt only. In the salt and bitumen process every cavity of the body was filled with bitumen, and the hair disappeared. Clearly it is to the bodies which were preserved in this way that the name "mummy" (derived from the Arabic mumia, or bitumen) was first applied. The salted and dried body is easily distinguishable. The skin is like paper, the features and hair have disappeared and the bones are very brittle and white. It may be noted that the eyes were sometimes removed and their places supplied by others of ivory or obsidian. The hair was also removed and made into a packet covered with linen and bitumen. At a late period the flank incision was covered with a metal plate, on which a symbolic eye was engraved. The linen bandages employed to swathe the body were three or four inches wide; the length was sometimes as great as 400 yards.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

What the British Officer Eats.

There are cases containing what are known as "necessities," and they are marked "N" to distinguish them from the cases containing luxuries, which are marked "L," so that in the excitement of war an officer will have no difficulty whatever in ascertaining whether he is eating a necessity or a luxury. Wines and spirits, pressed beef, tongues, sausages, essence of coffee, compressed tea, tobacco, chickens, curried fowl, curried prawns, chocolates, curried rabbits, jams of every kind made, all kinds of soup and fish, "sparklets" for instantly turning plain water into soda water—all these are but a small proportion of the necessities and luxuries that the officers of the guards will fight and win on. Plum puddings are sent out to them for Christmas. The luxuries will be washed down with champagne and creme de menthe, and the necessities with ordinary wines and spirits.—London Mail.

CHRISTMAS GIVING.

IS not enough to fill the day with feasting,
With merry laughter and with happy song,
Unto this blessed day some deed of kindness
And word of sweet encouragement belong.

Pause from thy mirth awhile to ease the load
Thy weary neighbor bears along life's road.

'Tis not enough, the love so true and tender,
Plighted to-day beneath the mistletoe;
The faith of friends, the sacred ties of kinship—
Upon this day more warmth our hearts should know.
Let thy love flow, as boundless as the sea,
Into the hearts of all humanity.

'Tis not enough, the dainty Christmas token,
Though loving hearts with generous zeal have glowed;
The bounteous charity, though free and tender,
Is small beside the gift God's love bestowed.
But one fit offering mayest thou impart,
Give unto Him a pure and loving heart.

MR. PAYSON'S SATIRE VERSUS CHRISTMAS GOODWILL

MR. SIDNEY PAYSON was full of the bitterness of Christmastide. The Paysons had been reared to Christmas giving, and every Payson knew that he or she might expect a present from each of the other Paysons, and so here was Mr. Sidney Payson (bachelor, misanthrope and cynic) elbowing his way along State street with the other shoppers.

Mr. Payson would have been utterly miserable had it not been for the fact that he found a selfish joy in knowing that the Christmas season brought neither peace nor good will.

He had reached that stage of soul distemper at which there can be no happiness except by the discovery of misery in others. Mr. Sidney Payson was the kind of man who loved to tell invalids that they were not looking as well as usual, and who frightened young husbands by predicting that they would regret having married. He made it a rule never to put the seal of approval on any human undertaking, and it was a matter of pride with him that he could find a sinister motive for every act which other people applauded. He dealt in sarcasm, was perpetually bored and might have lost all interest in life had it not been that he found a continued satisfaction in making himself feared and hated. Some of his pious friends used to say that Satan had got the upper hand with him, but there were others who intimated that it might be bile.

Imagine the surly wrath and the sense of humiliation with which Mr. Sidney Payson set about his Christmas shopping! In the first place, to go shopping for Christmas presents was the most conventional thing that anyone could do, and Mr. Payson hated conventionalities. For another thing, the giving of a Christmas present carried with it some evidence of affection, and Mr. Payson regarded any sign of affection as one of the crude symptoms of barbarous taste and deficient education.

If he could have assembled his relatives at a Christmas gathering and opened a few old family wounds, reminding his brother and his two sisters of some of their youthful follies, thus shaming them before the children, Mr. Sidney Payson might have managed to make out a rather merry Christmas. Instead of that, he was condemned to go out and purchase gifts and be as cheaply idiotic as the other wretched mortals with whom he was being carried along State street. No wonder that he chafed and rebelled and vainly longed that he could hang crape on every Christmas tree in the universe.

Mr. Sidney Payson was not only humiliated. He was greatly puzzled. After wandering through two stores and looking in at 20 windows he had been unable to make one selection. It seemed to him that all the articles offered for sale were singularly and uniformly inappropriate. The custom of giving was a farce in itself and the storekeepers had done what they could to make it a sickening travesty.

This was Mr. Payson's point of view. "I'll go ahead and buy a lot of things at haphazard," he said to himself. "I don't care a blank whether they're appropriate or not."

At that moment he had an inspiration. It was an inspiration which could have come to no one except Mr. Sidney Payson. It promised a speedy end to shopping difficulties. It guaranteed him a Christmas to his own liking.

He was bound by family custom to buy Christmas presents for his relatives. He had promised his sister that he would remember every one in the list. But he was under no obligation to give presents which would be welcome and appropriate. Why not give to each of his relatives some present which would be entirely useless, inappropriate and superfluous? It would serve them right for involving him in the fool performances of the Christmas season. It would be a burlesque on the whole foolish custom of Christmas giving. It would irritate and puzzle his relatives and probably deepen their hatred of him. At any rate, it would be a satire on a silly tradition, and, thank goodness, it wouldn't be conventional.

Mr. Sidney Payson went into the first department store and found himself at the book counter.

"Have you any work which would be appropriate for an elderly gentleman of studious habits and deep religious convictions?" he asked.

"We have here the works of Flavius Josephus in two volumes," replied the young woman.

"All right; I'll take them," he said. "I want them for my nephew Fred. He likes Indian stories."

The salesgirl looked at him wonderingly.

"Now, then, I want a love story," said Mr. Payson. "I have a maiden sister who is president of a Browning club and writes essays about Ibsen. I want to give her a book that tells about a girl named Mabel who is loved by Sir Ronald Something-or-Other. Give me a book that is full of hugs and kisses and heaving bosoms and all that sort of rot. Get just as far away from Ibsen and Howells and Henry James as you can possibly get."

"Here is a book that all the girls in the store say is very good," replied the young woman. It is called 'Virgie's Betrothal; or, the Stranger at Birchwood Manor.' It's by Imogene Sybil Beauclerc."

"If it's what it sounds to be it's just what I want," said Mr. Payson, showing his teeth at the young woman with a devilish glee. "You say the girls here in the store like it?"

"Yes; Miss Simmons, in the handkerchief-box department, says it's just grand."

"All right. I'll take it."

He felt his happiness rising as he went out of the store. His joy shone in his face as he stood at the skate counter.

"I have a brother who is 46 years old and rather fat," he said to the salesman. "I don't suppose he's been on the ice in 25 years. He wears a No. 9 shoe. Give me a pair of skates for him."

A few minutes later he stood at the silk counter.

"What are those things?" he asked, pointing to some gayly colored silks folded in boxes.

"Those are scarfs."

"Well, if you've got one that has all the colors of the rainbow in it I'll take it. I want one with lots of yellow and red and green in it. I want something that you can hear across the street. You see, I have a sister who prides herself on her quiet taste. Her costumes are marked by what you call 'unobtrusive elegance.' Well, I think she'd die rather than wear one of those things, so I want the biggest and noisiest one in the whole lot."

The girl didn't know what to make of Mr. Payson's strange remarks, but she was too busy to be keep wondering.

Mr. Payson's sister's husband is the president of a church temperance society, so Mr. Payson bought him a buckhorn corkscrew.

There was one more present to buy.

"Let me see," said Mr. Payson. "What is there that could be of no earthly use to a girl six years old?"

Even as he spoke his eye fell on a sign: "Bargain sale of neckwear."

"I don't believe she would care for cravats," he said. "I think I'll buy some for her."

He saw a box of large cravats marked "25 cents each."

"Why are these so cheap?" he asked.

"Well, to tell the truth, they're out of style."

"That's good. I want eight of them—oh, any eight will do. I want them for a small niece of mine—a little girl about six years old."

Without indicating the least surprise the salesman wrapped up the cravats.

LETTERS RECEIVED BY MR. SIDNEY PAYSON IN ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF HIS CHRISTMAS PRESENTS:

I.

"Chicago, Ill., Dec. 27.—Dear Brother: Pardon me for not having acknowledged the receipt of your Christmas present. The fact is that since the skates came I have been devoting so much of my time to the reacquiring of one of my early accomplishments that I have not had much time for writing. I wish I could express to you the delight I felt when I opened the box and saw that you had sent me a pair of skates. It was just as if you had said to me: 'Will, my boy, some people may think that you are getting on in years, but I know that you're just the same as ever.' I suddenly remembered that the presents which I had been receiving for several Christmases were intended for an old man. I have received easy-chairs, slippers, mufflers, smoking jackets and the like. When I received the pair of skates from you I felt that 20 years had been lifted off of my shoulders. How in the world did you ever happen to think of them? Did you really believe that my skating days were not over? Well, they're not. I went to the pond in Washington park on Christmas day and had more fun for two hours than I've had in six months. My ankles were rather weak and I fell down twice, fortunately without any serious damage to myself or the ice, but I managed to get around and before I left I skated with a smashing pretty girl. Well, Sid, I have you to thank. I never would have ventured on skates again if it had not been for the beautiful pair which you sent me. I was a little stiff yesterday, but this morning I went out again and had a dandy time. I owe the renewal of my youth to you. Thank you many times, and believe me to be, as ever, your affectionate brother,

"WILLIAM."

II.

"Chicago, Ill., Dec. 26.—Dear Brother: The secret is out! I suspected it all the time. It is needless for you to offer denial. Sometimes when you have acted the cynic I have almost believed that you were sincere until I have observed in you something which told me that underneath your assumed indifference there was a certain current of the romantic sentiment of the youth and the lover. How can I be in doubt after receiving your little book—a love story?

"I knew, Sidney dear, that you would remember me at Christmas. You have always been the soul of thoughtfulness, especially to those of us who understood you. I must confess, however, that I expected you to do the deadly conventional thing and send me something heavy and serious. I knew it would be a book. All of my friends send me books. That comes of being president of a literary club. But you are the only one, Sidney, who had the rare and kindly judgment to appeal to the woman and not to the club president. Because I am interested in a serious literary movement it need not follow that I want my whole life to be overshadowed by the giants of the literary kingdom. Although I would not dare confess it to Mrs. Peabody or Mrs. Hutchens, there are times when I like to spend an afternoon with an old-fashioned love story.

"You are a bachelor, Sidney, and I have long since ceased to flush at the casual mention of 'old maid.' It was not for us to know the bitter-sweet experiences of courtship and marriage, and you will remember that we have sometimes pitied the infatuation of sweethearts and have felt rather superior in our freedom. And yet, Sidney, I want to be perfectly candid with each other, I dare say that both of us would confess to having known something about that which men call love. We might confess that we had felt its subtle influence. We might even admit that sometimes we pause in our lonely lives and wonder what might have been and whether it would not have been better, after all. I am afraid that I am writing like a sentimental schoolgirl, but you must know that I have been reading your charming little book, and it has come to me as a message from you. Is it not really a confession, Sidney?

FOUND HIMSELF AT THE BOOK COUNTER.

"You have made me very happy, dear brother. I feel more closely drawn to you than at any time since we were all together at Christmas, at the old home on the North side. Come and see me. Your loving sister,

"GERTRUDE."

III.

"Chicago, Ill., Dec. 25.—Dear Brother: Greetings to you from the happiest household in Chicago, thanks to a generous Santa Claus in the guise of Uncle Sidney. I must begin by thanking you on my own account. How in the world did you ever learn that Roman shoes had come in again? I have always heard that men did not follow the styles and could not by any possibility select anything for a woman, but it is a libel, a base libel, for the sandals which you sent is quite the most beautiful thing I have received this Christmas. I have worn the large picture from the parlor, and it is the envy of every one who has been in to-day. A thousand, thousand thanks, dear Sidney. It was perfectly sweet of you to remember me, and I call it nothing less than a stroke of genius to think of anything so appropriate and yet so much out of the ordinary.

"John asks to thank you—but I must tell you the story. One evening last week we had a little chafing dish party after prayer-meeting, and I asked John to open a bottle of olives for me. Well, he broke the small blade of his knife trying to get the cork out. He said: 'If I live to get downtown again I'm going to buy a cork screw.' Fortunately, he had neglected to buy one, and so your gift seemed to come straight from Providence. John is very much pleased. Already he has found use for it, as it happened that he wanted to open a bottle of household ammonia the very first thing this morning.

"Ha, ha for Fred's lovely books, thank goodness you didn't send him any more story books. John and I have been trying to induce him to take up a more serious line of reading. The Josephus ought to help him in the study of his Sunday school lessons. We were pleased to observe that he read it for about an hour this morning.

"When you were out here last fall did Genevieve tell you that she was collecting silk for a doll quilt? She insists that she did not, but she must have dreamed it, for how could you have guessed that she wants pieces of silk above anything else in the whole world? The perfectly lovely cravats which you sent will more than complete the quilt, and I think that mamma will get some of the extra pieces for herself. Fred and Genevieve send love and kisses. John insists that you come out to dinner some Sunday very soon—next Sunday if you can. After we received your present we were quite ashamed of the box we had sent over to your hotel, but we will try to make up the difference in heartfelt gratitude. Don't forget, any Sunday. Your loving sister,

"KATHERINE."

It would be needless to tell what Mr Sidney Payson thought of himself after he received these letters.—George Ade in Chicago Daily Record.

HE WASN'T SUPERSTITIOUS.

And Yet He Was Bound He Wouldn't Travel Without His Lucky Coin.

Just as he was starting on a short business journey his wife called him aside. "William," she said, earnestly, "don't think of going to-day. Put it off till to-morrow or next week. Something awful will happen if you disregard my advice, and I know it." "What's the matter with you? Been having dreams or consulting one of these second-sight frauds?" "No, dear, but this is Friday, and it is simply inviting trouble to make a start on Friday." "Oh, pshaw! Will you never get over such foolishness? What's the day got to do with it? Honest, it makes me tired—this everlasting superstition and belief in signs. If I paid attention to all such things we'd starve, for I'd have no time to do business. Put all of them out of your head, little one. I've had just as good luck on Friday as on any other day, and the only serious accident I ever had was on Monday. I don't disarrange all my plans just to humor a whim. I'll come back as safe and sound as I leave. Good-by." He went, and she sat in the bay window looking just as disconsolate as though her worst fears had been realized. At the end of 20 minutes she saw her husband hurrying toward the house, carrying his hat in his hand and mopping his forehead. She ran to the door, pale with apprehension. "What is it, William? Tell me, quick. I can bear anything as long as you are all right." "Where's that old blue vest? That lucky dime of mine is in one of the pockets. I'd stay at home before I'd go without it."—Troy Times.

The Typewriter Invention.

A Statistician has proved that the invention of the typewriter has given employment to 500,000 people, but he fails to state how many cases of weak stomachs and dyspepsia it has induced. All people of sedentary occupation need Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It helps nature to bear the strain which ensues from confinement and it is a wonderful medicine. No one realizes this more keenly than the man or woman who has been cured of stomach trouble by its use.

Not Good Kickers.

I never heard but one Porto Rican man make a kick about anything. I was sitting on the hotel veranda at Ponce one day when a merchant came down the street to see me. There was a vicious bull tearing about the street, and the animal got after the merchant and run him a block and gave him a toss which landed him on the veranda, almost at my feet. Of course I went to his assistance, thinking him seriously hurt, but it turned out that he had come off almost without a bruise. I began to congratulate him over his escape, but he interrupted me with:

"Senor, I like it not. The bull should have rolled me into the ditch, instead of tossing me up here. Never before was I tossed upon this veranda, and I can't make it out."—Washington Post.

Care of the Hands in Winter.

To keep the hands in good condition in cold weather care must be given them. Gloves should be worn when engaged in house work, or going out in the open air. They should be washed in tepid water with Ivory soap, and carefully dried on a soft towel. Too frequent washing, or extremes of heat or cold should be avoided.

My Mother Had Consumption

"My mother was troubled with consumption for many years. At last she was given up to die. A neighbor told her not to give up but try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. She did so and was speedily cured, and is now in the enjoyment of good health." D. P. Jolly.
Feb. 2, 1899. Avoca, N. Y.

Cures Hard Coughs

No matter how hard your cough is or how long you have had it, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best thing you could possibly take. But it's too risky to wait until you have consumption, for sometimes it's impossible to cure this disease. If you are coughing today, don't wait until tomorrow, but get a bottle of Cherry Pectoral at once and be relieved. It strengthens weak lungs.

The pupils of Walton Academy are working hard to make their entertainment on Friday evening the 22 inst., such a success as will completely "snow under" any other exhibition that has preceded it heretofore. Many of the Alumnae are coaching the students, and it is possible that some new illuminate may be added to the literary constellation that had emanation from that institution. One confident young lady stated that in her repertoire, she did not believe that Ralph Bingham, the famous monologist, who will give an entertainment at the Opera House the evening of the 25th, could give her any odds.

The votaries of Thespis are by no means to be overlooked in this time of innocent amusement. In connection with the "Don't Worry Club" and under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge of this place, the Thespians have promised a series of entertainments under the direction of the veteran impersonator, Joe Reed, the mention of whose name is sufficient guarantee of fine representations, will present to our citizens several dramas that will afford to their amusement, instruction and enjoyment during the long nights of this our winter of discontent. And, by the way, it may be pertinent to observe that our friends, the Knights of Pythias, may be induced to have the grand old drama of "Damon and Pythias" produced after our Thespians have been accustomed to stage business. It was in this piece in which they started and won undying histrionic fame, that Augustus Adams, the New York Tobacconist, Edwin Forest and James Becom, the Covington Tobacconist, achieved such success as to place them high up in the rolls of the great impersonators of the age in which they lived.

Ohio would be in the hospital for political lunatics on "Salt River" for 99 years if Bryan should carry the State by 50,000 majority in 1900. Such a condition of purification would be good for them all the same.

"In Jehovah we trust," is a good motto for the imperialists to adopt, because they must depend on some stronger arm than the mailed-juggurnen repeating arm to shoot civilization and religion into the Filipinos.

Miss May Norman left, Saturday night, for Alabama to spend the holidays with her brother Jeff and family, and perhaps stay all winter. Miss May has a large circle of friends in Union that wish her a pleasant visit and safe return.

Mr. Perry Aylor and Miss Lizzie Aylor have the most complete outfits for killing and handling hogs that we have seen. After the hogs are killed, lard rendered and sausage made everything is washed carefully (even the benches and trestels) and put away. Mr. Aylor and Miss Lizzie honor the memory of their parents by following the teachings and customs taught and practiced by them.

No working man can expect the Hannaites to fill his dinner bucket with anything more than the crumbs from some millionaire's table. "Full dinner buckets" and better wages for the man who lives by the sweat of some other man's brow, is all right for Mr. Hanna, but the real "sweat of the brow man" is a dreamer if he calculates on lasting benefits from a party that favors the capitalists with special legislation and offers labor nothing better than a collar button and 5 cent sox for his dress suit.

The moon was in total eclipse Saturday night, and Christmas is coming. The burden of most children's songs is about dolls, skates, jumping-jacks and other confections; children under and over lawful age will write love letters to "Old Santa" that George Burkett couldn't read, and yet they expect every wish expressed in the letters to be fully understood. Most children that get to be 45 years old can recollect the very time they hung up their biggest and oldest pair of sox (regardless of color) in the house and got up next morning to find them filled with ashes like an old fashioned ash hopper. Very pleasant Xmas recollection, isn't it, children of the class of 45?

No greater comfort can come to the man who loves the South than to know the Goddess of prosperity is hanging over her like a dove. The wheels of industry are turning with greater force and better results as the years roll on. The star of fortune has risen again out of the clouds and sales of '61 and today is shining with renewed brightness, that gives hope to every southern heart and comfort to every southern home. Thluk of it, 35 cotton-mills employing millions of capital and hundreds of hands, going up in one year. Southern brains and energy have done this, not imperialism, or any other kind of ism, unless it was patriotism—which means love of country—ensign Bagley and other southern heros proved in '98—just the kind of patriotism the South has.

Funny Xmas sights:—John Garrison weigh 300 pounds.—Tom Burkett wear a standing collar.—James Bristow go to Sunday-school.—Sol Long take a drive in his new buggy.—Sam Hicks buy enough tobacco to last 12 months.—Mr. Billy Harris walk to Big Bone Springs in 30 minutes.—Charley Baker sit around the stoves in Union for a week.—Prof. Collius wearing a linen suit.—Mr. Dick Thompson smoke a pipe.—Jas. Uncle John Hoffman, at the age of 84, died at his home near Florence on the 14th inst. He had been afflicted for several years, and was a great sufferer, but he bore it all with patience, and was perfectly resigned to the Master's will. The remains were interred at the private burying ground on his farm.

Uncle Baruett Utz died on the 15th inst., after a long and severe illness. He would have been 77 years old on the 20th day of next February. He was one of a large family, of which four are dead, each of whom died in the month of December. Uncle Barnett chose the life of a bachelor, and was an unassuming man and a most excellent citizen, and had won for himself the honor and esteem of all who knew him. So far we have been having but few parties; we guess the young folks are saving themselves for the holidays.

Dr. Rouse, Superintendent of the Sunday-school, announced Sunday that we would have two small Christmas tree instead of a large one, this year.

The surprise party tendered Miss Edith Rouse at her beautiful home, December 15th, by Miss Daisy Harding and Mr. Norris Riddell, was a success in every sense of the word. About 7 o'clock in the evening the young friends of Miss Edith began to appear, and by the time an hour had elapsed, fifty or more pleasant faces had put in their appearance. During the evening, party games of every description were indulged in. Fine apples were passed around time after time, but the most enjoyable part of the evening's entertainment to the writer, was the excellent music furnished by Miss Edith and Miss Clara Hossuau. Miss Rouse had just arrived at sweet sixteen and from all appearances is ready to start out among the young people, a highly accomplished lady. About midnight the guests departed, all feeling that they had spent one of the most enjoyable evenings of their life.

Our farmers are about ready for Christmas, and a merry one may they have. Their cribs are overflowing with corn, and their meat houses are filled with nice meat.

Atty. Sidney Gaines says that the use of his name on the posters advertising the Farmers' Institute for this place next Friday and Saturday, was without his authority.

Our young friend, Orin Phipps, called at this office, last Monday, and was looking very down cast. For this he gave as a cause a large purchase of holiday turkeys with which he expected to encounter a dull market.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The action of the town of Walton vs. W. L. Norman consumed two days in its trial. This was a condemnation proceedings instituted five years ago by the trustees of the town of Walton to condemn, for sidewalk purposes, a strip of land 4 feet wide and 221 feet long, a portion of a lot belonging to W. L. Norman, on Botts street. Mr. Norman resisted the proceedings until his death a few years ago, and the lot from which it is proposed to take the strip of ground, now belongs to his son, W. B. Norman. The case has been in the Court of Appeals once, and its trial here last week was its second in the Circuit Court of this county. A large number of Walton people appeared as witnesses in the trial, and the amount to which it was proven Mr. Norman should recover for damages, &c., by reason of the land ranged from $650 to $700 down as low as $100, one witness stating he considered that the sidewalk would be an advantage to the remainder of the lot. It took the jury about three hours to make a verdict, which was signed by only nine of them. It was as follows: "We, the undersigned jury, find for Norman in the sum of ($150) one hundred and fifty dollars." Signed—R. B. Huey, J. Riddell, C. P. Baker, A. J. Littell, J. J. Lillard, John H. Aylor, C. J. Craven, R. Bradford, J. R. Akin. The three jurors not signing the verdict were J. E. Smith, Clide Berkshire and Thos. Rouse.

Upon the foregoing verdict the following judgment was rendered:

"It is therefore adjudged by the court that the following strip of land, situated in the town of Walton, county of Boone, State of Kentucky, be and is now condemned for the purpose of a sidewalk, bounded as follows: Beginning at a point in Main street at the intersection of said Botts street with Main street at the N. E. corner thereof, and running a line 221 feet 7 inches along a line of Botts street to the end of Norman's lot, thence run a line four feet from and parallel with said line, which is the read dotted line shown on the plot filed with petition herein, but there is excepted out of and not included in this condemnation so much of said above described strip of land as is now occupied by a store house at the junction and intersection of Main or Pike and Botts streets, and it is adjudged that the damages resulting to appellants for the actual value of the land taken, and the damages resulting to the residue of the land and damages for additional fencing necessary is $150, and this cause is retained on the docket for further orders in regard to conveyances. And it appearing to the satisfaction of the court that the appellants have recovered a sum less than that recovered by them in the county court, it is adjudged that the appellees recover of appellants all their costs in this court expended to be set off against the amount of appellants' cost recovered of them in the county court, and upon the payment by the appellee, the town of Waltou, to the clerk of this court the sum of $150 and the entire costs of the appellants in the Boone County Court in this proceeding, less appellees' cost in this court, the clerk will at once issue a writ of possession, directed to the Sheriff of Boone county, with direction to put appellee, the town of Walton, in possession of the above coudemned land. The court heard proof on exception 9th as to the necessity for coudemnation of said land, and being satisfied from the proof that the land is necessary for a sidewalk, and it is adjudged that said exception be overruled. Proof also being heard on exceptions Nos. 14, 16 and the court being sufficiently advised both of said exceptions are overruled, to all of which the appellants except and pray an appeal to the Court of Appeals, which is granted."

It was the shortest term held here in a long time, and was attended by a smaller crowd.

The grand jurors were on duty five days, while the petit jurors served only four.

J. A. Sanders, of Walton, W. P. Carpenter, of Florence, and W. C. Brown, of Burlington, were appointed commissioners to select the list of names from which to draw grand and petit jurors for the ensuing year.

Henry McNeely and Elijah Hogan, of Gallatin county, were present in court Friday looking after some business.

The prosecution against Harry Hunter for stealing Bruce Robert's horse was disposed of with a rush. Hunter was indicted, tried and lodged in the peuitentiary in about 24 hours after the grand jury took hold of the case. He was very uneasy until he was passed Walton on his way to the pen. When the train stopped at Walton he expected to be waited on by a mob.

The grand and petit jurors were discharged Friday afternoon, and there being no money in the hands of the trustee of the jury fund with which to pay the jurors, they were paid off by County Attorney Lassing. Before adjourning the grand jury filed the following written report, which was ordered copied and certified to the county court:

"To the Hon. John W. Green, Judge Boone Circuit Court:

"We, your grand jury, would most respectfully report that we have been in session five days, have examined 32 witnesses, and found eight indictments. We have examined the public buildings and find that the County Infirmary is well kept and clean—the inside walls should be whitened and the roof put in good order. The jail should be repaired where the inside floor has been torn up—it is otherwise in good condition. County offices are well kept and in good order. Complaint was made to us about the condition of some of the roads—that they were not worked and put in condition. We recommend that the County Judge look after this matter and punish and remove the overseers who fail to do their duty.

J. N. PEARSON, foreman."

The suit of L. B. Stephens' administrator against the L. & N. Railroad for $25,000 damages was continued.

Crowe against the North Ky. Agricultural Association went over to the next term.

It required $312 to pay the grand and petit jurors.

Thornton against Rogers was continued. A large number of witnesses were summoned in this case.

When the case of Watson against Michaels, for damages, was called for trial, Attorney Rogers, for the plaintiff announced ready, but the defendant was not ready because of the absence of his Attorney, Senator Goebel. The attorney for the plaintiff made a hard fight for a trial, but the court was "dead set agin him," saying the damage suit ought not to be tried before the criminal prosecution in the Kenton Circuit Court, and which grew out of the same trouble, is disposed of. Tarvin did right in continuing the prosecution in his court while Mr. Goebel was sugaged in his canvass, said Judge Greene.

Jack Sandford came to town, last Thursday night, and hitched his horse near the bank. When he started home about 8 o'clock his horse could not be found, and he walked out home thinking the horse had got loose and preceded him, which proved to be a mistake. Jack came back to town and made another unsuccessful search. The next morning the horse was found hitched in a stall at Brown's livery stable, and some of the boys say that Jack hitched the horse there and forgot it. The truth of the matter is somebody rode the horse, and when they came back to town they were kind enough to give it comfortable quarters.

Aluminium, which had no commercial existence a few years ago, was produced in the United States last year to the extent of 5,200,000 pounds, valued at $1,750,000, which is one-tenth of the cost 10 years ago.

A German officer has invented an acetylene searchlight, which can be carried by one man, and which will illuminate everything within a distance of 100 yards. It is expected to be of great use in searching for the wounded after a battle, and in bridge building at night.

Greek divers have discovered a treasure in a Russian flagship sunk in Greek waters in 1770. Gold coins to the value of $55,000 have already been recovered, and the divers report great stores of silver and jewels, which the storms of a century washed out from the hulk of the old wreck.

Over 100 Japanese women following the profession of divers are found along the coast of Japan. They are from 17 to 30 years of age. Their earnings are not uniform, as they are paid according to the amount of their work, which consists of diving for agar seaweed, sea ear and cucumber.

Maiwatchin, on the borders of Russia, is the only town in the world exclusively inhabited by men. The Chinese women are not allowed to live in this territory, and are even forbidden to pass the great wall of Kalkan and to enter Mongolia. All the Chinese of this border town are traders.

A black record of extraordinary length against the alleged hotel thief, Herman Valentine, has been compiled by Detective Sergeant William Burke. The evidence shows that Valentine has operated under 113 different names, and the dates were found in a notebook in his pocket.

Electric capsules are one of the latest inventions. A combination of chemicals has been invented, and, according to the company that manufactures it, a three grain capsule of it put into an ordinary battery will yield enough electricity to run a 16-candle power incandescent light for one hour.

Commenting on the amount which a spider actually consumed during 24 hours Sir J. Lubbock says: "At a similar rate of consumption a man weighing 160 pounds will require a whole fat deer for breakfast, a steer and five sheep for dinner, and for supper two bullocks, eight sheep and four barrels of fresh fish."

Paving stones, with coal tar as one of the ingredients of their composition, must be regarded as a novelty. The Germans are making artificial paving stones, by mixing coal tar and sulphur, adding chlorate of lime, and then breaking up the mass and adding broken glass. This is reduced to a powder and subjected to severe pressure, and the paving stone is ready for use.

A regimental pigeon post hereafter will form part of the regular equipment of every Russian field force when mobilized. During the last Russian army maneuvers, experiments with the birds were conducted on an extensive scale, and their utility was demonstrated. In no case did the birds fail to arrive with their message sooner than a mounted messenger would have done.

A charity trust is proposed now. Theodore Sutro, president of the Legal and Medical society, of Pittsburgh, Pa., suggests that most of the 2,000 weaker charitable organizations in the city could be advantageously gathered under one head, with headquarters in some central location, whence charity could be dispensed under one management. Thus expenses would be reduced and the poor would benefit.

It is a curious fact—well known, however, to weather experts—that heavy firing will generally cause rain, even though the sky was clear beforehand. At Waterloo rain came down in torrents. So it did in several of the big battles of the civil war—Gettysburg, for example. The tremendous concussion shakes the little globules of water which are always present invisibly in the atmosphere together, and so brings them down.

The investigations of Vito lo Bosco, an Italian hygienist, show that paper and tapestry wall coverings in houses are favorable to the preservation of disease germs. On the other hand, walls covered with stucco or good varnish can not only be readily freed from germs by washing, but they possess the property of cleaning themselves spontaneously from bacteria lodged upon them. It has been found that the germs of typhoid, of cholera and of pneumonia, when placed on such walls, perish within 24 hours.

When the clerk of the senate the other day read the title of a bill introduced by Senatbr Frye, "granting a pension to Marcus A. Hanna," there were smiles from the senators on the floor and the spectators in the galleries, who noticed in the tedious reading of the bills by titles that the name was similar to that of the junior senator from Ohio. The proposed beneficiary, however, is not the Ohio senator, but a light house keeper in South Portland, Me., who served in a Maine regiment during the civil war.

WITHOUT WIRES.

A Receiver for Wireless Telegraphy More Sensitive Than the Coherer.

Possible With the New Apparatus to Send Messages Across the Atlantic With Poles Less Two Hundred Feet High.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 18.—Bold researches by Prof. Reginald A. Fessenden and his assistant, Prof. Kitner, in the electrical laboratory of the Western university of Pennsylvania, have resulted in the production of a receiver for wireless telegraphy that is 2,000 times more sensitive than the so-called "Coherer" of the Marconi system.

In speaking of the discovery Sunday Prof. Fessenden said: "Although we have improved the receiver so that it is 2,000 times as sensitive as the original, we realize that we have not yet begun to see the limit. Marconi in his brilliant experiment has demonstrated that messages can be sent over 90 miles.

"As our receiver is several hundred times more sensitive it is clear that the messages can be sent by our method very much farther, though just what the limit is I would not like to say. It at least should be possible to send messages across the Atlantic with poles less than 200 hundred feet high. The ultimate distance must be checked by actual experiment because it becomes scientific fact in the strictest sense."

A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

Nelson Hamilton and Three of His Children Were Killed Near Alliance, Ky.

Louisa, Ky., Dec. 18.—A sad accident occurred near Alliance Post Office, Floyd county, resulting in the death of Nelson Hamilton and three of his children. Hamilton, who was preparing to do some blasting, was pouring out some powder from a keg when his 4-year-old son picked up a small amount and tossed it into the fire. The explosion threw some embers into the pile of powder and a terrific explosion followed. The father and little son and two older children, who were in the room, were shocked into insensibility. The ceiling was lifted from its place, the walls spread and the upper part of the house came down again and stopped about half way of the walls, thus fastening all the doors securely. When the oldest daughter regained consciousness sufficiently to realize that the house was in flames she tried to open a door, but at once saw the hopelessness of such an effort and began to scream for help. A neighbor arrived in time to burst open a door and get the tortured persons out, but they were so badly burned that all died within a few hours.

Lieut. Brumby Dead.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Lieut. Thos. M. Brumby, flag lieutenant of Adm. Dewey during the Manila campaign, who has been ill with typhiod fever for several weeks, died at Garfield hospital shortly after 6 o'clock Sunday evening.

Marietta, Ga., Dec. 18.—Mrs. Ann Eliza Brumby, the aged mother of Lieut. Brumby, received the news of her son's death very calmly. The long illness of the lieutenant had prepared Mrs. Brumby for the shock. She admitted that she had given up hope of his recovery several days ago. The Brumby burying ground is in Atlanta, and while Mrs. Brumby would like to have the remains of her son brought home, she said Sunday that she would offer no objection should the Washington officials desire to inter the lieutenant's remains there.

John D. Rockefeller's Gift.

New York, Dec. 18.—Booker T. Washington has received a letter from John D. Rockefeller, who offers $10,000 to the Tuskegee normal and industrial institute at Muskegee, Ala. Half of this amount is to be used in meeting last year's deficit caused by the erection of necessary buildings and other improvements. The remaining $5,000 is to be used toward the present year's current expenses.

Well-Known Engineer Expires.

New York, Dec. 18.—Charles E. Noble, a well known engineer, died at his home in Morristown, N. J., aged 75. In 1870 he went to Texas as the representative of a syndicate of capitalists and built about 700 miles of the International & Great Northern railroad.

The Report Erroneous.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The announcement that Senator Hanna has leased the late Vice President Hobart's house in this city is stated to have been erroneous.

THE WHEAT CROP.

The Statistician of the Agricultural Department Makes His Report to His Chief.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The statistician of the department of agriculture reports the wheat crop of the United States for 1899 at 547,300,000 bushels, or 12.3 bushel per acre. The production of winter wheat is placed at 291,700,000 bushels, and that of spring wheat at 255,600,000 bushels. Every important wheat-growing state has been visited by special agents of the department, and the changes in acreage are the result of their investigations.

The newly seeded area of winter wheat is estimated at 30,150,000 acres, which is about 200,000 acres greater than that sown in the fall of 1898. The sowing of wheat is still going on in California and some of the southern states and the foregoing estimate is subject to correction. The average of condition is 97.1.

The acreage sown with winter rye is estimated at .76 per cent. less than that of last year. The average of condition is 98.2 per cent.

The compilation of the average returns from individual farmers is approaching completion. Any slight change that may be called for in the average yield per acre of corn, oats, barley and other crops as published October 10, will be made at an early date, and the final figures will then be available.

PRINTERS ON A STRIKE.

Members of Pittsburgh Typographical Union Walk Out of the Pittsburgh Dailies.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 16.—The members of Pittsburgh Typographical Union No. 7 have walked out of the offices of the Pittsburgh daily newspapers and struck work, although the scale or contract between the printers and publishers does not expire until December 24. They have not struck for higher wages. The demand is that the machinists, employed to care for the linotype machines, and who are members of Duquesne lodge No. 199 of the International Association of Machinists, be forced to become members of the typographical union.

To accede to this demand would be to violate a contract between the publishers and the machinists. The contest of the typographical union, therefore, resolved itself into an attempt to disrupt a union of fellow workmen. It is not primarily a dispute between newspaper publishers and printers, but a dispute between printers and machinists, and an effort on the part of the printers to use the publishers as a club to drive the machinists into the typographical union.

The present strike is the work of a few contentious men. The industrious printers of Pittsburgh, with families to support, have been forced into it against their will. They were not allowed to vote on the proposition at all, but were ordered out by some outside authorities.

MEW RAILWAY ORGANIZED.

It Will Supplant the Scheme of Col Albert E. Boone to Build the Black Diamond Road.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 16.—The Ohio, Tennessee and Carolina railroad was organized here Friday to supplant the scheme of Col. Albert E. Boone to build the "Black Diamond' railroad from Columbus, O., to Port Royal, S. C. A failure to make a satisfactory deal for the franchises of the Black Diamond railroad in Tennessee led Gen. William W. Kirkby, acting agent for English capital, to organize this new company. Kirkby has secured an option on the franchises of the Black Diamond road in the Carolinas and Kentucky. The route of the proposed road was inspected by Sir Thomas Tancred, of England, about one year ago and highly recommended for English investment. Gen. Kirkby claims to have at his back enough money to build the road. Col. Boone, the pioneer of the movement, is bitterly opposed to Gen. Kirkby, ignoring the franchises of the Black Diamond road in Tennessee.

In Honor of the New Century.

Berlin, Dec. 16.—The new century will be commemorated in various ways. The emperor has ordered that the solemn court function, usually held on New Year's day when the generals, courtiers and high officials bring their congratulation and file past his majesty, should occur this time on the stroke of the midnight bell ushering in 1900. The army also will be ordered to make suitable commemoration of the new century. The postal department will issue commemorative postal cards.

Jealous Man's Deeds.

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 16.—Adam Crist Friday deliberately shot his wife fatally, killed his 8-year-old son, seriously wounded a second son, aged 5, and put a bullet through his own brain, killing himself. Jealousy is the only motive assigned for the crime.

Wants Pensions Increased.

BULLER ROUTED.

The Main Army of the British Meets With a Disastrous Defeat.

Gen. Buller Was Attempting to Cross the Tugela River—Finding It Impossible He Ordered a Retirement.

London, Dec. 17.—The war office has received a dispatch announcing that Gen. Buller has met with a serious reverse, losing ten guns.

Gen. Buller was attempting to cross the Tugela river. Finding it impossible to effect his object he ordered a retirement in order to avoid greater losses. He left 11 guns behind.

The following is the text of Gen. Buller's dispatch, announcing his reverse:

"Buller to Lansdowne, Chievely Camp, Dec. 15, 6:20 p. m.—I regret to report a serious reverse. I moved in full strength from our camp near Chievely at 4 o'clock this morning. There are two fordable places in the Tugela river, and it was my intention to force a passage through at one of them. They are about two miles apart.

"My intention was to force one or the other with one brigade, supported by a central brigade. Gen. Hart was to attack the left drift. Gen. Hildyard the right road and Gen. Lyttelton was to take the center and to support either. Early in the day I saw that Gen. Hart would not be able to force a passage, and I directed him to withdraw. He had, however, attacked with great gallantry, and his leading battalion, the Connaught Rangers, I fear, suffered a great deal. Col. I. G. Brooke was seriously wounded.

"I then ordered Gen. Hildyard to advance, which he did, his leading regiment, the East Surrey, occupied Colenso Station and the houses near the bridge. At that moment I heard that the whole artillery I had sent to support the attack, the 14th and 66th field batteries, and six naval 12-pounder quick-firers, under Col Long, had advanced close to the river in Long's desire to be within effective range. It proved to be full of the enemy, who suddenly opened a galling fire at close range, killing all their horses, and the gunners were compelled to stand to their guns. Some of the wagon teams got shelter for troops in a donga and desperate efforts were being made to bring out the field guns.

"The fire, however, was too severe and only two were saved by Capt. Schofield and some drivers whose names I will furnish.

"Another most gallant attempt with three teams was made by an officer whose name I will obtain. Of the 18 horses 13 were killed, and as several drivers were wounded, I would not allow another attempt, as it seemed that they would be a shell mark, sacrificing life to a gallant attempt to force the passage. Unsupported by artillery I directed the troops to withdraw, which they did in good order.

"Throughout the day a considerable force of the enemy was pressing on my right flank, but it was kept back by mounted men under Lord Dundonald and part of Gen. Barton's brigade. The day was intensely hot and most trying on the troops, whose conduct was excellent. We have abandoned 10 guns and lost by shell fire 1. The losses in Gen. Hart's brigade, I fear, are heavy, although the proportion of severely wounded, I hope, is not large. The 14th and 66th field batteries also suffered severe losses. We have retired to our camp at Chievely."

London, Dec. 17.—As might have been expected, the desperate state of the British arms in South Africa, as revealed by the defeat of Gen. Buller at Tugela river, where at one stroke he lost treble the number of guns Wellington left in the hands of Napoleon during the six years fighting in the Peninsula, while adding to the determination of the authorities to send every available man to the front, caused something in the nature of a momentary panic among the public.

The Evening Standard declares the situation calls for all the equanimity, determination and perseverance of the empire, and demands the immediate calling out of all the volunteers.

The Star urges the commandering "of all the great English Atlantic liners for the transportation of reinforcements," and says the country must "set herself the task of plucking victory out of defeat."

Queen Victoria was greatly concerned about the latest reverse. The commander-in-chief Lord Wolseley, was at Windsor Castle when the news arrived, and he took a special train back to London.

The revised list of the British casualties at the battle of Magersfontein shows the total to be 963, of which number 70 were officers.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Senate—Monday an appeal was made by Mr. Mason (Ill.) for an expression of sympathy for the Boers in their war with Great Britain. The resolution on which Mr. Mason made his speech was referred to the committee on foreign relations. No other business of importance was transacted, and at an early hour the senate adjourned until Tuesday.

House—Monday one debate opened on the currency bill. Messrs. Lorimer (Ill.), DeArmond (Mo.), Overstreet (Ind.), Maddox (Ga.) and McClellan (N. Y.) made speeches. Among the bills introduced were: Mr. Lorimer (Ill.), for postal savings banks; Mr. Richardson (Tenn.), for a national military park at the battlefield of Stone river, Tenn.; Mr. Grout (Vt.), extending and making flexible national bank currency. Mr. Greene (Vt.) then announced the death of his colleague, the late Representative Ermentrout, of Pennsylvania, and at 5:05 the house adjourned until Tuesday.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Senate—Mr. Pettigrew (S. D.) Tuesday introduced a resolution directing the secretary of the navy to supply the senate with information as to the power Adm. Dewey, acting for the United States, formally or informally recognized the Philippine republic at Manila. Mr. Chandler (N. H.) objected to its immediate consideration. Following this objection Mr. Pettigrew and Mr. Chandler had a sharp tilt over the resolution offered Monday by the former, demanding from the secretary of war an explanation of certain charges against Gen. Merriam in his conduct of the Coeur d'Alene strike.

House—The debate on the currency bill continued Tuesday. The speakers were Messrs. Grosvenor (O.), Cochran (Mo.), Newlands (Nev.), Parker (N. J.), William Alden Smith (Mich.), Prince (Ill.), Lawrence (Mass.), Powers (Vt.), Shafroth (Col.) and Sims (Tenn.). A three night's session was ordered. Mr. Grout (Vt.) introduced a bill making oleomargarine subject to the laws of the states to which it is shipped, and increasing the tax on oleomargarine colored butter to 10 cents per pound.

Washington, Dec. 14—Senate—Wednesday's session was short. Among the bills introduced were: To provide for telegraphic communication between the United States of America, the Hawaiian islands, Guam, the Philippines, Japan and China, and to promote commerce. The bill also authorizes the postmaster general to contract with an American cable company for payment by the United States of not exceeding $400,000 a year for 20 years for the electrical transmission of official messages of the United States to Honolulu, Guam, Manila, Hong Kong and some point in Japan. The cable must be in operation by January 1, 1903. A bill providing for a change of material from timber to stone or concrete, in the building of the dry docks at League Island, Pa., and Mare Island, Cal.

House—The currency debate in the house lasted from 10 o'clock Wednesday morning until 11:30 Wednesday night. The house adopted a resolution for a holiday recess from Wednesday, December 20, to Wednesday, January 3. Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, asked that the house adjourn over Thursday, to give the members an opportunity to participate in the Washington memorial exercises, but Mr. Payne, the majority leader, objected. Mr. Moody (Mass.) asked unanimous consent that a committee of five members be appointed from the house to join a committee of three from the senate to be present at the unveiling January 18 of the statue of Daniel Webster, presented to the city of Washington by Stilson Hutchins. Mr. Bailey asked why the rules should be suspended to do honor to an illustrious American when the house had just refused to do honor to George Washington, the centenary of whose death was to be made the occasion of the memorial exercises Thursday. He objected.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Senate—Thursday the senate by a decisive vote and practically without discussion laid on the table the Pettigrew resolution of inquiry as to whether or not the United States forces had recognized the Filipino insurgents' flag and had turned over Spanish soldiers to the insurgents. After a brief session the senate agreed to the house resolution for a Christmas holiday adjournment from December 20 to January 3. On motion of Mr. Foraker the senate then, at 1:05 p. m., adjourned out of respect to the memory of the late Representative Danford, of Ohio.

House—The debate on the currency bill in the house Thursday was tame and prosaic. Among the house measures introduced Thursday were: By Mr. Kitchin (N. C.), reducing the tax on snuff and tobacco from 12 to 2 cents per pound, and compelling telegraph companies to pay the revenue stamp on dispatches; by Mr. Wilson (Ariz.), admitting Arizona to statehood, and to give two months' extra pay to those serving in the war with Spain, without limitations of present law; by Representative Glynn (N. Y.), a resolution for a tribute to the memory of Joseph Henry, the scientist, on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of his birth; by Mr. Jones (Wash.), to extend the homestead law to the Philippines, so that soldiers serving in the war with Spain or the Philippines shall have the benefit of homestead settlement in the Philippines.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Senate—No business of importance was transacted Friday. Senator Foster (Wash.) introduced a bill extending the bounty provision of the homestead law to the soldiers who served in the war with Spain, and who have served, or are serving now in the Philippines. Adjourned until Monday.

House—The debate on the currency bill closed Friday. Debate under the five minute rule occurs Saturday. Bills introduced: For the building of a new cruiser, to be named the Charleston, to take the place of the cruiser of that name recently lost in the Philippines. The following were among the other house bills introduced: By Mr. Knox (Mass.), for civil government in Alaska; by Mr. Hull (Ia.), for the reward of distinguished service in the war with Spain; by Mr. Linney (N. C.), to reduce the tax on distilled spirits to 70 cents per gallon.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Senate—Not in session Saturday.

House—The currency bill was read for amendment under the five-minute rule Saturday. The debate proceeded quietly. Representative Sulzer (N. Y.), introduced a joint resolution declaring that a state of war exists in South Africa and according belligerent rights to the Transvaal government. Adjourned until Monday.

How to Avoid Colds During Winter.

"This idea that many people have, that winter is an unhealthful season, is all wrong. Winter is just as healthful as summer, if people will take care of themselves. If you want to go through the winter without a cold, observe these few simple rules:

"Don't overheat your house, and don't stop all ventilation. Sleep in a cool room, but keep warmly covered. Always take off your outdoor wraps when you come in the house, and always put them on when you go out. And, lastly, just as long as there is snow on the ground, don't go out without your rubbers. This last rule is the most important of all, for two colds out of three come from wet feet."—The Independent.

PORTER RUNS A RAILROAD.

All the Officials Were Abroad and He Was the Only One to Do It.

Senator Depew does not tell how the following came to be reported to him, but it is such a good story that he uses it continually in dismissing dignified bores or influential beggars from his office. The senator was on his summer vacation when a pompous little man called to see him and encountered the colored porter who guards the outer gates of the Depew sanctum.

"I want to see Chauncey Depew," said the little man.

"You can't, sah. He's gone to Europe, sah."

"Well, then, I'll see his secretary."

"Sorry, sah, but Mistah Duval, he's done gone to Europe."

"Then I'll see Cornelius Vanderbilt."

"He's in Newport, sah."

"Well, is W. K. Vanderbilt in?"

"No, sah. He's done gone to Newport, too."

"That so?" Then I'll see the vice president of the road."

"He's in Albany, sah."

"How about the second vice president?"

"He's down to Long Branch, sah."

"Is the superintendent in?"

"He's out inspectionin' de road, sah."

"How about General Passenger Agent Daniels?"

"He went away to Cape May dis mawnin'."

"Who in thunder is running this road, anyway?" shouted the little man, getting very red in the face.

"Well, I'll tell you, boss," replied the ebon attendant, "dis yere road jes' runs hitself, sah, an' dere hain' nobody needed 'round to look after things but me."—Saturday Evening Post.

The Ruling Passion with Him.

"Elvira is upstairs getting ready," said the little brother to the stout caller. "I'll go and tell her to hurry up."

"Thank you," said the stout caller. "Tell her to hurry up or to tarry down, just as you think best. Anything to reduce my wait."—Somerville Journal.

HE MAY ESCAPE.

One of Aguinaldo's General Says the Leader Will Not Be Captured.

The Thirty-Third Infantry Suffered Terribly During the Two Days' March From Cervantes to Bagnen and Return.

Manila, Dec. 17.—Maj. Peyton C. March, of the 33d infantry, has abandoned his pursuit of Aguinaldo and has reached Begnen in the heart of the Grand Cordillera, where the range is 10,000 feet high and where food is scarce and travel almost impossible.

From native couriers and Spanish prisoners it was learned that Aguinaldo left Bontoc, in the province of the same name, with three women and two soldiers three days ago, and headed southward, evidently for Bayombung, in the province of New Vizcaya, where it is thought he may encounter the Americans.

Maj. March's command was depleted 20 per cent by the two days' march from Cervantes to Bagnen, so he returned to Cervantes December 10. Scattered bands of Macabebes, which have been operating in the north, are being collected with the intention of sending them back to Manila, as there is much sickness among them, and they are unfit for further mountain work.

Lieut. Chadwick and a correspondent, the latter commanding 30 Macabebes, have visited the mountain town of Pamposa and received the surrender of a company of insurgents, including three officers, with their arms and ammunition.

Gen. Concepcion and other Filipino officers who have surrendered, have been taken to Vigan. Concepcion, who is cheerful, insists that the insurgent organization will be maintained, even in the districts where the Americans are operating, also claiming that the Filipino leaders can use their troops when they desire. He suggests that the only method of terminating the war is the capture of Aguinaldo and the obtaining of an order from him for the troops to surrender their arms. But Concepcion believes Aguinaldo will never be captured.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Gen. Otis cables as follows:

"Manila, Dec. 16.—On the 8th inst., Gen. Smith, at Negros, reports that early in December a number of the inhabitants of four coast towns entered the mountains, believing the statements of Pansy and Luzon agents that the Americans had been overwhelmingly defeated in those islands; that Aguinaldo was about to dictate terms of peace, and the American congress to confer independence when the established civil government of the island would be overthrown. They also were told that all Negros were about to arise and drive out the Americans. No depredations were committed and no consequences of importance apprehended."

LARGE FACTORY FIRE.

Terrific Panic in New York Tenement Houses—Fifty Horses Were Burned to Death.

New York, Dec. 18.—Fire started suddenly at 12:40 o'clock Monday morning in a big factory building at 655 and 657 First avenue, occupied by a wire factory, a cigar manufacturing firm, a firm of machinists and other business houses.

The flames spread with great rapidity and within a few minutes it was apparent that it would be impossible to save the building and every effort of the firemen was devoted to the surrounding tenements. There was a terrific panic in many of these tenements and the avenue in a few minutes was almost blocked with half naked poor people who had tumbled out of the ramshackle building with wild cries of fright.

The flames shot from the cellar to the roof factory building and lit up the neighborhood for blocks. Sheets of flame burst from the windows and showers of sparks fell upon the gathering crowds and terrified tenement dwellers.

The basement of the building was occupied as a livery stable of Michael Kieley. There were 50 horses in the place and despite the heroic efforts to save them all were burned to death.

It is believed that all the people were got out of the tenements in safety, although several of the children were rescued unconscious from the smoke. The loss will amount to about $75,000. At 2 o'clock the fire was under control.

Russian Comments.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 18.—The Novoe Vremya, which does not conceal its pleasure at Gen. Buller's defeat, says: "The whole campaign must now be recommenced, but under altogether altered conditions of opinion in England." The Sviet says: "The Almighty is manifestly bestowing his blessing on the Boer arms. God is punishing an arrogant and rapacious people, who have oppressed and persecuted other races in order to enrich themselves."

A New Catholic Colony.

West Union, O., Dec. 17.—A colony of Catholics from Lawrence and Gallion counties, consisting of 60 families, has bought 1,200 acres of land in Franklin township and will begin the erection of houses and a church.

Government Troops Victorious.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 17 (via Haytien cable).—The government troops Friday completely defeated those of Gen. Hernandez, near Tocupo, a town in the state of Barquesimeto, 34 miles from Trujillo.

MUST STOP BUSHWHACKING.

All Bands of Marauders and Assassins Are to Be Summarily Dealt With.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Isolated bands of bushwhacking insurgents who are caught by our forces in the Philippines are likely to be summarily dealt with. At the cabinet meeting Friday the matter was discussed at some length, and it was the general sentiment that the situation demanded vigorous treatment. As long as the insurgents keep up a show of an army under a semblance of discipline they will be treated as prisoners of war when captured, but when they degenerate into isolated bands of marauders, harrassing our forces by cold blooded assassinations, it is the judgment of the officers in command in the Philippines and of the president and the members of the cabinet that the situation demands summary action.

In the discussion of Cuban affairs it was developed that Gen. Wood, in taking command of the island as military governor, would pursue practically the same course that he followed in Santiago province. Capable and trustworthy citizens from time to time will be given positions of responsibility, and so gradually become identified with the civil administration of the island. The rigor of military rule will be lessened as rapidly as the situation safely warrants.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The war department received a cable message Friday giving the latest developments in the situation in the Philippines. The cablegram was as follows:

"Manila, Dec. 15.—Batcheldor, 24th infantry, battalion reports on 7th inst. had an engagement at the junction of Magat and Rio Grande river, Isabella province, enemy leaving four dead and five mortally wounded in trenches. Our loss was one drowned and four wounded. Says he is in need of clothing, provisions and money. Will reach Tuguegaro, Cagayan province, shortly. Doubtless the navy relieved him yesterday. Four hundred and seventy-five Spanish prisoners arrived this morning, among them the sick at Vigan, numbering 120. Young at Banqui, northwestern Luzon, reports that his troops are still pursuing the remnant of the insurgents who have 23 American prisoners in their possession. Country exceedingly rough. Our men without shoes, still persistently pursuing. Few Spanish prisoners now in hands of insurgents, probably 1,000, mostly in south. Expect to effect their relief in a few days. Negros reports Sergt. Alfred Roeder, 6th infantry, 20 soldiers and 18 native police attacked 400 insurgents at Madriqal, Negros, this morning. No casualties. Enemy's loss 28 killed and wounded. OTIS."

REPUBLICANS MEET.

Philadelphia Selected as the Convention City and the Date Set for June 19.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The republican national committee met in the banquet hall of the Arlington hotel Friday to select the place of meeting for the next republican convention. Chairman Hanna presided, and prior to the opening of the session at which the claims of various candidate cities were presented, a brief executive session was held. The corridors of the hotel were alive with the delegations from the various cities, and before the meeting assembled they put in their last quiet work.

Speeches were made by Mr. Samuel Raymond and Geo. W. Miller in favor of Chicago. The claims of St. Louis were next presented by Former Mayor Wegtwoth and Mr. Nathan Frank, as well as Mr. Edward Devoy. Chauncey M. Depew eloquently presented the arguments in favor of New York, and Philadelphia was ably represented by S. P. Shinkle, chairman of the committee, Representative Bingham and Mayor Samuel H. Ashbridge.

After the presentation of the claims of the four cities was completed, the committee, upon the suggestion of Chairman Hanna, took a recess until 2:30. At the afternon session Philadelphia was selected as the place for holding the next republican convention and June 19 the date.

Recruits for Manila.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The war department has arranged to send about 1,000 recruits to Manila to fill the regiments which are running short on account of death, disease and discharge. The steamer Sumner is being transformed into a troop ship at Norfolk, and will be used for the transportation of these recruits, who are now being congregated at Fort Slocum, N. Y.

New Diamond Fields.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 16.—It is reported that a diamond field has been found in the wilds between Michipicoten and Port Arthur. The precise location is kept a profound secret. The discovery was made last summer by an expert from Kimberley, who made an exploring tour. A formation was found precisely similar to that of the Kimberley field. The discovery is reported to be of considerable area, and, in the opinion of the diamond expert, the precious stones undoubtedly exist there.

SULU SLAVERY.

Resolutions Introduced Into the House Inquiring Into the Matter.

Proposal to Give the Filipinos Self-Government On Paying to Us $20,000,000. We to Have Naval Stations.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Following is the resolution in regard to Philippine matters, introduced in the house by Representative Williams:

Whereas, the hope has been held out to the Filipinos, now waging war against the forces of the United States in the island of Luzon, would lay down their arms if authoritatively assured that it was the intention of the government and the people of the United States ultimately to grant the people of that island their independence and the absolute control of their domestic affairs, and

Whereas, such is the intention of the government and of the American people who do not believe in wars of conquest or criminal aggression; aggression against other peoples, and have frequently declared their horror thereof. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the senate and house of representatives in congress assembled:

Section 1. That it has always been our intent and purpose to recognize the inalienable right of the Filipinos to self government and national independence and that in pursuance thereof we shall make formal recognition of these rights and withdraw our land and sea forces upon the establishment of peace and the inauguration of a constitutional government or governments by the people of the islands or any of them provided the said government agrees, or the said governments agree, to refund the $20,000,000 which was paid by us to the queen of Spain; to give us in fee simple with right of sovereignty vested in us, a place suitable for a naval station and other places fitted for coaling stations and to grant the American people in perpetuity the right or free access to all of their ports for goods, merchandise and persons bent on peaceful or missionary pursuit.

Sec. 3. We pledge ourselves to treat as an unfriendly manifestation towards the United States any foreign interference or aggression for the period of ten years from and after the establishment of such a government, provided that the government and people of said islands shall surrender into our keeping, during that period, the entire question of their foreign relations and shall pay the expense to which we may be put for such troops as shall, at the request of said government be kept on Philippine territory and of such ships and naval forces as may be kept in the Philippines or adjacent waters for the purpose of the protection herein promised.

The Sulu resolution is as follows:

"Whereas, the constitution of the United States provides that 'neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as punishable for crime, * * * shall exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction,' and

"Whereas, the island of Sulu, one of the Philippine group, is, and has been for some time, by virtue of the ratification of the treaty of Paris between Spain and the United States, 'within the United States or subject to their jurisdiction,' and

"Whereas, it is currently reported and believed that slavery does actually exist in said islands,

"Whereas, it is furthermore currently reported and believed that it exists by the connivance, or express agreement, of the federal authorities; therefore,

"Be it Resolved, by the house of representatives, that the president, and he is hereby requested, if, in his opinion compatible with the public interest to transmit to the house such information as may be available on that subject, including official documents, agreements or conventions, entered into by and between the authorities, civil or military, of the United States and the so-called sultan of Sulu, his agents or representatives,

"Be it further resolved, that the judiciary committee of this house be, and is hereby instructed, to investigate and report upon the legal and constitutional aspects of our governmental relations to the people of the Philippine islands, and especially to those of them in the group hitherto or now ruled by the so-called sultan of Sulu, and to determine and report to the house whether or not, in the opinion of said committee, the said islands are within the jurisdiction of the United States; and if in the jurisdiction of the United States whether or not the constitutional prohibition of slavery and the statutory prohibition of polygamy do or do not apply to them and their people, and should or should not control federal officials in all their acts and conduct in connection with the government thereof."

KENTUCKY INAUGURATION.

Gov. Taylor Took the Oath of Office at Noon—Chief Justice Hazelrigg Administered It.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 13.—William S. Taylor was inaugurated governor at noon Tuesday. The crowd in attendance was much smaller than in past years, due to a large extent to the weather, which till Monday night was rainy, followed Tuesday by a December blizzard. The inaugural ceremonies were simple. Retiring Gov. Bradley in the course of his speech said that he hoped the Goebel law which had brought so much turmoil to the state, would be wiped from the statute books. Gov.-elect Taylor, in his inaugural address, said:

"The verdict rendered by the people on the 7th of last November was the mandate of the people in favor of civil liberty. It was the triumph of the people over a merciless partisan machine erected to enslave them."

He said one of the chief aims of his administration would be to secure the repeal of the election law. The oath of office was administered to Gov. Taylor at noon by Chief Justice Hazelrigg.

The inaugural parade started promptly at 10:30 o'clock, winding up at noon in front of the state capitol building, where the ceremonies took place.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 13.—A reception and ball was held at Capitol Hotel Tuesday night in honor of Gov. Taylor. All Kentucky took cognizance of the event, and regardless of party affiliation Kentucky society was represented. For hours a stream of people passed before the new executive and the retiring governor, and the bitterness of the campaign appeared to have passed, and Kentucky hospitality was everywhere manifest.

The reception preceded the ball. The ball-room was the scene of one of the most engaged spectacles ever witnessed in the Kentucky capitol. The beauty of the state was represented, as were the gallantry of the manhood. Those who participated in the festivities represented nothing save the spirit and the intent of the occasion. In view of the intense interest in the late Kentucky election an undercurrent of speculation is flowing freely Tuesday. The democrats are gracefully submitting to the decree of the office givers; did nothing to mar the occasion, and it is generally conceded that the inaugural ceremonies were of a most august character.

CHEAPER POSTAGE.

One Cent Letter Postage and the Establishment of a Cheap Parcel Post Recommended.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Mr. Tinsley Acker, of Philadelphia, appeared before the congressional postal commission today as the representative of the National Board of Trade. He advocated the reduction of letter postage to one cent, and the establishment of a cheap parcels post.

Ninety-nine per cent. of the mail, he said, is carried in railway mail cars, the railroads receiving an average of $35,040 annually for each of the 923 cars allotted to this work; whereas, passenger cars the receipts amounnt to only $10,528.

He advocated a horizontal reduction of 25 per cent. in rates paid railroads for carrying the mails, and charged the post office department with discriminating in the interest of railroads. He expressed the opinion that a cheap parcels post could not be secured until this ceased.

John N. Ward has been engaged by the Syracuse club to act as its attorney before the league to uphold the transfer of Wrigley to the Brooklyn team.

BURIAL SCENES.

The 100th Anniversary of the Death of George Washington.

Masons of High Degree Go Through the Same Funeral Services That Were Given at His Burial a Century Ago—President's Address.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Mt. Vernon was the scene Thursday of the most unique and impressive ceremony in its rich and picturesque history. Masons of high degree from all over the United States and Canada met at the tomb of Washington in services commemorating the 100th anniversary of the death of the greatest American.

Later in the day, when the masonic ceremonies had been concluded, the Independent Order of Red Men succeeded them in honoring the memory of Washington with the rites of their order. The masons went from this city to Mt. Vernon by steamer.

At Mt. Vernon, the procession was formed in line at the mansion and moved in the exact order and over the same path followed at Washington's funeral.

Halting at the vault, the 3d cavalry played a funeral dirge, and Rev. Randolph offered an invocation. This was followed by an address by the grand master of masons in Colorado, and the procession then moved on to the tomb, where the remains of Washington now lie.

Impressive masonic services were held and at their conclusion the grand masters and members of the craft deposited wreaths and evergreens on the tomb.

Upon reaching the mansion the lines were drawn up and President McKinley delivered an address, which was listened to in profound and impressive silence. He spoke as follows:

We have just participated in a service commemorative of the 100th anniversary of the death of George Washington. Here at his old home which he loved so well and which the patriotic sense of the country have guarded with loving hands, exercises are conducted under the auspices of the great fraternity of masons, which a century ago planned and executed the solemn ceremonial which attended the father of his country to his tomb. The lodge in which he was initiated and the one over which he afterward presided as worshipful master, coeval positions of honor at his adequates are to-day represented here in token of profound respect to the memory of their most illustrious member and beloved brother.

Masons throughout the United States testify anew their reverence for the name of Washington, and the inspiring example of his life. Distinguished representatives are here from all the grand lodges of the country to render the ceremonies as dignified and impressive as possible and most cordial greetings have come from across our borders and from beyond the seas.

Not alone in this country but throughout the world have masons taken especial interest in the observance of this centennial anniversary. The fraternity justly claims the immortal patriot as one of its members; the whole human family acknowledges him as one of its greatest benefactors. Public bodies, patriotic societies and other organizations, our citizens everywhere have esteemed it a privilege to-day to pay their tribute to his memory and to the splendor of his achievement of justice and liberty among men.

He had neither precedent nor predecessor. His work was original and constructive, and he successfully stood the severest tests. He selected the site for the capital of the republic, he founded and gave it the name of the Federal City, but the commission substituted the name of Washington as the more fitting, and to be a perpetual recognition of the service as the commander-in-chief of the continental army, the president of the convention which framed the constitution, and the first president of the republic. More than seventy millions of people acknowledge allegiance to the flag which he made triumphant. The nation is his best eulogist and his noblest monument.

I have been deeply interested and touched by the sentiments of his contemporaries, uttered a hundred years ago on the occasion of his death. Rev. Walter King, of Norwich, Ct., in the course of an eloquent eulogy delivered in that city on January 1, 1800 said in part:

"By one mighty effort of manly resolution we were born anew, and declared our independence. Now commenced the bloody contest for everything we held dear. The same Almighty Being, by whose guidance we were hitherto conducted, beheld us with compassion, and saw what we needed—a pilot, a leader in the glorious enterprise we had undertaken. He called for Washington, already designated him as His servant with regal dignity and put into his hands the control of all our defensive operations.

"But here admiration surpasses utterance. Your own mind must fill out the native character of the man. A description of the warlike skill, the profound wisdom, the prudence, the heroism and integrity which he displayed in the character of the commander-in-chief would suffer materially in hands like mine. But this I may say—the eyes of all our American Israel were placed upon him as their savior, under the direction of heaven, and they were not disappointed."

And on the day preceding December 26, 1799, in the course of his memorable funeral oration before both houses of congress, Maj. Gen. Lee, then a representative from the state of Virginia, gave utterance to the noble sentiment as forceful to-day as in those early years of our national life: "To the horrid din of battle sweet peace succeeded, and our virtuous chief, mutual only of the common good, in a moment tempting personal aggrandizement, hushed the discontent of raging sedition and surrendering his power into the hands from which he had received it, converted his sword into a plowshare, teaching an admiring world that to be truly great, you must be truly good."

While strong with his own generation, he is stronger even in the judgment of the generations which have followed. After a lapse of a century is better appreciated, more perfectly understood. More perfectly understood, more thoroughly venerated and loved than when he lived. He remains an ever increasing influence for good in every part and sphere of action of the republic. He is recognized as not only the most far-sighted statesman of his generation, but as having had almost prophetic vision.

The nation needs at this moment the help of his wise example. In dealing with our vast responsibilities we turn to him. We invoke the counsel of his life and character and courage. We summon precepts that we may keep his pledges to maintain justice and law, education and morality, and civil and religious liberty in every part of the country, the new as well as the old.

Fatal Explosion in a Mine.

Pittsburg, Kan., Dec. 15.—An explosion Thursday night in the Mount Carmel Coal company's Number Six shaft, at Frontenac, near here, entombed six shot-firers, who were at work in the mine. Two were dead when reached by the rescue party and two were taken out badly injured.

Watch Case Works Burned.

Bristol, Ct., Dec. 15.—The case works of the E. N. Welch Manufacturing Co., clock manufacturers at Forestville, were destroyed by fire Thursday night. Loss, $75,000.

HUMOROUS.

"Jimmy's rabbit got drowned in our bath tub." "Goodness! Didn't he have his left hind leg with him?"—Indianapolis Journal.

Jeans—"There is a man who is always looking for trouble." Bones—"Well, it's easy enough to cure him of that habit." "How?" "Get him into the police force."—Spare Moments.

Fond Parent.—"Remember, my son, the man who drinks never gets ahead." Son (who has been out the night before)—"He doesn't, eh? That's all you know about it."—Philadelphia Record.

"How much?" asked the man of the house who had been called to the door by the hand-organ man. "Fifteen for more music; quarter del' to go away," replied the musician, softly.—Philadelphia North American.

Miss Silleigh—"I think I shall go in for landscape painting. Is it difficult to learn?" De Aubery—"No. It's comparatively easy. All one has to do is to select the right colors and put them on the right places."—Spare Moments.

Flusher—"Did Miss Gaygirl make any remark when you handed her my bouquet?" The Messenger—"Yes; she said: 'Oh, the dear, dear flowers!'" "Humph! That florist must have sent the bill along with the bouquet."—Paris American Messenger.

"Now, sir, can you explain why you ran away after being called on this jury?" asked the indignant judge. "I couldn't help it, judge," said the tremebling juryman. "I heard some one say something about hanging the jury, and I am opposed to capital punishment."—Baltimore News.

She—"To think that you once declared that you would love me as long as you lived! And now, hardly a year married, and you care nothing at all about me!" He—"But you see, when I told you I would love you as long as I lived I wasn't feeling very well, and I really didn't think I would live long."—Boston Transcript.

FILIPINO BURIAL CUSTOMS.

They Have a Resemblance to Ancient Jewish Rites—Unique Customs.

Among the burial customs are found many which resemble our own and those of the Jews.

As soon as a sick man died, if he was a "dato," or chief, his relatives and friends, together with a number of hired mourners, gathered together around the body with great weeping.

They did not, however, weep in a natural manner, but in a sort of song or funeral dirge, mingled with feigned groans and howls, in which they praised the dead; and while so singing they watched, perfumed and embalmed the body with some aromatic ungents, similar to the Hebrew custom.

In the islands of Jolo and Mindanao, the Moros, or Mohammedan natives, placed the deceased in a chair with a hole in the seat, and, placing a tube in the mouth, forced down a solution of camphor gum, which was so efficacious that all impurities and uncleanliness are thrown off through the ordinary channels, and the intestines are cleansed and purified, and the body thus preserved for a long time without decay.

The body is then interred in a sitting position, while around it are placed a jar of water and food, those natives believing in the transmigration of souls.

Returning to the Tagalos:

The bodies of their dead chieftains, decorated with gold and jewels, were placed in a coffin hollowed out of the trunk of a hardwood tree, many varieties of which were considered proof against decay, and after carefully sealing the lid the coffin was placed, either on the highest part of the house or under it, in which case it was slightly raised from the ground and surrounded by a fine bamboo fence to keep away animals.

The poorer classes were placed in the fields or in the public square.

The Visayans place the coffins in mountain caves or on the top of steep rocks near the sea, and to this day these coffins can be seen on rocks so precipitous and high that no small wonder is excited as to how they were gotten up.

A priest recounts that near the coast of Catbalogan there was a high rock, the top of which was covered with bones and decaying coffins.

The Indians passed this place in reverential fear, and at night especially feared to land there.

The priest, hearing of this, ascended the rock, threw the bones and coffins to the beach below and then burned them to ashes, which he scattered in the sea.

The horrified Indians predicted that he would soon suffer a sort of penalty called "balin," such as being turned into stone, struck by lightning or something similar; but, as he quaintly adds: "I laughed at them and increased the flames (thank God) without any harm coming upon me, the Lord so permitting that they might be relieved from their superstitions."—Manila (P. I.) Freedom.

The Sex of Ships.

The word "ship" is masculine in French, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese, and possesses no sex in Teutonic and Scandinavian. Perhaps it would not be an error to trace the custom of feminizing ships back to the Greeks, who called them by feminine names, probably out of deference to Athene, goddess of the sea. But the English-speaking sailor assigns no such reasons. The ship to him is always a lady, even though she be a man-o'-war. She possesses a waist, collars, stays, laces, bonnets, ties, ribbons, chains, watches and dozens of other distinctly feminine articles.—Collier's Weekly.

Another Matter.

"You told me your heart was mine," said Blower.

"I know," replied his heiress wife, "but I said nothing about my pocketbook."—Philadelphia North American.

The Sunday-school has closed until April, by the unanimous vote of the school.

Prof. Hann's school will give an entertainment, Thursday night, at the school house.

Our neighbors are all done killing hogs, and we are glad of it, on their behalf and ours also.

Mrs. Dr. John Walton, of Home City, Ohio, was visiting relatives here, the latter part of last week.

The tobacco in this vicinity is all sold, and mostly delivered, at prices ranging from 5 to 8 cents around.

The literary club, of Petersburg, was handsomely entertained at Mr. James T. Gaines', last Friday night.

Chas. Gaines, the hustling turkey dealer of this neighborhood, has been making things lively and many hearts glad, lately.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Gaines entertained a number of friends and relatives Friday, in celebration of Mr. John Oropper's birth day.

The necessary money has been subscribed to run our telephone line from here to Bullittsville, and when they get theirs ready the line will be put up.

Sam Ackemeyer, a hustling butcher of Cincinnati, well known in the county, was here Sunday looking after Christmas roasters for his holiday trade.

We regret our inability to get up a very newsy contribution this week as suggested by the Rabbit Hash correspondent week before last, but when we get through with the Turkey Hash that we will have in the next week or two, we promise you a communication worth reading.

Jonas Stevens shot seven holes through a hat thrown up in the air, with a flobert rifle, before the hat reached the ground, so Tom Randall was telling me. If Buffalo Bill chances to see this item, Jonas will get a job. Tom explained, however, that the hat was so doubled up that one bullet did all the work.

Petersburg.

The sick are all on the mend, but your Cor. is still gripped.

Dr. Hays and Chas. Balsly, of Bullittsville, were in town Friday.

Mr. A. Dean is the only Mexican War Veteran in this vicinity. He is 82.

Hundreds of our citizens viewed the eclipse of the moon, Saturday night. It was almost total.

A Boone county man is going to be Collector when Bryan is President, and a Carroll county man, Congressman, and a Boone county man, Circuit Judge.

Col. R. E. Slater, of Lawrenceburg, has been made political editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer. He was for a long time, staff correspondent on that paper. He is well known here.

Allie Winston, the rip-roaring, slaughdoodle-whacker, from Utzinger was making political speeches in town Saturday. He is going to stump the county for Wingate for Sheriff, Dimo Gaines for Assessor, and Scott Chambers for Co. Clerk.

A. Owsley Stanley, of Henderson, lectured on Pythianism at the M. E. Church, Saturday night. The house was comfortably filled, and the best of attention was given the speaker, whose story of Damon and Pythias was beautiful indeed, and interested every one present. He has a dramatic touch to his oratory and at times he had the audience in tears and again in laughter. After the lecture members of the order and Masons and Odd-Fellows present repaired to Gordon's Hall, where refreshments awaited them. About 100 persons set down to the splendid lunch prepared by Caterer Crisler. Hon. T. B. Mathews was toastmaster, and acted as if he was an old hand at that business. Brother Stanley replied to several toasts in his happy style, and his story of Abe Lincoln during the war was new and appreciated by the crowd. Mark Glennon, of Lawrenceburg, presented the toast-master with a pickled pig-foot. T. B. replied that he thought Mr. Glennon had crippled some one of his citizens, getting the pig's foot. Among those present from a distance were J. F. Blyth, Clem Kendall, Will Passons, James Clore, Tony Bentler, of Burlington; Will Riggs, of Rising Sun; R. M. Wilson, Sam Wilson, S. N. Riggs, J. E. Hodges, E. L. Clements, R. R. Clements, Solon Stephens, H. C. White, R. L. Piatt, Colin Kelly, of Rabbit Hash. We failed to learn the names of the visitors from Lawrenceburg, but there were about fifteen in all, and they had a splendid string band under the leadership of J. C. Wiles. It was an evening pleasantly spent, and will do the secret orders much good.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

[Western Tobacco Journal.]

Old Tobacco took a turn for the better this week and the sales were much more satisfactory than they have been for some time. There was stronger bidding by the large manufacturers and the offerings, which were quite large, were readily taken at outside marks. Everything, excepting the very highest grades, sold at advanced prices.

At the present rate of selling Old stock it will soon be exhausted; at least the stocks in the city are very light and there are only occasional lots in the country yet to ship. True, there is but one more week in the year, for sales, but the immediate demands of the manufacturers in the first month or two of the new year will, to a large extent, have to be supplied by Old Tobacco, particularly so if the weather is unsuitable for the handling of the new crop. We think therefore that these goods are in a strong position.

New Tobacco sold up to 15½ cents at the Cincinnati-Miami House, and while it did not participate in the advance quoted on old stock, still it held its own, and only in a few cases the results failed to satisfy the shippers. The increased offerings show a large proportion of very good tobacco, with plenty of color and body and we have no doubt that the crop, as a whole, will suit the manufacturer about as well as that of 1898.

The 1,018 hhds. of old offered averaged $9 17 per hundred pounds, as against $9 28 for the 1,304 hhds. for the previous week, and $8 40 for the corresponding week of last year. The daily averages were as follows: Tuesday, $8 40; Wednesday, $9 35; Thursday, $9 11; Friday, $10 42.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.
[Courier.]

A. Carter, of Dry Ridge, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. Assets, $21,500; liabilities, $24,000, including his $14,500 overdraft in bank at Dry Ridge.

Contractor Ed Hearn is progressing nicely with the New Catholic church and will finish that structure in another month of good weather. It will when completed be one of the handsomest structures in Williamstown.

Hunters have been more unsuccessful in finding game in this locality than for many years. It is believed that most of the quail froze to death last winter during the excessive cold wave in February and it will be several years before the supply will be replenished.

W. L. Allphin Circuit Court Clerk has appointed E. E. Loomis, as his chief Deputy, and expects to turn over to him the care and management of Circuit Court Clerk's office for the next two years. Mr. Allphin himself expects to take a trip West and be from Williamstown for some time to come. His object is to get away from Williamstown for a while, and the very unpleasant memories that the town has produced for him in his short residence here.

Mr. Nick Webster who is about 55 years old, is a farmer, Turnpike Commissioner and Tobacco agent and rehandler has been bragging to a few of his intimate friends in the last year that since he was twenty one years of age he had grown two full sets of jaw teeth, something very rare indeed. Since the Peoples Bank trouble in which Mr. Webster was a director, some of his friends to whom he told the jaw teeth story have suggested to him that he put in some of his leisure time growing a new set of "eye teeth."

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1899. NO. 10

The family of Mrs. S. H. Hughes, so well known to Paducah people, for nearly one hundred years have been prosecuting a claim against the United States Government, arising from what are known as the French spoliation claims. In the latter part of the last century, just about one hundred years ago, during the consulate of Napoleon, we had a short naval war with France, and American commerce was considerably damaged by French privateers. The French Government finally agreed to pay for the damage. Capt. Ebenezer Peck, the grandfather of Mrs. S.H. Hughes, was a large shipowner in New Haven, and suffered heavily from French depredations. His claim was large, and now, in the third generation, it has just been finally adjusted. The decendants of the old sea captain are scattered over many States. Many of them have built hopes of fortune on the final outcome of their claims. Like all such matters, it has been the theme of many a family hope and plan. But the ship that sailed away a hundred years ago with the fortunes of Capt. Ebenezer Peck have come into port at last. Mr. Samuel Hughes, the well-known president of the City National Bank, is proudly exhibiting a check for the munificent sum of $14 36, which he has just received in full settlement of his share of the claim that his family have pressed for nearly a hundred years. Some twenty-one other decendants of Capt. Peck share with him, but none gets more than $150.—Paducah News.

The need of better buildings on Capital Square is admitted by every citizen. Kentucky has expended more for keeping the present public buildings in repair than was originally expended for their construction. The east wing cost $155,000 in its construction, while the central building, or old State House, now used for the Legislature, Library and Court of Appeals, was completed in 1829 at a cost of $85,000. Polished Kentucky marble was used in that structure, and its workmanship has been admired by many a visitor to the Capital City. Thus the first permanent Capital cost Kentucky $3,500, the second building was constructed from voluntary subscriptions, while the third building was erected at a cost of $40,000—$20,900 of which sum was raised by individual subscriptions. While fire invaded Kentucky's Capital, it also destroyed the building furnished by Frankfort and its inhabitants to the State to house its General Assembly. The total cost of Capital Buildings from the State Treasury has been $232,600.

Kentucky was admitted into the Union in 1792, and from that good day to the present—a little more than one hundred years—there has been expended for Capital Buildings the sum of $262,609. Her public buildings have not been referred to as second in appearance to the great Capital Building at Washington City, nor has any architect ever visited Frankfort to secure a duplicate of the plans of this old structure for duplication in any sister State.

In many of the county seats of adjoining States may be found more comfortable and convenient court houses than the State presents for housing its officers and preserving its archives. As the county seat is the county's pride so should be the seat of government the pride of the State. The product of the State must bring it into life, and as such it will be the pride of Kentucky. It must be the Capital of the State, of all the people, and not of any locality.—Western Argus.

OWENS made the race for Congress in the Seventh District, under the log cabin and on a platform that denounced Goebellism, and stopped. Gayle, who ran on a platform endorsing the Louisville platform (Goebelism if you please to call it), defeated him by over 4,000 majority, the largest majority ever given a candidate for Congress in that district. That is the way the blue-grass Democrats are stamping out socalled Goebelism.

Our Kansas hero would have crossed Tugela river and had his story in the hands of his publishers long ago.

Editorial Paragraphs.

The Southern delegates to the next Republican National Convention are likely to be a drug on the market.

Perhaps General Buller would have done better if he had had a private car equipped with a bathtub and an Administration to restrain him.

Some other remedy than the Wisconsin Payne Killer will have to be prescribed for that bad case of southern Republican representation swelling.

Some Republicans express themselves in such optimistic language when talking on the subject of prosperity, that we begin to fear for the gouty laboring man.

Admiral Cervera's report to the Spanish Navy Department fills a very large book, but he makes no reference in it to any inconvenience that may have been rendered him by Admiral Sampson.

Mr. Quay, no doubt, begins to believe the truth of that saying, "Blessings brighten as they take their flight," since that Senate seat is fast slipping away. Brother Wanamaker seems to have worked a bargain counter deal on it.

Oom Paul expressed gratitude to his American friends, but he will not neglect to hand out dumdum bullets to his soldiers right along. His adage seems to be "Pray unceasingly and keep your powder dry," as well as seeing that there is a liberal supply of cold lead?

The Civil Service reformers have rigged up a fine argument in favor of the merit system in reviewing the advancement of Gen. Leonard Wood. But it must not be lost sight of that he did not reach his present position through his capacity to answer intricate and irrelevent questions propounded by a commissioner.

Up in New York State, Tom Platt is beginning to discipline his Teddy. Already there is talk of an organization nominee for Governor next year, because in a Presidential year any old thing for Governor can be elected, so the Senator thinks. Accordingly Teddy's grin has become less pronounced and he is showing his teeth with a vengence.

There appears to be very clear evidence that postmasters in Utah have been appointed by McKinley who are charged with being polygamists, yet when an effort was made in the House of Representatives for an investigation of these charges, the Republicans promptly voted against it. Of course the proceedings to remove Roberts show no abatement. The inconsistency of the Republican is thus made plain to the country.

McKinley nominates a Republican as the third member of a board, having two Republican members and concerning which the law says, the members shall not all be of the same political party, and then feels aggrieved because the Senate sees fit to question the propriety of the selection. Mr. Bynum's thirst for office has evidently led his beneficiary, Mr. McKinley, into error, but campaign pledges should not be paid with public places, and the Senate will do well if it refuses to confirm the unfit appointment.

The fact that an Assistant Secretary of the Interior, a man as close to McKinley as the Hon. Webster Davis is now on his way to the Transvaal, should not be lost sight of by the public. It is claimed he visits that country for his "health", but it strikes the ordinary observer that South Africa is a very unhealthy place for Anglo-Saxons just at present. We believe his visit was prearranged and designed to show Europe the compact between this country and Great Britain, for the purpose of intimidating any European power from interfering in behalf of the Boers.

The trusts have made it very clear to the Republican bosses that contributions from them to the McKinley campaign fund are contingent on Hanna running the machine. He has been "persuaded"—to run it.—Kansas City Times.

The address of the Democratic leaders to the voters of the State, giving official indorsements to the contests instituted by Senator Goebel and other candidates on the Democratic ticket, is as follows:

"The Democratic party of Kentucky, throughits several state committees, has unanimously declared that the best interests of the party, as well as justice, demands that contests shall be made by every candidate on the Democratic ticket for the respective offices to which they were nominated. The committees feel that it is proper that they should, in a concise form, state the grounds upon which they base their action.

"The State Board of Election Commissioners at its recent session issued certificates of election to all of the Republican candidates for the state offices, but the board expressly declared in the opinion that it rendered that it acted simply as a canvassing board, without power or authority, as it construed the law, to inquire into the legality or validity of any contested votes. The board went further and in substance expressed the opinion that, if clothed with the authority to go behind the returns and determine the matters in contention, the certificates of election would not have been issued to the parties who received them.

"We feel that in the light of the action of this board the Democratic party cannot do less than carry its contention to the tribunals created by law for the determination. The grounds upon which this contest is based consist of the protest against the use of tissue ballots in many of the overwhelmingly Republican counties of the state. The use of these ballots is not only in violation of the letter of the law, but is in utter and open defiance of the spirit of the law, and the use of these ballots furnishes not prima facie, but conclusive, evidence of purposed fraud.

"Another ground of contest is because of the plain violation and defiance of the law by the late Republican Governor of the state, who, while actively engaged in the making of stump speeches and the prosecution of a partison political canvass, ordered out the military, and, in violation of both law and precedent, assumed personal command of the troops in the metropolis of the state, parading the streets of Louisville on the day of the election with his soldiers and Gatling guns, invading the voting booths and forcing into them, against the protest of the lawfully appointed election officials, pretended inspectors and challengers, who, the highest Court of the state has decided, had no lawful right to be present.

"The issuance of the certificates of election to the Republican candidates is contested upon the further ground that both a Federal and a state Judge, without warrant of law and in defiance of every prompting of fair dealing and decency, interfered with the holding of the state election, the one by menacing charges to a grand jury and by the employment of Deputy United States Marshals, and the other by the issuing every mandamus and injunction asked for by the Republican party, which latter judicial acts have been declared by the Supreme judicial tribunal of the state to have been unlawful.

"Another ground is the use in the Republican party of an immense corruption fund, contributed by the most powerful railroad corporation of the commonwealth, whereby many thousands of votes were bought against the Democratic party and its candidates, because that party, in the platform adopted in its State Convention, dared to advocate measures of relief demanded by the people of the commonwealth.

"Attention is called to the fact that, although the most heated political campaign that ever occurred in the commonwealth preceded the recent election, yet over 10,000 legally registered Democratic voters failed to vote in the city of Louisville alone. This fact can only be accounted for by the unlawful use of the military power of the commonwealth by the Republican Governor and by the unlawful use of the judicial power by a partisan judiciary, whereby wholesale intimidation was effected.

"These are the principal grounds upon which the Democracy of Kentucky rests the contests that it has declared shall be instituted. If the law requiring all elections in this state to be held by secret ballot is to be openly and flagrantly defied in Republican counties and Republican districts, and if elections are to be determined by the counting of votes so given, then we have reached the end of free and fair elections in Kentucky. If the future of our people is to be determined with the military arm of the state dominating the citizen in the depositing of his ballot, then elections have become worse than a farce and made simply the prelude to a tragedy in which the last semblance of individual liberty and popular government is to be sacrificed. There can be no greated menace to popular rights and the freedom of the citizen than the employment of the military arm of the Government for the furtherance of partisan purposes, unless it be the more insidious and cowardly practices employed in the recent election by both Federal and state judges at the dictation of one of the parties to the contest.

"Upon no conceivable ground can a Federal Judge either justify, excuse or palliate his interference in an election for state officers only. Whilst the action of Judge Toney, by decision of the Court of Appeals, is stripped of every semblance of excuse and left in its native deformity to be condemned, rebuked and denounced by the people who were its victims, no more important question confronts the people of the commonwealth than the question whether a great corporation, owned not in Kentucky, not in the United States, but in Europe, can buy an election and thus control the making, construction and execution of the laws. Even now the hirelings of this corporation boast that it will buy control of the General Assembly of the commonwealth and thereby prevent the enactment of laws the people desire, and prevent the Democratic candidates from obtaining possession of the offices to which they were duly elected.

"Both before and since the election of November 7, 1899, the Republican party has continuously employed threats of violence and practice of intimidation; nor has it even desisted yet.

"To all this threatening the Democracy has replied that it would stand upon the law: that it would carry its contention to the tribunals which the law has established for their decision, and to the verdict of these tribunals alone would it bow in submission.

"If the Board of Election Commissioners had no authority to pass upon the question at issue (as it declared it had not) we simply propose to go to those who have this authority and abide by the judgment that may be rendered. What the law shall declare to be ours we shall claim. We ask no more: we will take no less. Should the practices herein complained of pass without protest the Presidential election of next year and all other elections hereafter held within the limits of Kentucky would fail to afford an opportunity to the people of the state to express their sentiment at the polls.

"If the most important rights of the citizens are to survive in Kentucky, the laws governing elections must be fairly enforced; Judges must be taught that their judicial powers are not to be exercised upon the demand and in the interest of either a political party or corporation to which they may owe an allegiance even superior to that which they owe to the law; the great corporate monopolies must be taught that elections cannot be bought by them, and Governors must be made to know that in time of profound peace the law of the commonwealth is not to be pushed aside by the bayonet.

"Your committees are not unaware of the fact that the contests now proposed to be inaugurated should not be entered upon for light ortrivial reasons; that considerations of a personal or partisan character should be ignored in deciding upon so grave and important a step; that the passions usually aroused in a heated campaign should be given a proper cooling time, and that only considerations of an overwhelming public necessity should be allowed to control. We believe these conditions have been observed. Not willing to trust our judgments in a matter so profoundly affecting the interests of the state, we summoned in joint council with us a large number of the wisest and most conservative citizens from all parts of the state.

"It was the unanimous verdict of these gentlemen that a blow had been struck at the very vitals of free government by the methods and practices enumerated, and that every consideration that can impel freemen to act for the protection of their most sacred rights demands that the foul wrongs inflicted on the state shall be redressed through the agencies appointed by law. In the proceedings to be accomplish this end it is but just to say that the ambition of no man or candidate has been considered; the situation rises above the individual and becomes one of great peril to the citizenship of the whole state, and the candidates of the Democratic party, in obedience to the supreme duty of the hour, are used merely as the instruments by which these wrongs may be rectified and the dignity and honor of our state vindicated.

"These are the reasons that have moved your committee to the inauguration of these contests, and we confidently expect the Democracy of Kentucky to vindicate the action we have taken."

Jas H. Dorman jr, of Owen county, writes to the news an interesting letter, from Cuba, and of which the following is an extract:

"To one who has been in Cuba any length of time, and has had an opportunity of observing its resourceses material wealth and possibilities, there can be but one conclusion drawn, one decision rendered; that is, it has before it an era unquestionably flattering, a destiny of great promise and hope. Possessing a climate approaching perfection; a soil that returns a bounteous and generous product every three months; streams of water, plentiful in quantity, and pure in quality, permeating rich valleys and affording natural irrigation; vast virgin forests of mahogony, ebony, cedar, pine and rosewood where the sound of the lumberman's axe has never been heard; broad acres of the finest grass for cattle; fruit of every description, teeming and abounding upon every side; this is the State of undeveloped Cuba. Seemingly few countries have had before it more auspicious prospects, or more assured promises of future prosperity and plenty.

"Since the United State has taken charge of insular government, as a result of the late war, there has been a marked and signal change. Through the wise methods and tireless efforts of those in authority (the civil and military government) Cuba has emerged from wasted fields and devastation of "non sparing" and is now on the road to rapid improvement. The distress and want, prevalent a year ago, are no longer in evidence. Those who suffered by war have returned to their various vocations and to the fields, and are rapidly repairing depleted estates. Houses are being constructed, municipal improvements being effected, and when the fertile land is again made to perform its full duty to man in it's abundant crops of coffee, tobacco, sugar, rice and fruit, cornucopia will be the appropriate emblem.

"Beyond the present care and vigilance of the United States, however none can vouch. Advancement and progress will surely continue so long as our government acts as a protectorate. It is an universal belief, verified by observation and experience that the Cubans are incapable, at present of autonomy; and in the instance the island is turned over to them, insurrections, riots, scramble and contentions for office, will retard it's advancement and cause it to degenerate into its original chaotic state of Spanish rule; that the negroes who it will be remembered did the most of the fighting for independence, will make demand for patronage (which demand cannot be unnoticed) thus causing the installation of ignorant and incompetent officers, invested with governmental power.

"Under the present regime, revenues of the island have increased materially; the surplus now on hand exceeding expenditures by $1,500,000. The cities in the different Provinces have been made sanitary, schools have been established, postal service rendered efficient and the ravages of yellow fever greatly decreased.

"Unon the advent of American capital and enterprise, a few years more of American teachings and suggestions along the lines of sanitations, government and civilization, Cuba ought to be ready to accept the mantle of a dignified and intelligent republic, and become one of the foremost countries from the standpoint of wealth and commerce, with a people happy, prosperous and contented."

A caucus of the Democratic members of the House and Senate has been called to meet in Frankfort Monday night.

An entire new glass covering has been ordered for the roof of the Crystal palace, in London. The total glass area to be covered is about 15 acres.

The results of preliminary surveys for petroleum on the island of Sumatra are so encouraging that the land examined by a Russian engineer from Baku has been leased and workings will shortly be commenced. The petroleum thus found will probably be shipped to Japan and China.

There is a zinc and lead mine in Davidson county, North Carolina, which is in the control of an English syndicate, which is doing well. This mine carries copper in its ore, while the other zinc and lead mine in the same county, which is down 600 feet, shows similar ore, but without any copper.

There were only 31 ballots in the package containing the soldier votes sent from Cuba to the New York police board and opened late the other day. As each ballot is for a different election district there will have to be 31 polling places rented and 31 boards of inspectors will have to meet. Each vote will cost $30 by this method.

Corn would still be standing in the fields of Marshall county, Kan., if the women had not turned out and helped to gather it. The crop was unusually large this year, and help was not to be secured at any price. The women, seeing that men could not be secured, and that the crop was going to waste, turned out and husked the corn themselves.

The French war office is rejoicing over a new civilizing influence which may outdo even our dum-dum bullets. It is a rifle, and experiments have proved how deadly a weapon it is. At 2,000 yards the bullet went right through a horse placed obliquely to the line of fire, the bones in the track of the bullet being shockingly smashed.

There are places where it is dangerous to wear a ring on one's finger. A workman in the Augusta cotton mill got his hand too near a pulley, on which was a hook, and this hook caught a ring on the man's hand. He knew that if he did not break the ring or finger his arm would go, and he threw himself backwards, tearing the finger entirely from his hand, but saving his arm.

Since the report that Miss Josephine Drexel was about to renounce the world and enter a convent—a report that was promptly denied—the young woman has been overwhelmed with letters from people who would be willing to burden themselves with a part or the whole of her fortune of $16,000,000 which she would not be likely to need after taking the veil. She has recently joined a swell dancing club of New York city.

To enable travelers to cross the channel without suffering from sea sickness, a Frenchman has designed a submarine boat to be compelled by cable traction, the motive power being electricity. The boat will accommodate 240 passengers and perform the journey in one hour. Should the cables become fixed in going over the drums, the boat can be detached so that it may rise to the surface and continue the journey like an ordinary vessel.

Several of the largest abandoned copper mines in Eastern Maine will again be operated. The Maine copper mines were in successful operation in 1879, and showed good profits while copper was quoted at 14 cents. The mines could also be operated on a paying basis with copper at 12 cents, but the crash came when the Wisconsin mines put down the price of copper to eight cents. Now that copper is so high, it will be very profitable to mine it.

Paper teeth are the latest thing in dentistry. For years some substance has been sought for which could replace the composition commonly employed for making teeth, and a fortune awaited the man who was lucky enough to hit upon the right material. Although paper has some disadvantages, they are small compared to its many qualifications, and paper teeth are likely to be used exclusively, at least, until a more perfect material is found.

The rapid development of Africa is due to the gold, iron, coal and other mineral deposits. The Kimberly mines are located in British territory, just outside the boundaries of the Orange Free State, about 600 miles from Cape Town, and supply 99 per cent. of the diamonds of commerce. The existence of these mines was unknown prior to 1867, and since their discovery $350,000,000 worth of rough diamonds have been taken from them, which, after cutting, were easily worth double.

Vegetarians who are so strict that they do not care to wear an article of clothing into which any animal properties are introduced are catered for in the boot line by a London bootmaker, who is the inventor of a vegetarian shoe. For some years he has been experimenting and as a result he has produced a boot, in the construction of which there is absolutely no paper or leather of any description. Not only this, but, according to his assertion, these wear one-fourth longer than leather shoes, and the upper material is always soft.

AT A REHEARSAL

The Cotton Trimmings on the Dresses of Fourteen Girls Take Fire.

Flames Communicated to the Other Children and Eleven Died From the Injuries Received—Several Others Injured.

Quincy, Ill., Dec. 23.—An awful tragedy resulted from the rehearsal of one of the classes of St. Francis school of Christmas exercises Friday. There were fourteen little girls in the classes, and they represented different characters. Two of them appeared as lambs and wore white fleece on their garments. One of them caught fire from an open gas jet, and almost in an instant the whole circle of little ones was aflame. Sisters of the school ran to the rescue and were also badly burned.

Six of those burned died almost instantly from burns; four survivors will die. The dead: Mary Wavering, Alma Middendorf, Bertha Freund, Josie Roszewog, Miss Hickey, Irene Freiberg. The badly injured were: Josephine Bohne, Wilhelmina Kottendorf, Lena Zeiger, Laura Menke, Miss Soebbing, Alva Timpe, Josie Werner, Father Andrew Butzkueben, Sister Ludwigus, Sister Rodolphia, Sister Theodet, Sister Ephia.

Three or four little girls were dressing for the rehearsal and laughing gayly among themselves. A dozen others were grouped in the wings of the stage near the foot of the stairs descending from the dressing room. The girls in the dressing room had nearly completed their costumes when one of them brushed against the gas jet, but which it was will never be known. A touch of the flame was sufficient and in an instant her dress of cotton and light cloth was in a blaze. She screamed and ran out of the room communicating the blaze to the others as she ran. One of the girls with her dress in a blaze jumped out of a small window into the stairs leading to the stage and down the stairs. A flaming torch she was, as she almost fell down the stairs and rushed into the groups of children standing in the wings. They were all clad like her in fancy costumes of cotton, lace and silk and the fire spread with incredible rapidity from one to the other. There were 14 children in the cast of the Christmas entertainment and only a few escaped. It was all over in ten minutes and in that time four perished, seven were fatally burned and others more or less severely injured. The children were panic stricken and rushed this way and that, screaming with pain. But the agony was brief. Only a few minutes and then four of them sank to the floor dead. Others fell too, but they still lived, suffering excruciating agony.

The school house was filled with children and many more would have been killed in the panic which followed had it not been for the prompt efforts of the teachers and sisters who were in charge of the entertainment and were present. The children were in a panic for a few minutes and rushed to the doors. But prompt efforts quieted them and no one was hurt in the rush.

Josephine Bohne, Alvia Timpe, Margaret Warner, Wilhelmina Cuttendorf and Mary Althoff died at midnight. All these are between 9 and 11 years of age.

A Terrible Disaster.

Rome, Dec. 23.—A terrible disaster took place Friday afternoon at Amalfi, the popular tourist resort on the gulf of Salerno. About 2 o'clock an enormous rock, upon which stood the Cappuccini hotel, slid bodily into the sea with a deafening roar and without a moment's warning, carrying with it the hotel, the old Capuchin monastery below, the hotel Santa Calerina and several villas. Many people were buried in the debris, which crushed four vessels to the bottom of the sea, destroying their crews. The mass of earth which slipped was about 50,000 cubic yards.

Steamer Towed Into Port.

The Nasmyth sailed from New York December 3, for Manchester, and after covering more than half her voyage her shafts broke. She was then sighted and picked up by the Appomattox.

DWIGHT L. MOODY.

The Noted Evangelist's Last Moments Were Spent in Comforting His Family.

East Northfield, Mass., Dec. 23.—Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist whose fame was world-wide, died at his home here at noon Friday. His family were gathered at his bedside and the dying man's last moments were spent in comforting them.

It was not expected until Thursday by the members of Mr. Moody's family and immediate circle of friends that death would be the result of his illness. The cause of death was a general breaking down, due to overwork. Mr. Moody's heart had been weak for a long time, and exertions put forth in connection with meetings in the west last month brought on a collapse, from which he failed to rally.

The evangelist broke down in Kansas City, Mo., where he was holding services about a month ago, and the seriousness of his condition was so apparent to the physicians who were called to attend him that they forced him to abandon his tour and return to his home with all possible speed. After he reached Northfield eminent physicians were consulted, and everything was done to prolong life. A bulletin issued last week communicated the tidings to the public that Mr. Moody was very ill, but that a little improvement was noticed. This week the patient showed a steady gain until Thursday, when he showed symptoms of nervousness, accompanied by weakness, which caused the family much anxiety.

Friday morning the weakness continued, and at 8 o'clock Mr. Moody called his wife and children, telling them that the end was not far off. The family remained close by the bedside all the forenoon. The evangelist was almost free from pain, and occasionally he talked with apparent ease. About the last words he was heard to utter were: "I have always been an ambitious man, not to lay up wealth, but to find work to do." Just before 12 o'clock the watchers saw that the end was approaching, and at exactly noon the great preacher passed away.

Dwight L. Moody was born at Northfield, Mass., February 5, 1837. He worked on a farm until 1854, when he became a clerk in a shoe store in Boston, where he remained two years. He joined the Congregational church and went to Chicago in 1856, where he engaged in missionary work. He soon built up a Sunday school of over a thousand children. He was later a missionary in the Chicago Y. M. C. A. The church, built for his converts, was destroyed by the great fire of 1871. He was joined by Ira D. Sankey, and together they held revival meetings all over the United States and Great Britain. Since then he has continued the evangelistic work. He has established three schools at Northfield and one at Chicago.

The arrangements for the funeral have not as yet been fully completed but the services will be held next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Congregational church. The burial will be in the "Roundtop." This is a spot on the seminary grounds near Mr. Moody's home lot, which has become famous in connection with the summer meetings and on which hundreds of student gatherings have been held, many of them conducted by Mr. Moody himself. On this account it seemed to the family fitting that the burial should be at that spot.

WAR'S HORRORS.

The Battle at Elandslaagte Described by a London Times Correspondent.

Fifteen of Schiel's Brave Band of Twenty-three Fell in a Group—The Slaughter Among the Horses Was Great.

London, Dec. 23.—A correspondent of the Times at Ladysmith, in describing the battlefield of Elandslaagte, realistically details the horrors of war. He writes:

"The battlefield, as it stood on the Sunday, conveyed sufficient proof of the severity of the fire. The wounded had been removed by daylight, but the burial parties had not arrived to perform their last duties to the dead. The men lay there as they had fallen, a sad, pathetic tribute to the courage of the British soldier. We followed this tragic trail—Highlanders, Manchesters and mounted volunteers lay indiscriminately grouped. The solitary figures under the stones showed how little the cover had availed them. There was places where wire fences had impeded the advance. Here the carnage had been great, and one brave fellow, stooped in death, cut off as he strove to wrench a post from its foundations. On the sky line of the tableland the dead lay thickest, this being the main spot where the attack had been checked, but the white flag was already there, and strings of coolies were digging the trench, which so often is the soldier's resting place.

"We rode back to the Boer position—the little kopje upon which Schiel and his 23 men had made their last stand. The bodies of the 15 that had fallen of this little band were grouped as death had taken them. Some lay with heads sunken upon their rifle stocks, fighting to the end. Another had placed his hat upon a prominent stone five yards away and had died with his fingers pressing a charge into his magazine. What remained of the langer was the litter of shell fire. Tents were torn and burned, wagons splintered and overturned, foodstuff, dead horses and explosives lay in wrecked profusion. There remained no doubt that our shell fire had played upon the position with full effect and one could only marvel that the Boers had stood to their guns so long. But, as one of the wounded prisoners told me later in the day, there was no room to retreat, the extended rifles of the Manchester regiment overlapping the reverse of the kopje, sweeping the northern footpath while the rain of shrapnel destroyed every living thing.

London, Dec. 23.—Belated South African dispatches throw no light upon the present situation at the sent of war. There is no confirmation of the report that Ladysmith could hold out several weeks longer, and it is feared that this was circulated by the Boers for their own purposes.

The Daily Telegraph has a special from Chievely, dated December 16, which tells how Lieut. Roberts, son of Lord Roberts, fell at Tugela river. It says:

"The horses of the 14th and 66th batteries had been killed and lieutenant-Roberts Capt. Schofield and Capt. Congreve, of the rifles, attempted with gunner volunteers, to drag out the guns. Capt. Schofield succeeded, helped by a corporal and some men. Lieut. Roberts was hit by a shell. Capt. Congreve was struck and wounded slightly. After a while Capt. Congreve, Capt. Foster and Maj Baptie brought Lieut. Roberts from the open into a little ravine, where he lay hidden from the enemy's terrible fire.

Fourteen gunners, 16 men of the Devonshire regiment and - men were with Col. Bullock. When the retirement was ordered these men, with isolated parties of Devonshires and Scots Fusileers, together with some of the Queens, were cut off and captured. Many fought until late in the afternoon, a part of the Irishmen running the gauntlet of the Boer Mausers from hiding places along the river bank.

"At 5 p. m. 40 Boers approached the abandoned guns. On espying Col. Bullock, Capt. Congreve and the others in the ravine they called upon the British to surrender Col. Bullock declined, and threatened to shoot although his party had only 14 rifles. The Boers retired from the guns and a parley ensued. Then 100 Boers rode up within a few yards of the party, but Col. Bullock swore he would not be made a prisoner, whereupon a Boer knocked him down with his rifle butt."

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Chievely, dated December 17, estimates the casualties in Gen. Bullock's repulse as 1,150, including 332 missing. It announces that a portion of the British troops have returned to Frere.

The Chievely correspondent of the Standard, who attributes the whole disaster involved in Gen. Buller's repulse to the mistake of Col. Long in taking the artillery too close to the river, says:

"Col. Long fired for 90 minutes and simply exhausted his ammunition."

HER ASPIRATIONS.

A Kansas Girl Who Took a Practical View of Educational Advantages.

There was little of the idealistic about the essay of a Kansas girl at her recent graduation. Her teacher had given her for a theme the pioneer—"Beyond the Alps Lies Italy." She astonished her preceptress and schoolmates by these enspinatic words:

"I do not care a cent whether Italy lies beyond the Alps or even in Missouri. I do not expect to set the river on fire with my future career. I am glad I have a good, very good education, but I am not going to misuse it by writing poetry or essays about the future woman. It will enable me to correct the grammar of any lover I may have, should he speak of 'dogs' in my presence, or say he went somewhere. It will also come handy when I want to figure out how many pounds of soap a woman can get for three dozen eggs at the grocery. So I do not begrudge the time I have spent in acquiring it. But my ambitions do not fly so high. I just want to marry a man who can lick anybody of his weight in the township, who can run an 80-acre farm and who has no female relatives to come around and try to boss the ranch. And I will agree to cook good dinners for him and to send him to an early grave and lavish upon him a whole lot of wholesome affection and see that his razor hasn't been used to cut broom wire when he wants to shave. In view of all this I don't care if I do get a little rusty on the rule of three and kindred things as the years go by."—Chicago Chronicle.

Woman in Finance.

A Detroit man, whose wife was coming to San Francisco on a visit, accompanied her as far as Chicago and put her on the overland train. Before leaving her he gave the porter half of a five dollar bill that he had torn in two, telling the man that his wife had the other half and would give it to him at the end of the journey if she were properly looked after. When he got home he found he had neglected to give his wife the other half of the torn bill, and a few days later he received a letter from his wife reminding him of the fact, and saying she had torn a dollar bill in two and given half of it to the porter. Somewhere along the line there must be a wild-eyed darky with the halves of two worthless bills in his possession and a firm conviction that he has been worked by some sort of a new flimflam game. Meanwhile, the Detroit man is anxious to find out what sort of reasoning his wife need when she gave that porter a half instead of the whole of that one dollar bill.—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Finest Road.

"I suppose," he began, as he entered a railroad ticket office—"I suppose you sell tickets to New York?"

"Certainly, sir," was the reply.

"You have a direct line?"

"It is down on the map as the only direct line."

"As you see, sir," replied the agent, as he opened a folder.

"Yes, I see. You land passengers in New York ahead of competing lines, of course?"

"Of course."

"Luxurious coaches—no dust—finest dining cars—scenery unexcelled?"

"Yes, sir."

"By taking your line I avoid delays and reduce the chances of accident to a minimum?"

"Yes, sir, you do. Have a ticket to New York over our line, sir?"

"Can't say yet. I'm going to see five other agents, each with the shortest and most direct line, and if I find a liar among the six I'll ticket over his road!"—Ohio State Journal.

Unable to Pronounce It.

The neighbors of a certain well-known Memphis Irish family say that the good housewife and her lord never know what domestic discord is except when the old man goes home slightly in his cups. Then there is trouble, and plenty of it, for the old lady is a hard tow and she says she has consistently tried for a score of years to get "Moike to quit it." The storms, according to the story, have grown less violent of late years, and for that matter the tipsy periods of "Moike" are not of such frequent recurrence as formerly. Not long ago, so the story goes, the old man went home pretty well tanked, and his wife met him.

"Yis," she said, "ye're a-comin' home agin, an' t-that dhrunk. My, my, O, my, Moike, an' why is it yez won't call fur sarsaparilla whin ye git dhrunk?"

"Bekase," replied Mike, "whin Oi gits enuf Oi can't say 'sar-sas-as-aprilda,' an' now yez hav it."—Memphis Scimitar.

His Card.

A commercial traveler on his trip called upon a well-known chemist. He was nervous as he put his hand in his pocket and handed out a card.

"I represent that concern," said the young man.

"You are fortunate," replied the chemist. The commercial traveler was encouraged and said:

"I think so, sir, and the chemist who trades with us is even more so. My firm has the finest line of cosmetics in the country."

"I shouldn't have thought it," slowly responded the man of medicine. "Her complexion looks natural."

And he handed back the photograph which the young man had given him by mistake. He took it and left without waiting to make any farewell remarks.—London Tit-Bits.

A CHRISTMAS SERMON

Dr. Talmage Tells the Story of the Incarnation.

Sunshine and Shadow on the Cradle of the Saviour—Practical Use Made of Religious Festival Days.

[Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.]

The story of the incarnation is here told by Dr. Talmage in a new way, and practical use is made of these days of festivity; next, Matthew 1:17: "So all the generations from Abraham to David are 14 generations, and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are 14 generations, and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are 14 generations."

From what many consider the dullest and most unimportant chapter of the New Testament I take my text and find it full of practical, startling and eternal interest. This chapter is the front door of the New Testament, through which all the splendors of evangelism and apostolicity enter. Three times 14 generations are spoken of in my text—that is, 42 generations, reaching down to Christ. They all had relation to Him. And at least 42 generations past affect us. If they were good, we feel the result of the goodness. If they were bad, we feel the result of their wickedness. If some were good and some were bad, it is an intermingling influence that puts its mighty hand upon us. And as we feel the effect of at least 42 generations past we will in turn influence at least 42 generations to come, if the world shall last 3,000 years. So you see the cradle is more important than the grave.

I propose to show you some of the shadows upon the Christie cradle of Bethlehem and then the sunshine that poured in upon the pillow of straw. Notice among the shadows on that infant's bed that there was here and there a specimen of dissolute ancestry. Beautiful Ruth his ancestress? Oh, yes! Devout Asa one of his forefathers? Oh, yes! Honest Joseph his father? Oh, yes! Holy Mary his mother? Oh, yes! But in that genealogical table were Idolatrous and cruel Ammon and oppressive Rehoboam and some men whose abominations may not be particularized. So you see bad men may have good descendants. One of the most consecrated men I ever knew was the son of a man who lived and died a blasphemer. In the line of an oppressive Rehoboam comes a gracious and merciful and glorious Christ. Great encouragement for those who had in the 42 generations that preceded them, however close by or however far back, some instances of pernicious and baleful and corrupt ancestry.

To my amazement I found in those parts of Australia to which many years ago felons were transported from England that the percentage of crime was less than in those parts of Australia originally settled by honest men and good women. Some who are now on judicial benches in Australia and in high governmental position and in learned and useful professions and leaders in social life are the grandsons and granddaughters of men and women who were exiled from Great Britain to Australia for arson and theft and assault and fraud and murder.

Since we are all more or less affected by our ancestry we ought to be patient with those who go wrong, remembering that they may be the victims of unhappy antecedents. How lenient it ought to make us in our judgment of the fallen! Perhaps they had 42 generations back of them pushing them the wrong way. Five hundred years before they were born there may have been a parentage of iniquity augmented by a corrupt parentage 200 years ago. Do not blame a man because he cannot swim up the rapids of Niagara. Do not blame a ship captain because he cannot contride a Caribbean whirlwind. The father of this man who does wrong may have been all right and his mother all right, but away back in the centuries there may have started a bad propensity which he now feels. One of the Ten Commandments given on Mount Sinai recognizes the fact that evil may skip a generation, when the commandment speaks of visiting "the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation," but says nothing about the second generation; and if evil may skip one generation why not two and three and four and five generations, making a mighty leap and alighting very hard upon the head and the heart of some poor victim? Better be a little merciful toward the culprit lest after awhile some hereditary evil born in the year 1600 or 1700, having skipped the centuries, alight just as heavy upon you.

Meanwhile keep carefully your family records. The old place for the family record in the Bible, between the Old and the New Testaments, is a most appropriate place. That record, put in such impressive surroundings of chapter, bounded on one side by the prophecies of Malachi and on the other side by the gospel of Matthew, will receive stress and sanctity from its position. That record is appropriately bound up with eternities. Do not simply say in your family record: "Born at such a time and died at such a time," but if there has been among your ancestors some man or woman especially consecrated and useful make a note of it for the encouragement of the following generations. Two family records of the Bible—the one in Matthew reaching from Abraham to Christ and the other in Luke beginning with Joseph and reaching back to the garden of Eden, with the sublime statement "which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." I charge you to this duty of keeping the family record by the 42 generations which are past and the 42 generations which are to come. It is a good thing—the new habit abroad of seeking for one's pedigree. The old family record hardly ever went back further than the grandfather and grandmother. Not one of us knows anything about our great-grandparents, although they may have been indescribably better than their children or grandchildren.

Another shadow of the Christie cradle was that it stood under a depraved king. Herod was at that time ruler and the complete impersonation of all depravities. It was no unfavorable time for innocence to expect good treatment. So dark was the shadow dropping on the cradle from that iniquitous throne that the peasant mother had to lift her babe out of it and make hasty flight. Depraved habits of those in authority are apt to be copied by subjects, and from the immorals of the Herodic throne I judge of the immorals of a nation. There was a malaria of sin in the air when the infant Christ first breathed it. Thickest shawl could not keep the babe warm when in that wintry month, with his mother, he became a fugitive.

It was while the peasant and his wife were on a visit for purposes of enrollment that Jesus was born. The Bible translators got the wrong word when they said that Joseph and Mary had gone to Bethlehem to be "taxed." People went no farther then to get taxed than they do now. The effort of most people always has been to escape taxation. Besides that, these two humble folk had nothing to tax. The man's turban that protected his head from the sun was not worth taxing; the woman's sandals which kept her feet from being cut by the limestone rock, of which Bethlehem is mostly made up, were not worth taxing. No; the fact is that a proclamation had been made by the emperor that all the people between Great Britain and Parthia and of those lands included should go to some appointed place and give their names in, be registered and announce their loyalty to the Roman emperor. They stood up before the officer of the government and answered the questions: "What is your name? Where were you born? Where do you live now? Lift your hand and swear that you will support the empire of Cæsar Augustus." During that patriotic and loyal visit the first cry of the Divine Boy was heard.

They had walked 80 miles over a rough road to give in their names and take the oath of allegiance. Would we walk 80 miles to announce our allegiance to our King, one Jesus Cæsar Augustus wanted to know by the record on which that man and that woman wrote their names, or had them written, just low many people in his empire he could depend on in case of exigency. How many men would unsheath sword for the Roman eagle, and how many women could be depended on to take care of the wounded on battlefields? The trouble is that in the kingdom of Christ we do not know how many can be depended on. There are so many men and women who never give in their names. They serve the Lord on the sly.

In all our churches there are so many half and half disciples, so many one-third espousers. They rather think the Bible is true, at any rate parts of it, and they hope that somehow Christianity will disenthrall the nations. They stay away from church on communion days and, hope when they have lived as long as they can in this world they can somehow sneak into Heaven. Oh, give in your names! Be registered on the church record down here and in the Lamb's Book of Life up there. Let all the world know where you stand. If you have to go as far as Joseph and Mary walked, if you have to go 80 miles before you find just the right form of worship and just the right creed, start in this modern December, as those villagers started in ancient December, and amid the congratulations of church militant and church triumphant give in your names. It was while Joseph and Mary were on a visit of duty and obeying a reasonable command of Emperor Augustus that the star pointed to the place of nativity.

Christ's oratory was unlike anything that went before or came after. Even the criticism of the world said: "Never man spake like this man." Dramatic? Why, He took up a child out of the audience and set him on a table, and by the embarrassed look of the child taught humility. He sent the prosecutors of a poor, sinful woman, blushing and confounded, out of the room by one sentence of sarcasm. Notice His power of emphasis, and enunciation when He revealed Himself after His Resurrection, by the peculiar way He pronounced the one word "Mary." His power of look shown by the way Peter, the great apostle, wilted under it. The book says: "The Lord turned and looked upon Peter." It was an omnipotent facial expression. He looked upon Peter. Power of distinct utterance, so that every one could hear. "He opened His mouth, saying." No mumbling and indistinct utterance. He opened his mouth. His voice, which had been developed by open-air speaking, was a resonant and sonorous voice, or He would not have taken the top of the rocks of the Mount of Beatitudes for a pulpit, for that pulpit is so high, as I declare from observation, that no speaker that I have ever known could have from that point made any audience hear one word of a sermon.

His power of hyperbole: A camel trying to crowd its hump through the eye of a sewing woman's needle and all that learned talk about a gate called the "needle's eye," only belittling the hyperbole. Power of sarcasm: The hypocrite styled by Him "the whole who need not a physician." His power of perception: The crossing of the timbers of the poorly built house on the beach of the Mediterranean. Power to take advantage of circumstances: When an auditor asked Him whether they ought to pay taxes to Cæsar, Christ practically said: "If any gentleman in this audience has in his pocket a Roman penny, I wish he would just hand it up to Me." And some one handed Him a penny, such as you can now find in some of the museums, the obverse of it bearing the face of Tiberius, the emperor, and the reverse the words "Pontifex Maximus," the other title of the emperor, and then came the overwhelming answer of Christ: "Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's and to God the things that are God's." Magnetic and epigrammatic this inspired pensant! Useless attempts he declares as "pearls cast before swine;" unimportant results He describes as the attempt to "gather figs of thistles." Allegories! Why, the parables are all allegories, and how He flung them out upon His audiences, whole urnfuls of amethysts and emeralds and diamonds and rubies!

But we must not only look at Him from a worldly standpoint. How He smote whirlwinds into silence, and made the waves of the sea lie down, and opened doors of light into the midnight of those who had been born blind, and turned dead ears into galleries of music, and with one touch made the scabs of incurable leprosy fall off, and renewed healthy circulation through severest paralysis, and made the dead girl waken and ask for her mother, and at His crucifixion pulled down the clouds until at 12 o'clock at noon it was as dark as 12 o'clock at night, and started an influence that will go on until the last desert will grow roses, and the last case of paresis take healthful brain, and the last illness become rubicund of cheek and robust of chest and bounding of foot, and the last pauper will get his palace, and the last sinner taken into the warm bosom of a pardoning God. Where did all this start? In that cradle within sound of bleating sheep and bellowing cattle and amid rough bantering of herdsmen and camel drivers. What a low place to start for such great heights! O artists, turn your camera obscura on that village of Bethlehem! Take it all in—the wintry skies lowering, the flocks shivering in the chill air, Mary, the pale mother, and Jesus, the child. No wonder that Paul Veronese and Cuyp and Rubens and Tintoretto and Correggio and Perugino and Ghirlmndajo and Raphael put their best pencils in that scene. Lord God, by Thy gracious spirit, fix that Madonna in all our souls! So these thoughts come in upon us at this gladdest part of the year.

Swing softly, bells, on Christmas morn,
Wake not the wing of Glory!
Swing soft and swift across the snow
The old Judean story.

So I have shown you the shadows and the sunshine of that Christie cradle of Bethlehem. In these Christian times I realize that there are many cradles under shadows. Oh, the story of empty cradles all up and down the earth, in cabins and in palaces! There are standing in garrets or in storerooms cradles that will never rock again. "Rachel mourning for her children and will not be comforted because they are not." But through all the shadows break gleams of sunshine, as the clouds of the Christie cradle were cleft by glorious light. Escaped from the struggles through which we have all passed and must yet pass, those little ones took Heaven at one bound. Instead of an earthly career it is a Heavenly career, with capacities, with velocities, with opportunities beyond our comprehension. Instead of celebrating on earth the Saviour's birth they stand in the Saviour's presence. Instead of the holiday celebrations of the old homestead it is to them eternal jubilee at a table where the angels of God are the cupbearers and amid festivities that resound with a laughter and a music and blaze with a brilliance and a glory "that eye hath not seen nor ear heard." No use in wishing them a merry Christmas, for the merriments of Heaven ring out upon them from temples that are always open, amid pleasures that never die. Oh, it is not a dull Heaven, but a lively Heaven, for there are so many children there! They throng the streets; they look out of the "House of Many Mansions;" they stand on the beach to see the fleets cast anchor within the vale; they crowd the gates with greetings when the old folks come in; they clap their hands in an eternal gladness; they dance in an eternal glee. See you not the sunshine that pours into the shadows of that cradle until they are all gone?

But shadows have their uses. There must be a background to every good picture. Turner always put at least one block of clouds on his canvas, and the clouds of earth will be the background to bring out more mightily the brightness of Heaven. And will it not be glorious if after all this scene of earthly vicissitude we meet again in our Father's house and talk over the past in an everlasting holiday. But meanwhile look out for the cradles. How much they decide for this world and the next! When Wellington was born at Mornington, England, that decided Waterloo and saved Europe. When Handel was born in Halle, Saxony, that decided the oratorios of "Judas Maccabæus" and "Esther" and "Israel in Egypt" and "Messiah" and "Messiah." When Eli Whitney was born at Westboro, that decided the wealth of all the cotton fields of the south. When Gutenberg was born at Metz, Germany, that decided the libraries of all Christendom. When Clarkson was born in Cambridgeshire, England, that decided the doom of human bondage. When Morse was born at Breed's Hill, Mass., that decided that the lightnings of heaven should become galloping couriers or stretch a throbbing iron nerve clear under the sea. When Washington was born at Westmoreland, Va., that decided American independence. When Christ was born at Bethlehem, that decided the redemption of the world. Oh, look out for the cradles! May a Bethlehem star of hope point down to each one of them and every hovering cloud be filled with chanting angels of mercy.

THE GLASS TRUST.

National Glass Co. Has Secured 87 Per Cent. of All Factories in the Country.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 22.—The glass tableware trust, known as the National Glass Co., is sending out circulars containing information that has been of a confidential nature until now. It is signed by H. C. Fry, who says that the trust has secured control of 87 per cent. of the factories, but that it has been necessary to bond the property for $2,600,000 to care for visible expenses. The trust has filed mortgages to that amount in every state in the country in which it has a foothold.

The president says that the bonds will give a working capital of $500,000, besides taking care of the mortgages. The value of the pieces of property in the trust is given as $3,416,091.89, exclusive of raw material and finished stocks, valued at $663,500; trust capital, $4,000,000; gross business last year, $4,265,000; net profit, $407,238.28. It is stated in the circular that the profit may be doubled this year by reason of the combination and labor saving devices. Indiana factories in the pool are: Canton Glass Co., Marion; Beatty-Brady, Dunkirk; Central Glass Co., Summitville; Indiana Tumbler & Goblet Co., Greentown; Model Flint Glass Co., Albany. The circular states that the chief reason for consolidating is that valuable patents and labor saving machinery, now used by but few of the firms, will be installed into all of the factories, and this, with a centralization of management, will swell the net earnings to $800,000 a year, and after allowing for the redemption of the proposed bonds, at the rate of $200,000 a year, with interest, there will be left nearly $500,000 a year to be distributed in dividends.

LAWTON'S SUCCESSOR.

Either Gens. Bates, Young or Wheaton May Be Appointed Major General of Volunteers.

Washington, Dec. 22.—It is said at the war department that the vacancy in the list of major generals of volunteers caused by the death of Gen. Lawton will not be filled until after the funeral services over his remains at Manila, prior to their transportation to the United States. It is said among well-informed officers of the army in this city that the appointment will go to either Gen. John C. Bates, Gen. S. B. M. Young or Gen. Lloyd Wheaton. These officers hold the rank of brigadier general of volunteers and each has distinguished himself in active military service in the Philippine islands. It is also understood that Brig. Gen. A. R. Chaffee, who has been chief of staff to Gen. Brooke, commanding the division of Cuba, is likely to be relieved of duty in that division in a short time and given an important command with the army in the Philippines.

Gen. Lawton held the office of inspector general, with the rank of colonel, in the regular establishment. His death makes the following promotions in that department:

Lieut. Col. Peter A. Vroom, to be colonel; Maj. Charles H. Heyl, to be lieutenant colonel. A vacancy is thus created in the list of majors and inspectors general, which will probably be filled from transfer from the line.

A LADY KLONDIKER.

Securing a Fortune and a Husband in Alaska She Will Use Her Means in Philanthropic Work.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Dr. Laella Day, who two years ago left here for the Klondike, and whose death in a snowslide was reported later, arrived at the Auditorium hotel Thursday and was registered by Edward McConnell, also a "Klondiker," as his wife. Mrs. McConnell "struck it rich" near Dawson, and her husband, who had already been years in the Alaskan gold fields, owns several rich claims. Mrs. McConnell declared that after a couple of years which she and her husband intend to spend in travel, she will return to Chicago and erect a home and hospital for the treatment of crippled children.

Cut His Throat With a Razor.

Washington, Dec. 22.—James Duane Taylor, one of the important officers in New York city of the Wagner Palace Car Co., and a son-in-law of the founder of the company, committed suicide Thursday shortly after noon at the Grafton hotel, in this city, by cutting his throat with a razor. Mr. Taylor was suffering from some nervous affection caused by illness, and the fatal act was committed apparently on the impulse of the moment.

Fire Among Shipping.

New York, Dec. 22.—Fire among the shipping in North river at the foot of Thirty-fourth street Thursday morning seriously damaged the excursion steamers Harvest Queen and Andrew M. Church, three canal boats and a tug. The excursion boats were filled with bales of straw and had been a refuge for tramps, one of whom it is believed set fire to the straw. The boats were sunk.

Denmark gives forcible evidence of increasing yields, according to J. Schoenhof in a recent number of the Forum. She has a population of 2,200,000, or 143 inhabitants per square mile. She is not only able to feed her steadily-increasing population but is in a position to export a considerable quantity of food products.

Three-tenths of the earnings of a Belgian convict are given to him on the expiration of his term of imprisonment. Some of them thus save more money in jail than they ever saved before.

BOSTON BANK FAILS.

A Receiver Appointed for the Globe National, of Boston—The Depositors Safe.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Controller Dawes Thursday appointed Special Examiner Daniel G. Wing temporary receiver of the Globe National bank of Boston. The bank's condition was discovered by Special Examiner Wing in time to secure such action on the part of the directors as will probably prevent the failure from inflicting heavy losses upon the depositors, but the directors and stockholders will lose heavily. The bank, it is understood, was involved in the Squire failure and in mining stocks.

Boston, Dec. 22.—The action of the controller in waiting a reasonable time for the guaranty to be made good regarding the bad assets of the bank is generally acknowledged to have been very generous, and it is generally agreed that if the bank had been closed last week a severe panic would have resulted, which would have undoubtedly carried down other stocks, and wrecked many strong institutions.

During the past week the withdrawals from the bank have been exceedingly heavy, amounting, it is said, to over $2,000,000 in deposits. It was stated that the closing of the institution could not affect any great number of individual depositors.

The failure is one of the most startling and far-reaching since the Maverick bank eight years ago, and as it intimately involves the value of Boston's pet copper stocks, the outcome Friday is anxiously awaited.

BLACKS AND WHITES.

A Fight in Which One of the Latter Was Mortally Wounded—Two Injured.

Meridian, Miss., Dec. 22.—Word has just reached this city of a fight between a party of whites and blacks on the Kemper county overland road about six miles north. One white man, Oscar Ford, was mortally wounded and two others were more or less seriously injured. It appears that the whites were without arms while each of the nine Negroes carried revolvers. The two parties met on the highway and a dispute over which was entitled to the right of way, precipitated the difficulty. A posse, consisting of the sheriff and 25 deputies, is being organized to go in search of the murderous blacks. There is much excitement.

COPPER ORE.

Vein Struck That Exceeds in Value Anything Found in the Black Hills.

Custer, S. D., Dec. 22.—The Vigilante Mining Co. has struck a vein of copper ore in its mine that exceeds anything in value that has ever been found in the Black Hills. The mine is about five miles from Custer, and it has created more excitement than anything ever struck in this country. The rich ore is found in the 300-foot level. The width of the vein at this time is 10 feet. Superintendent Bush has gone to New York with samples.

Annexation Proclaimed by Germany.

Washington, Dec. 22.—The following statement is made by the official German authorities here: A press telegram of the 13th inst., from Apia, via Auckland, reports that the German consul in Apia has solemnly proclaimed the pending annexation of Upolu and Savaii by Germany to a number of Samoan chiefs on board the German man-of-war, and that on the same day he hoisted the German flag on the supreme court."

Louisiana Democratic Ticket.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 22.—The democratic state convention, which met at Baton Rouge, completed its labors Thursday by the nomination of the following officers, in addition to W. W. Heard as governor: Lieutenant governor, Albert Estophnal; secretary of state, John T. Mitchell; state superintendent of education, J. V. Calhoun; attorney general, Judge Walter Guion; auditor, W. S. Frazee; treasurer, Ledoux E. Smith.

The Pittsburgh Printers' Strike.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 22.—In connection with the printers' strike in this city, the stereotypers were ordered out Thursday to assist their fellow workmen, but with the exception of two, all refused to obey the order. They say the printers were not ordered out to help the stereotypers during the latter's fight in Chicago recently and they consider themselves under no obligations, as a body, to the printers.

Mormon Elders in South Carolina.

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 22.—Mormon elders have established a church at which eight Mormon elders are at work near Ridgeland. The state legislature has been asked by the people of Hampton county to work for a law to extirpate the elders and say that prompt legislation may save them from having the mob violence that some sister states have lately had in trying to rid themselves of this sect.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Senate—Resolutions were introduced Monday by Tillman (S. C.) and Bacon (Ga.), against the retention of the Philippine islands by the United States. Each purpose to yield the islands to a government to be established by the Filipinos themselves. Mr. Morgan (Ala.) addressed the senate briefly upon the necessity of legislation to control trusts, and had his joint resolution against them referred to the judiciary committee. A bill to restore to their original status as to promotion of officers of the navy and the marine corps losing numbers by reason of the advancement of other officers for exceptional and meritorious service during the war with Spain, was passed.

House—The currency bill, which was debated all last week, was passed Monday by the house by a vote of 190 to 150. Speaker Henderson Monday announced the committees of the house of representatives. It proved to have very few surprises, as the speaker observed the time-honored custom of following precedent as to old members of, leaving them in their old chairmanships and places, and gradually advancing them as vacancies occur. The important new chairmanships are those of Mr. Broslus (Pa.), chairman of banking and currency; Mr. Grosvenor (O.), merchant marine and fisheries; Mr. Southard (O.), coinage, and Mr. Cooper (Wis.), the newly formed committee on insular affairs.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Senate—Measures Introduced Tuesday: Joint resolution authorizing the Commercial Cable Co. to lay a cable between the United States and Cuba; bill for the establishment of a high court of patents, trade marks and copyright, to consist of seven judges; authorizing the United States and West Indies Direct Telegraph Co. to lay a submarine cable between the United States and Cuba, and such islands as the United States has sovereignty over. By Mr. Cockrell, bill authorizing the West Indies Development Co. to acquire, operate and sell franchises in Cuba or any other islands over which the United States may exercise sovereignty. Mr. Aldrich (R. I.) reported house bill No. 1—the financial bill—with a substitute.

House—Bills introduced: To employ retired military and naval officers to assist in military instruction in the public schools; to require the first sergeant of each company of the United States army to call each month the names of the members of his company killed in battle; providing that any person who shall be found guilty of obstructing any train carrying United States mails shall be punishable by a fine of $10,000, or imprisonment for 10 years, or both.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Senate—Bills introduced Wednesday: Authorizing the appointment of a commission to investigate trade conditions in the Orient; construction of a Pacific cable from San Francisco to Manila and Guam and the Philippines; to prohibit dealing in cotton futures; authorizing the president to appoint a commissioner to the Paris exposition from each state; guaranteeing to the people of Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines a republican form of government and protection against invasion; proposed amendment to the constitution, providing that the chief justice of the United States and United States judges shall be elected by the people. Adjourned until January 3, 1900.

House—No business was transacted at the brief session of the house Wednesday. The time was occupied in a filibuster against a motion to adjourn. The democrats and some republicans did the filibustering, in order to give Mr. Grow, the venerable ex-speaker of the house, an opportunity to reply to some statements made Tuesday by Mr. Gaines (Tenn.) Adjourned until January 3, 1900.

GENS. BROOKE AND WOOD.

Farewell Banquet Tendered the Former and a Reception to the Latter in the City of Havana.

Havana, Dec. 23.—Sixty-five persons were present at the farewell banquet tendered to Gen. Brooke Friday at the Paris restaurant. Gen. Mario Menocal presided and Mr. Ernest Lee Conant acted as toastmaster. Senor Llorente, in proposing the health of Gen. Brooke, said: "Gen. Brooke was called upon to govern Cuba under the extremely difficult conditions of transition from the old narrow system to the new, liberal regime; and he did so without injuring the rights of any one. Cubans will always remember him with gratitude and love."

Maj. Gen. Wood, who spoke briefly in response to words of welcome said: "The United States in Cuba is the person of representatives who intend to carry out a great work and to fulfill strictly the promises of the United States congress. As for myself, I can only do what the president has sent me to do so; but I hope to enjoy esteem and confidence of the Cuban people as Gen. Brooke has enjoyed them."

Gen. Ludlow said: "Those American officials who remain behind may count themselves fortunate if when the time comes for them to leave the island they are followed by the respect and good wishes of those whom they in turn leave behind, as Gen. Brooke is about to do. The Cubans have had no better friends than the American officers."

Gen. Brooke, responding, said in part: "I shall always remember the long hours of toil in Cuba, but I shall also ever recall the kindness shown me by all Cubans, especially by those who realize that the Americans are their best friends."

At Friday's meeting of the municipal council a motion was made to send an address of thanks to President McKinley for his candid references to the Cuban people and the future of Cuba in his recent message to congress. The motion was rejected on the ground—as asserted by the principal speaker in opposition—that the message contained nothing new, but merely reiterated a former promise.

Hoping the RECORDER and all concerned a happy Christmas and prosperous New Year, we now adjourn to partake of turkey, turn over pies, etc., until 1900.

"Old Santa" brought gladness and joy to all the children in Union and vicinity Christmas. Its likely not a child was neglected and it's pleasing to know that such was the case.

Spencer Rouse, of Gunpowder, was entertained in Union, Friday morning with the same honors that Admiral Dewey would have received. Horse taken out of cart, watered, led through town and Spencer hauled through in the cart by a prominent citizen of this vicinity. Did he get mad? Nit'

James Utz and son were remodeling some bridges below town, recently, and among other planks Mr. Utz put in the bridge was one like this: "No man can run a turnpike for his health;" another was, "No man stays up nights and days together watching a toll gate except for 'the dough,'" and all dough he may not get all 'the dough' he should have what's right and no mo.

Your Cor. dropped into Richwood, Saturday morning at 10:46 to find a "fast flyer" whizzing through town at 40 or 60 miles an hour. A "snap shot" from the top of a coal car enabled us to see Mr. Clark nursing a lame back and lamenting the loss of two fellows, three spokes and a tire. Mage Conner talking politics with Jerry Carpenter and John Thomas, and they all agreed that the election was over.—Mr. Jerry Griffith looking stronger, but not well after ten weeks tussle with fever.—Mr. Jackson very much in need of a roof over his scales.—Ben Bedinger putting in new scales.

About the time Spencer Rouse was getting out of town three men drove in from Florence, talking politics at a 2:40 gait, in loud colors and anything but poetical language. They must have been McKinleyites, for all at once they realized that something was wrong with the "road they were travelling" and asked how far it was to Burlington. Ezra Blankenbeker did not tell them it was six miles as the "crow would fly," 11 miles the way they came by, or 24,994 miles to keep straight ahead. Any how, they thanked him for what he did tell them and went trotting back to Florence.

The "Blade Club" held one of the very best kind of socials, corner Main and High streets, Tuesday morning. Mr. Alfred Voshell, of Hot Springs, was made honary member and soon became a very "warm member" too. He made a talk on Kentucky living; Missouri trapping and railroading; New Madrid shaking; Tennessee reel feeting and fishing; Arkansas deer hunting; Hot Springs boiling, &c. He called special attention to a road in Missouri called "Corduroy" for short, but there was nothing short about it by any means, for it was long from five points of view; one was to look at it length ways; two points lay in seeing it cross ways; three points depended on remembering it always; four points rested on the number of poles in it (Mr. Voshell knows what Corduroy poles are) and the number of poles between them; five points existed because the 5th point could not be less than five times worse than the other four and they were bad enough from either short or long. Corduroy in Kentucky means something you wear; in Arkansas and Missouri it means a road that makes most any man swear. "Think of traveling 23 miles or more on a road made out of poles of all sizes and lengths laid down cross ways and not the same thickness by any means." Robert Adams gave some "snap shot" views of life in Colorado, Utah and New Mexico—one view told of a Mexican eating goat; another showed how a wolf "darkened the hole" and Robert fired at him as he did the "darkening act" and missed; still another, showed Robert and a companion spending the night in a deserted cabin in "Nigger Wolf Swamp" with the wolves howling on the outside and they scared almost to death on the inside. Sol Long entertained the Club with a "Cottonwood tree" description. The tree was reputed to be 11 feet in diameter, but Mr. Long refused to say how many bales of cotton were used in making it, and neither did Mr. Long say how long was in building. Ian Normau said, if he ever tracked a grizzly bear it would be with his heels pointing the direction Mr. B.'s toes were pointing. Charley Stephens was also introduced as a new member and waxed warm in describing Florida, the land of flowers, fish, alligators and crackers. He said, in particular, that a man could live longer on less grub outside of oranges, fish, oysters, bananas, pine-apples, flap jacks and other good things to eat than any place in the world except Kentucky—adjourned.

Florence

Miss Nellie Crigler has for her guest Miss Smith, of Harrodsburg.

T. B. Castleman and wife visited his brother at Burlington, Sunday.

Miss Fannie Osborn has for her guest Miss Laura Offutt, of Georgetown.

Miss Katie Grogan received a very handsome bracelet for a Christmas gift from her sister in Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kyle entertained their son, Elwood and wife, from Covington, with a turkey dinner, Sunday.

The property of the late Mrs. Angeline Osborn did not sell last Saturday, as the heirs did not think there was enough bid for it.

Quite a number of our young folks attended the ball at Erlanger, Friday night. The young ladies were Misses Nellie Crigler, —— Smith, Alice Cloud and Annie Dulaney.

Mr. Holloway, the general agent for the Singer Sewing Machine, has moved to our town. Hope some more good business, hustling men will move here and stir up the town in a business way.

Our genial hotel keeper, Michael Cahill, had a very fine fox hound poisoned, last Wednesday night, and he was just getting up a race on him. Mike says he was a sure winner as were the Democratic candidates this fall.

We noticed quite a youthful couple, the other eveuing, on the street, Mr. Henry Clay Castleman, aged 4 years, and Miss Virginia Belle Buckner, aged 2½ years. Upon being asked where they were going? they replied, "to Charley Myers' tore to get tandy," and they went, too.

We have just found out what made our old friends, Dr. Sayre and H. T. Buckner so young and jovial the other day. There has been a bill introduced in Congress to allow all the Mexican soldiers $30 per month for life, with fair prospect of its passing. Hope it will—can give our old friends our best on that. We would feel jovial if we had such prospects as that.

We have heard prosperity talked for some time, and we have come to the conclusion that there is something up, for the past two weeks the pike has been lined from 3 o'clock in the morning until 11 at night with wagons and buggies on the way to the city, and to see them come back loaded down with Christmas goods, makes us feel that maybe in the near future prosperity might hit us a lick. Glad to see it any how.

Dr. B. A. Dulaney and wife had their daughters and husbands, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Green, of Covington, Dr. Moffit and wife, of this place, to take turkey dinner with them, Monday, and wound up by giving a enchre party to their friends Monday night. Those present besides the home folks, were Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Buckner, Mr. and Mrs. Sexton, of Erlanger, Miss Nellie Crigler and her guest, Miss Smith.

Chas. Myers must have had a booming business in oysters and crackers, as he ran out of both Sunday night and Monday morning he started his head clerk, J. R. Sells, to Cincinnati for a supply, and on the way the mule ran off, upsetting the buggy and bruising up Sells considerably, but not seriously. And it is a question whether it was Sells' fault or the mules', for of late Sells is not himself on Monday mornings. Oh! well, very few young men are, who have the ladies on the brain.

The entertainment given last Friday night by Miss Mary Korn and her school, was in every way quite a success, as the house was filled to overflowing; and the children did great credit both to themselves and to their teacher, and every one enjoyed themselves, both old and young; for there were some there that have seen eighty summers and some that have seen but one, and Uncle John Bradford said, to see 68 school children on the stage at once made him wish he were a school boy again.

Walton.

Items scarce in the market, and good demand for prime article.

Bright, cheery little Miss Sallie Jones was the welcome guest of Miss Effie Lemond on Friday night.

Misses Mabel Bagby, of the Georgetown college, and Edna Ransier, of the Kentucky State University, are home for the holidays to the great delight of their many friends.

Master Clifton W. Booth, of the Walton Academy, captured the prize, a superb volume of Longfellow's Hiawatha, on the 21st inst., having received the greatest number of headmarks for spelling. Clifton feels as if he had achieved a triumph of a high order, and in these days it is one, as spelling is not ranked a great accomplishment by many of the teachers in the public or private schools. "'Rah for the little judge!"

A controversy is going on here about the roofing of houses, caused by the use of cedar shingles, and the contamination of the water that goes into the cisterns and the greatest part of the citizens can only depend on the cisterns for a supply of water for household purposes. Admitted that cedar is lasting as a roof, yet it gives a flavor to the water for years that is unpleasant to the taste and odious to the sight. It is urged that these will disappear in a short time. There is in evidence cistern on High street whose watershed is discolored and contaminated yet where roofs of cedar have been ou three years or more. In one instance the water soured. One house is being reroofed where third pine shingles were put on 28 years ago. The owner of this property is disturbed as the cedar has given evidence of tiugeing and flavoring the water so as to make it almost nonusable, and wants to know if the water can be clarified some way.

A pretentious metropolis like Walton should certainly adopt and enforce measures to prevent unnecessary casualties. One would think that the council should enforce its ordinances, but it does not do so. There is an ordinance against exploding fire crackers on the streets, but on Saturday, in front of D. F. Curley's store, someone threw a lighted bunch of crackers near the team of Lawience Ryan and frightend them so badly that they started down the street in a clear the way run, and bearlug to the right in front of Odd Fellows' Hall, their course looked as if the tongue of the wagon would put a hold in the center of the buggy that was over near Yarnell's barber shop. Everyone who saw the occurrence expected the fragile vehicle knocked into smithereens, but the team stopped almost suddenly when the tongue of the wagon was about 6 inches from the bed of the buggy. Great praise was given the horses for having the good horse sense to stop before any damage was done.

Verona.

The holiday entertainment at the League institute was quite a success. A large and appreciative audience. The technique of Miss Rice, the musical instructor, was much applauded. Miss Rice has charge of the largest class the league has ever had, requiring the daily use of six pianos for practice, besides a number in use at pupils' homes. This is Miss Rice's first term at Verona, yet she is giving entire satisfactiou.

The recitation, "Hagar," by Miss Rennne, showing the angnish of a woman's heart upon being banished from her Lord, Abraham, was very pathetic, and magnificently rendered.

The next entertainment given by the League Institute will be a "Narative Social," January 26, 1900, for the benefit of the Furniture Fund of the newly erected M. E. Church. All are invited to attend and heighten the entertainment by telling a "story"(?) Admission, 10 cents.

One of the nicest Christmas presents that has come to our town, was received by Dr. J. F. Smith. It is a chronological record of the Smith family, beginning in 1750. It was compiled by the Doctor's son, Lewis, of Sandford, Fla., printed by his sons Ed and Frank, at St. Louis, Mo.

I will say that while this gentleman, Rev. A. H. Snelgrove, who gave an entertainment at the Court-house, Monday night, is an entire stranger to me, I believe him to be a christian gentleman in every sense. It would be a charitable act to attend his entertainments. T. J. ADAMS, J. B. C.

A large barn of J. E. Crouch, of Gallatin county, was burned Sunday night. Joseph Scott, of Florence, has found the cattle for which he has been advertising. They were in the pasture of Spencer Tanner, of the Gunpowder neighborhood. Paid Dear for His Leg.

B. D. Blanton, of Thackerville, Tex., in two years paid over $300 to doctors to cure a Running Sore on his leg. Then they wanted to cut it off, but he cured it with one box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Guaranteed cure for Piles. 25c a box. Sold by W. F. McKim, Burlington, M. J. Crouch, Union, and J. G. Oelsner, Florence.

One of our old friends, who lives down on Gunpowder, had rather a peculiar Christmas experience. Now, he is not a man who imbibes too freely, but he believes in adhering to the customs established by the pioneers of this country, viz: the taking of a good drink of spirits frumenti before breakfast each Christmas morning, and it was the observance of this old custom, last Monday morning, that caused him a season of unnecessary uneasiness. Having swallowed the drink which he had carefully prepared, he was in the act of smacking his lips, when suddenly a strange and nauseating taste developed in his mouth, and it at once occurred to him that by some unaccountable mistake he had got some poison in his whisky. A family council was called instantur, and a systematic investigation was soon being made to discover, if possible, what had so thoroughly eradicated the taste of whisky from the Christmas dram of the paterfamilies. During the search for the poison from which it was feared the drink was supplied, it was discovered that the salts receptacle was about exhausted, and it was from that source that the trouble originated as he had, by mistake, used the salts instead of granulated sugar with which to sweeten his drink. His mind being relieved, he said he did not mind taking the salts, but he deplored the spoiling of a good drink.

UNION, KY., Dec., 23, 1899.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

When I was a small boy and sit on my mother's kues, the first thing I learned to spell was "Boone Co. Recorder," and I have always been glad to read its newsy columns ever since I have been able to read, and I want to tell you about the Masons' and Grangers' entertainment, Thursday night. I went and had a fine time. The entertainment was a grand success. The music was furnished by a string band composed of Union and Big Bone musicians. The play was called "Putting a Mogul Through." After some nice music by the band, the Great Mogul said: "Bring on your candidate," and when he came in it was Mr. Edward Williams, of Hamilton, and they bounced him and beat him, and turned him out; then they walked him around, tumbled him over and turned him in; then he got tired and stopped, and they threw him through three barrels that did not have any heads, but Mr. Editor, did have and hurt his head. Then they made him kneel down ou a big jug and say what the Big Mogul did, and they asked him if he would drink any intoxicating liquors, and he said nothing stronger thau whisky aud beer will I ever drink; then they made him climb a greasy pole, which they held up by large ropes, and after he climbed that they commanded him to climb Jacob's ladder. He only got to Hope, and they let him go. Then they brought him in again and made him ride a mule, which was worse than riding a goat, but he fell off, and as a punishment they cut his head off and that ended it.

After the play all were invited to supper at Mr. Clements' hall, where lots of good things to eat had been prepared, and after giving Mr. Owen Utz 20 cents, you could go up and eat all you wanted. There were lots of nice young ladies to wait on the table, and everybody had pleuty. After supper was over lots of cake and bread were left, and was sold at auction by Mr. B. L. Norman. The entertainment netted $45 50, which will help pay for carpets, painting and paperiug.

WILLIE FALL.

In the death of Benjamin Mosby Allen, which occurred last Friday, the 22d inst., at his home near the mouth of Gunpowder creek, this county loses one of its oldest and most highly esteemed citizens. Mr. Allen was born near Richmond, Virginia, December 14, 1812, and at the age of 12 years he came to this county, with his father, Jeremiah Allen, who settled with his family near Petersburg, where they resided only a few years, when they moved to the sparsely settled neighborhood near the mouth of Gunpowder. The Allen family established itself at that point, and successfully combatted the hardships of those early days, and in 1842 Benjamin M Allen and Miss Isabelle Johnson were married, and lived together a happy life of over sixty years before they were separated by the death of the faithful consort. Of this union four children survive, G. M., J. B., R. W. Allen and Mrs. B W. Adams. In 1853 Mr. Allen united with the Big Bone Baptist church, and was a leading member and a most earnest worker from the time he entered the church until failing health made active participation in this his principal pleasure impossible. He served the church for a long period as a deacon, and it is largely owing to his influence for good in that community that its work has been crowned with such success.

The fuueral services were conducted at the Big Bone church, last Sunday, by Rev. J. A. Kirtley, and the remains were laid to rest in the presence of a large concourse of neighbors and acquaintances who knew him only to admire him and to honor him.

The RECORDER will keep open house next Monday, and will gladly welcome all callers, and especially those who desire to be enrolled as subscribers. That is what we are here for.

There was lively time among the colored elite of Florence, last night, and a negro man from Erlanger made things warm with his pop, shooting several times at each of three or four colored women, but without effect. Henry Middleton was called to the firing line, but the colored man soon put Henry up a tree, when marshal Jeff Stephens was called, and finally landed the negro aud his gun, but not until he had given him considerable puuishment. The trouble grew out of the Erlanger fellow being jealous of his girl. The negro is to be tried to-day for his escapade.

The old year and the new.

ARK, how the bell's strong pulses throb and beat!
Is it from grief and pain
Because the dear Old Year, with hours so sweet,
Will never come again?

Or is it restless joy that thrills and leaps
From the dizzy spire and dome
That though the Old Year shall soon lie asleep
A glad New Year will come?

Look! as the Old Year sinks in dreamless rest,
With weary sigh and moan,
The New Year, all in regal splendor dressed,
Ascends the vacant throne.

The light of hope is gleaming in his eyes
As scepter'd there he stands,
A scroll with strange unspoken prophecies
He bears within his hands.

"Tell me, New Year," I ask, "of paths unseen
That wind far on ahead—
Those shadowy regions where no foot hath been Except by fancy led.

"What waits beyond? Will bloom and sunshine lie
Where'er those pathways tend,
Or are there mountains towering grim and high
Before the journey's end?"

Ah, though again I question eagerly,
With mingled hope and fear,
He opens not the scroll of prophecy;
No answer do I hear.

The New Year only smiles: I may not know
What future hours may bring,
If o'er me hope's sweet presence shall bend low,
Or sorrow's sable wing.

Old Year, how fair the country I have passed,
What golden hours were they!
Will not their radiance be softly cast
About my onward way?

Good-bye, good-bye, as music faint and clear
Reechoed o'er the sea,
Shall be the joyous memories, Old Year,
That shall return of thee!

ONE NEW YEAR'S EVE

IT was late in the afternoon when Mrs. Townsend saw the last piece of furniture transferred from the mover's wagon to the parlor of her new home, and now, as the clock struck 11, she looked around her bedroom in a dazed and bewildered way. Was there ever such a jumble of boxes, trunks and furniture as met her gaze!

"How can Jack leave me alone so long when he knows what a lot there is to do," she said aloud, as she sank into a chair before the open fire, the only cheer-inspiring object in the room, and looked about again, as the last stroke of the clock died out.

"Ugh, will I ever get this muddle into anything like order," she muttered. "How I hate it all, and oh, how I hope we will never move again, as long as I live—I'm tired of packing and unpacking, of arranging and rearranging. What a chaos in which to begin the New Year!" And visions of brilliantly-lighted parlors, glittering ladies, pretty girls and handsome men passed before her by way of contrast.

Then the baby stirred and she rose to place it more comfortably in its crib. Coming back to her chair by the fire she caught sight of a small blue box in a corner of one of the open trunks.

"Ah, I'll burn you now," she said, softly. "It is sentimental nonsense to carry you around any longer. This is just the fire for you, and I'm too worn out to do another stroke of work."

Lifting the lid she took out a bundle of letters addressed in a flowing business hand to

"MISS ROSE WINSTON,
'109 West — Street,
"New York City."

Somehow her heart beat a little faster as she recalled how happily it had throbbed at sight of these same envelopes three years ago. Three years! Was it only three?

A log slipped and rolled to the edge of the hearth, sending a shower of sparks before it. Harboring the musing woman, who leaned forward for the tongs with which to push it back in place. Then she slowly drew forth a letter and read:

"New York City, May 1st, 18—.

"My Dearest—

"Darling, is how I think of you, and I might as well own up. Just a few moments ago I left you, yet it seems so long—I want to be with you always.

"Do you know, dearest, that you have become more necessary to me than anyone or anything in life? I never dreamed I could love anyone as I love you, and yesterday, when you said that you were fickle, you awakened feelings that have made me sad. To-night when I said that I should try to destroy your fickleness I meant it, for the thought arises—Should she be fickle with me, what then? I am sure I don't know.

"You are my ideal in face, form, disposition and character. The more I see you the more I love you—and why? Because we think alike on many subjects, because you would make the loveliest wife man ever had, because you would make for me that for which I long—a home."

She raised her eyes to look around the disorderly room, and her heart smote her. Then she went on with the letter:

"I have not words at my command, to tell you what I think. Only know that I love you, and that if you were mine you would 'make the man.' You are superior to me, and have strength, where I am weak.

"If you had not said that you were not sure of yourself, I should ask you to be mine—but I must wait. May I not think of you as mine? May I not hope that some day you will be mine? Tell me truly, dearest. If I might only hope I should work so hard to make myself worthy of you—you are a perfect treasure. You may always believe me to be, Your own,

"JACK."

With a deepening flush on her cheeks and a tender light shining in her eyes she opened a second letter with fingers that trembled slightly—such a sea of memories was surging over her.

It began without date, but that she could easily supply:

"My Darling:

"To-day you have made me the happiest of mortals, for you promised to become my wife! Who would not be happy under the circumstances—for the man who gets you gets a prize, indeed. I shall not say what I shall try to do for you except that if love and devotion can make you happy, sorrow and sadness shall never know you.

"To-night you looked so pretty—your eyes were brighter than ever I have seen them. You looked happy. Oh, that you may always look as you did to-night!

"Sweetheart, I love you so much more than I can tell—more than I ever thought myself capable of loving anyone, and when I think it over, I wonder how it all came about. You did not try to make me love you, neither did I try to make you love me, until I found myself loving you—found that I must be with you to be happy.

"Now I am going to answer the precious letter my own sweetheart wrote me to-day. How lovely it is! It is just like her from beginning to end.

"If, as you say, my love makes you happy, it must be because you love me. If it were only love that you love, then you would be happy in the love of any one of your many admirers.

"Nothing that you say can hurt me, dearest, for I know that you speak for the best interests of us both.

"Yes, my darling, I want you to be sure of yourself, for I would not blight your life ever so little.

"Should I lose you, life would be little worth the living, yet I would rather lose you than ever see you unhappy.

"You are unjust to yourself in many ways and rate yourself too low. You say that you don't understand yourself. Did you ever know any one who could say: 'I know myself?' Dearest, others know us best—others see our faults and virtues in a clearer light than we can see them. I shall not pretend that I understand you, for it has long been conceded that the mind feminine is incomprehensible to man, but, oh, my sweetheart, all the faults you confess to are dearer to me than other women's virtues. You are you, my darling, and I love you as you are. That is clumsy, but at best I can ill express how dear you are to me.

"Your heart pleads for me, but your head does not. That shows good sound sense, and I can only hope that the heart will get away with the head.

"And now, my sweet, as a guard against fickleness I want you to give up to a certain extent your male admirers. I don't mind their calls, I rather like them, for I am proud to have my sweetheart a favorite, but you must let them know that you belong to me and that I am a monopolist. I can love you enough alone, they may like you. I can love you as much as you love to be loved—so remember, no trifling.

"I know, dearest, that you might have chosen many men handsomer, nobler, richer than I, but you will never find one who will love you more than does

"Your own devoted

"JACK."

The third letter ran:

"My Own Darling:

"I believe the happiest day of my life has just ended. To-day another beg[illegible] though I will never be thoroughly happy until I hear the words which make a man and woman one—how happy I shall be and oh, how proud! When we are married I shall always try to be the best of husbands and my first aim shall be to make you happy; then I am happy.

"You are the one to make me—make more of me than the ordinary man. There is nothing that I would not try to do for your dear sake. As a beginning I shall try to have my business hours changed, so that I may have my evenings for my sweetheart. I can say of her as someone else has said of his love:

'She's more than diamond, ruby or pearl,
She's a dear little, sweet little, neat little girl.'

"You are all that and more. You are more precious to me than are jewels—you are invaluable—they are not.

"It is after two—and I still have writing to do.

"Good-night, sweetest, dearest, best! My beautiful Rose—I love you, I love you, I love you!

"JACK."

Long the tired woman stared at the loving words—could they have been written to her? Why had she not read them oftener? Why was it that all the beautiful romance had died out of her life? Whose was the fault? Again her eyes devoured the dear words before her. How her heart warmed with tenderness toward the writer. How she hungered for the kisses and caresses he used to lavish upon her. If only tonight he would take her in his arms all tired, nervous and unstrung as she was, and pet and comfort her. If she could hear him call her by the old, fond, foolish names how it would lighten her heavy heart and rest her weary body.

Then she thought of the time she had repulsed his loving advances, of her petulant retorts, her irritable complainings under misfortunes and reverses. How far, far below his ideal she had fallen. Would he ever love her so well again? Could she ever get back to her throne?

Solemnly the bells began to toll for the dying year. They sounded deep in the heart of the waiting wife.

"Oh, God," she prayed, "for the New Year's sight, grant me patience, gentleness, love. Help me reinstate myself in my husband's heart for the dear Christ's sake."

And tears trickled slowly through the fingers which supported the tired head.

A step, a hand on her chair, a cheery voice saying: "A Happy New Year, little wife! What, crying? Why, my darling—my poor little, pretty little drowning white Rose—what a brute I've been to leave you so long," and she was gathered to her husband's heart.

He held her close till the storm of tears was over, soothing her as a mother might a tired little child, with tender words and caresses—the very words she had longed and prayed to hear.

"Oh, Jack," she whispered when she had grown calmer, "do you think you can ever love me again, as you did when you wrote these?" And she pointed to the letters scattered at her feet.

"So you have been going over it, too," her husband replied, somewhat irrelevantly, and looking down at the letters. Then taking her tear-stained face between his hands, he said, tenderly: "My foolish child, are you not my precious wife? Have you not borne hardships that a better husband might have spared you? Have"—

"But, oh Jack," she interrupted, "how have I borne them? Think of the recriminations, the reproaches, the complainings—even if you are good enough to forgive I can never forgive myself."

"There, there," said Jack, laying his warm, loving lips to her quivering, self-accusing ones, "you shall not abuse my wife. Now I shall put you to bed, but first wish me a Happy New Year and we will begin all over again."

With her arm about his neck and the old love-light shining in her eyes she murmured, obediently:

"I wish you a Happy New Year, my husband!"—Mary Wright Davis, in Every Month.

"I'LL BURN YOU NOW," SHE SAID, SOFTLY.

OLD-TIME NEW YEAR'S CALLS.

They Held an Important Place in the Observances of the Day—Origin of the Custom.

Among the festivities of old New York the observance of New Year's day held an important place, says Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, in the Atlantic. In every house of any pretension the ladies of the family sat in their drawing-room, arrayed in their best dresses, and the gentlemen of their acquaintance made short visits, during which wine and rich cakes were offered. It was allowable to call as early as ten o'clock in the morning, but the visitor sometimes did little more than appear and disappear, hastily muttering something about the "compliments of the season." The gentlemen prided themselves upon the number of visits paid, the ladies upon the number received. Girls at school vexed each other with emulative boasting.

"We had 50 callers on New Year's day."

"Oh! but we had 65."

This perfunctory performance grew very tedious by the time that the calling hours were ended, but apart from this the day was one on which families were greeted by distant relatives rarely seen, while old friends met and revived their pleasant memories. In our house the rooms were all thrown open, and bright fires burned in the grates. I recall a New Year's day, early in the thirties, on which a yellow chariot stopped before our door. A stout, elderly gentleman descended from it, and came in to pay his compliments to my father. This gentleman was John Jacob Astor, who was already known to be possessed of great wealth.

The pleasant custom just described was said to have originated with the Dutch settlers of the olden time. As the city grew in size, it became difficult and well-nigh impossible for gentlemen to make the necessary number of visits. Finally, a number of young men of the city took it upon themselves to call in squads at houses which they had no right to molest, consuming the refreshments provided for other guests, and making themselves disagreeable in various ways. This offense against good manners led to the discontinuance, by common consent, of the New Year's receptions.

IMPERIALIST ALLIES.

Republican Efforts to Get the United States Into England's Clutches.

Democracy is unalterably opposed to "entangling alliances with foreign powers."

McKinley and Hanna, who represent the republican party, favor foreign alliances and have undoubtedly made one with England.

During the Ohio campaign the democrats asserted that such an alliance had been made. Indeed, in their platform they declared against a secret or an open alliance with England or any other foreign power.

This attitude of the democracy frightened Mark Hanna, and he forced his secretary of state, John Hay, to come out with a most remarkable denial.

This letter of Secretary of State Hay was a startling innovation in diplomacy. Nothing but a political emergency in Hanna's Ohio could have compelled such a descent of the secretary of state into the muddy waters of political contest in one of the states of the union.

Heretofore the secretary of state, the first officer of the cabinet, has had his duties fixed by law, and his mission has been to deal with our foreign relations, and not with the domestic affairs of the several states of the union.

But, as the Cincinnati Enquirer says, "the poetic author of 'Jim Bludsoe' took 1½ columns of solid prose to contradict a six-line declaration of the democratic party, and so elaborate was the denial that it tended to confirm the belief of the existence of a secret alliance between England and the United States of America, instead of dispelling."

But now Joseph Chamberlain, secretary of state for the English colonies, declares that such an alliance exists.

To quote Chamberlain's own words establishes this claim. As reported by telegraph, Joseph Chamberlain said:

"It is especially gratifying to note the friendly relations existing between the Anglo-Saxon branches, and that the understanding between Great Britain and the United States is indeed a guarantee of the peace of the world."

And the peace of the world under this alliance—what is it?

Wholesale murder in the Philippines under the stars and stripes, wholesale murder in the Transvaal under the meteor banner of England.

Do democrats want this sort of peace? By no manner of means. Imperialism must suffer defeat at the hands of democrats in 1900.—Chicago Democrat.

AGRICULTURE PROTESTS.

The Administration Policy of Expansion Does Not Meet with General Approval.

The first response from the nation to the colonial policy seems to come from the agricultural classes. In conformity with the president's notion that the new possessions are as much a part of the United States as Florida, California or Alaska, Secretary of War Root proposes to abolish tariff barriers against goods of our own possessions. Immediately comes this protest from Springfield, O., from Herbert Myrick, editor of an agricultural paper. He telegraphed to the president as follows:

"We respectfully, but most vigorously protest against the admission of tropical produce free of duty or at reduced rates, as recommended by the secretary of war this morning. The protest is made in behalf of millions of American farmers, laborers and capital engaged in the domestic culture or manufacture of sugar beets, sugar cane, tobacco, cigars, fruits, vegetables, rice, etc. They will not submit to being ruined for the benefit of trusts employing coolie labor that inevitably will control production and manufactures in the tropics. That we speak with authority in behalf of these great domestic interests will soon be demonstrated."

Such a protest as that may be calculated to strike a protectionist like McKinley with great force. If this new policy of destiny shall upset McKinley's alleged protection-made prosperity, the last condition may be worse than the first. The agriculturists to whom McKinley taught the doctrine of protection evidently remember it and are selfish enough to want the benefit of it. If imperialism is a question of business, as Commissioner Denby declared in a recent article, the protectionists may make the president turn his back on the policy of destiny in order to preserve his own personal policy of protection at home. Denby said:

"The cold, hard, practical question alone remains: Will the possession of these islands benefit us as a nation? If it will not, set them free to-morrow and let their people, if they please, cut each other's throats or play what pranks they please. To this complexion we must come at last, that, unless it is beneficial for us to hold these islands, we should turn them loose."

When it comes to determining the cold, hard, practical question, "does it pay?" the president may hear protests from the nation more emphatic than even that of the agriculturists.—Utica Observer.

—Light is shed upon Mr. McKinley's ideas of public finance by his urgent recommendation that the public expenditures, already enormous, be further increased by subsidies and bounties to shipping in addition to those now provided for. His approval of projects like the isthmian canal, a cable to the Philippines, increase in the navy and the like, all involving great additions to the burdens of taxation, shed farther light on those ideas. From all of his utterances bearing in any way upon this subject it is apparent that additions to public expenditures give him no concern if they are calculated to promote his pet projects.—Chicago Chronicle.

—Problem from New England: The wages of 15,000 mill hands have been raised ten per cent. Their expenses, in common with those of the rest of the American people, have been shoved up by Mr. McKinley's trusts 20 to 30 per cent. How long will it take the mill hands to become pampered and overfed?—Kansas City Times.

HANNA OR THE PEOPLE.

An Interesting Contest in Prospect in the United States Senate.

It will not surprise the people to see Senator Hanna, of Ohio, take the leadership of the opposition to the senate movement for an amendment to the constitution that shall provide for the election of United States senators by a direct vote of the people.

The senatorial trust instrument from Ohio naturally sees very clearly the danger which this movement contains to himself and to other instruments of the trusts whose service to their masters may best be rendered in the United States senate. It is comparatively easy to defeat, by political jugglery or the use of money, the will of the people as supposed to be expressed through the acts of state legislatures. It is far less easy—in fact, it is practically impossible—to fool or bribe the whole people. And the people are not in favor of sending trust instruments to represent their interests in the senate.

The senatorial junta counted on to support Senator Hanna is powerful, adroit and resolute. It will use every means within its power to avert the disaster to trust dominance threatened by the success of this movement for the election of senators by popular vote. It possesses a tremendous advantage in the fact that it will require a two-thirds vote of the senate to pass the proposed amendment.

Public sentiment brought to bear on senators not impervious to its influence through their subservicey to the trust is counted upon to overcome the work of Mark Hanna and his trust troop in the United States senate. The people favor the election of senators by direct vote. A majority of the senate is believed also to be favorable to the proposed amendment. The necessary two-thirds majority would, it is thought, be scored under popular pressure. The fight, therefore, is between Mark Hanna and the people. It will be interesting to note which is the stronger in the senate of the United States.—St. Louis Republic.

M'KINLEY FOR SECOND TERM.

The President Has a Regular Hayride Clinch on a Renomination.

Fulsome fluttery reaches its limit in the Chicago Times-Herald, the McKinley-Hanna organ of the middle west. Speaking of the proposed change in the republican plan of representation in national conventions, the Times-Herald remarks that "there was never an occasion so propitious to the proposed reform as the present. It is universally conceded," continues our Chicago contemporary, "that President McKinley will be renominated. He is absolutely independent of political bosses, small and great; and has no need to influence delegates by federal appointments or promises thereof." Now what are the facts?

It is universally conceded that President McKinley will be renominated—because the political bosses can work their will unchecked, as long as he is in the white house.

From Mark Hanna down to the lowliest republican heeler who is supposed to control republican delegates, there is not one who has failed of his pound of flesh. "No need to influence delegates by federal appointments or promises thereof?" Why, every delegate who will sit in the next republican convention as a representative of the great, boss-ridden states of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois—whose delegations and electoral votes are alike essential to the success of the second term project—will have been paid for a dozen times over, in the surrender of President McKinley's appointive powers to the machine dictators who control republican politics in those states!

If anything were needed to complete the farce, the announcement that federal office holders will not be expected to go as delegates to the national convention would impart the finishing touch of hypocrisy and characteristic Pecksniffian McKinleyism. There is small need of federal office holders going as delegates to help nominate a president whose weak, yielding, pliable disposition has so endeared him to the republican bosses, that they would indeed be ingrates, or blockheads, to want any other man.—Albany Argus.

THE LONG PARLIAMENT.

An Aristocratic English Body That Did Work in the Days of the Rebellion.

The long parliament was made up of the very flower of the English gentry and the educated laity. It was curious how many of the leaders came from that ancient seat of learning which was so soon to become, as it for so long remained, the center of all who held for church and king. Selden was a member for the University of Oxford, and Pym, Fiennes, Martin, Vane, were all of them Oxford men, as well as Hyde, Falkland, Digby, and others who in time passed over to the royal camp. A student of our day has remarked that these men collectively represented a larger relative proportion of the best intellect of the country, of its energy and talents, than is looked for now in the house of commons. It is, at any rate, true that of Englishmen then alive and of mature powers only two famous names are missing, Milton and Hobbes. When the parliament opened, Dryden was a boy at the Westminster school; the future author of "Pilgrim's Progress," a lad of 12, was mending pots and kettles in Bedfordshire; and Locke, the future defender of the emancipating principles that now put on practical shape and power, was a boy of eight. Newton was not born until 1642, a couple of months after the first clash of arms at Edgehill.

In the early days of the rebellion, the peers had work to do not any less important than the commons, and for a time, though they had none of the spirit of the old barons at Runnymede, they were in tolerable agreement with the views and temper of the lower house. The temporal peers were 123, and lords spiritual 26, of whom, however, when the parliament got really to business, no more than 18 remained. Alike in public spirit and in attainments the average of the house of lords was undoubtedly high. Like other aristocracies in the seventeenth century, the English nobles were no friends to high-flying ecclesiastical pretensions, and, like other aristocrats, they were not without many jealousies and grievances of their own against the power of the crown. Another remark is worth making. Either history or knowledge of human nature might teach us that great nobles often take the popular side without dropping the pretensions of class in their hearts, and it is not mere peevishness when the royal historian says that Lord Say and Sele was as proud of his quality and as pleased to be distinguished from others by his title as any man alive. —John Morley, in Century.

Why the Months Are So Named.

The word "month" is descended from the Saxons, and simply means the time when it "mooneth." "January" is from the Italian word "Janus," who was god of the sun and year. "February" is from the Latin word "Februarius," and means the month of expiation, because the Roman festival of purification occurred in February. "March" is from Mars, the "god of war," and was the first month in the Roman calendar. The Jews began their year at the same time, and "July" was "Quintilius," or fifth month after March, and its name was changed to July in honor of Julius Caesar. "August" was "Sextilis," or sixth month after March. In honor of Emperor Augustus its name was changed to August. Septem, octo, novem, decem—seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth—give names to September, October, November and December.—Mary E. M. Richardson, in Woman's Home Companion.

DURABLE WATER GATE.

Description of One That Is Easily and Very Cheaply Made of Common Materials.

Farmers whose lands are cut up with branches or large creeks experience a great deal of trouble with water gaps. Every heavy rain washes the gate, or whatever may be used for the purpose, out of its place and carries it down the stream. The stock then have access to fields of corn and wheat and hence considerable damage is done the crops and the stock, too. When building a water gate the paramount idea should be to construct one that will stay where it is placed, let the rains come as heavily and as often as they may.

The accompanying illustration gives a fair idea of such water gate, one that will stay, and one that is easily and cheaply made of common materials. Take two pieces of oak, four by four inches, sawed, or two sessoned oak poles, that will span the branch over which it is desired to construct the water gap, and as shown (C) fasten them securely together with pieces of thick oak plank, leaving space for the supporters, A and B, which are arranged in a lock-fashion as shown; nail plank or flat poles to the supporters whilst the water is to run again; that is, on the top side, making the gate or device to serve the purpose of a fence in the water. The supporters should be about ten feet long and the down-ends rest in the bed of the branch or creek.

The device is made at the workshop or anywhere and is easily moved from place to place; it is set in the branch, as indicated in the illustration, the supporters being sharp so as to sink into the ground or mud. When the rain comes and the branch becomes swollen and swift, bringing logs and brush down against the device it would seem that it would have to go, but it does not; the harder the pressure of the water the more rigid it becomes and the greater its stability. The water oftentimes rises above it and all rubbish, etc., is carried over it. It will keep all large stock, such as cattle, horses and mules, out of the fields which it is desired to protect, but pigs can get under it unless the planks are nailed near the bed of the branch. The supporters A and B are poles four or five inches in diameter; they are fastened together (D) by cleat being nailed across, which makes them secure.—Farmers' Voice.

ADVICE FROM CANADA.

Ontario's Instructor in Road-Making Tells How to Get Better Roads at Small Expense.

A thorough believer in good roads is A. W. Campbell, provincial instructor in road making for Ontario. On account of the thinly settled condition of most parts of the country he finds the roads in rather bad condition and the system of caring for them in some instances rather primitive. He advises to do away with the payment of taxes by labor on the roads. This same method of payment in labor has been found unsatisfactory in many parts of the United States. He would levy a rate of assessment on the township.

For road purposes the township needs to be divided into four or five divisions and the money apportioned equally among them. A road commissioner will be appointed who should advise and consult with the town council. The council would lay down the general plan, including the width and depth of the roads, character of drainage, etc. No road should be narrower than 18 feet. Important roads should be at least 24 feet wide. All the direct work of construction, which is hauling gravel, ditching, bridge building and drainage, will be done by contract supervised by the commissioner. Repairing will be done by the day under the direction of the commission, who would also have the care of road making machines and full power to employ or discharge men without interference by the council. Finally Mr. Campbell advises work should be commenced with a definite end in view and continued from year to year if necessary until the entire road system is brought to proper standard.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Radish seed will keep in the ground through the winter. If a little place is prepared in some out-of-the-way corner and sowed late this fall, the plants will be up and growing with the first warm weather next spring. They will prove most acceptable then.

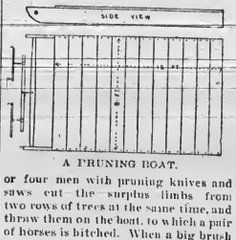
Roots stored in boxes or barrels and covered with sand are much better than when left to shrivel in a dry cellar.

VALUABLE FORMULAS.

How to Prepare Insecticides and Fungicides for the Destruction of Insects and Scabs.

The following formulas for preparing insecticides and fungicides for the destruction of insects, scab, etc., have been found very satisfactory and are highly recommended by those who have given them a trial:

For destroying the codling moth, canker worm, curculio and leaf insects of various kinds that infest apple, peach, plum, etc., mix a pound of london purple or paris green in a half pail of water, stirring until every lump and particle of dry material is thoroughly incorporated; then dilute with 200 gallons of water for the first spraying. For the second spraying increase the amount of water by the addition of 40 gallons. If a third spraying is required add still another 40 gallons of water. The foliage is more easily injured as the season progresses, therefore the necessity of diluting the material used at each subsequent application. Apply after the bloom falls and at intervals of ten days thereafter.



For leaf scab, with which orchardists have had so much trouble and have so faithfully labored to destroy, and mildew on grapevines, grape rot and other fungus diseases, the following has proved efficient: Dissolve six pounds of sulphate of copper in hot water in a wooden vessel. Slack four pounds of fresh lime in another vessel and strain out all the coarser material. Dilute the lime with 50 to 75 gallons of water and then add the sulphate of copper. This is for use on plants in leaf. Copper sulphate solution, which should be used only on plants in early spring before leaves appear, is made by dissolving one pound of sulphate of copper in 25 gallons of water to be used in this form.

A combination mixture for both insects and fungi is made by putting london purple or paris green in a barrel with Bordeaux mixture. The bark louse yields to the following: One pound of common soap dissolved in one gallon of hot water; add two gallons of kerosene and churn, with a force pump if you have one, or by stirring until the kerosene and soapsuds are thoroughly mixed. If the work has been done right the emulsion will have the appearance of very thick cream, and the oil will remain incorporated with the soap and water. Dilute with 30 to 75 gallons of water when using. Any of the mixtures will prove very destructive to the pests if applied properly. They should be applied with a force pump with a spray nozzle.

FOR THE ORCHARD.

How to Build a Pruning Boat for Hauling Away Limbs and Twigs Cut from Trees.

The pruning-boat is a handy, homemade necessity I noticed in a Washington orchard. It is used for hauling away the limbs and twigs cut from the fruit-trees to a convenient place, where they are burned. The boat is nothing more than a sled right by twelve feet, with a platform of inch boards to receive the prunings. Three or four men with pruning knives and saws cut the surplus limbs from two rows of trees at the same time, and throw them on the boat, to which a pair of horses is hitched. When a big brush heap is made the branches are drawn away to the fire and consumed. This assists in ridding the orchard of insects and disease germs, and saves the work of collecting the prunings after an orchard has been trimmed. The boat may also be used as a barn-yard manure-sled, and for hauling hay and corn-fodder to the feeding-yards.—Joel Shoemaker, in Farm and Fireside.

GROWING CRANBERRIES.

No Other Crop Brings Quite as Profitable Results with an Equal Amount of Labor.

At a recent meeting of Canadian fruit growers the question of growing cranberries was discussed and one of the leading growers offered some testimony from which the following is digested. The land for planting cranberries should be worked up and sanded, the sand to be from three to six inches deep. The irrigation is important—in fact, is essential to cranberry growing. The land should always be kept damp. Before the frost comes the patch should be flooded and kept so until the first of May. The berries do not thrive well when exposed to the winter's frost. If a long spell of dry weather takes place in summer, irrigation should be repeated. One speaker said:

"I grow the Cherry Bell variety and I realized $300 net for what I grew on one acre last year. I would like to know if there is anything else one would put an acre to that would bring the same returns. Send will correct all weeds. I now have 15 acres under cultivation, and all my neighbors have taken up the industry, although they laughed at me when I started mine. I can recommend the cultivation of cranberries as a profitable business, from the experience I have had."

By planting a few fruit trees of different varieties each year the orchard will never be old.

JOIN MANY REGIMENTS.

Militiamen in England Are Found to Be Systematic Repeaters at Enlisting.

The calling out of the militia will afford the British war office the first opportunity of judging the extent of a curious military offense, believed to be extensively practiced—that of men enlisting and serving often in as many as three or four different regiments at the same time. The opportunity to accomplish this end is afforded by the variation of the climate of the British isles, the militia regiments being called out for their yearly training, many of them to go into camp at separate seasons—from the early spring in the south of England to the late autumn in Scotland. It is therefore possible for, say, Private Jones to "soldier" for 27 days in April with the Hampshire regiment; for the same man, under the name of Corporal Thomas, to do 27 days more in the midlands in July, and yet another 27 days as Sergt. MacDougal in some lowland Scotch regiment in September. It is no uncommon circumstance upon the first yearly parade of a military regiment late in the season to detect several men with the unmistakable sun mark of the Scotch cap across their foreheads, which on being pointed, the explanation almost inevitably offered is remarkable. In a confidential tone, as if to hide the fact from his comrades, the offender will candidly admit that he has just come out of prison, where somewhat similar caps are worn.

This may or may not be true, but by the time the prison authorities in question can be communicated with 27 days are over and Corporal Thomas has departed from out the jurisdiction of that particular regiment; perhaps to serve another 27 days somewhere else. The reason why such men do not enlist in the regular army is that they are naturally of a roving disposition, and do not care to be bound for military service throughout the year, finding, probably, more lucrative employment in the intervals.

It was found at first difficult to officer the militia force. Members of the county families were adverse to Sandhurst's stringent and binding regulations, so in order to induce young men to apply for commissions in the militia a number of commissions were yearly thrown open to militia officers upon competitive examination in purely technical subjects. And from this "back door" to the British regulars, as distinct from the Sandhurst entrance, corresponding in the United States with West Point, such admirable results have been obtained that the number of commissions offered through the militia have been largely increased, it having been found that, while a man may be a numbskull over his Latin grammar and a mule at the "pons asinorum," he may yet possess a genius for military tactics and be a born commander of men.

And not only in officers, but in men also, the militia has become a great feeder to the regular army, in 1894 8,000 passing from the ranks of the former to that of the latter force. The general service in the militia is preliminary training of two months and 27 days with the colors every year thereafter, with the possibility of being called out for indefinite periods of duty by act of parliament at any period of national emergency.

The pay of the officers when upon service is the same as that of their corresponding grades in the regulars, and that of the men 25 cents a day, with rations, and a bounty of ten dollars at the end of each yearly training, which, however, is liable to be reduced by fines for various demeanors.—Chicago Chronicle.

YULETIDE AT BLENHEIM.

How an American Girl Makes Christmas Cheer in an English Palace.

At Blenheim, the home of the duke and duchess of Marlborough, ancient and modern Christmas customs are pleasantly blended by the force of the American ideas and dollars which now revive so notably the gala spirit of the natal season. Both the duke and duchess have regard for the traditions of the past, and they keep the days of cheer with all the old-time hospitality, freshened with modern innovations. For centuries Christmas day at Blenheim has been a notable occasion for all the servants, tenants and adherents to the wide estates; but since the coming of the new chatelaine of the palace there has been added to the observance a genuine sympathy and a personality which lend a new spirit to the celebration. The Christmas tree, 20 feet in height, is erected in the great audit-room, and on it and about it are placed the multitude of gifts for the children of the seven demesne towns round about, over which the Marlborough domain extends. Seven hundred children and their relatives are sometimes entertained at the palace, and yet its vast interior is never crowded. One year the duchess had 1,200 half-pound bags of sweets put up for her little friends, and when Christmas day was done there was not one left. "You should come out from London on Christmas morning, sir," said a faithful retainer on their estates. "His grace and the duchess have really loaded up a great van, and they follow the van all through its rounds in their own carriage, to give out the things themselves instead of sending them, as you might think such high-born persons would do, sir. And would you believe it, sir, her grace knit with her own hands a shawl for the little sick boy next door!"—Edward Page Gaston, in Woman's Home Companion.

As to the Quarrel.

Miss Noxum—You think you are in the wrong?

Miss Askins—Yes; don't you think I ought to tell George so?

"Well—er—not until after he has apologized!"—Puck.

Ambiguous.

An Irish eyelist was bitten on the leg by a savage bull terrier. He wrote a long complaint to the local paper, the communication closing with the sentence: "The dog, I understand, belongs to the town magistrate, who resides in the neighborhood, and is allowed to wander on the road unmuzzled, and yet he sits on the bench in judgment on others."—Philadelphia Call.

STATE NEWS.

Local option election in Pulaski county in January.

Snow in Carter county, Tennessee, fell to a depth of three feet, last week.

Bell County let contract to build a bridge across the Cumberland at Pineville.

The barn of William Treadway, Baker sympathizer, burned at Manchester. Loss, $1500. Incendiary.

The Bath county Fiscal Court met and reconsidered its former action in reducing the county Judge's salary from $1,000 to $700.

James Moore, 22, of Clark county, climbed a tree while coon hunting and fell a distance of 30 feet striking on his feet. His leg was broken and the bones protruded through the flesh.

At Glenville, McLean county, William McCrady shot and killed Will Lawrence. The killing was the result of an old grudge. McCrady fled after the shooting, and a posse is in pursuit of him.

Nelson Hamilton and three of his children were killed near Alliance, Floyd county, by the explosion of powder with which he was preparing to do some blasting. The powder was on the floor when his 4 year-old son threw some in the open fire with above result.

The farmers of Garrard county are marveling over the fine condition of the wheat crop. Never has it presented such a flourishing appearance at this time of year, and the "white worms" and other ravagers feared in the early part of the season have caused little or no damage. The growers anticipate an unprecedented harvest.

L. M. Buford, the tobacco auctioneer, of Louisville, has a lithographic copy of the bail bond of Jefferson Davis, as accepted by the United States Court, at Richmond, Va., May 13, 1867. It is signed by Horace Greeley, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Augustus Schell, and a number of others, and sets out in full the terms upon which Mr. Davis was released from prison.

A difficulty occurred on Webb farm, in Pond river neighborhood, four miles from Guthrie, in which a little boy lost his life, says the Hopkinsville New Era. Monroe Cox and "Son" Daniel, colored aged fourteen years, were out in the farm together when they became angered. Cox pulled his pocket-knife and cut Daniel in the bowels, the boy bleeding to death.

On account of the recent feudal trouble in Clay county many property holders there are anxious to get away, and are doing their utmost to dispose of their possessions in order to move to a more peaceful locality. Within the past six weeks a well-known real estate agent has had a large amount of Clay county property placed in his hands for sale or exchange, and the property owners in several instances write: "Sacrifice, if necessary, to make a deal."

L. V. Harkness, of New York, owner of Walnut Hall Farm near Donerail, has sold to Jonas Weil, agent for Nelson Morris, of Chicago, 100 head of the finest fat cattle that ever left Kentucky, for the London Holiday trade. The cattle sold consisted of fifty Herefords and fifty of the Polled Augus breed, the lot averaging about 1,650 pounds each, for which Mr. Harkness received 6 cents a pound live weight, or $10,000 in round numbers for the 100 head.—Georgetown News.

During the term just closed the Court of Appeals disposed of more cases than at any term for years. Three hundred and fifty cases were either dismissed or decided. The docket for the January, 1900, term is now in the hands of the public printer at Louisville, and will be completed early next week, and sent out to the lawyers of the State. The appearance cases number about 150, an unusually light docket, caused, doubtless, by the interest taken by lawyers in the State campaign and election.

The Goose-bone's Predictions :—Speaking of the winter upon which we have now fairly entered, Elias Hartz, Pennsylvania's aged goose-bone weather prophet, rises to thus remark:

"The coming winter will be no winter at all. This year, to make things sure, I used the breastbones of three geese. The bones were all from geese of last spring. To my great surprise, all were alike in color. I was not so much surprised by that as I was to see them nearly all white. Only the slightest bit of purple could be seen on the tail ends of the bones. The purple indicates cold weather, away off in March probably. All the rest of the bone was white, which shows beyond question that there will be no winter at all. The fact that the three bones indicate exactly the same thing might help to convince people who take no stock in the goose-bone as a weather sign; but one bone is enough for me. In the last 50 years in which I have made an annual test, the bone has never failed once. The weather always came to pass as indicated by the goose-bone. So you need not expect much snow or ice or cold weather until next March. The winter will be the mildest on record."

Just Saved His Life.

It was a thrilling escape that Charles Davis, of Bowerstown, Ohio, lately had from a frightful death. For two years a severe lung trouble constantly grew worse until it seemed he must die of consumption. Then he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and late wrote: "It gave instant relief and effected a permanent cure." Such wonderful cures have for 25 years, proven it's power to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, M. J. Crouch's, Union, and J. G. Oelsner's, Florence.

North Carolina tobacco growers have begun a movement to raise the price of the product throughout the Southern States, which planters say has decreased in 10 years from 35 cents per pound to 12 cents. District conventions are to be held in the tobacco growing states in January for the purpose of appointing delegates to a convention to be held in Raleigh on January 17. The purpose of the convention will be to organize a company to buy the entire crop of bright tobacco grown in the states of North Carolina, South Corolina, Virginia and Tennessee, and the farmers are to enter into an agreement refusing to allow the trust, which, the growers claim, is reducing the price, to purchase any of the product for five years.

HOW FORTUNES ARE MADE.

A Louisville man cleared $8,000 last year in cow tails. He manufactured them into horse blankets.

A Kansas City genius is making a fortune out of Texas steer-horns. He has a corner on the horns of all steers slaughtered there, and dresses, polishes, mounts and sells them at fancy figures. A pair of black horns with white tips bring $30.

Fortunes are being realized in railroad ties. Wooden ties formerly cost from forty to fifty cents: now they are scarce at eighty-five cents. Parties who have bought cross-tie timber are realizing enormously on their investments, as several railroads have agents buying in this State.

Walnut stumps have been eagerly sought after in Kentucky for several years. They are made up into an especially fine quality of veneer, the manufacturer of which has amassed a princely fortune.

Of the fortunes realized from soaps manufactured from the oils, from fertilizers compounded from the bones and refuse, and ink-stands and ornaments worked up from the hoof, of dead animals, it is unnecessary to speak. It is an old tale often told.

There are millions in tooth-picks, thimbles, buttons and especially are there big things in garters. The capture of birds, bugs and insects for ornamenting ladies bonnets brings handsome incomes to a few. Fortunes are made by the sale of a single flower, and as a money grubber the meek and lowly onion stands right up head.

And the struggle for the almighty dollar goes bravely on.

AN OBJECT LESSON FOR FARMERS.

Last Spring, says the World-Herald, a Nebraska farmer having some wheat in his bins and needing some barb wire to fence in a pasture, went to a hardware dealer in his market town and said:

"I want to get 6,000 pounds of barbed wire but have no ready cash. However, I have some wheat which is worth 50 cents per bushel. How many bushels of wheat must I bring to town to sell for enough to pay you cash for the wire?"

"Barb wire is worth $2.30 per hundred. If you want to trade wheat for that much wire you must haul in twenty seven and six-tenths bushels of wheat."

Circumstances over which he had no control prevented the farmer from hauling out the wire at that time, but last week the same farmer went to the same hardware dealer and said:

"I could not get around to that wire deal last spring, but I am ready for it now. I'll haul in the twenty-seven and six-tenth bushels of wheat to morrow and get that 6,000 pounds of wire."

"Ah, but you'll have to haul in more wheat than that," replied the hardware dealer."

"Why?" queried the farmer. "Wheat is worth just as much now as it was last spring."

"Very true," replied the dealer, "but the wire is worth more. It has gone from $2.30 per hundred to $3.70 per hundred."

"Wire has gone up and wheat remained down?" asked the farmer.

"The wire trust."

The farmer walked out in a thoughtful mood. He was thinking how prosperous he was when what he sells remains stationary or decreases in price, while the prices of what he must buy keep going up.

Down with the trusts!

To have good bacon we must start with the pig and feed for muscle and flesh, and not alone for fat.

Spring pigs make the cheapest pork.

Very large hogs are not the best for first-class bacon.

Always cure pork with dry salt, never in brine.

From four to six weeks is long enough to lay in salt.

Smoke to a bright gingerbread color with oak or hickory wood.

To prevent the "skipper" smoke early and afterward enclose the meat around with thin cloth stretched on frames.

The meat-house, if cool and dry, is the best place for keeping the bacon during summer and fall.

RISING SUN, INDIANA.

It's up to the People.

Less than a year remains in which to gather facts, and information that will influence your vote for the next president of the United States.

That grievous wrongs have been committed, and grave errors allowed to exist without effort at correction, is evidenced by the speech, writings, and comments of eminent statesmen and jurists; congressmen and leading men of business; professors and clergymen in every state.

Party affiliations have been ignored in the outcry against thrusting aside the safeguards of our fathers and rushing pell-mell into the affairs of Europe. The situation is a deplorable one if not alarming; as is also our domestic affairs dominated by gigantic Trusts.

The evils are not of spontaneous growth! They are the result of years of labor and expenditure of millions of dollars! Beginning with the displacement of American silver for English gold, the cunning of England's diplomacy in shaping the destiny of our Republic is apparent to any ordinary observer seeking the true inwardness of events.

The Cincinnati Enquirer has frequently called attention to each and every move as it was transpiring, and during the campaign of 1900 will present its readers with a truthful array of facts that will be extremely interesting and startling.

No fair-minded American, be he Republican, Democrat or of other political faith, can afford at this critical time to ignore the truth. Partisan prejudice, with the Trusts as dictators, is a far more degrading slavery than that which existed previous to the Civil War of '61–64.

Trusts in the United States alone have a representative capital greater than all the gold and silver in the world. These will spend many more millions of dollars to suppress truth and facts and mislead all who fail to look beyond their plausible deceptions. Read the Enquirer and you will be able to discern the truth and combat falsehood. A victory for Trusts and the McKinley Administration in 1900 will end the era of greatest good to greatest number.
